9121 Students Register During Regular Period

A total of 9121 students were registered for the Spring trimester, 1963, during the regular period of registration, last Thursday through Saturday, Dr. Murray W. Kenna, registrar, said today.

Of this number, 4813 were men students and 4308 were women. Graduate students made up 1268 of the total registrants, Kenna said.

These figures compare with Spring, 1962, enrollment figures of 8468 total registrants. During this period, 4516 men students and 3952 women students were enrolled during the regular registration period. The total included 1022 graduate students.

Kenna added that another 300 to 500 students could be expected to enroll during the late registration. Late registration will begin at 10 a.m. this morning and will continue throughout the week. After today, late registrants may enroll from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

Last week, FSU director of admissions Dr. Willis Caldwell predicted a total enrollment of 9900 students. This figure would be a drop of 500 students from the September enrollment of 10,391 for the first trimester.

However, Caldwell indicated that such a decrease is normal, as students may drop out for scholastic or financial reasons, and the increased pressure of the trimester may be an added factor this term.

Three Point Program

Negligence Probe Yields New Plan

By OTIS WRAGG
Flambeau Associate Editor

Charges of negligence against campus police officers arising from an incident in Kellum Hall before the Christmas holidays have prompted institution of a three point program for improving the quality of performance of campus policemen.

Campus policemen in charge of the FSU ambulance were cited by student residents of Kellum for negligence when called to assist a janatorial employee of FSU. The employee, a woman, suffered severe hemorrhaging while on duty in the men's residence hall. Students placed a call for the campus ambulance.

According to the students' report of the incident the ambulance was slow in arriving on the scene and the officers loitered in rendering assistance to the stricken woman and in removing her to a hospital.

Several Kellum residents lodged a complaint with the administration with regard to the officers' conduct. An investigation and closed hearing were conducted. President Gordon Blackwell was contacted and said he took a personal interest in the matter.

Dr. Blackwell's investigation of the case revealed that the officers could have reached the scene more quickly but were not deliberately loitering. Blackwell said, "students were excited over the situation the woman found herself in."

Although no negligence was revealed the Kellum incident was used as occasion to institute a program of improving the campus police force.

Dr. Blackwell said he urged officers to take care to act speedily and through formal training to upgrade the quality of their performance.

Campus Security Officer William A. Tanner announced a three point program of steps taken because of the Kellum incident.

Within the next few days another first aid course will be made available to campus policement.

A system is being established whereby only selected personnel will man the ambulance in the future. This step was taken to insure competency of officers in the ambulance.

A new system for receiving emergency calls in the security office will soon be initiated. The new procedures will enable details of the case to be relayed to officers in patrol cars indicating whether speed is required in answering an emergency.

Dr. Blackwell said he is satisfied with the progress now being made.

STAFF MEETING

A news staff meeting of the "Florida Flambeau" will be held in the "Flambeau" office in 213 Longmire Bldg., tomorrow at 7 p.m.

Former staff members and any students interested in writing for their school newspaper should attend this meeting. Those who cannot attend should contact Lana Murray, extension 2437, today or tomorrow.

Molecular Biophysics Building Dedication Set

A million-dollar building providing space for more than 100 researchers in health-oriented studies will be dedicated Jan. 18 as the Institute of Molecular Biophysics Research Bldg.

The Institute, now in its third year, brings together chemists, biologists and scientists from other departments for a long-range study of life at the molecular level, using the methods of physical science.

The Atomic Energy Commission in 1960 awarded FSU a $3,000,000 grant for five years of research, and these funds have resulted in the addition of several faculty members, research associates and graduate assistants, visits by well known researchers from other laboratories and in the purchase of new equipment.

The building, five stories high, provides 50,000 square feet of floor space and was erected at a cost of $1,080,000. It was put into use during the fall. The National Institutes of Health provided a grant of $475,000 and a state appropriation provided the remainder of the cost.

Gov. Farris Bryant will formally dedicate the building at a ceremony in the building at 12 noon, Jan. 18. Dr. Paul Doty, a Harvard chemist, will deliver an address.

Dr. Michael Kasha, a physical chemist at FSU for the past 11 years, director of the Institute and the scientist principally responsible for its creation, will speak briefly, and Baya M. Harrison, Jr. of St. Petersburg, chairman of the Board of Control, will accept the building for te Board. FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell will preside at the ceremony and will accept the building for the University.

An open house will follow during the afternoon.

Seventy percent of the space in the new building is usable research space. The laboratories provide space for a regular staff of 12 professors and a training group of research associates and graduate research assistants, making a total staff of more than 100 research workers.

The laboratories provide many special facilities for interdisciplinary research, including an instrument-making shop, a lead-lined X-ray radiation room, a magnetic resonance laboratory, autoclave rooms, nine laboratories for work at freezing temperatures, an ultracentrifuge laboratory and other equipment.

Trimester On Trial

The first chapter in Florida's experiment in higher education has closed and the second round is beginning. As the educators of the nation and the citizens of Florida look to the major state universities for leadership in the new twelve month school operations, students and administrators of FSU carry a heavier burden than ever before in the University's history.

If FSU and the U of F can successfully implement the trimester system, the state's junior colleges and public schools will probably follow suit within a few years. On the other hand, if we cannot make the adjustment, the Legislature will undoubtedly demand that we explore another method for more efficient use of voters' tax monies. Abandonment of the trimester could lead to a series of new plans for year-round operation, each one more elaborate than its predecessor.

Certainly FSU is not committed to the trimester for the rest of its existence if the plan proves impractical. We are, however, committed to year-round operations of one type or another. This fact should be kept in mind by those who are tempted to blame the new operational procedure for normal academic problems.

The first trimester produced many problems, some of which had not been anticipated. Faculty, students and administrators have complained of the added pressure and of being overworked. Pleas for a return to the semester have been heard from all quarters of the campus, and reportedly the complaints are even louder at Ganesville.

Although most complaints are valid, many have been caused by newness of the system, not by any inherent trimester flaw. Students who cry that the term went too fast probably waited several weeks before earnestly beginning to study. While the longer semester, with its extended Christmas holiday, afforded an opportunity to make up for earlier loafing the trimester demands immediate and constant attention to academics. Students can no longer afford to spend the first few weeks of the term socializing, and after the first trimester they should know it.

Shorter examination periods likewise came as a surprise, but now that the short test is expected, preparations can be made for it. It is, therefore, no longer a valid excuse for poor grades.

Now that we know what trimester is, we are ready to begin really testing and judging the system. Those who condemn it now are merely admitting their own inability to adapt to changing conditions. We know what to expect. There is no excuse for repeating the mistakes of the fall trimester. It is time for us to make the system work.

Swinging In The Sweet Shop

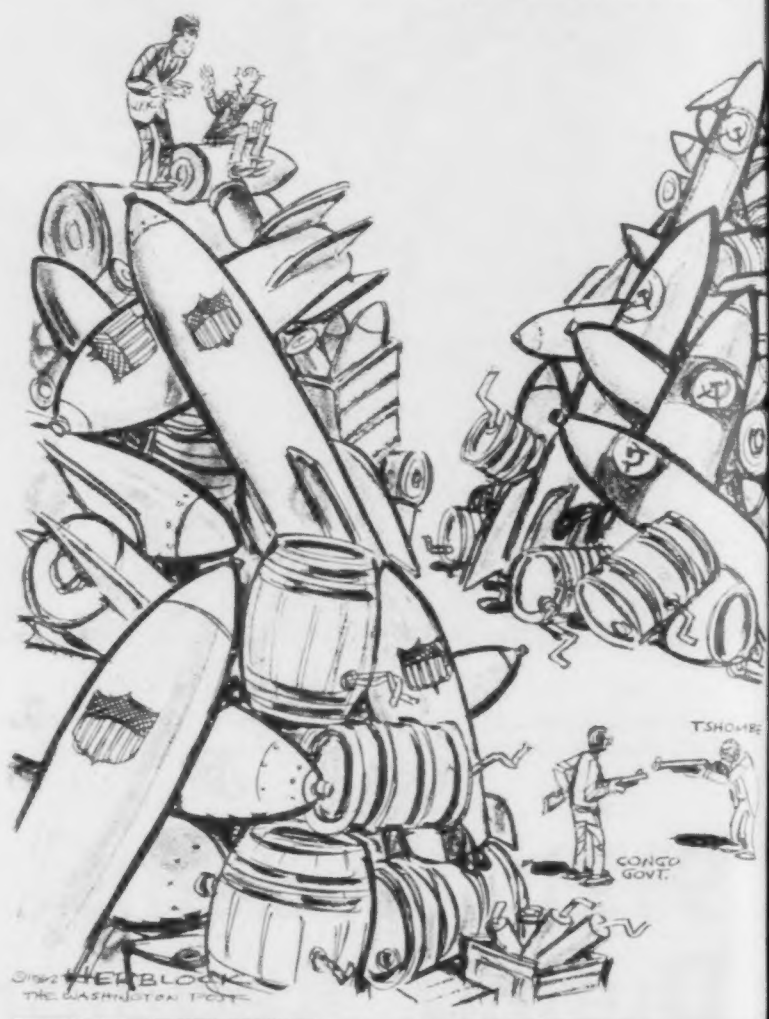
By JIM SMITH

Everybody is writing columns these days about the Soda Shop so I think I'll write one about the Sweet Shop.

Susie Sorority walked into the Sweet Shop the other day sporting her latest supersonic hairdoo, and dressed in her finest hoop skirt, gaily colored sneakers, and obvious blouse. She sauntered up to an empty table surrounded by white socked young lads nudging one another smiling and saying, "Check that."

Sticking out her bottom, she deftly placed an armload of books noisily on the table, looked around, said "hey" to a few people she knew, then with a holier than thou look, sashayed up to the fountain and ordered a coke.

Coming back to the table, she sat down (carefully controlling her blouse). She looked around at the ceiling, the clock and the front of the shop, and carefully pelled off her ... straw from its wrapper. Now, majestically, she placed the straw slowly in the coke and took a tiny, tiny sip. (The boys wiggled.) A smattering of lipstick remained on the straw.



The next move was the cigarette. Slowly, slowly, she reached for her purse, gently pulled out a Salem, carefully placed the match to the end of the cigarette and took a long, hard, slow drag. (The boys wiggled, white socks flashed, smiles broadened, nudges became harder. No words were spoken.) Now comes the exhale. The most roublesome part of the routine. Back tilted the head. A long flowing stream of smoke curled wispfully toward the ceiling, mingling with the cloud formations. A smattering of lipstick remained on the white tip. (The boys wiggled, white socks flashing more feircely, smiles broadened to the ears, eyes watered, and one boy fell from his seat from the blow.) Giggles entwined among reddened faces. She looked at the mess on the floor, smiled, and put out her cigarette.

Then suddenly the room became alive with music from the juke box. A combo screamed unrecognizable lyrics backed up by an African drum section. She began to twitch in her seat. (The boys wiggled.) Her head rocked from side to side. She pulled her skirt down over her knees. Her mouth twitched and her eyes rolled from side to side. Finally the music stopped and she sttled back to luxurious tranquility. (White socks flashed maddeningly.)

Finally, the coke finished, she gathered up her books, sashayed ward the door, and was gone in night.

Disarmament Not Propaganda Toy

By TIM CARR

UCLA seismologists recently claimed that their detection devices were so sensitive that a 1/2-KT underground nuclear explosion anywhere in the world could not only be discovered but pinpointed. The AEC has radiation-sensitive devices that can detect any surface or aerial nuclear burst.

The United States and Russia h been engaged in a diplomatic ch match over the inspection of nucl disarmament. It's a good thing to a propaganda victory -- if the d armament comes about under terms, then we can receive most the credit for being real pea makers.

But we're playing the game seriously -- too much for its sake, rather than for the ultim goal of disarmament. Russia r cently offered this proposal for spection: three unmanned seism devices to be placed in Russian t ritory, as well as more of the sa devices throughout the West world. Our own scientists have that no explosion could go undet ed, even without these unmanned vices. Yet we rejected Russia's p posal.

If the stakes in the game we merely the fate of some small, significant country, then would s "Fine. Let's stay in there and our propaganda victory." But stake in this game is the survi of the human race. Every minute waste we are taking a terrify chance. There have been close ca before--like when the DEW line s out a Red Alert. Fingers were hove ing dangerously near the buttons b fore it was discovered that the "a gressor missiles" were nothing the fantasies of a defective radar s

This is no time to snarl about pr paganda values. It's time our neg tiators, and Russia's, stopped the sham battles and began to wo seriously for a settlement.

Thank God For Christmas

A funny thing happened to me a couple of weeks ago as I was trudging up College Ave. one drizzly night. A girl walked a few yards ahead of me, carring a fancy umbrella. I was lost in thought when she suddenly turned and invited me to share her umbrella. We walked together a few minutes talking about Orlando (her home), and then parted in front of Westcott.

It wasn't a particularly earth-shaking encounter, but it made me realize how unusual it was for someone to have enough courage to bridge the no-man's land that separates the lives of complete strangers. It does take courage--just think of the attempts that are crushed each day here at FSU alone. Consider the number of times each day that one person reaches out to another (sometimes in real desperation) only to be met and often hurt by a kind of dumb fear.

Thank God for Christmas. Be ye Hindu, Jewish, or a follower of Zoroaster, you can't help but be thankful for the general softening that permeates the air during the holidays. It's the only time each year that we can be counted on to try to forget ourselves--most of us don't succeed--but at least we try.

Letters Policy

Letters to the editor and student comment are welcomed by the "Flambeau." We firmly believe that students should have an organ through which their opinions and views can be aired.

We will attempt to print all letters received that meet standards of good taste, conciseness of thought and quality of presentation. In addition, letters must be held to a maximum of 250 words.

All letters must be signed in the original hand of the author in order to be accepted.

Names will be withheld from print upon request when circumstances warrant such consideration.

At no time will letters containing material which is libelous or in bad taste be printed.

Dave Brubeck Quartet Appears Here This Month

Dave Brubeck, internationally acclaimed as a symbol of progressive jazz, will bring the Dave Brubeck Quartet to FSU on Jan. 30, to present a jazz concert in Westcott Auditorium in the "inimitable Brubeck manner."

The Quartet will be sponsored by the Sigma Chi fraternity. Tickets may be obtained from members of the fraternity, phone 222-9890, or at Westcott Ticket Office, for $2 for students and $3 for non-students.

Brubeck has been recognized as one of the world's foremost jazz personalities. Brubeck and his Quartet have won at one time or another virtually every poll and award in jazz.

Brubeck's history making world travels, under the auspices of the State Dept., have been influential in carrying the message of jazz to the far corners of the world as a symbol of American freedom, bridging language, cultural and racial differences, and creating communication among people of different cultures. His work abroad has been acclaimed as among the most successful of all State Dept. cultural exchange tours.

Each member of the Brubeck Quartet has won impressive recognition. Paul Desmond, alto saxophone, is considered by most critics to be the world's best on his instrument. Desmond recently won first place in the Down Beat Readers' Poll.

Joe Morello, also honored recently by the Down Beat readers, has won one poll after another for drummers in the past several years. The newest member of the group, Gene Wright, joined the Quartet in January, 1958, in time for their State Dept. tour of the Middle East. An outstanding bass player, Wright has been featured with Count Basie, Cal Tjader and Red Norvo before his association with Brubeck.

Recently Brubeck has recorded for Columbia records with Leornard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic, "Dialogues for Jazz Combo and Orchestra," written by his brother, Howard Brubeck.

A record version of Dave Brubeck's musical show, "The Real Ambassadors," has just been released. In addition to Brubeck's own group, the cast includes Louis Armstrong, Carmen McRae, Lambert and Hendricks & Ross.

James Batal Lectures Here Tomorrow Night

The local chapter of the American Association of University Women will sponsor a lecture by James Batal, representative of the Arab Information Center in New York City, at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Unitarian Chapel.

The address will be on the subject of "The Security of the United States In the Strategic Arab World Region." The public is invited, Mrs. Royal Ray, president of AAUW, said.

Batal is a graduate of Amherst College and was a fellow in journalism at Harvard. He served with the government's office of war information in seven Arab countries and was a lecturer in journalism at the American University in Beirut for two years. He is author of "Assignment: Near East," published by Friendship Press in 1950, and co-author of "Most of the World" (Columbia University Press) and "Your Newspaper" (McMillan).

The lecturer has given some 300 talks during the past 3 years in various civic, church, fraternal and patriotic organizations in the South. He will come to Tallahassee from Coral Gables, Mrs. Edward Trembly international relations chairman of AAUW, said.

TALLY HO

The "Tally Ho," FSU's All American yearbook, will be on sale for the last time during the next two weeks, Editor Sally Street announced today.

Miss Street said that students may purchase a "Tally Ho" any day through Jan. 18, from 2 to 5 p.m. in the Tally Ho office, 403 Longmire.

All organizations that want to be included in the 1963 "Tally Ho" must reserve space with Dianne Klink, in Room 18 Longmire, by Jan. 10, she added.

Ninth Graders Taught Algebra Through "Sets"

A bracing plunge into the mathematical concept of sets is used by FSU math educators to start ninth graders toward a knowlege of elementary algebra.

Although traditional algebra textbooks make no mention of "sets" -- an idea developed toward the end of the nineteenth century by George Boole and Georg Cantor-- the first 25 pages of an algebra book developed here are about nothing else.

The term "sets" is likely to be applied in everyday life to tennis or dishes. Even the mathematicians have traditionally studied sets only in graduate courses in set theory. But Dr. Eugene D. Nichols, head of the Math Education Dept. and co-author of the book, said the concept of sets provides a unifying idea which enables students to clarify algebraic concepts.

Ninth graders, or in some cases advanced eighth graders, are encouraged to discover the underlying principles of algebra rather than to memorize prescribed rules.

In Chapter 1, after learning that sets are "collections of things or objects," students are asked to compare sets containing the numbers 1, 2 and 3 and 100, 101 and 102 and then asked: "In how many different ways can the elements of these two sets be matched?"

Some students, said Nichols, will come up with an answer after experimentation, and every student "will have his attention focused on the discovery of mathematical principles rather than the memorization of rules."

The idea of sets is used throughout the book in an effort to explain equations and inequalities, exponents and radicals, operations and functions and all the other processes and ideas of algebra.

Instead of a discussion of "signed numbers" -- the numbers with plus or minus signs -- students are introduced to the idea of a line as a set of points with one point labeled zero and other points plus or minus.

Nichols and Wagner G. Collins, mathematical consultant for Robbinsdale, Minnesota, schools, are the authors of the textbook "Modern Elementary Algebra" published in 1961 by Holt, Rinehart and Winston, and now being used in numerous schools throughout the country.

The School of Education has just been informed that the textbook has been adopted in the Province of British Columbia, thus providing the first international application of the pioneer method of math teaching developed here.

The teaching method was first tried out, Nichols said, on a class of eighth graders in the University School at FSU in 1958, and the book in mimeographed form has been used in the school since then.

Nichols, 39-year-old native of Poland, began his collegiate studies of mathematics at the University of Munich just after World War II, continued them at the University of Chicago and in 1956 received his Ph. D. degree from the University of Illinois, where he served as an instructor in math.

He has written for several professional publications about new methods of teaching modern mathematics and about activities of the Math Camp, a pioneer summer session for talented high school math students, which has been held at FSU for five years under auspices of the National Science Foundation.

First, think of an answer. Any answer. Then come up with a nutty, surprising question for it, and you've done a "Crazy Question." It's the easy new way for students to make loot. Study the examples below, then do your own. Send them, with your name, address, college and class, to GET LUCKY, Box 64F, Mt. Vernon 10, N. Y. Winning entries will be awarded $25.00. Winning entries submitted on the inside of a Lucky Strike wrapper will get a $25.00 bonus. Enter as often as you like. Start right now!

RULES: The Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. will judge entries on the basis of humor (up to ½), clarity and freshness (up to ½) and appropriateness (up to ½), and their decisions will be final. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in the event of ties. Entries must be the original works of the entrants and must be submitted in the entrant's own name. There will be 50 awards every month, October through April. Entries received during each month will be considered for that month's awards. Any entry received after April 30, 1963, will not be eligible, and all become the property of The American Tobacco Company. Any college student may enter the contest, except employees of The American Tobacco Company, its advertising agencies and Reuben H. Donnelley, and relatives of the said employees. Winners will be notified by mail. Contest subject to all federal, state, and local regulations.

FSU Launches Weather Balloon

trial balloon to be loosed on mpus today or tomorrow will pre- de a series of weekly launchings balloons which will send back a emetered report on ozone.

his first launching will be a pre- inary test. Balloons will be sed from the top of the Mathe- tics-Meteorology Bldg. Dr. hard A. Craig of the Meterology pt. will be in charge of the nchings, which will be a part of a tionwide study of ozone by the Force Cambridge Research boratories.

ollowing the trial run, a balloon ll be launched at 7 a.m. every dnesday for a year. The first gular launching will be this week. multaneously, balloons will be leased from 10 other stations over North American continent, from Canal Zone to Greenland. About feet in diameter when released, ey will expand to a diameter of 25 et at their maximum altitude of 100,000 feet, and then will burst.

Data from attached ozone meters will be telemetered to earth. The recorded data is expected, among other things, to aid in studies of atmosphere circulation.

Although a minor constituent of the atmosphere, Craig said, ozone's influence on the earth environment is great. The earth's radiative heat balance and thermal structure of the stratosphere is, to a large extent, controlled by the distribution of ozone. Ozone, carbon dioxide and water vapor absorb and emit radiation, and ozone is a shield against the destructive effects of ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

In addition to Craig others in the Meteorology Dept. participating in the study are John Van Domelen, meteorological technician, graduate students Phillip Sticksel, M. A. Lateef, and John DeLuisi, and Thomas Lohman, a junior.

Professor's Art Works Display Opens At Gallery Wednesday

The work of four new members of the FSU art faculty will go on exhibition Wednesday night, in the University Gallery.

The public is invited to the opening of the show, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, and to visit the Gallery for the extent of the exhibition, which will be up through Jan. 28.

Simultaneously an exhibit of African primitive art from the Olsen Foundation will be up in the adjacent University Museum.

Gallery and Museum hours are 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9 to 12 noon on Saturday and 1 to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

The new members of the Art Dept. all joined the faculty in September.

David Bungay holds a master's degree from University of California at Los Angeles and has studied in Munich. He teaches drawing and painting. Several of his paintings will be in the exhibition.

Taizo Miake received his M.A. degree from FSU in 1954 and has been teaching in the Layton School of Art, Milwaukee. He teaches design and serves as curator of the Gallery. Several slides and photographs of store and house interiors designed by Miake will be exhibited.

William Walmsley received his M.A. degree from the University of Alabama and has been gallery director and assistant professor of art at Murray (Ky.) State College. He recently was chosen to represent Kentucky in the Ravinia Festival of Arts. Several of his lithographs will be in the show.

Charles Wright holds a master of fine arts degree from Yale University. Several of his etchings and some drawings will be in the exhibition. Drawing and intaglio prints are his field of instruction at FSU.

Campus Sing Deadline Set

All organizations planning to participate in the 1963 Campus Sing, Feb. 2 and 3, should remember that three copies of one of the selections to be performed, along with completed entry blanks and the $10 registration fee, must be submitted before Jan. 10, Joyce Faggioni said today.

Campus Sing is sponsored jointly by Sigma Alpha Iota and Phi Mu Alpha.

Organizations may register for approval through the School of Music office with the Campus Sing committee. Late entries will be accepted until Jan. 17, but must be accompanied by a $5 late entry fee.

Order of performance will be determined at registration, Miss Faggioni said.

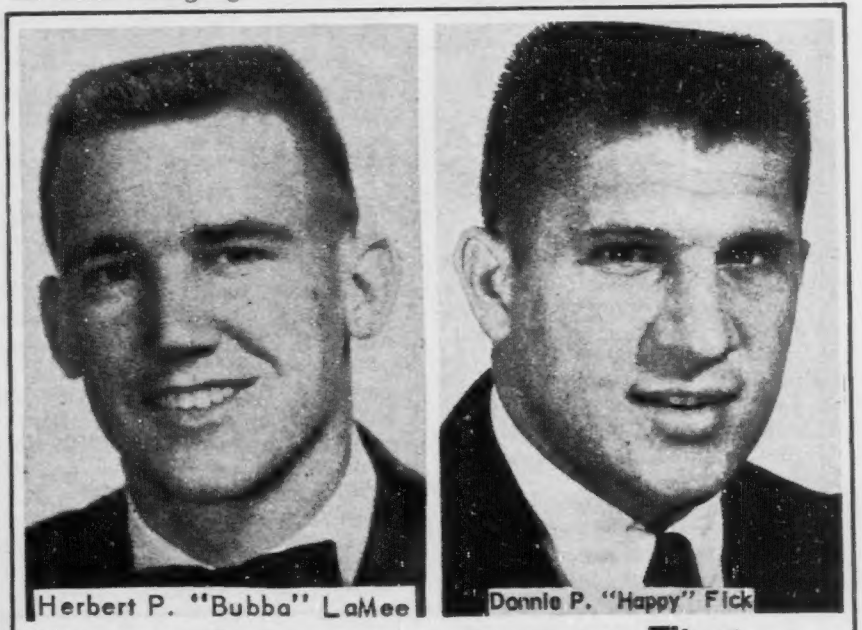
AROUND THE WORLD

ELISABETHVILLE--United Nations Undersecretary Ralph Bunche is in Elisabethville today, accompanied by Robert Gardiner, the chief of U.N. operations in the Congo. Bunche said he is in Elisabethville, the capital of the Congo's secessionist Katanga province, to complete U.N. arrangements for Katanga with local military and civilian leaders.

Reports that Katangan strongman and Interior Minister Munongo has been organizing armor and troops for an attack on Elisabethville were apparently wrong. Associated Press correspondent Adrain Porter found Munongo sunning himself and drinking beer at a border post between Katanga and British Northern Rhodesia.

Meanwhile, the president of the secessionist province, Moise Tshombe, reportedly is in Kolwezi, a mining town northwest of Elisabethville. Tshombe reportedly had asked Munongo to organize resistance southeast of Elisabethville.

KARACHI--The president of Pakistan, Ayub Khan, warned yesterday that his country may withdraw from the pro-Western Central Treaty and Southeast Asia alliances because of India's military buildup. In an interview in Karachi, Ayub Khan said he could not visualize Pakistan moving from pro-Western to non-aligned status, but he added that the U.S. and Great Britain, whom he called "our very old friends," should have consulted Pakistan before rushing arms to India for India's defense against Red China. Pakistan contends the arms might be used against her.



WASHINGTON--A U.S. plane dropping supplies of rice to right wing refugees in Northwestern Laos has been shot down, presumably by leftist Pathet Lao gunners. An American embassy spokesman in Vientiane, some 250 miles from the site of the incident, says the two fliers bailed out and were assisted by refugees. On November 27 another U.S. plane dropping rice to hungry Laotians with the permission of the neutralist Laotian government was shot down.

PEKING--The Chinese Communists have criticized Soviet Premier Khrushchev for what they call his "modern revisionism." The latest blast by the Peking Red leadership against the Moscow communist hierarchy appeared in the Chinese Communist Party's theoretical magazine, called "Red Flag."

BRASILIA--Brazilian President Goulart sought support from voters in his country yesterday to return to a strong presidency, similar to that of the United States. The turnout at the polls was light, possibly because there was no real opposition to Goulart's assumption of the full executive powers which he says are necessary to end Brazil's economic troubles.

BOSTON, MASS.--Police in Boston were confronted with two more slayings in the greater Boston area. The latest murders which took place Saturday night, are numbers nine and ten in a string of unsolved strangle slayings since last June. Police say they are working on the theory that the latest stranglings are unrelated to the first eight.

Mocs Fall To Tribe

FSU's Jerry Shirley exploded for 24 points in the Seminoles' latest road game to pace the Tribesmen to a 72-55 victory over the Chattanooga University basketball team.

Although the Seminoles trailed 34-32 at the half, Coach Bud Kennedy's crew came alive in the second session to get its seventh win against six losses.

In addition to double-figure performances by Shirley, Charlie Long (16), and Pete Rogers (12), two substitutes, guard Wally Dale (14) and center Dale Reeves put in outstanding performances.

Dale scored 14 of his points in the second half, while Reeves pulled down seven of his rebounds in the same period. Shirley had a total of 12 rebounds.

Chattanooga, which had lost to such teams as David Lipscomb, East Tennessee State and Huntingdon, nearly embarrassed FSU with a defeat. Kennedy said the second half performance of the Seminoles stifled that.

The Tennesseans were led by Ron Whaley and Bill Jones, who dropped in 14 and 10 points respectively. Chattanooga had a 40 percent field goal record.

Florida State, which also led rebounding 47-38, had the best shooting percentage with a 44.4 percent.

Tribe Sees Close Ones

The Seminole basketball team, which seems to specialize in close contests with the good teams, let the University of Tennessee slip by, 66-65, and level FSU's record at 6-6.

FSU just did not have the height that the Vols did, and because of this, the Tennesseans pulled off 45 rebounds as compared to FSU's 29.

UT sophomore forward A. W. Davis, who measures in at 6-7, tallied 16 points and took down 15 rebounds. Besides Davis, three other Tennesseans scored in double figures. They were Sid Elliot, with 14 points; Danny Schultz, with 13 points; and Jerry Parker, with 11 point.

Florida State had two cagers that scored over 10 points each, one of them the high scorer for the game. The only senior on the squad that night, Charlie Long, dropped in 24 points, coming on 10 of 16 field goal attempts and four free throws.

Long's performance was the best put in by a Seminole this season, but was tied the next night when Jerry Shirley sank 24 markers against Chattanooga University.

In the Vol-Tribe contest, Shirley was FSU's other double-figure scorer with 10 points, which came on 5-of-9 field goal attempts.

Before 4,000 Tennessee fans, the Tribesmen were never in front, and the closest they got to UT's score was when they tied the contest, 2-2, with the first bucket.

Tennessee led, 34-23, at the half, but a minute later it built up its largest lead of the game when the scoreboard read, 37-25.

UT forward Elliot started a scoring flurry with 49 seconds left in the contest by sinking a field goal. The score was 64-59, and eight more points would be tallied before the final buzzer sounded.

Long was then successful with a jumper, and Schultz followed this up with Tennessee's last score. The Tribe's Pete Gonzalez sank a 10-foot jumper to shorten the scoring margin to three points. Three seconds were left.

Not wanting to incur a foul, the Vols permitted Long to score unhampered as the final buzzer sounded.

The closeness of the game was best shown by the scoring percentages. From the field, Florida State led Tennessee 47.44.2, while the Vols were ahead, 71.4 to 61.1 percent at the foul line.

The Auburn Plainsmen leveled the Florida State Tribesmen's record at 4-4 before the Christmas vac in a hard-fought game that wen double overtime.

At this time, Auburn led by onl point, 64-63, and then Wally Da a field goal for the Seminoles to FSU a one-point lead.

A free throw by Jerry Shirle creased the lead a little more. 1:20 left, Auburn's Billy T missed two free throws, but Layton Johns got the rebound o second attempt to knot the sc 66-66.

A Pete Rogers' field goal m FSU ahead again, but Johns a another field goal for Auburn. Larry Chapman scored a pointer, was fouled, and hit a throw to give Coach Joel Eav three-point lead.

Charlie Long tallied a field goa 71-70 for FSU's last score, and it was Auburn's game all the way til the buzzer sounded with 77-7 the scoreboard.

Against the Tigers, the Semin had a 61-7 scoring percentage, the next night this fell apart ag the unpredictable Richmond Spi

The Tribesmen suffered their loss of the season when Richm which had a 2-7 season mark, 62-56. The Tribesmen manage a 34 shooting percentage.

At the halftime, Richmond led 23.

Two FSU cagers scored ove points. They were center Reeves with 14 markers and Huge with 13 points.

Florida State Undefeated In Savannah Classic

The Florida State Seminoles, dubbed a dark horse by some, trotted undefeated through the Savannah Invitational Basketball Tournament to close out 1962.

The Tribesmen captured the title of the round robin tournament by defeating Georgia, Alabama, and Georgia Southern.

In the first contest, the Seminoles breezed past the University of Georgia, 77-69.

Four Tribesmen tallied in the double-figures against the Bulldogs. Transfer student Pete Rogers led the Seminoles with 19 points. Rogers sank eight field goals and hit on 3-of-5 free throw attempts.

Charlie Long had 18 points to his name. Twelve of Long's points came from the field and he added 6-of-8 free throw attempts. Cal Huge sank five field goals and 3-of-6 free throw tries for 13 markers, and Ross Winter scored ten from the floor.

Harry Rado of Georgia sank 22 points for the game high, and the only other Georgian to score more than 10 points was John Mathews with 10 points.

In the FSU-Georgia series, the Tribesmen have come out on top in 13 games, while the Bulldogs have won six contests.

The University of Alabama, which FSU had narrowly beaten earlier, was favored in the tournament over the Tribesmen, but this brought them no better luck than before. This time, the Seminoles barely prevailed, 49-48.

Alabama jumped to an early lead in the contest and built up an 18-12 margin before Coach Bud Kennedy installed the press. Once this was done, the Alabamans failed to score for six minutes, while the Tribesmen dropped in 10 points.

Thanks to two charity tosses by J. W. Berry, the Crimson Tide managed a 22-20 halftime lead.

In the second half, the Tide fought off the Tribesmen, who tied the score three times, but eventually Florida State grabbed the upper hand when Long hit a jumper that give FSU a permanent lead.

Alabama's Hinton Butler scored a game-high of 18 points; he tallied seven field goals and 4-of-5 free throw tries. Shirley led FSU's scoring with 15 points, which came on seven field goals and 1-of-1 charity tosses.

IN INTRAMURALS

Dobson, Weinstock Table Tennis Aces

The campus table tennis doubles championship was won by Gerry Dobson and Mitch Weinstock. Runners-up were Lou Brooks and Pete King.

In fraternity intramural competition, after two events, Phi Delta Theta was in first place. Second was Delta Tau Delta, and close behind in third place was Kappa Alpha.

After three events in dorm-independent competition, the Physical Education Majors Club led the league. In second place was Geology Club, with Baptist Student Union filling the third spot.

Men's intramurals discontinued competition until the beginning of this trimester, when teams will take up flag football, volleyball and other sports.

Theater Tryouts Held Two Days

Tryouts for the University Theatre's production of Maurice Valery's "The Long Night" will be held tonight and tomorrow at 7 p.m. in Conradi theatre, play director Richard Fallon announced today.

The world premiere of Valery's new play will feature both student and professional actors and will have five evening and two matinee performances between Feb. 6 and 10.

Fallon said that there are many small and large parts available for students. He urges that all those interested try out. No experience is necessary, he added.

Gov. Bryant Addresses Professors

Bryant Speaks To AAUP On College Campus Scope

The need to enlarge the college campus "so that it is as long and as wide as Florida" was a topic dealt with last night by Gov. Farris Bryant, as he spoke to the FSU chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

Gov. Bryant noted that Florida, with its population explosion, rapid industrial and economic expansion, and increasing emphasis on higher education, has been put into the position of preparing for an expected enrollment in 1970 of approximately 150,000 students in the state's public institutions, as compared with present educational demands of 70,000 student spaces.

The increasing demand for higher education, however, must be met on a pay-as-you-use basis, he asserted. "It is so easy to say yes to the demands for increased teaching salaries, and more and better educational facilities," he said, "but we must remember that when we increase money allotted to one agency, we are taking it from another agency that needs the money for its own particular purposes."

Problems of higher education have been increased by the shift in population, he declared; colleges were built in the middle of a population which has gone elsewhere, and has caused a need for new universities at present population centers. "We

Spring Elections Filing Dates Set

By SUSIE RHOADES
Flambeau Staff Writer

The student body presidency will be up for grabs in the Spring campus elections rapidly approaching.

Elections Sec. Ron Jones announced today that filing of offices in the student body elections will begin Jan. 29.

The highest student government post is just one of many that will be on the ballot, which will also include the offices of student body vice president, men's vice president, women's vice president, secretary of Senate, chief justice of Honor Court, clerk of Honor Court, chairman of University Court, chairman of Traffic Court, and three elected members of the Board of Publications.

The Elections Bureau at its final meeting of Trimester I decided to re-enact all the regulations which governed fall campaigning. In order to regulate campaign spending more carefully, any candidate who spends more than the designated amount will be sujbect to a fine of twice the amount of his over-expenditure.

All candidates will be required by the Elections Bureau to submit copies of any and all printed or otherwise reproduced campaign materials to the Secretary of Elections before they are distributed on campus. In recently enacted rules, all on campus posters must be no larger than 10" x 14". Off campus posters will still be permitted at the standard size of 12"x 18".

Further information concerning qualifications for office and campaign regulations may be obtained from the Elections office, 210 Longmire or by calling Ext. 2975.

Pre-Holiday Action

hree students were sentenced to one trimester of pension from the university in 11 cases tried by the nor Court at its last session before the Christmas idays.

he new cases brought the total number reviewed by Court this year to 57.

the students suspended, one was nd guilty of cheating on an econ- cs 201 examination, a second with ling a final examination in sic, and the third with stealing ey from the lockers in the nen's gym.

wo students found guilty of col- orating in the theft of the music l were sentenced to two tri- sters of Honor Court probation. student charged with deliberate ification of records was sen- ced to one trimester of Honor rt probation.

other, found guilty of stealing shirt from the laundry room of th Hall, received a sentence of trimesters of court probation.

wo students judged guilty of steal- from the bookstore were sen- ced to two trimesters of bation, because of the small value he items taken, University class- ation of the students, and their vious good records.

wo additional cases of academic onesty were tried and the de- dants acquitted. One had been accused of cheating on a humanities 201 exam, and the other with cheating on an economics 201 exam.

Diplomas

Seniors who expect to graduate in April, 1963, must pay diploma fees by Jan. 14, in 102-B Westcott, Dr. Murray W. Kenna, registrar, said today.

Open Rush

New students and transfers may register for formal rush in 203 Longmire, the Panhellenic office, from 4 to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday at any time during the trimester.

Girls who registered for formal rush or later do not need to register again for this trimester, as registration is for one calendar year.

Freshman Dance Set

"Dungeon Drag" will be the theme of the Freshman Class dance to be held after the FSU-Miami basketball game Saturday night, class president Lief Erickson announced today.

Erickson said the dance, which will be in the Suwannee Room, will feature The Untouchables combo.

Chaperones will be class sponsors Mr. and Mrs. Dan Litwhiler and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace W. Reichelt, and Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Winters.

Admission will be $1 per couple, and everyone is invited, Erickson added.

Spouses Get Special Card

President Gordon W. Blackwell has approved a recommendation of the Student Senate and of the University Fee Committee which would permit spouses of full-time students to pay $14.50 per trimester for a special ID card.

The ID card would permit them admittance to athletic events, Artist Series, other University events, and the Library on the same basis as full-time students at the University are treated.

A special photo ID card will be issued by the Registrar's office to spouses who apply for it. The ID card will be a different color from the white one issued to the students.

The effective date of operation is January, 1963. No refunds will be permitted under this plan.

States Appropriate 1.8 Billion Towards Higher Education

State legislatures across the country appropriated $1.8 billion in state tax funds for higher education in 1962-63, a gain of 24.5 per cent over a two-year period, according to a recent report.

This compares with an increase of 22.7 per cent in the previous two-year period, 1959-61. State tax appropriations must be compared on a two-year basis, since most state legislatures make bi-annual appropriations.

The report was prepared by visiting professor M. M. Chambers of the University of Michigan and published by the Joint Office of Institutional Research, Washington, D.C.

The 50-state figure provided for teaching programs, organized research, agricultural and engineering experiment stations, hospitals, county agents, adult education programs and other public service activities.

The $1.8 billion total, representing a two-year increase of $357,000,000, includes over 400 colleges and universities. It is based only on appropriations of state tax funds for operating expenses and does not include reappropriated income from tuitions, dormitories, athletic events and other campus enterprises.

State-by-state gains ranged from New York's 75 per cent increase to Louisiana's 5 per cent rise. Appropriations again declined in only two states--in Alabama by 1.5 per cent and in Montana by 0.5 per cent.

The report found that the 20 states which operate local community junior colleges and appropriated an additional $81,000,000 to these schools in 1962-63, an increase of about 42 per cent over the total appropriated in the earlier two-year period.

Gross Negligence

Dr. Gordon Blackwell has announced a new three-point program for improving the quality of performance of campus police. This executive statement was prompted by charges of negligence that students of Kellum Hall lodged against two members of the campus police.

By the mild statement of President Blackwell one might think the offending officers had been speeding in a hospital zone, acted rudely to a housemother, or perhaps even honked their car horns and disturbed the dorm quiet hours.

However, the incident referred to was no mere petty or trivial violation. Rather it involved a shameless and indecent affront to human life.

According to student reports to the Flambeau, what happened at Kellum was that a Negro maid had ruptured a varicose vein and was bleeding profusely. Quick thinking on the part of several students, who applied a pressure bandage, probably saved her life.

According to witnesses, the campus police action was one of callous indifference. They took their time. One refused to touch the bleeding woman but summoned a janitor to carry her. The policemen, supposedly trained in first aid, improperly removed her from the area. The janitor rode in the back of the ambulance with her when an experienced hand was needed.

Further, when students protested police action they were received with malice. One of the policemen involved, the one who also refused to carry the maid, threatened to "meet" one of the students "off campus." A meeting with the Security Officer in Kellum Hall was fruitless.

All in all, the incident was disgraceful. We can only conclude that either the campus police will not give Negro maids proper treatment or that they are lax in all of their duties. If campus police treat all students, faculty and staff equally, then we shudder at the thought of the fate of an FSU student involved in any type of emergency.

The mild three-point program may be a help if it is rigidly effected. But that is not enough. The administration would do well to deal in specifics and evaluate the performance of the two policemen. A severe reprimand or dismissal of one or both is in order. A university in all good consicence should not allow the welfare of all students, faculty, and staff to be entrusted in lax or prejudiced hands.

Resolutions For Achievement

I suppose we all at one time or another make new year's resolutions which we promptly break, and equally promptly rationalize, on the excuse that after all, we are human, and cannot be expect etc.

For those who might fall int category, I would like to offer a and tested set of resolutions- must be good, for they are ea follow, and are practiced in on or another by countless edu people.

1) "I will love the trip tem with all my heart, and strength." If the Florida L lature and the "Tallahassee crat" endorse it, why then it be good. Besides, it is very ec mical: for a little more money can get half the education with twice the effort as under semester system.

2) "I will not speak out on con versial matters." Of course After all, you certainly don't to step outside the shell of sec to be found in social confor you would be required to th

3) Jesus once said: "You have he that it was said, 'you shall love neighbor and hate your enemy.' I say to you, love your enemie pray for those who persecute y This is, of course, utter nonse Love is a meaningless force your 'enemies'. You must re therefore, to love only those love you, as long as it is expe to your own interests. Hate tho disagree with you; those wh under different political syst those of different color, reli status, education,....Above al everything that your countr and does. Hate everythin "enemy" countries do and sa is the only way to world p history and common sense

4) "I will not be tolerant u any circumstances." This is portant corrollary to resoluti Since love is unimportant exce it meets your own interests, the is tolerance.

5) "I will at no time exert tiative as an individual. I will st only to be mediocre in my acad and spiritual growth, so that I devote most of my time to raising."

This is only a partial list, natur I am sure that the resources are no means exhausted. Opportuni limited! By following these re utions and perhaps adding a few your own, I guarantee that you reach great heights of per achievement, and be respecte every hypocrite and politician w his salt.

Birth Increase Dangerous

BY TIM CARR
Flambeau Staff Writer

There is widespread belief among doctors that cancer and heart malfunctions will be completely preventable by 1975. This will increase human life-expectancy immensely. And a far more significant advance was proclaimed by the notoriously unreliable "National Enquirer." "The key to immortality in man lies in eliminating factors leading to glandular senility. An effective treatment has been found to extend life indefinitely."

This is probably sheer fiction at present, but it is obvious that, barring nuclear or natural holocausts, we will outlive our parents, and our children (according to conservative estimates) will have an average life expectancy of 100 years.

It is a bit frightening to me to ponder the one-sidedness of this campaign to preserve life. Sure, I'd like to live for a few centuries, too. But not in a world where there will be Standing Room Only. The subject of birth control is still taboo in political circles. While a few courageous people have started Planned Parenthood Leagues, there is still no widespread movement to limit population.

Everybody has their pet statistics on what will happen if the population continues to expand at its present rate. My favorite set of figures goes something like this: "By the year 2100 all the land masses on earth will be stacked 83 feet deep with people." Absurd, of course. But we will have the problem, sooner or later. Whether we will starve in our middle age, or whether it will be our great-grandchildren, it will happen if effective action is not taken very soon.

This is not a matter for individual initiative (or lack of it) because a birth in a stable family that can afford it will continue to be a blessed event until we become as overcrowded as India or China, and then it will be too late to do anything except to wait for natural or man-made disasters to take their toll:

As for the action to be taken: what about tax penalties for each child after the third? Anti-welfare people have always claimed that the rapid population growth in depressed areas was due to extra payments given for each extra dependent. If so, then the converse should be true.

A comprehensive and detailed study on the merits of a national population-limiting program is in order.

And it's time to put aside the religious teachings against birth control. Most of the teachings originated in times when the earth was seriously underpopulated. In fact, the first exhortation occurs in the Old Testament. Those people who have been forced to admit that the earth isn't flat and that it wasn't created in six 24-hour days should now concede that it isn't sinful to prevent life. I'm sure God didn't put us on earth for us to crowd each other out of existence.

Administration Will Listen

By BILL SMART
Asst. Managing Editor

Recent charges of negligence against the campus police by residents at Kellum Hall and the resulting institution of a three point program by the police to insure improved service in the future is a tribute to the humanitarian interests of the men of Kellum Hall and to the cooperation and willingness of the campus police to constantly investigate and improve their service to the university.

One of the most important relationships in a university is that which exists between students and administrators. As long as there are students who care enough to expess their views and as long as their administrators are willing to listen, this relationship may serve to advance the ideals and plans of university.

The residents of Kellum H pointed out the administrati willingness to listen to any stude not just those who hold positio student government. The more 9000 students of this univers would do well to remember thi next time they feel they hav legitimate reason for inquiring some facet of university activiti

The student body would also do w to remember that as we are f tunate in having an administrati that cares what the students thi that we should safeguard this inte est by electing only well qualifi representatives in the Student G ernment elections this Trimest

Wo- students annually have added to nd by sale of chrysanthemums. e during the recent Homecoming ed the fund past $10,000. It is ated that income from the funds e sufficient for a scholarship o of the three trimesters each r.

n Landry was chosen on the s of scholarship, professional ess and need. She is secretary- surer of the Physical Education ation and tennis manager for men's Recreation Association , At Venice High School, where graduated in 1960, she was pres- of the Girls' Athletic Associa- and captain of the basketball and a teams.

s Montgomery was a member of ulty here for 40 years. The daughter of a Presbyterian minister who served a church at Live Oak for 25 years, she entered FSCW in 1914. After receiving her degree in 1918, she earned her master's degree and doctorate from Columbia and New York universities respectively.

Alumnae, students and faculty all have worked toward building the scholarship fund for physical education majors. Miss Wells said Mrs. Mary Jane Martin-Vegue and Dr. Grace Fox have been particularly active in fund-raising activities.

Grammar Studies Aided By Grant

A grant of $26,000 from the U.S. Office of Education, one of the first research grants to FSU in the humanities field, will enable the university to make an analysis of grammatical structures in the writings of average fourth, eighth and 12th graders.

The grant is one of 10 such grants being awarded over the country this fall under Project English. It will be administered by Dr. Kellogg W. Hunt, professor of English, director, with Dr. Dwight Burton, head of the English Education Dept. as investigator.

Several research assistants will be trained and employed to help in the study, said Hunt, and the work of about 60 average students in the three grades of a Tallahassee school will be examined.

A new method, called the transformational method, will be used in analyzing the writings of the students, he said.

Hunt said the grant is effective on Jan. 1 for a period extending through June 15, 1964. It is expected, he said, that analysis of the student writings will begin during the third trimester.

Coed Loses Clothes

An FSU coed is in distress.

Robin McNevin, coming to FSU last Wednesday morning, lost a cardboard box containing new and nearly new clothing, somewhere between the Greyhound bus station and Gilchrist Hall.

She described the articles contained in the box as being women's clothes, sizes 8, 10 and 12. Included are three plaid suits, dresses, a short white evening dress, several brown and beige sweaters, and a number of madras items.

She is offering a $10 reward for information leading to the return of the box of clothing. Miss McNevin may be reached at Gilchrist Hall.

3rd Summer Institute Set

For the third summer, Florida State University will conduct an Institute for High School Teachers of Mathematics.

The National Science Foundation, which supported the two earlier institutes, has provided $42,300 for next summer's session which will be underway for eight weeks beginning June 17.

Dr. James E. Snover, assistant professor or mathematics at FSU and director of the Instiute, said teachers have an opportunity by attending four summer institutes to earn a master's degree.

Deadline for applying, said Snover, is Feb. 15. Several teachers are expected to return for their second or third summer institute.

The NSF funds will enable 30 teachers selected for the institute to earn stipends of $75 a week, with additional money for dependents.

are trying to meet this need in a small way with our junior colleges," the governor said.

To attempt to cope with this problem by building additional universities in such areas as St. Petersburg, Orlando, Jacksonville and Palm Beach, "would dilute higher education in the state, and this we are unwilling to do."

The influx of technicians drawn to the state by the buildup at Cape Canaveral creates a demand that these people be served by education where they are, Gov. Bryant noted. He said he saw only two main difficulties in conducting the activities of this institution (FSU) there: 1) the problem of travel and 2) the problem of communication.

Bryant was confident methods would be developed to get the talent and learning of universities such as FSU into different areas. He predicted an era when facutly members would commute from FSU to Orlando for Monday - Wednesday - Friday classes, and when scholars throughout the state would be able to flick a switch on a desk and talk to students and teachers throughout the state by means of closed-circuit television.

The governor said the $400,000,000 anticipated to be spent on education by the state in the next year is "not enough, but it will be about twice as much as spent on any other item." "We must be sure not to unbalance the economy," he declared.

He noted that other services such as an expanded arterial road system, prison facilities and mental hospitals must also be increased to meet an expected population of 10,000,000 in 1970, as compared with present state population of 6,000,000.

In response to a question from the audience concerning state acceptance of federal aid to education, the governor answered that the state should not accept such aid.

From a purely econonic standpoint, the states are much more in a position to maintain their educational systems than is the federal government, Bryant said.

The speaker was introduced by President Gordon W. Blackwell. The governor's praise of Dr. Blackwell drew a round of applause from the audience.

AROUND THE WORLD

OXFORD--Negro student James Meredith said he will quit the University of Mississippi after the present semester unless changes are made. Meredith didn't say what changes he wants. He said only he would like what he called "a situation more conducive to learning." The 29-year-old Air Force veteran has been under constant harassment from other students since the violence that accompanied his enrollment last Oct. 1.

In Washington, Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy said some University of Mississippi officials have not been meeting their responsibilities. He called on the University to take appropriate steps to make it possible for Meredith to continue in the school.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People says the possibility of James Meredith's withdrawal from the University of Mississippi will not lessen efforts to desegregate the school. In a statement in New York, the NAACP also said efforts will soon be made to integrate the Universities of Alabama and South Carolina. A spokesman declined to give details of such plans.

WASHINGTON--A State Dept. spokesman said U.S.-Russian talks on Cuba are about to end. And he added the belief that there are up to 17,000 Russian soldiers still in Cuba--which makes the island a remaining threat.

The State Dept. representative spoke after U.N. delegate Adlai Stevenson appeared in Washington for a secret meeting of the Organization of American States. Stevenson reportedly told the meeting the U.S.-Russian talks on Cuba are ending with no agreement about the Russian troops on the island.

NEW YORK--Striking Longshoremen have taken court action against the New York Waterfront Commission, charging that the Commission is conspiring with steamship lines to allow ship loading by unregistered workers. A New York State judge has now ordered the Commission to show cause tomorrow on why it should be restrained from the alleged strike-breaking practice.

The dock strike--from Maine to Texas--is in its 16th day. More efforts to settle the dispute were scheduled for yesterday after a federal official reported that a joint negotiation session Sunday was a credit to both sides.

MOSCOW--Russia and Communist China exchanged some more ideological criticisms yesterday--but the Soviets made what sounded like a plea for peace. The Russian newspaper "Pravda" indicated that the two Communist powers might settle their differences through collective discussion. At the same time, the Soviet Communist Party demanded that Red China and its ally, Little Albania, stop attacking the Kremlin's announced policy of peaceful co-existence with the West.

Mentor Defends Scholarships

By Coach Charles McClendon of LSU
Written for the Birmingham Post-Herald

Years ago I recall hearing someone offer some sound advice that seemed to cover almost every situation -- "Don't talk unless you have something to say."

In recent years I have heard various and sundry opinions concerning the athletic scholarship as related to collegiate football. I have heard it condemned and maligned. A person would have to live on another planet to escape the conclusions reached by this minority who believe that education and athletics are incompatible. . . . I now have something to say in answer to those who feel that the athletic scholarship is creating a race of mentally retarded giants.

Serves Vital Function

It has always been my belief that collegiate football, properly administered, serves many vital functions. In addition to providing wholesome entertainment for students, alumni and fans and contributing to the personal enjoyment and physical development of those who play, the educational opportunities provided by the athletic scholarship fulfull a definite need in America's educational program. In this day and time of technical and scientific advancement, America desperately needs highly skilled and educated citizens. And since the Utopia of free college education for all has not been reached yet, the athletic scholarship, in its proper perspective, fits in with the ultimate goal of higher education for all.

College football really needs no defense. The fact that it's alive bursting with vitality and growing each year, tends to prove that the plus factors outweigh the minuses. Therefore, I am not too concerned over those who feel that the athletic scholarship is an evil document. I only regret their lack of knowledge for not realizing that this is, in effect, a key that opens the door to higher education for many who would not be able to afford the cost of such an education.

I am the product of the athletic scholarship. So are the members of my coaching staff. The education we received and the training encountered in college now provides a livelihood for us and our families.

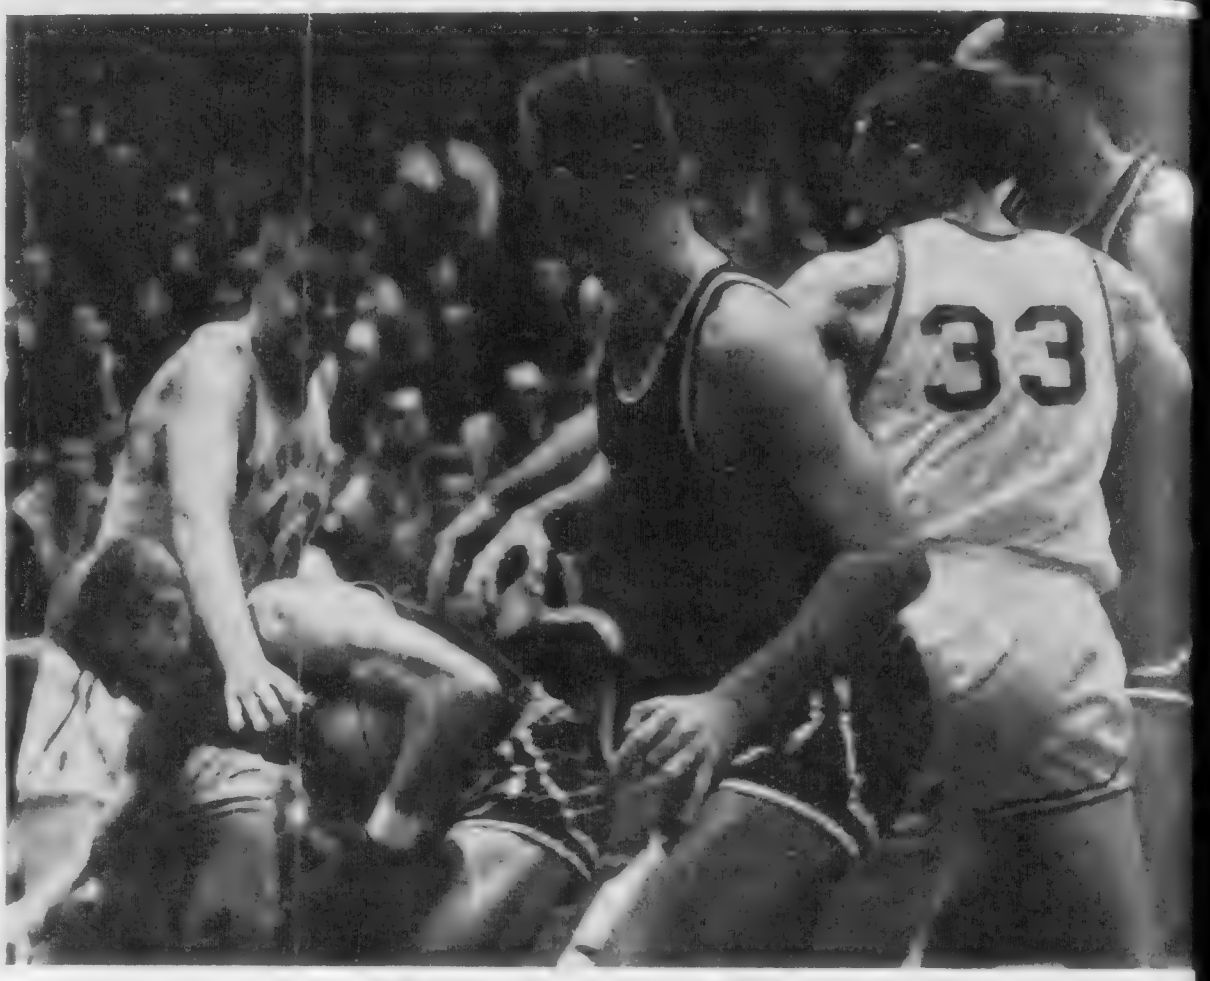
In every walk of life, many prominent persons, most of whom are leaders in their profession, were helped to a successful start by taking advantage of the scholarship offered for their athletic abilities.

The athletic scholarship insures athletic competition -- two words with important meanings. Athletic implies physical activity, another important factor in the development of a healthy, strong society. This failing among young Americans has caused grave concern among our government leaders. Competition is the life blood of a free society and must be encouraged if we are to face our responsibilities to our youth.

An Uninformed Conclusion

On occasion I have heard people allege that an athletic grant-in-aid scholarship lends a professional touch to an amateur sport. This is another uninformed conclusion, since the athletic scholarship is nothing more than an award for athletic-academic achievement.

Would these critics classify all type scholarships as professional? Should not an outstanding musician be given an opportunity to further his education if he has the potential to contribute to society? Or someone who is proficient in science? Then why not the athlete, who is using his God-given talents and physical assets to further develop his mind and pursue his education?



And, contrary to the critics' beliefs, most athletes are deadly serious about their future. They realize more and more that while their eligibility lasts only four years, their education must see them through a lifetime.

I have also heard assertions made that an athlete must maintain certain athletic standards to insure continuation of his scholarship. This is also untrue, since game participation is not a qualification for holding a scholarhsip.

The scholarship is committed before a player ever takes the field. If he never develops enough to be considered for game participation, he is afforded the same treatment as the starter. All that is demanded of the scholarship holder is that he meet the academic requirements and obey the rules and regulations of his institution and the coaching staff that recommended the scholarship.

Collegiate athletics, like every other endeavor, is not without its failures. On occasions rules have been violated, but these violations are in the minority and the violators have been punished. One doesn't condemn all automobiles because the brakes have failed in one.

There are many things wrong with the world today, but the athletic scholarship is not one of them.

Florida State University's Jerry Shirley (43) and Cal Huge (33) grapple with University of Alabama cagers at the recent Savannah Invitational Basketball Tournament. The Seminoles defeated the Crimson Tide for the second time this year in a 49-48 contest.

Swimmers Dampened By Loss Of Seven Because Of Grades

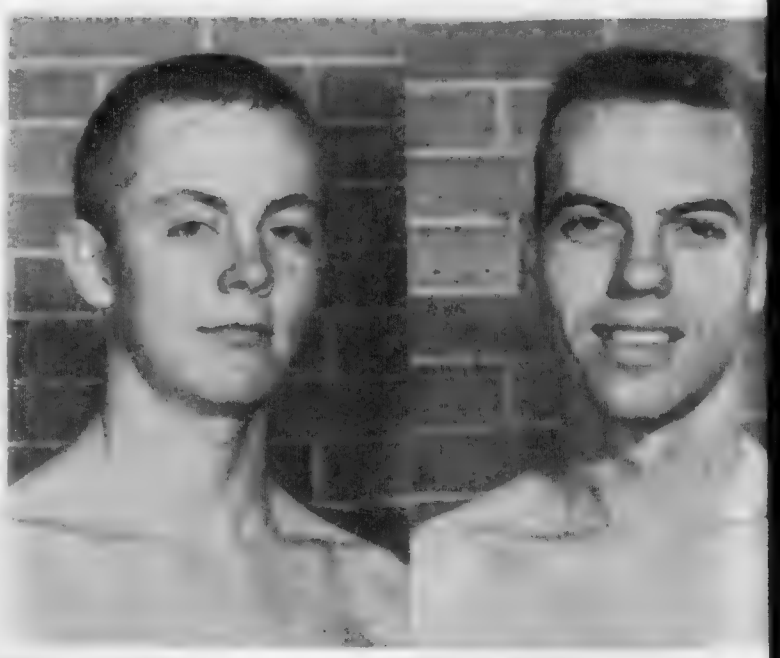
Just when Florida State Swimming Coach Bim Stults was looking for one of his best seasons in 14 years, the bottome fell out.

Stults, opening his 15th season at FSU Wednesday night when the Seminoles host Georgia, learned this week that he has lost seven varsity swimmers for various reasons. Five of the seven were out-and-out "stars."

The seven: juniors Lee Bransford, Dick Acosta, Bill Dahl, Thornton DeWitt, Pat Richardson and Don Montgomery and sophomore Bob Neff. Some failed to make their grades last trimester, others decided to concentrate on studies.

Only DeWitt (butterfly) and Richardson (backstroke) weren't being heavily counted on this season. Stults called Bransford (freestyle), Acosta (backstroke), Dahl (distance events) and Montgomery (diver) "the best we had" in their respective specialties.

Though only two men graduated from last year's 11-1 team, FSU has now lost a total of 12 lettermen from last season. Only seven lettermen are left, and Stults fears "we could really have a bad year if things keep going like they have."



A bad season, however, would be a new experience for FSU in swimming. During Stults' 14 seasons, the Seminoles have won 110 dual meets and lost only 19 while tieing two.

Wednesday night's meet with Georgia will begin at approximately 8 preceded by a freshmen meet at 7 in Montgomery Gymnasium.

The Seminoles will end a busy opening week by traveling to Alabama Friday night and Tulane Saturday night. Next home event will be on Feb. 2 against North Carolina.

But Stults still has the services of many strong swimmers. Among these are senior Pete Combes, who swims the butterfly and has two varsity letters; Pete Davis, who swims the backstroke and also has two varsity letters. Bill Lawrence, a 21-year-old Kentuckian who has one varsity letter, will swim the breaststroke, while the 5-11 Risto Pyykko will compete in the butterfly. The 24-year-old Pyykko has two varsity letters.

Two veterans are returning to the freestyle. They are 6-1 Alan Roles, a junior, and 158-pound Dale Smith, also a junior. Both men have one varsity letter.

Theatre Production Cast Stars Veteran

Veteran stage, radio and television star Paul McGrath, heard for years as the macabre host of "Inner Sanctum," has been secured to play the leading role in the University Theatre production of Maurice Valency's "The Long Night," director Richard Fallon announced today.

McGrath will star as Karel Mestruic in the world premiere of the Valency play here, a presentation of the Eddie Dowling Foundation. Students and faculty members will take other roles for the production, which will have five evening and two matinee performances between Feb. 6 and 10. Cast members will be announced when selected.

"The Long Night" is based on Leo Lania's "The Foreign Minister," which concerns the Czechoslovakian diplomat, Jan Masaryk.

The Eddie Dowling Foundation seeks to combine professional and university theatre talent in trying out new plays which are potential successes on the professional stage.

Two of Valency's Broadway plays are coincidentally being produced during the academic year by other university theatres in Florida. University of Florida is producing "The Madwoman of Chaillot," and the University of South Florida, "The Visit."

Valency, who is a Ph. D., has been professor of English and comparative literature at Columbia University since 1954. He served as a Ford Foundation research fellow in 1958 and in 1961 as a Guggenheim fellow.

In addition to several Broadway plays, he is author of six others and of two books, "The Tragedies of Herod, 1939, and "In Praise of Love," 1958.

The veteran actor was one of the all-star cast of the Otto Preminger film version of Allan Drury's "Advise and Consent," in the role of vice president.

McGrath, who began his stage career in 1924, has appeared in many successful productions, including "Susan and God" and "Lady in the Dark," both with Gertrude Lawrence, and as General Garnett in "Command Decision."

In addition to his radio series "The Inner Sanctum," was heard on "The Crime Doctor" and as the neurotic husband in "Big Sister."

In 1957 McGrath appeared as the harassed advertising executive in the Kazan-Shulberg film, "A Face in the Crowd." Later that year he starred on the London stage in the West End smash hit, "Roar Like a Dove."

He has made a number of television appearances on the Theatre Guild's "U.S. Steel Hour," "Hallmark Theatre" and "The Play of the Week."

McGrath recently appeared briefly again on Broadway in Joseph Kramm's "Giants, Sons of Giants."

...e governor will speak on the subject "Responsibilities of Citizenship in the American Democracy." The public is invited to attend the address, which will be at 1 p.m. in Campbell Stadium.

Cadet Col. John S. Baughman will introduce the governor.

Lt. Col. Preston B. Hardy, who is in charge of AFROTC training, said the governor's lecture is a part of the leadership training of freshman cadets, but has been scheduled as a general one for all cadets.

He said the Army ROTC has accepted an invitation to hear the address. The west (press box) side of the stadium will be used.

Members of the Security and Law Enforcement Flight of the Air Force Air Police Squadron will form an honor guard, and the Competition Drill Team and Angel Flight will pass in review as part of the hour-long ceremony.

Air Force ROTC and Army ROTC cadets assemble in uniforms at noon every Thursday for parade ground training. There are approximately 1600 cadets in the combined units.

Col. Hardy said the ceremony will be held in Tully Gymnsaium if it rains. If the ceremony is to be indoors, a red flag will go up over the Student Center tomorrow morning.

All cadets should report to Tully Gym at 12:45 p.m. if the ceremony is moved indoors.

Senior Notice

Any senior who wishes to change or add to his activities list for the senior section of the "Tally Ho" should stop by 403 Longmire Bldg. between 2 and 5 p.m. any day for the remainder of this week, Sally Street, yearbook editor, said.

Miss Street added that any activities acquired since senior pictures were taken will be omitted from the yearbook if the "Tally Ho" staff is not informed of changes.

Trimester's Schedule Offers Movie Variety

The schedule of campus movies for the Spring trimester offers an interesting variety of entertainment to students, University personnel and their families.

The movies are shown on Friday and Saturday nights beginning at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. An admission fee of 25¢ will be charged, and profit made on the movies will be used to purchase new projectors.

This weekend, "The Honeymoon Machine," a comedy starring Steve McQueen, Brigid Bazlen, Jim Hutton and Paula Prentiss will be featured.

Other films to be presented during the trimester are: Jan. 18 and 19, "The Barbarian and the Geisha," with John Wayne, Eiko Ando and Sam Jaffe; Jan. 25 and 26, "An Affair to Remember," Cary Grant, Deborah Kerr; Feb. 1 and 2, "Wreck of the Mary Deare," Gary Cooper, Cecil Parker, Charlton Heston.

Feb. 15 and 16, "Breakfast at Tiffany's," Audrey Hepburn, Mickey Rooney and George Peppard; March 1 and 2, "Gentlemen's Agreement," Gregory Peck, Celeste Holm, Dorothy McGuire." March 15 and 16, "Inn of the Sixth Happiness," Ingrid Bergman, Robert Donat, Curt Jurgens.

March 29 and 30, "Greatest Show on Earth," Betty Hutton, James Stewart, Cornel Wilde, Charlton Heston; and April 5 and 6, "Bad Day at Black Rock," Spencer Tracy, Robert Ryan, Anne Francis, Walter Brennan.

Education Doomed

Education in Florida is doomed to remain mediocre for at least another biennium Governor Farris Bryant revealed Monday night in a speech before the FSU Chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

Bryant told the educators he was grateful for their loyalty through the recent "critical times of friction and misunderstanding." The small percentage of faculty turnover in the past six months is a great tribute to their loyalty he said.

It was a tribute to those courageous educators who have been subjected to insult and injury almost beyond imagination at the hands of opportunistic politicians, the alleged leaders of our state government. Not only was their professional competency put on the chopping block but their moral character and loyalty to their country was severely questioned.

In the next breath the governor apologized for the coming failure of education in Florida. "I know the value of what you can do. Nothing would please me more than to fulfill your requests. It simply is not always possible."

Florida ranks 25th in the nation on money spent per capita for education yet has one of the fastest growing populations of any state in the union. Industry and science are in the embryo stages of a gigantic boom.

Bryant spoke in soaring terms of the great network of superhighways he is guiding through to completion. Something he can point to with pride at the end of his administration. He bemoaned the need for expanded prisons and mental hospitals.

When questioned about Florida's standing on money spent for education the governor passed it off as not being too bad. He reminded the audience that to increase expenditure in one area required the acquisition of monies from another. We must adopt a plan of pay as we use, he said. Apparently the governor believes super highways, and prisons are ingredients more necessary to realization of the affluent society he dreams of for Florida than its educational institutions.

One faculty member suggested to the governor that the federal government be considered for contribution to state education. Bryant curtly replied he wasn't in favor of federal aid to education under any circumstances.

One professor asked Bryant if there was any possibility of state monies being used for scholarship funds. Another apologetic "no" was delivered.

Optimism for higher education in Florida will not be the watchword for the upcoming session of the state legislature.

Remember Those Funny Times

It is always fun to look into the past to find what happenings have seemed amusing to one. Let us peek back into the first trimester to see what comical things have happened.

First, I can't help but remember the dog at one of the football games. While on the field, it proceeded to undertake actions most humans prefer done in privacy.

Secondly, we must not forget the most enjoyable McCotter columns that started with the words, "At present I am in my so-and-so class. I love my so-and-so class. It is so etc. etc. etc..."

Thirdly, there were the cheers at homecoming. While almost everyone was trying to hold an umbrella to keep dry, the head cheerleader said, "All right everyone, the clap cheer. Put your hands over your head."

Fourthly, there was the letter written by my friend, Duncan Moore, president of the senior class. He wrote all seniors about the senior banquet. We were told all about what were the plans, the hour, and the place. One item was left out, however--the date.

Fifthly, I think it is amusing some students concluded from my last column that I am against kissing and feel it should be eliminated from college campuses. I merely feel students can be more conservative around the immediate area of the women's dorms. I agree with a girl whom I heard say that love is not the exchange of saliva in the middle of a herd.

Lastly, I remember the time during the final examinations when a male student walked up to a girl in her parlor and sat in her lap. He said in a girlish voice, "What am I going to get for Christmas, Santa?"

"Well, what do you want?" she asked.

"A little doll," he said.

"How little a little doll?"

"Oh, five foot six will do."

Review
Sigmund Freud Exciting Whodunit

BY TIM CARR
Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

John Huston has taken the gigantic mind of Dr. Sigmund Freud and chopped it up into little bite-sized chunks that any dolt could chew and thoroughly digest. However, this oversimplification of Freud's thesis and how he arrived at it is forgiveable because "Freud" is a thrilling and suspenseful drama--a psychological whodunit as exciting as "Three Faces of Eve."

Montgomery Clift's transition from a simple-minded eunuch in "Judgment at Nuremberg" to the brilliant, sex-oriented Freud is as startling a change of character as I've ever seen. Partly because of this, and partly because Montgomery Clift is always so overwhelmingly Montgomery Clift, I never could quite believe I was looking at Dr. Freud.

This movie is loaded with powerful scenes. One patient makes a Freudian slip (the first in history) that should be hilarious, but ends up being deadly serious: "My father was a Catholic, but my mother wanted me to be a Prostitute."

We are taken on a Dante-esque tour through the descending levels of the human mind. Every time we reach a ledge, we are sure we have finally reached the bottom, but, as we pause to congratulate each other, the earth begins to quake and we fall through terrifying blackness (accompanied by strident, cacophonous music) until we hit another ledge.

I left the theatre convinced that Dr. Freud had descended all the way to Cocytys, but, as I write this review, I recall much recent talk saying Freud was "primitive," and "on the right track...but..." I wonder if Freud was a mere Ptolemy in a Copernican galaxy--and whether we today are but a Copernicus in an Einsteinian universe.....

A GUIDE FOR THE UNMONEYED

R. L. Sigafoos was a keen, ambitious lad, and when he finished high school he wished mightily to go on with his education. It seemed, however, a forlorn hope. R. L.'s father could not send the boy to college because a series of crop failures had brought him to the brink of disaster. (R. L.'s father raised orchids which in North Dakota, is a form of agriculture fraught with risk.)

It was, therefore, squarely up to R. L. He could go to college only if he worked his way through. This was a prospect that dismayed him. He had a deep-seated fear that the task would be too great, that he would never be able to carry on a full college life and still find time to do odd jobs and make money.

Racked with misgivings, R. L. paced the streets, pondering his dilemma. One day, walking and brooding, he came upon a park bench and sat down and lit a Marlboro cigarette. R. L. always lit a Marlboro when he was low in his mind. R. L. always lit a Marlboro when he was merry. The fact is there is no occasion—happy or sad, pensive or exuberant, cheery or solemn—when Marlboro with its fine filter and fine flavor is not entirely welcome, as you will discover when you go to your favorite tobacconist and buy some, as we, the makers of Marlboro, and I and R. L. Sigafoos, do now and then.

Sitting and thinking and smoking a Marlboro on the park bench, R. L. was suddenly interrupted by a small, quavering voice which said, "My boy, you are troubled. Can I help?"

I give a fencing lesson to the Dean of Women.

Seated beside R. L. was a tiny, gnarled man with wispy, snow-white hair. His skin was almost transparent, showing the delicate tracery of fragile bones beneath. His back was bent and his hands trembled. But his eyes were bright and clear. R. L. looked into those eyes, into the wrinkled face. He saw wisdom there, and experience, and kindness. "Do you think, sir," said R. L., "that a boy can work his way through college and still enjoy a rich, full campus life?"

"Why, bless you, son," replied the stranger with a rheumy chuckle, "of course you can. In fact, I did it myself."

"Was it very hard?" asked R. L.

"Yes, it was hard," the stranger admitted. "But when one is young, all things are possible. I, for example, used to get up at five o'clock every morning to stoke the furnace at the SAE house. At six I had to milk the ewes at the school of animal husbandry. At seven I gave a fencing lesson to the Dean of Women. At eight I had a class in early Runic poets. At nine I gave haircuts at the Gamma Phi Beta house. At ten I had differential calculus. At eleven I posed for a life class. At twelve I watered soup at the Union. At one I had a class in Oriental languages. At two I exercised the mice in psych lab. At three I gave the Dean of Women another fencing lesson. At four I had qualitative analysis. At five I went clamming. At six I cut meat for the football team. At seven I ushed at the movies. At eight I had my ears pierced so that at nine I could tell fortunes in a gypsy tearoom. At ten I had a class in astronomy. At eleven I tucked in the football team. At twelve I studied and at three I went to sleep."

"Sir," cried R. L., "I am moved and inspired by your shining example!"

"It was nothing," said the stranger modestly, shaking his frail white head. "It was just hard work, and hard work never hurt anybody."

"Would you mind telling me, sir," said R. L., "how old you are now?"

"Twenty-two," said the stranger.

AROUND THE WORLD

NEW YORK-- The United States will demand that the United Nations cancel a project to help build a $3 million agricultural experimental station in Cuba. This has been disclosed by US sources. Under previously approved plans, opposed by the United States, the UN special fund would grant more than $1 million for the project.

WASHINGTON-- The Defense Department has asked the drafting of 9,000 men for the Army in March. This is the biggest monthly quota since January 1962, and more than double the quotas of recent months. The higher draft is aimed at building the Army's strength to 980,000 men. The draft quota for this month and next stands at 4,000 men.

SAIGON-- In Southeast Asia, the Viet Namese government claims its forces killed or wounded more than 700 Communist guerrillas in two extended operations that ended yesterday. The claim was not confirmed by American sources. Government losses for the two operations were listed as 21 killed and 130 wounded.

ELIZABETHVILLE-- In Africa, Katanga President Moise Tshombe has returned to his UN occupied Congo provincial capital of Elizabethville. During an interview, Tshombe dropped a sharp hint that the threat of sabotage still hangs over Katangan mines and utilities in the areas he still controls. The company which owns most of Katanga's mines and utilities-- Union Miniere agreed with Tshombe. The company appealed to the United Nations to prevent further damage in the eleven day war.

WASHINGTON-- President Kennedy has wound up an extended year-end vacation in Palm Beach, Florida, and returned to Washington to get ready for the opening of a new Congress session tomorrow. He's meeting this evening with Democratic and Republican leaders of Congress for a discussion of some of the proposals he will present to the new session.

WASHINGTON-- The newest US communications satellite-- Relay-- will broadcast to France today recorded television pictures of last night's official unveiling in Washington of the famous portrait of Mona Lisa. President Kennedy, French Ambassador Herve Alphand and other dignitaries will participate in last night's ceremony in the National Gallery of Art.

MOSCOW-- The Soviet News Agency Tass reports Outer Mongolia has backed the Kremlin in its ideological battle against Red China. Tass said the Mongolian Party Chief charged at a special ideological conference in his capital, Ulan Bator, that the Communist Chinese are an increasing danger to the world Communist movement. Mongolia is a buffer state between the two giant Communist powers.

NEW YORK-- The panel of three judges named in New York City's newspaper strike has held its first hearing and the chairman, Federal Judge Harold Medina said, "We are beginning to make real progress." The strike is in its fifth week.

Tribe Merman Battle Bulldogs

The Florida State swimming team will open its 1962 intercollegiate competition tonight in Montgomery Pool at 8.

The 27-man squad, which was weakened by the loss of seven members, will battle the University of Georgia. The seven are juniors Lee Bransford, Dick Acosta, Bill Dahl, Thornton DeWitt, Pat Richardson, Don Montgomery and sophomore Bob Neff.

Four of these are "the best we had" in their specialties, Coach Bim Stults said. Tehy were Bransford in the freestyle, Acosta in the backstroke, Montgomery in diving, and Dahl in the distance events.

Last year's results:

FSU	Opponent
67	Georgia	28
70	Georgia Tech	24
53	Tulane	40
65	Miami (Ohio)	30
71	Bowling Green	24
55	Sewanne	40
52	Alabama	43

Stults still has two divers to take the place of Montgomery. Allen Neel, a 20-year-old sophomore from West Palm Beach, and 19-year-old James Payne, a 5-5, 125-pounder from Atlanta, will have to take up the slack in this area.

Despite the loss of Bransford, the swimming coahc has eight other freestyler. They are senior Ronald Bissland, sophomores Gene Dayton, Bob Durocher, Charles Tandy, George Paugh, Bruce Quayle, juniors Alan Roles, Dale Smith. Bissland has two varsity letters, while Roles and Smith have one. All the sophomores had been members of the freshman swimming team.

The departees did not include anyone being heavily counted upon in the butterfly, and Stults can fall back upon six swimmers. These include seniors Pete Combs and Risto Pyykko, junior Jack Brown and sophomores Steve Brinson, Jim Busse and Ted Roth.

Richardson had not been slated to bear the burden of the backstroke, but Acosta had, so this division will be affected by the dropouts. Those that will see competition tonight are sophomore Tom Casper of Tampa, junior Tommy Pepper of Michigan, senior Pete Davis of Kentucky, sophomore Tony Kowals of Indiana and sophomore Jim Mullally of New York.

There is no change in the breaststroke. Six athletes will compete in this division: senior Bill Lawrence, junior Mike Gonsalve, and sophomore Roy Davis, Dick Green, Sherman Henderson and Doug Kruger.

The Seminoles will wind out the week by traveling to Alabama Friday night and Tulane Saturday night. Next home event will be on Feb. 2 against North Carolina.

How does this season stack up, now that at least five "stars" have departed?

Stults said, if tankers continue to drop out, things could become bleak and possibly his 15th season at Florida State might be lacklustre. Already the Seminoles have lost 12 lettermen from the 1961 squad, which had 11 victories against one defeat. Only seven lettermen are left.

Funds For New Dorm Not Sidelined By State

Funds for construction of FSU's new eight-story men's dormitory are not being held up by the state, "because we have not yet been asked for the building funds," State Budget Director Harry Smith told the "Flambeau" yesterday.

His comment came in response to question concerning an article which appeared Tuesday in the Saint Petersburg "Times" newspaper.

The article quoted Smith as saying the state funds were being held up because "we don't have the cash." The budget director commented to the "Flambeau" that he cannot at this time "make the flat statement" that money to finance the new dorm will defintely be granted.

He said the state financial situation must be examined, before any of approximately $11,000,000 in requested state building appropriations to universities are granted.

He noted, however, that the $72,000 in planning money has been released and is being used in preparatory stages. Although the state isn't committed to a remaining $628,000, Smith said he is "hopeful," barring financial setbacks to the state, that all the requested funds will be released.

A $1,814,000 loan already has been approved by the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency, and will need to be matched by the $700,000 in state appropriations.

William Hendrix, business manager for the Board of Control, said it is hoped that bids will be advertised in early February, and indicated that he has heard of no change in plans.

FSU Asst. Bus. Mgr. Ray Green also expressed surprise, and said "work is going ahead" as scheduled.

Green was referring to planning and preliminary architect's drawings of the proposed air-conditioned dorm.

Smith Urges Senate Avoid 'Committee-itus'

Senate President Johnny Smith yesterday urged members of Student Senate to avoid the pitfalls of "committee-itis," in the opening session of the spring trimester.

He commended the senators for functioning efficiently during the fall, despite the added burden of the trimester. "I feel that the Senate's main shortcoming lies in the lack of personal initiative on the part of the senators. Out of approximately 45 senators, not one turned in any legislation to the secretary after returning from the Christmas holidays."

Smith hastened to add that the amount of legislation introduced in Senate was not the point in question. He urged the committees to speed up processing of proposed bills, so that Senate might take appropriate actin.

Smith went on to commend the work of the committee responsible for obtaining ID's for the married students' spouses.

The constitution of the Young Americans for Freedom Club here was accepted as a University-sponsored organization with only one dissenting vote, after Senator Joyce Killian of the Organizations and Finance Committee had presented the proposed constitution and by-laws to the Senate for approval.

The Student Senate Relations Committee, it was announced, has scheduled a Senate tea with three of the women's dorms participating, for next Wednesday. Residents of the dorms will be Senate's official guests for the meeting.

Senator Miles Williams was named Men's Vice President Pro Tem at the Men's Senate meeting.

Correction

The Placement Schedule for seniors and graduates, announced in yesterday's "Florida Flambeau" will be effective next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, instead of this week as stated.

The complete schedule will be published again next week in the "Flambeau."

Pictures

Staff pictures for the staff members of the "Florida Flambeau" will be taken this afternoon at 4:30, in the Flambeau office, 203 Longmire. All staffers should be present for the picture.

Driver Course Established

Students interested in learning to drive an automobile may sign up for lessons given in cooperation with the Physical Education Dept., James DeCosmo said today.

Individual scheduling will be arranged for two instruction periods weekly for approximately 10 weeks, DeCosmo said. Cost for the entire period of instruction is $6.

Students may apply by contacting him in the Physical Education and Recreation Dept., university extension 2640. Students under 20 years of age will be given priority on a first-come-first-served basis.

Norman Cousins To Speak At FSU

Norman Cousins, editor of "The Saturday Review," will be presented here Jan. 31, as the first speaker of the University Lecture Series for this trimester.

Cousins will speak at 8:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium on the topic "World Report."

The speaker is the author of "In Place of Folly," "Dr. Schweitzer of Lambarene," "In God We Trust," "Don't Resign from the Human Race," "Modern Man is Obsolete," and "A Treasury of Democracy," among others.

Former president Dwight D. Eisenhower termed the lecturer, "Norman Cousins, a distinguished editor who stands as a symbol of America's creative, crusading and sensitive mind."

The University Lecture Series also has secured Harry Golden, author of "Only in America," for a lecture later in the trimester. He will appear here March 27 to give a lecture with the same title as his work.

During the third trimester, Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, president of the World's Council of Churches, will speak May 7. A program of other speakers to be presented in the third term will be announced, as soon as final arrangements are made.

The University Lecture Series is a presentation of an intellectual program of speakers for both the students and the faculty of FSU. These lecturers are drawn from the top levels of the science, business, literary, political science, arts and religion fields.

Guest speakers in the past have included Earl Attlee, General Carlos P. Romulo, Rod Serling, Vance Packard, Professor E. Northcot Parkinson, Bennett Cerf, and Dr. Linus Pauling.

ROTC Change Needed

Critics of required ROTC on campus, and there are many, have found a powerful ally in Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara. McNamara has announced that he will ask Congress to make some drastic changes in the training program in an effort to economize.

The sensible changes include ending ROTC in high schools, eliminating compulsory ROTC in all land grant colleges and reducing the four year ROTC course in most colleges to two years.

McNamara hopes to save millions of dollars by eliminating the need to uniform, equip, and train thousands of cadets who will not continue with the program. The military spends millions of dollars annually buying uniforms, shoes, rifles, books and various other items which are used by students who care nothing for the program, give little to the program, and benefit neither the military or themselves.

Instead, the Secretary of Defense hopes to build a program which will pay tuition and costs to students who voluntarily choose to enroll.

This plan will demand less of students time taking military subjects. Increased rewards plus decreased demand on time during the college session while in college will make the ROTC more attractive at a lower cost.

The change has been long in coming. The new plan must still be fought through Congress. But the change is needed and welcomed.

The military needs officers. This is a legitimate need that must be satisfied. But at best requiring that all male students in a university take ROTC for two years is a poor way of securing these officers.

In an academic community, primary emphasis should be on academics. It is a waste of a student's time to be forced to spend two hours every week playing soldier on the drill field. Further, the material taught in basic ROTC classrooms is of questionable value to a student who has little interest in continuing with the program. Both drill and classroom work occupy time that should be more profitably used taking additional academic subjects or studying subjects now taken.

ROTC has been burdensome in the past. Changes as proposed by McNamara will eliminate indefensible waste of money and student's time. Both the student and the military will profit by the changes.

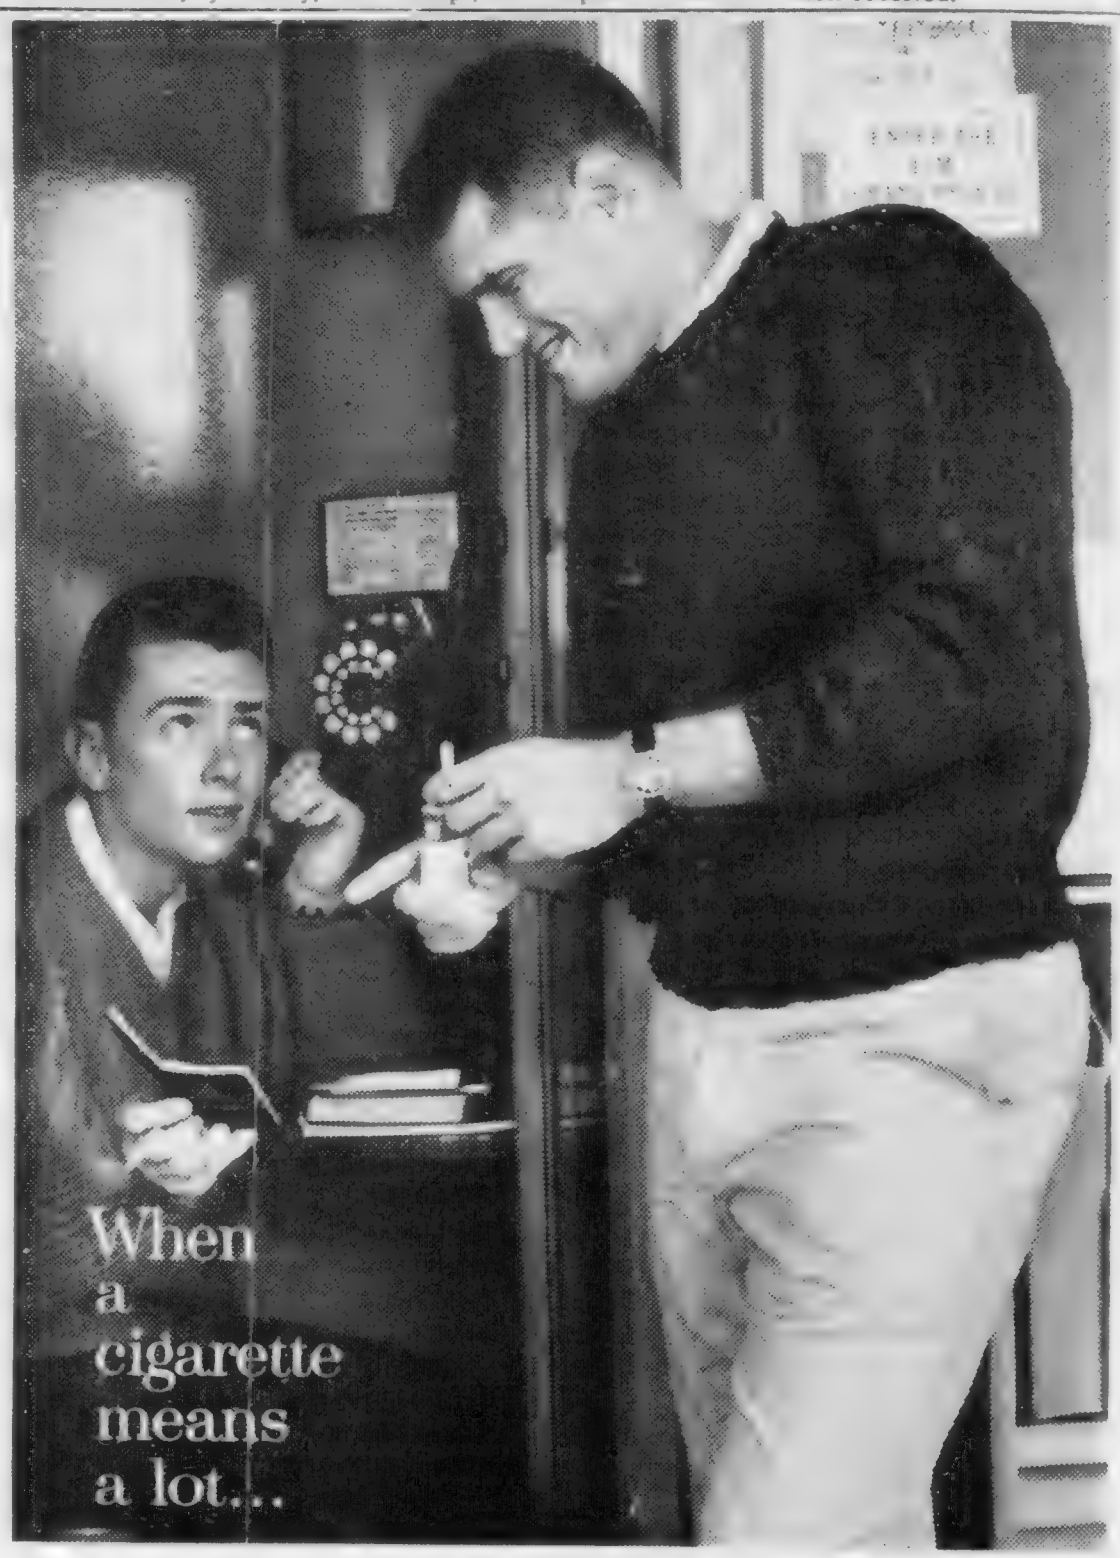
The Children's Hour Reviewed

Adult Film Has Dubious Reception

BY TIM CARR



Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

Shirley MacLaine and Audrey Hepburn are directors of a small, high-class girls' school. And this rotten child, who bullies her classmates and is despised by them, decides to seek revenge upon the school.

This errant little monster (who is a fine child-actress, by the way, but hardly the Shirley Temple type) tells her grandmother, in cunningly childish terms, that Miss MacLaine and Miss Hepburn are Lesbians.

At this point, it becomes evident that the movie is not for children. It also becomes evident to the parents that the girls' school is no place for children. The school goes bankrupt, Miss Hepburn's fiance begins to have his doubts, Miss Laine begins to have her doubts, the whole thing ends in "The Childrens Hour" is done very good taste. The photo beautiful; the directing velous. But, since it is far the most adult film to where, it is doubtful that it will well received.

Wilson Grant Given

Florida State University has received a grant of $2,000 from the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, it was announced today.

FSU was one of 65 institutions having graduate schools selected to receive the grants, which are made to institutions which have Woodrow Wilson fellows enrolled in the graduate schools.

In announcing the grants, Sir Hugh Taylor, president of the foundation, said three-fourths of each grant is earmarked for further fellowship support to students beyond their first year of graduate study.

"Our program increases the number of prospective teachers entering graduate training and assists those who wish to complete their doctorates with dispatch," he said.

He said that all other graduate students in the areas, as well as former Woodrow Wilson fellows, are eligible for assistance from the grants to the graduate schools. Dr. Weymouth T. Jordan, head of the History Dept., is Woodrow Wilson representative of the FSU campus.

Film Club Opens With 'Oscar Wilde'

The film biography "Oscar Wilde" will be the first of 10 foreign films being presented this trimester by the FSU Film Club, chairman Dr. George A. Lensen announced today.

Season tickets will be on sale at the door of Westcott Auditorium Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the reduced price of $2. The British movie classic will be shown then, Lensen added.

The "Oscar Wilde" feature will trace the author's tragic downfall. It is based on the stage play by Leslee and Swewll Stokes, which was written from actual court testimony and Wildes' writings.

Other classics to be presented this trimester are:

The Japanese film "The Men Who Tread on the Tiger's Tail," a parody of Kabuki drama and lampoon of militarism, will be shown Jan. 22. It is directed by Akira Kurosawa, one of the world's great film directors, who is noted for the seriousness of his themes.

"The Scandal of Clochemerle," a French classic directed by Pierre Chenal, will be seen Feb. 12.

The final Film Club selection of the trimester will be April 9, the Japanese "Ikiru." Directed by Akira Kurosawa, it is billed as a moving account of an old man's efforts to give meaning to his life.

IN RADIATION BIOLOGY

Summer Institute Set

Twenty teachers from Florida and other states in the Southeast will be selected to attend the fourth Summer Institute in Radiation Biology at FSU June 17-Aug. 10.

Each teacher attending the institute will receive enough equipment, some $1200 worth, to set up small radiological laboratories in their biology classes when they return to their high schools. .

Sponsored by the National Science Foundation and the Atomic Energy Commission, the institute is financed by grants totaling $36,974, from the two agencies. Teachers receive stipends of $75 a week and dependency allowances. They enroll for two courses, one in radiation science and one in radiation biology.

Purpose of the institute, one of 25 being held in this country and Puerto Rico, is to increase the capacity of teachers for motivating able students in scientific careers as well as to provide a background in radiation biology.

Debators Go To Atlanta

Four FSU debaters will accompany debate team coach Richard Hahn to the All-Southern Invitational Debate Tournament being held in Atlanta Friday and Saturday.

Hahn said the team will leave Tallahassee this afternoon for Agnes Scott College, location of the debate tourney, and will return to campus late Saturday night.

Representing FSU will be Joan Corey and Dick Root, affirmative, and Peyton Wynns and Louis Barnett, negative.

This is the beginning of the busiest part of the debate season, Hahn added. Last trimester, FSU attended tournaments at Mercer University, Emory University and in Birmingham, Ala.

AROUND THE WORLD

WASHINGTON—The 88th Congress opened its new session yesterday. In an early move, Conservatives suffered defeat to their hopes of recapturing control of the key House Rules Committee. President Kennedy's side was victorious by a decisive margin, 235 to 196, larger than expected. The vote keeps the size of the Rules Committee at 15 members. Conservatives wanted it sent back to 12 members, which would have given Republicans and Southern Democrats control.

WASHINGTON—President Kenpedy has met at the White House with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily Kuznetsov. It was described as an informal talk, a courtesy to the Soviet Diplomat who is returning soon to Moscow.

NEW DELHI—India has rejected a Chinese Communist proposal that Indian forces stay out of disputed Himalayan areas evacuated by Communist troops. In reply to a Chinese note, Prime Minister Nehru said that rather than repeating old arguments, the two countries should explore what other possibilities are available to avoid development of further conflict.

ELISABETHVILLE—President Moise Tshombe of Katanga Province in the Congo is back in his capital, Elisabethville, now under control of U.N. forces. He talks of peaceful aims, but he also threatens scorched earth warfare if the U.N. forces strike farther toward his last stronghold, Kolwezi. It's an industrially rich area by Congo standards, and Tshombe claims demolition charges have been placed in every major industrial installations.

NEW YORK—Castro's government in Cuba has received another payment of ransom for invasion prisoners—$290,000 worth of medical supplies, drugs and dental equipment. A Pan American plane carried the cargo to Havana. A second airlift of medical cargo is scheduled tomorrow, and a freighter at Baltimore is expected to begin taking on a big ransom cargo this weekend.

Two Seniors Sidelined

Sophomore Jerry Shirley of the FSU basketball team is the leading scorer for Head Coach Bud Kennedy and will get to play against toughie Miami Saturday night, but two cohorts, seniors Dale Ricketts and Faurest Coogle will be sidelined because of injuries.

But Tribe Has Improved

Miami Is Favored

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Sports Editor

Florida State is cautiously seeking its eighth win against six losses Saturday night in Tully Gymnasium when the Seminole basketball team goes against the highly-touted University of Miami.

Miami has a 9-1 record and has one of the largest teams in the country.

"If they wanted to," said Bud Kennedy, Tribe mentor, "they could start with a squad averaging 6-10." The Hurricane with the "mostest" is senior Mike McCoy, who measures in at 7-2.

The 'Canes have racked up some impressive victories, Kennedy said, and Miami's lone defeat also demanded due recognition.

One win came at the expense of the University of Florida, which soundly thrashed FSU earlier this season. The Gators battled the Hurricanes through two overtimes before finally succumbing.

The stormy Miami cagers knocked off St. Johns and captured the Gator Bowl Classic title. UM also defeated Providence.

Coach Bruce Hale's only humiliation occurred when LaSalle finished on top by a mere two points in a recent game in Philadelphia.

"The game with Miami will be one of the three toughest games this year," Kennedy said, "--Houston, Auburn, Miami and Georgia Tech deserve a place on the list."

The FSU-Miami series:

In 1951, Miami won twice, 93 to 56 and 76 to 63; in 1952, the Hurricanes won, 93-65, and then lost, 81-75; in 1953, Miami won, 78-61, and then lost, 76-69; in 1955, the Tribe edged UM, 78-76, and then fell, 91-85; in 1956, the Hurricanes won twice, 85-77 and 98-82; in 1957, the Canes lost, 71-70, and got revenge, 86-66; in 1958, Miami won twice, 85-79 and 92-85; in 1959, the Canes won twice, 93-91 and 107-89; in 1960, the Canes lost, 89-78, and then won, 75-73; last season, Miami fell two times, 65-60 and 83-80.

Florida State has an improved team from earlier in the season, Kennedy said. "The boys play more as a team unit now."

At least three athletes drew praise from the coach. "Jerry Shirley is doing his usual good job. Charlie Long has been showing a lot of leadership and has been playing the kind of ball he is capable of playing. Pete Gonzalez, who was a redshirt until Dale Ricketts was injured, has been putting in a fine job."

Ricketts sustained a broken wrist, which will keep him out all season. He was injured in the Kentucky game when he was knocked under the press table. Another senior, Faurest Coogle, is also sidelined for the season.

In addition to the two seniors, the Seminoles have a sophomore who has been sidelined. Kennedy said Ross Winter injured his knee and will not be able to play until after the Jan. 19 Georgia Tech game.

Winter will be replaced by Larry Bulger, a junior college transfer student. For two years, Bulger was an important part of the team of Pensacola Junior College, which had one of the better juco squads in the state.

The 6-2 guard became eligible for varsity play on New Year's Day.

"You always hate to deprive these younger players of the valuable training they get with the redshirts," Kennedy said, "but we simply have to get more help."

Bulger, Kennedy said, is "excellent" on defense and is the quick type of guard needed for FSU's shuffle offense.

Despite the injuries, however, Kennedy will start these five against UM (although there may be some shifts):

Shirley, at center; Long and Cal Huge, at forwards; Wally Dale and Pete Rogers, at guards.

Of these starters, Long and Shirley are dominating the individual single-game highs in statistics.

The two cagers are tied for total points scored in a single game, with 24 points each. Long reached his high-mark against Tennessee when he becketed 10 field goals and four free throws, and on the following night Shirley hit eight field goals and eight free throws against Chattanooga for his best of the year.

In the Chattanooga game, Shirley knotted the free throw high of eight points, which had earlier been set by Rogers against Auburn, while Long's 10 field goals against the Vols was good enough to give him the game-high in that department.

Shirley, a sophomore, owns the other two single-game records. Against Chattanooga, he attempted 11 free throws for game-high, and against Alabama Dec. 10, he led the team in rebounds.

The players who are highest in the individual departments are also leading the accumulative statistics.

Shirley is tied with Long for the game average. Both men have bucketed 12.5 points, but Shirley has sunk four more points than Long.

Shirley leads in field goals made (65-of-128), free throws made (32-of-43), free throw percentage (74.4), rebounds (106), rebound average (8.2), and total points (162).

Long, however, leads in two departments -- field goals attempted (137) and free throws attempted (49) --and he is tied with Huge for the most personal fouls (35).

Tall-man Dale Reeves (6-7) has performed most accurately from the floor with a 53.3 percentage.

The results:
Florida State 92, Tampa 60
FSU 65, Valdosta State 42
Florida 80, FSU 59
Auburn 65, FSU 47
FSU 72, Alabama 63
Kentucky 83, FSU 54
Auburn 77, FSU 70 (2 OT)
Richmond 62, FSU 56
FSU 77, Georgia 69*
FSU 49, Alabama 48*
FSU 79, Ga. Southern 60*
Tennessee 66, FSU 65
FSU 72, Chattanooga 55
*Savannah Inv. Tourney

The varsity game will begin at 7:45 p.m. Saturday in Tully Gymnasium. It will be preceded by a preliminary freshman game.

The FSU frosh, who have not been defeated in five starts, will battle St. Johns River JC of Palatka. The fledglings, coached by Joe Williams, have downed such teams as the Florida frosh, the Alabama freshmen, and rugged Chipola JC.

Tribe Defeats 'Dog In Swimming Debu

By Bob Densmore
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State swimming team swamped the University of Georgia Bulldogs, 66-29, last night before an over-flowing crowd in Montgomery Pool.

Doug Kruger of Fort Myers set a new meet and pool record for the Seminoles in 2:30.6 for the 200-yard breaststroke.

Overall, the Seminoles came out on top in eight of the 11 events as Head Coach Bim Stults began his 15th year of coaching at FSU.

In the 400-yard medley, FSU was disqualified for taking too many strokes under water, although the Tribe did place a man first.

The results:

200-yard Freestyle - (1) Gene Dayton and (2) Bob Durocher, both of Florida State. Dayton won in 1:59.75.

50 - yard Freestyle - (1) Dale Smith and (2) Charles Tandy, both of FSU. Time -- 23.2.

200-yard Individual Medley--(1) Davis and (2) Bill Lawrence, both of FSU. Time--2:18.8.

Diving - Neil Allen, of FSU.

200-yard Butterfly - (1) Risto Pyykko and (2) Jim Busse, both of FSU. Time--2:13.

100-yard freestyle--(1) Dale Smith and (2) Cohen, both of FSU. Time -- 52.5.

500-yard Freestyle - -(1) Alan Roles and (2) Ron Bissland, FSU. Time-- 6:17.5.

200-yard Breaststroke - -(1) ger, FSU, (2) Justus Baird of gia. Time-- 2:30.6.

400-yard Freestyle - Georg MacElveen, Patterson, Carlis Welch. Time-- 3:42.9.

Bryant Tells ROTC Of "Cold War Education"

By MAXWELL COURTNEY
Flambeau Staff Writer

The horizons of America are not of concrete or of steel, but of the mind, imagination and spirit of the individual Gov. Farris J. Bryant said in a speech to the combined units of the Army and Air Force ROTC.

There are many, Bryant stated, who can't recite the pledge of allegiance or sing the Star Spangled Banner -- who never think of starting a meeting with a word of prayer. These are danger signals for Democracy. "I am fearful that today our Democracy is endangered by the timid American, and if nothing is done soon, the timid American will be replaced by the Frightened American, and after that the conquered American."

Bryant pointed up a quote of Charles Edison, former governor of New Jersey, made 14 years ago, which pointed up the dangers of the times. Edison expressed concern that too many of us are content to jump in bed with a quick prayer, asking the good Lord to give the president and a handful of men in Washington the wisdom to save the nation.

But that isn't enough, he asserted, for "if we surrender our power of action to a small group in Washington, we will be confessing bankruptcy and borrowing a page from the totalitarian book."

Often by a desire to sidestep conflict or to avoid political involvement, citizens ignore their rights and are too timid to assume the responsibilities of citizenship.

Bryant felt that strengthening state and local institution will be the best defense against encroachments on Democracy.

Bryant stated three acts of citizenship for individual Americans. "First, inform yourself of the world around you. Second, make use of your knowledge." Bryant emphasized this by saying, "Speak out and you will be heard." The third act of citizenship that he pointed out was, "to encourage the support of others."

"As we enter this new year, America's progress in the world struggle for freedom seems brighter than at any time in recent years -- and our need for understanding more demanding than ever before. Most Americans know that our freedom is threatened by Communism . . . But too few know how Khrushchev plans to bury us . . . or how and why Communism is evil.

"We think of the people of Russia and the satellite nations as oppressed, in virtual bondage. We forget that there are many who are as happy as we, and who are as fearful of the ascendency of capitalism, or Americanism, as we are of the rise of Communism. . . I do not believe we can, as good citizens, disavow a responsibility not only to be informed ourselves, but to inform others.

"It is my belief that Cold War Education has a very real role in America today, as a mental civil defense as essential as the knowledge of where to go and what to do should the Cold War suddenly turn hot."

He stated that Florida's new and continuing program of Cold War education for Florida will deal with the basis of the Soviet challenge to the American way of life. In cooperation with the Institute of American Strategy and a number of well-informed Floridians, the state hopes to bring the finest minds of the nation here to discuss the issues of the day and to give guidance in working to understand the issue of Communism versus freedom.

In closing, Bryant left a personal quote when he said, "Citizenship carries with it a proud heritage and a record of progress which, with God's help, we shall use, not for a tombstone, but for a cornerstone."

GOVERNOR FARRIS BRYANT SPEAKS TO COMBINED ROTC UNITS

Dr. Randel Tells Audience Americans Are Myth-Ridden

By MILA ARNOLD
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Sometimes I think that the American people are the most myth-ridden in the entire history of mankind," Dr. William Randell said Wednesday night in his introduction of the fourteenth annual American Studies Lecture Series.

Randel, head of FSU's American Studies Dept. announced that the theme of the lectures this year will be "American Myths." Special speakers representing various departments, as well as visiting speakers, will deliver lectures on myths reflecting many phases of American life. The lectures comprise a university-approved course, but are open to the general public.

Randel's first lecture concerned generally the "American Hero Myth." More specifically, it concerned the myth which centered around the life of General George Armstrong Custer, the legendary hero of "Custer's Last Stand."

In relating the details of Custer's life, Randel demonstrated that Custer's myth had already begun long before he died. People worshipped "the Boy General with the Golden Locks," and simply forget the names of many men who later proved to be of much more historical significance than Custer.

Randel told of Custer's experiences at West Point, where he exceeded the maximum number of demerits allowed and went on to graduate last in a class of 34. Upon leaving West Point Custer became an apparently courageous military leader.

It was proposed, however, by some of his contemporaries that he was stupid and head-strong, never stopping to consider the odds or consequences of battle.

It is quite possible, Randel added, that Custer may have caused his own death by his typical blind action. No one can deny that Custer led a brilliant life in the eyes of the public. His public made him the model soldier and refused to believe any of the faults he truly had.

After Custer's death, his wife Libbie was appointed post-mistress at Monroe, Mich., to the public's great delight. His faithful horse, Comanche, was the only survivor of the battle between Custer's men and the Sioux at the Little Big Horn.

Hence, Comanche was paraded until he died, and was then stuffed and placed in a special air-conditioned display case in the Dyche Museum of the University of Kansas.

The myth that started with a dashing young general was, consequently, enlarged after his death. It lingers on in taverns everywhere, as depicted on the Budweiser lithograph.

According to Dr. Randel, this is an

Women's Honorary Grants Fellowships

Three fellowships for graduate study will be awarded by the National Council of Alpha Lambda Delta, for use during the 1963-64 academic year, it was announced.

The three fellowships, in honor of Mary Leonard, Alice Crocker Lloyd, and Adele Hagner Stamp, are each in the amount of $1500. Applicants will be judged on scholastic record, recommendations submitted, the soundness of the applicant's project and purpose, and to some extent on need.

Any member of Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman women's honorary, who was graduated in 1960, 1961 or 1962 and who has maintained the scholastic average (3.5) throughout her college career is eligible. Graduating seniors may apply if they have maintained this average to the end of the first term of this year.

Applicants must do their graduate study in a college having an Alpha Lambda Delta chapter.

Application blanks and information sheets may be obtained from the Dean of Women or directly from the national fellowship chairman. Application must be filled out by the applicant herself and submitted to the fellowship chairman before Feb. 15, 1963. A complete official transcript of undergraduate work must be sent.

Application blanks and letters of reference are to be sent to Mrs. Sarah Healy, National Fellowship Chairman, Dean of Women, University of Alabama, Box 1943, University, Alabama.

45 Brazilians Come To FSU For 5 Weeks

About 45 Brazilians left Rio de Janeiro yesterday for FSU, where for five weeks they will make an intensive study of the English language.

The South American students, most of them in college, are expected to enroll for the classes beginning Monday, according to Dr. Herberto Lacayo, professor of modern languages who is directing FSU's English Language Institute.

The students will study five days a week, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. with lunchtime off, and will use only the English language in their class discussions. Three graduate assistants from the English Dept. and one from the Modern Languages Dept. will assist Lacayo.

Ponte Cultural (Cultural Bridge) of Brazil is sponsoring the study session, and FSU is conducting it in cooperation with the Florida Institute of Continuing University Studies. The students will fly to Miami via VA-RIG and are expected to arrive in Tallahassee on the week-end. They will stay at the Cherokee Hotel.

Class sessions, said Lacayo, will be conducted in three of the frame buildings of Mabry Heights village for married students. Fourteen Mabry buildings are being vacated to be moved for construction of a men's dormitory, but three houses will remain at their Call Street site for the duration of the session.

The English Language Institute has conducted several other intensive English language sessions for Latin Americans, principally Mexicans, during the summer.

The Untouchables combo will be featured tomorrow night at the Freshman Class dance, to be held after the FSU-Miami basketball game.

Class president Lief Erickson said the theme of the dance will be "Dungeon Drag." The affair will be held in the Suwannee Room.

Admission will be $1 per couple, he added.

Chaperones will include Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Winters and class sponsors, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Litwhiler and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Reichelt.

Pork Choppers Note

Representative government in the U.S. received a refreshing shot in the arm Wednesday with the opening of the 88th Congress. President Kennedy was handed a smashing victory with the establishment of the House Committee on Rules as a 15 man body.

Prior to 1961 the committee was a 12 man body controlled by a 6 man Republican-Southern coalition. The administration had continuously charged that too many of its key bills were bottled up by the committee.

The conservative coalition, headed by Democratic Chairman Howard Smith of Virginia will no longer have life and death authority over legislation in the House of Representatives. Not only will President Kennedy's legislative program find more favorable reception in the present session but majority rule will increasingly become a reality.

Significant in this victory was the margin by which the membership of the Rules Committee was established. Two years ago House Speaker Sam Rayburn and President Kennedy were forced to lay their personal prestige on the chopping block in order to force temporary expansion of the Committee. That effort won by only a 5 vote margin. This session's permanent establishment of an expanded committee passed by a 39 vote margin, a far bigger victory than counted on by congressional leaders. It would seem to be an indication this country is fast approaching representative government, at least in its national congress.

Perhaps it would be wise for Florida's Pork Chop gang to take note of the changing tide in governmental bodies of the U.S. The country is apparently waking up to the fact that their law making bodies have been strangled and dominated in a dictatorial fashion by minority groups.

All these years they have remained hidden and protected by their emotional cries of "protect states rights," "beware of big government."

But citizens, acting through the courts and finally Congress have begun to remove the dirge that has impeded realization of a truly democratic society.

Unrepresentative legislatures throughout the nation have begun to fall. And Florida, one of the worst offenders, is directly in line of this sweeping change.

But change is always met with resistance. Small county legislators will not fall easily and only through perseverance of the state's citizens will we someday realize the grand dream of a truly representative and democratic government.

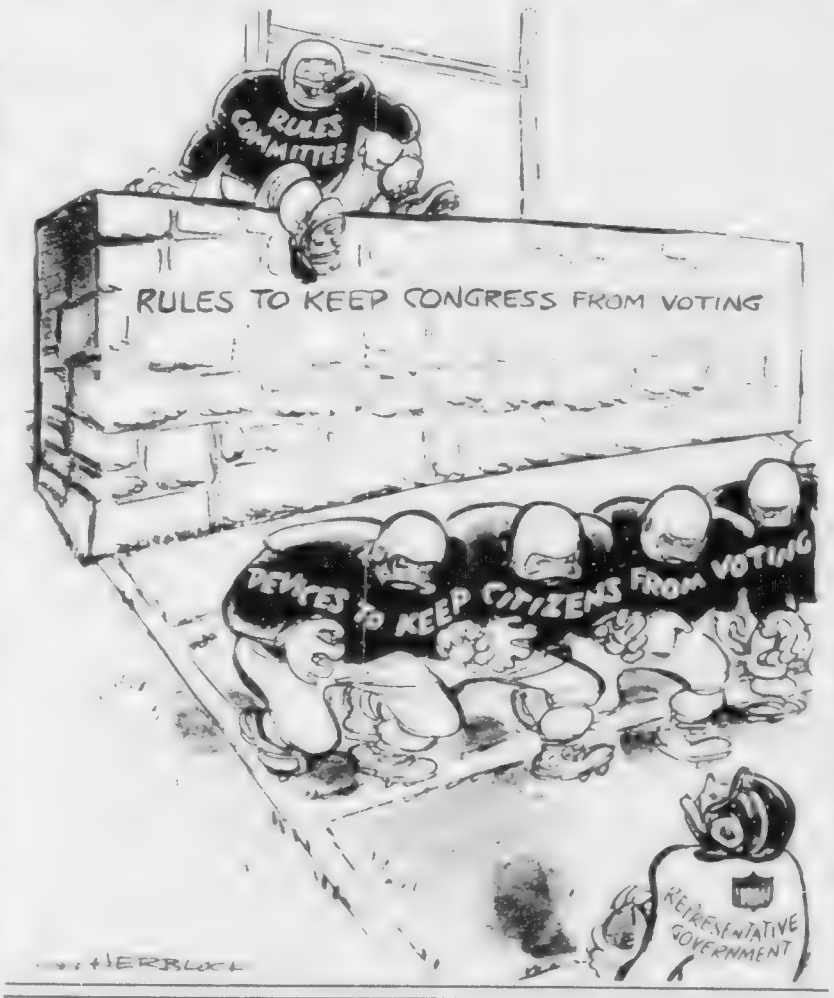
Nehru Support Lesser Of Evils



Now that things have quieted down along the India-China border we may speculate on the relative merits of the contesting powers. We are apt to categorically condemn Red China for its actions and to support India wholeheartedly because she is a "democratic" nation with Western ties.

There is some evidence that the last flare-up along the border was ignited by India--Indian troops firing the first shots. India claims a "massive" Chinese invasion, yet left her best troops stationed in Kashmir--a colony she holds against the will of its people, who more than likely would prefer to be governed by Pakistan.

There can be little doubt that China's presence in India amounts, nevertheless, to Communist encroachments on a free nation's territory--although the disputed area has never been officially agreed upon as a part of India or China. The ethnic groups involved in the territories claimed by China certainly are not Chinese.

We are probably correct in supporting India--although it is regretable that American arms must be used. This use of Western armaments pushes India from her neutral position and puts her much closer to aligning herself with the West. Western alignment is injurious to the Indian people in that it strengthens the Indian ruling classes and puts the Praja Socialist party at a disadvantage. However, the choice between Communist totalitarianism and capitalist exploitation is easily made--capitalism has been so modified since the 1st days of laissez-faire by socialist agitation that any attempt on the part of the Communist nations to enlarge their borders at the expense of others must be sternly met--not from the standpoint of righteousness but from the standpoint of practical politics. Nehru may not represent, to us, the best interest of India's millions but he surely represents a better system than China. The lesser of two evils in this case should receive our qualified support.

Rules Defeat Begins Reform

(Reprinted from the St. Petersburg Times)

The comfortable margin by which the House of Representatives upheld the 15-member Rules Committee will universally be hailed as a great victory for President Kennedy.

So it was. But it was a great deal more than that.

Old Judge Smith, the Chairman of the Rules Committee, sourly remarked ahead of the vote that "The President is determined to 'pack' the Committee, and maybe he can get the votes to do it."

It isn't "packing" if a stubborn minority group can block the majority from having its way. Ever since the 1937 Supreme Court fight, whenever there has been an effort to break a reactionary stranglehold in any body or agency, it has been a "'packing" attempt.

Floridians perhaps can get a better understanding by likening the hold-back campaign of Chairman Smith and his minority of supporters to the tactics of the Pork Chop Gany in our Legislature.

To persons who sincerely believe that the bedrock foundation of democracy is man's right to govern himself through the representatives whom he chooses, the Rules Committee victory is not the end, but the beginning of needed reform.

Twin of the House Rules Committee obstruction to free government is the Senate's filibuster. Undoubtedly the House action yesterday will help in the fight to amend Rule 22, to provide a reasonable means of cutting off debate when debate ceases to be an attempt to persuade, but purely a menas of blocking majority rule.

No thoughtful person wants Senate discussion limited arbitrarily. There is no doubt that exhaustive debate does serve a useful purpose--but not when it becomes naked obstructionism.

Congress has a long way to go yet in modernizing and streamlining its archaic system of seniority and committees before it can be called truly a responsive and responsible legislative body.

'Madness' Wins The Game

To the Editor:

See the exciting game! See all the people. A man and a woman and a child. See Them play. Color the people red, white, and blue. Leave their heads empty. And there are many words: "Defend the American Way of Life against aggressive, atheistic, materialistic, monolithic, communism," "No Appeasement, no negotiation," "Better Dead than Red." Color the words the purest white. See the machine-man, so alert and cleancut. Color the machine-man heroic blue. Color his hands bone white. Leave the head empty. There are more pure white words: "Counterforce," "Bigger bang for buck." The machine-man was made for the button. See the button! It is for the rocket. See how tall it is. Color the rocket shiny silver. It can go high as a cloud and faster than a bullet. It is made to fall on a city.

See the city. And there is a man and a woman and a child. They do not look right. There are more words: "defend communism against warmongering, imperialistic, materialistic, decadent capitalism." There is an ugly machine-man and a rocket and a button. Color them all devilred. Leave the heads empty.

Oh! The button! Who pushed the button? A machine-man's slip? A spark? A mad man? No, the button pushed itself. Because it was ready. Because the people wanted it that way. Too bad. Too bad. Color everything fiery yellow and red like a finger. Oh, see the word! Whose word is it? Who won the game? MADNESS.

Pressure Point Radical Film

BY TIM CARR
Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

Bobby Darin and Sidney Poitier pool their considerable talent to make this the most powerful racially oriented film since "The Defiant Ones."

Drama is the result of a conflict of characters. It is impossible to imagine two more conflicting personalities than those portrayed in "Pressure Point."

Darin is an inmate of a federal penitentiary during WW11, confined because he is a member of the Nazi party. Poitier is the prison psychiatrist assigned to discover what makes Darin tick, and to straighten him out if possible.

"Pressure Point" is directed boldly and blatantly. The photography is superb: the nightmares of an acute paranoiac are brilliantly captured.

This film will anger many; it will disturb most. Nobody will forget it.

Essay Contest Offers Free European Trip

An essay contest being sponsored by Hilton Tours will offer as grand prize a free trip to Europe this summer.

Subject of the essay is "What a Trip to Europe Means to My Education." Deadline for submission of entries will be Feb. 1, 1963. Entries must be postmarked before midnight of that date to be eligible. The decision of the judges will be final, and all essays become the property of Hilton Tours.

Competition is open only to bona fide students between the ages of 18 and 25, registered at any junior college, college, or university in the United States or Canada, except in states or provinces where such is prohibited by law.

A letter from the registrar attesting to the official student status of each entrant must accompany each essay.

Essays must be no longer than 1000 words. They must be typed, double-spaced on white paper, and the entrant's name must not appear on any of the pages. Entrant's name and address should appear on a separate piece of paper attached to the entry.

A panel of judges selected from educators within the Vallejo Unified School District, Vallejo, Calif., will select the winner. The winner will be advised personally and public announcement of the winner will be made by Hilton Tours on or before Feb. 25, 1963.

Vocal And Instrumental Group

"Four Saints" Appear Here Feb. 9 & 11

By CHRIS McGLASSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

"The Four Saints," a unique instrumental and vocal quartet, will make their appearance at FSU, Feb. 9 and 11, under the Student Artist Series program.

Although a relatively new group, they have attained great popularity throughout their various college and nightclub tours. To name but a few, Georgia Tech, Kansas State, Emory and Denver Universities have all applauded the entertainers as one of the best professional vocal groups to perform at their respective schools.

The group has recently released their first album under the Warner Brothers record label. In this album, the four men combine their talents as outstanding vocalists, instrumentalists, comedians and actors to produce a new and effective sound.

The group actually organized 10 years ago in high school, where they were known as "The Kord Kings." After all four received scholarships to the University of Puget Sound, they began to organize more routines and play at several western colleges.

After their graduation, Doug Evans, John Howell, Bob Erickson and Jerry Dee Chene joined the Air Force. They spent four years in the Air Force Band doing feature acts while touring overseas. The foursome all belong to Phi Mu Alpha, the national honorary music fraternity.

"The Four Saints" promise to be one of the most outstanding performances of this trimester. They are not only a talented vocal group, but skillful masters in the world of comedy and subtle wit.

All material for the show is written strictly by the group itself.

DOUBLE EXPOSURE

The "Four Saints" are shown here, in a double exposure shot, playing two of the many instruments which they play in their performances. They will appear at FSU February 9 and 11. Tickets will go on sale January 21.

outstanding instance of a myth people desired and created. It is based not on fact but on glamour, and such myths ignore the true American greats.

Randel stated that "one major hope for this course is that through it we will find out a little more about ourselves as a people. . ." He invited all interested listeners to return to the Library Lecture Hall next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. to hear Dr. Richard Bartlett of the History Dept. discuss "True and False Myths of the West."

Campus Chest Adopts Youth

This is Teofilo, whose family has 31¢ a day to live on, and a dole of 7 1/2¢ a day in addition.

This Colombian youth has been adopted by the FSU Campus Chest, for the student body to support in their drive from Jan. 23-27.

His father, also named Teofilo Abril, died when his youngest child was six months old. His widow was left then, with four children to be mother and father to. Teofilo has three sisters, Blanca (15), Myriam (13) and Estella (7).

Senora Abril can neither read nor write. She has chronic rheumatism in her hands. Nevertheless, she does cleaning and washing for various families in order to provide food and shelter for her children. She cannot do anything else, for she has no training or skills.

She is an humble woman from the destitute provinces, who once thought she would find a far better life in Bogota. (The city has become densely crowded with people fleeing violence in the provinces, and looking for work and decent pay. Most are disappointed, for there is not enough for all, especially since they have little learning and no trades.)

So it is that a whole family has now this pitiful income . . . 38 1/2¢ a day, and none of it really secure.

Teofilo and his family live in a squalid room, 9' x 9', with the naked earth as a floor. The ceiling and walls are of plaster and lime. One glass window admits the sunshine. There are two beds with shabby cornhusk mattresses, and blankets which have long since lost any warmth. (Because Bogota is nearly 9,000 feet above seas level, many nights are very cold, and winds howl through the eastern range of mountains along the border of the city.)

In this room stands a long bench. There are some crates and cartons. A scarred table holds a gasoline burner and its rank odor hangs in the air always, along with the old meals that have been cooked here. Two bags of potatoes are heaped in a corner. A latrine enclosed with boards and battered pieces of tinplate is shared by all the five families who live in this shack.

Out in the yard is a stone washing place and a can for water. More than half of the mother's income is spent on rent, which costs $5.29 a month. This includes an electric light and water, which is carried to the room.

The gasoline for cooking their simple meals costs 70¢ a month. Those meals, for the most part, are boiled rice, and a drink called agua de panela, which is brown sugar and water. Sometimes they have bread, sometimes a little chocolate. The slum in which they live is barrio Rio Negro, which is in the northern end of this long and narrow city.

Because she has had no chances in her own life, this mother is trying to educate all her children. It is the struggle of the deprived everywhere... that their children's lives may be brighter. Although education for the first five years is said to be compulsory, there is a lack of schools and teachers and enforcement means, because of the increasing population.

Consequently, thousands of the most destitute children never get to school. Thousands are sent out to do some kind of work, however ill-paid, at a very early age.

The fact that this woman has her 15 and 13-year-old daughters in school means that she will make any sacrifice for their futures. Blanca is even in high school.

Teofilo, himself, says he wants to be an engineer. He has expressive dark eyes and dark hair. His skin is sallow with malnutrition. Teofilo is in the second grade now and is a conscientious student. He is a nice boy, who likes the games of his childhood, enjoys the companionship of his family and is devoted to his mother.

Ony in his desperate need is Teofilo other than some little boy you might know down the street.

The Campus Chest "adoption" brings him nearer to America. It assures him of PLAN aid, a monthly cash grant of $8, food, clothing and special medical care. It gives him the gift of wonderful friendship to care about him and his tired mother in all their struggles.

Diplomas

Seniors who expect to graduate in April, 1963, must pay diploma fees by Monday, Jan. 14, in 102-B Westcott, said Dr. Murray W. Kenna, registrar.

FSU Chess Club First In Union Competition

It looks as if the honor of being the first FSU representative in college union competition will go to the chess team, under leadership of Dr. Robert L. Froemke of the School of Business.

He is planning to go with the FSU team to participate in the Association of College Unions regional matches at Emory University in February.

The chess team has participated in three collegiate matches so far this year. It lost to Georgia Tech here 4 to 1, and lost to the University of Florida there 3 1/2 to 2 1/2. The FSU team was the first Southern team to play in the National Intercollegiate Tournament at Philadelphia.

At Philadelphia the team participated in six matches, winning from Bloomsburg State College and Cornell University, and losing to Pittsburg, Ursinus, LaSalle and Boston College. Dr. Froemke commented that the victory over Bloomsburg represented the first intercollegiate victory for the FSU team.

To get to the Philadelphia tournament, Froemke and the team drove for 26 hours, and then played the first match two hours later. Needless to say, the hard concentration necessary in chess was difficult for the FSU men, Froemke said. The local team was the only one whose expenses were not paid by their colleges, he added.

Chess is one of the programs sponsored by the Association of College Unions, an organization of which Florida State is a member. Froemke compared the chess team's success with the University of Florida to the record of the football team. "We haven't won yet, but we are closing the gap," he said. Three years ago, FSU lost the first match 11 1/2 to 1/2. They came close to tying the last match.

AROUND THE WORLD

BOSTON-- The Roman Catholic Archbishop of Boston -- Richard Cardinal Cushing -- disclosed yesterday that he raised one million dollars to help liberate the prisoners of the invasion of Cuba. The Cardinal said that he alone was responsible for the raising of the million. He said he identified himself as the money-raiser because of pressure from news sources.

WASHINGTON -- Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Russia's Vasily Kuznetsov joined yesterday in expressing hope that East and West are entering a period in which some outstanding problems might be solved. The Secretary of State and other US officials met with the Russian Deputy Foreign Minister for nearly four hours in Washington yesterday. And informants believe there is some indication the Russians are interested now in reaching a disarmament agreement -- particularly a ban on nuclear testing.

MOSCOW -- In Moscow yesterday, the Soviet Government Newspaper Izvestia warned that a new Berlin crisis may be coming, more dangerous than the crisis over Cuba. Premier Khrushchev arrived in Warsaw, for talks with Polish officials, on his way to an East German Communist Party Congress in Berlin. It's believed Khrushchev may make his visit to Berlin the occasion for a new effort to settle the Berlin problem.

NEW YORK -- United Nations Undersecretary Ralph Bunche returned to New York from a trouble shooting trip to the Congo yesterday -- and reported conditions in that country much improved since his last visit there in October. Bunche said he believes Congo unification will be accomplished. He said: One man -- meaning President Moise Tshombe of Katango Province -- cannot thwart the will of the people or the will of the world.

MOROCCO -- Hundreds of farmers and villagers are stranded in Morocco -- in one of the worst floods to hit the North African Country in 40 years. The American Air Force is helping in rescue operations.

NEW YORK -- Assistant Secretary of Labor James Reynolds says he had no progress report whatsoever after separate meetings with the two sides today in the East and Gulf Coast Longshore strike. The Longshoremen's Union claims it has the all-out support of 12 other Waterfront Unions in the 9-day-old walkout.

WASHINGTON -- As for Congress, both the House and the Senate met only briefly yesterday and then adjourned until Monday when they'll hear President Kennedy's State-of-the-Union Message. Members are predicting the session -- which opened Wednesday-- will be a long one, running all the way to October.

"Mademoiselle" College Board Has 10 Coeds

Ten FSU co-eds have been selected to serve on Mademoiselle Magazine's 1963 national College Board. Selection for College Board membership is based on entries that show interest and ability in art, writing, fashion, merchandising, promotion, or advertising.

Coeds from FSU selected for the College Board are Patricia Gail Russel of Fort Lauderdale; Mary Faye McCampbell of Knoxville, Tenn.; Claire Freiburger of Miami; Marian Weeks of Lakeland; Priscilla Cranford of Jacksonville; Patricia Ann Lawrence of Hollywood; Marilyn Joyce Moore of Hollywood; Mary Hutchison of Manchester, Iowa; Diane Helen Putz of Sarasota and Judy Tait of Tallahassee.

Dr. La Seur Conducts Guest Seminar In Asia

BY PAT FREEMAN
Flambeau Staff Writer

Jets serving southeast Asia may not be experiencing quite as much difficulty with unruly jet streams, thanks to the third of a series of seminars sponsored under the joint efforts of the International Civil Aviation Organization and the World Meteorological Organization.

Dr. N. E. La Seur, Professor of Meteorology at FSU, has just recently returned from Bangkok, where he served as one of three guest meteorologists conducting the seminar. India and Britain sent the two other lecturers for the classes, which began Nov. 19 and ended Dec. 7, 1962.

Approximately 26 students employed as weather forecasters at airports of fifteen different nations attended the seminar, to learn new techniques in analyzing and predicting wind fields and weather conditions for flights.

The forecaster students represented countries of southeastern Asia such as Iran, Pakistan, India, Burma, Thailand, Ceylon, Malaya, Singapore, the Philippines, Australia, Laos, Formosa, Indonesia, Korea and Japan.

La Seur flew to Bangkok, where he served as lecturer for classes in newer techniques of weather prediction of the troublesome jet streams and wind fields over Asia. Classes ran five days a week and eight hours daily, with lectures being given in English.

Practical lab sessions shared equal time with lecture periods, according to La Seur, in order that the students might put to use some of the methods learned. The seminar lasted for three weeks, and was held in the offices of the Thailand Meteorological Dept.

The previous two seminars were held about two years ago, one in Rome for the Mediterranean area and the other in Cairo, representing the Near Eastern countries.

La Seur was invited to both of the earlier seminars, but said that he had been forced to turn them down due to previous committments. He added that plans are being studied in order to have seminar series in Africa and South America in the future.

What were some of the problems discussed during classes?

Problems arising from strong winds coming from both the East and the West, according to the season of the year, presented major difficulties in weather prediction, according to La Seur. Local air terminal problems were discussed, with emphasis on weather worries such as fog or thunderstorms often developing in tropic regions.

The lack of communications among these neighboring but practically isolated countries has always been an obstacle to the distribution of needed data for forecasting, La Seur observed. He added that the program was also intended to provide these forecasters from Asia to have and interchange of ideas, methods, and solutions to common problems.

On the way home, La Seur stopped en route to deliver lectures at the University of Hawaii and at the Navel Post Graduate School in California, (USA).

Seminoles Face Miami

The Florida State basketball team, whose record (7-6) is deceptive of some of the fine games it has played this season, will go against the University of Miami, whose record (10-1) is not deceptive of the calibre of Coach Bruce Hale's team.

STORM FIGHTERS

Junior college transfer cager, Pete Rogers, below, is slated for a starting role tomorrow.

The game will start at 7:45 p.m. in Tully Gymnasium, and it will be preceded by a freshman game with St. Johns River Junior College.

A point or two sprinkled in Florida State previous scores could radically change the outcomes of several games, while others would be unaffected.

For instance, Lady Luck could have tipped the scales the other way when Kennedy's crew saw defeat at the hands of Auburn University as the two schools battled through two over times. The following night, Richmond squeaked past the Seminoles by six points. Then, when the Seminoles toured the volunteer state, Tennessee sweated a one-point victory.

But in games like the 80-59 loss to Florida, the 65-47 loss to Auburn in the first meeting, and the 83-54 defeat by Kentucky, the Seminoles can have no gripes. They lost, period.

Tomorrow's opponent has a record that reflects truly the quality of its team.

The 1962-63 Hurricane squad is rated the greatest in the history of the school and is one of the very top teams in the South.

Only once in 11 games has Miami met the bitter pill of defeat--and that loss came from the tough La-Salle team in Philadelphia by a scant 78-76 margin.

In rolling to 10 victories, the Hurricanes have knocked off many of the better-known teams of the East and South. Miami won from Duke when that team was ranked number two in the nation. The Hurricanes defeated Providence, St. Johns, Boston College, Cornell, Pittsburgh, Florida (in double overtime), Rhode Island, Florida Southern and Jacksonville University.

Last night, the UF Gators fought a return match with the 'Canes, but the results were not available at press time.

"We look for tough sledding in all three of these games," says Hale.

FSU fans should concentrate on watching UM's top rebounder Rick Barry, who has been averaging about 16 rebounds a game, and the 7-2 Mike McCoy, who averages about 12 rebounds a game.

McCoy holds a slight edge over sophomore Barry in scoring, and third is Jack Spisak. Carl Stavreti, fourth, recently pushed Ken Allen down to fifth place in average scoring.

Kennedy will probably start Jerry Shirley at center, Charlie Long and Cal Huge at forwards, and Wally Dale and Pete Rogers at guards, while Hale will give the nod to Bernie Butts, Kenny Allen, Rick Barry, Jack Spisak, and Mike McCoy.

Hale Hails Miami's Barry

Rick Barry, a six foot, seven inch giant from Roselle Park, New Jersey, has been one of the big reasons why the University of Miami Hurricanes have been knocking off some of the bigger name college basketball teams of the nation. Barry is a coming All-American at Miami. Though only a sophomore, he already stands out as one of the greatest basketball players ever seen in this part of the country.

Coach Bruce Hale of the Hurricanes said: "Barry has the greatest potential of any player we've had here at this level."

Joe Mullaney, coach of Providence, called Barry the "finest sophomore' he's seen, while Joe Lapchick, coach of St. Johns, said "Rick will rank with the best--he destroyed us."

Barry led Miami to its brilliant championship in the "Hurricane Basketball classic" in late December, and was named the tournament's most valuable player. During the meet, he made 42 rebounds to break the all-time tournament record. Miami defeated Cornell and Pittsburgh to win the Hurricane Classic.

Rick's ability to get free under the goal brings him many tallies but he is equally skillful at giving the ball an accurate top in those mad scrabbles after a missed shot. His uncanny knack of twisting the ball through the rim no matter how tightly he is guarded, is a real tribute to his quick reflexes and agility.

Despite his brilliant scoring, Barry is one of the first men down on defense and here again his perfect timing and jumping skill make him a valuable man at rebounding.

Barry is a big man who has all the agility and quick reflexes of a little guy--in other words a coach's dream.

reshmen Shoot or 6th Victory fellow won't be wasting his time he comes early Saturday night the varsity basketball game been Florida State and Miami at ly Gymnasium.

SU's victories came over Manatee -43), Chipola (69-63), Florida -55), Jacksonville (71-62), and bama (59-56). The Baby Semles will play home games next k against Pensacola Junior Cole on Monday and St. Leo Junior lege Saturday.

. Johns had won six straight hout a loss before meeting the ksonville University frosh Wedday night (Jan. 9). Coach Bill en's team was averaging 80.5 nts per game and led the state's ior colleges -- 14 of them -- in ense. St. Johns was also hitting percent from the field, better n 70 from the free throw line. reshman statistics here today wed all five FSU starters in ble figures. The team is hitting 2 percent of its field goal atpts.

eading scorer after five games is Bill Peacock of Campbellton h a 14.0 average. Next, in order, 6-1 Ken Leakey of Fort Wayne, (11.8), 6-7 Jim Wallace of St. ersburg (11.2), 6-7 Bill Phillips Okeechobee (11.0) and 6-6 Gary ull of Pompano Beach (10.0). SU Varsity Head Coach Bud Kenly says this year's frosh team is e of the best we've ever had." e leading scorer is Peacock, h 70 points. Twenty-one of these rkers occurred when Peacock keted seven field goals and seven e throws against Jacksonville for individual game-high. Two nights later, however, Schull tied this mark by sinking eight from the floor and five at the charity line against Alabama.

Peacock has sunk 24-of-27 free throws for the most completions and the highest average (88.90.

The field goal leader, Leakey, has been successful on 27-of-53 tries. Mike Kingsbery, however, owns the percentage title (52.2).

Wallace, the top rebounder, has dragged 45 from the boards for a 9.0 average. He also tied Phillips' and Wallace's game-high mark in free throws attempted (10).

In other single game action, Phillips scored the most field goals (eight) against Manatee, but nearly a week later Schull tied him against Alabama. Peacock completed the most free throws of the season (nine) against Chipola.

Litwhiler Joins Hot Stove Loop

Like any good baseball man does when it's cold outside, Florida State Baseball Coach Danny Litwhiler joined the Hot Stove League whirl.

Litwhiler, who opens his ninth season at FSU on March 16, is one of three guest speakers this month at the annual winter meeting of the American Association of Collegiate Baseball Coaches in Los Angeles. And he's busy in the writing field, with another of his baseball training books due out soon and a pair of magazine articles already in type.

Litwhiler spoke on defensive outfield play at the AACBC convention on Jan. 4. He knows whereof he speaks, holding the record -- set in 1942 -- for 151 games without an error. In all, Litwhiler played 12 years in the big leagues.

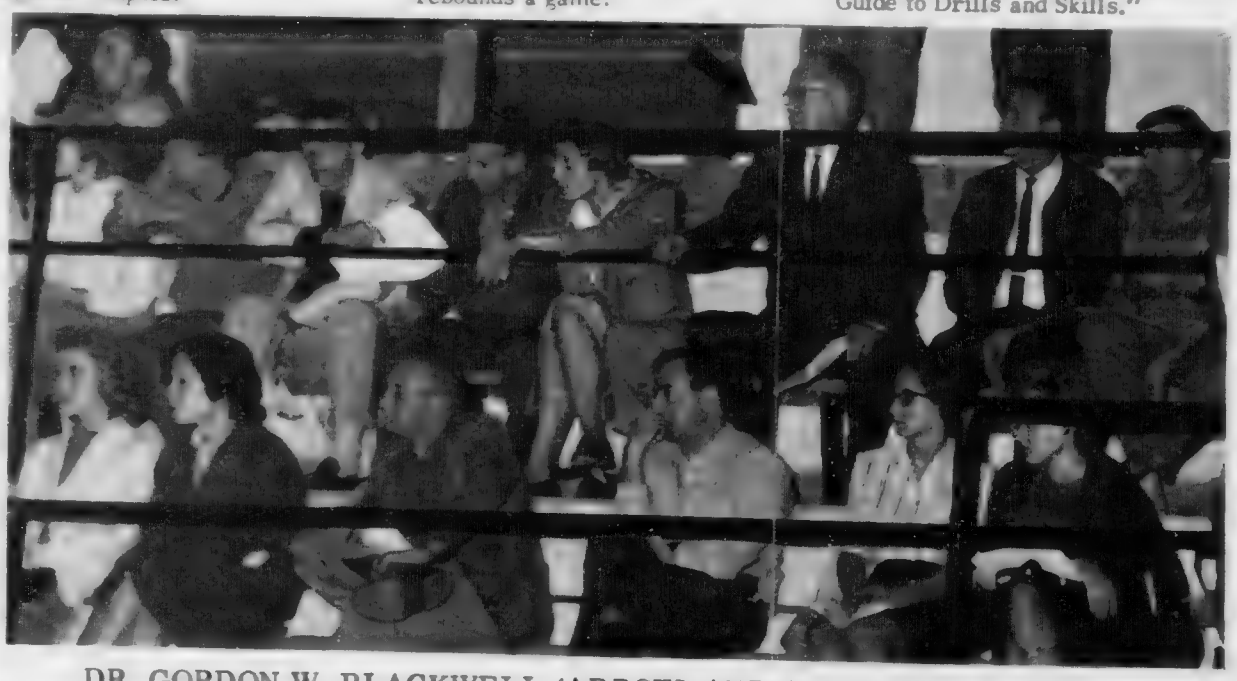
Two Litwhiler articles are forthcoming in the Athletic Journal. He also has a book due out soon: "A Guide to Drills and Skills."

Tankers Set For 'Bama

The Florida State swimming team, its record 1-0, will meet the University of Alabama mermen tonight in Tuscaloosa, Ala., as the Seminoles begin their first road trip of the 1962 intercollegiate competition.

After battling the Crimson Tide, the tankers will swim against Tulane University in the Louisianians' home pool and then return to FSU to challenge North Carolina in a Feb. 2 match in Montgomery Pool.

Coach Bim Stults' first victory of the year, a 66-29 triumph over the University of Georgia Bulldogs, was a conclusive win, despite the fact that FSU was disqualified in the first event.



Trailing once, because of the erasure of the Tribe win by the disqualification, the Seminoles exploded to win eight of the 11 events and saw a meet and pool record fall as Doug Kruger of Fort Myers swam the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:30.6.

FSU's Gene Dayton won the 200-yard freestyle in 1:59.75, while Dale Smith finished first in the 50-yard freestyle with a 23.2 time.

Then Davis grabbed a first place in the 200-yard individual medley to give FSU another win. He toured the course in 2:18.8. Neil Allen copped the diving title.

The 200-yard butterfuly was won by Risto Pyykko's 2:13 time, and Smith added another win by taking the 100-yard freestyle in 52.5.

After that, Georgia's Alex Patterson swam the 200-yard backstroke in 21.79, but then FSU's Alan Roles won the 500-yard freestyle in 6:17.5. The final event, the 400-yard freestyle, was won by the Georgia team.

SU Takes Miami In Overtime 77-74

By JOHNNY DAVIS

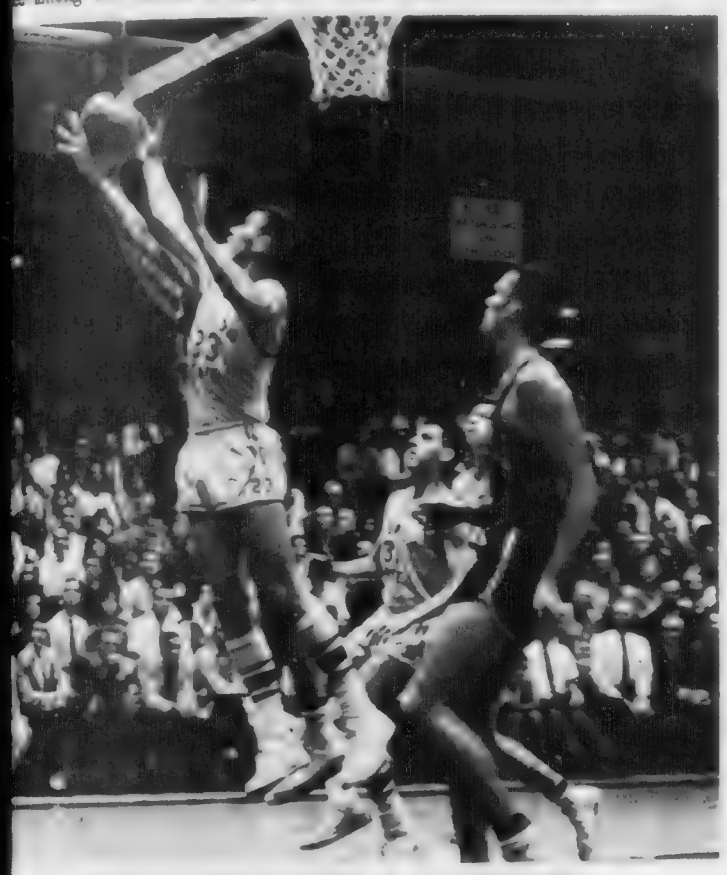
mi's confident and cocky Hurr- s ran into unexpected trouble day night, as Florida State's up Seminoles scalped their state rivals from the south, , in an exciting overtime duel e a 4,500 crowd at Tully Gym- m.

upset marked only the second in 16 outings for Coach Bruce 's Canes', while the victory the Seminoles season total ght wins against six losses. into the contest, Miami was among the nation's top ten college quintets, and owned victories over such formidable foes as Boston College, Providence, Duke, Cornell and the University of Florida (twice). The Hurricanes only other setback came at the hands of strong LaSalle at Philadelphia, 78-76.



The tribe hit a torrid 49.2 percent from the floor, but slumped to a not-so-good 50 percent at the charity line. The Hurricanes connected on 40.0 percent of their field goal attempts, and managed to cash in on 22 of 33 free throw tries for a respectable 66.6 percent average. A real surprise however, was the fact that the Seminoles outrebounded their taller visitors, 60-56.

Charlie Long, the only senior on the Florida State roster, came through in outstanding fashion against Miami. The 6-4 forward, who hails from Louisville, Kentucky, led the Seminoles in scoring with 21 points, and virtually assured the Indians of victory with his clutch overtime performance. Dale Reeves, a 6-7 junior pivot-man who also comes from Louisville in the Blue Grass state, was a real thorn in the sides of the Canes' all evening. Reeves grabbed 14 rebounds, one less than Miami's Rick Barry, the games leader. He also tallied 19 points, to rank second in that department. Reeves came off the bench midway through the first half, and ignited a Seminole rally that carried the host's from a 12 point deficit to a one point advantage at halftime.

Other Tribe standouts included junior Pete Rogers, and 6-4 forward Cal Huge. Rogers, a lanky 6-5 guard, pushed in 17 points, including 5 in the crucial overtime stanza, while Huge, a rapidly improving sophomore, added 12 markers to the victory cause. Huge also brought down 10 rebounds, and did a real fine job of defending Miami's sophomore sensation Rick Barry. Barry, who stands 6-7, was held to a mere 14 points by Huge. Barry went into the fray averaging better than 20 points a game, and earlier in the week he tossed in 31 against the Florida Gators.

Pacing the Miami scoring attack was their goliath-like center, 7-1 Mike McCoy. McCoy tied for game high honors with Florida State's Long, as he also tallied 21 points. McCoy brought down eight rebounds, too. Guard Kenny Allen was the only other Hurricane hitting in double figures. The 6-0 senior popped in 13 markers in a losing effort.

Lecture Series Hears Bartlett

Dr. Richard A. Bartlett, assistant professor of history at FSU, will be the speaker Wednesday night, in the American Studies lecture series.

"True and False Myths of the West" will be the subject of Bartlett's lecture, according to Dr. William Randel, program director. The speaker's book, "Great Surveys of the American West," which deals with Wester expeditions after 1867, was recently named best book in the history category for 1962 by "Desert Magazine of the Southwest." The book was published by the University of Oklahoma Press.

Bartlett served as instructor at Texas A. and M. College and as information librarian in the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress, before joining the FSU faculty in 1955. He has served as director of the Bootstrap Program at Tyndall Air Force Base and presently teaches undergraduate and graduate history courses on the West.

"American Myths" is the subject of this year's lectur series. Lectures, at 7:30 p.m. in the Strozier Library Lecture Hall, are open to the public as well as students taking the course.

Brubeck Is Called Red Hot And Cool

By CHRIS CLARKE
Flambeau Staff Writer

Should some cool-minded Martian come to earth and check on the state of our music, he might play through 10,000 jazz records before he found one that wasn't in common 4/4 time.

Considering the emancipation of jazz in other ways, this is a sobering thought . . . and an astonishing one. The New Orleans pioneers soon broke free of the tyranny imposed by the easy brass key of B-flat.

Dave Brubeck, pioneer already in so many other fields, is really the first to explore the uncharted seas of compound time. True, some musicians before him experimented with jazz in waltz time, but Brubeck has gone further, finding still more exotic time signatures, and even laying one rhythm in counterpoint over another.

The outcome of his experiments, basically shows the blending of three cultures: the formalism of classical Western music, the freedom of the often complex pulse of African folk music as well as even the use of rhythms from the Turkish folk song.

Ticket sales have indicated the popularity of this international great's coming to the FSU campus. Brubeck's quartet will present two concerts Jan. 30, beginning at 7 and 9 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at the Westcott Ticket Office at the price of $2 for students and $3 for non-students.

Bemvindos

Bemvindos.

Forty-five students from the nation of Brazil are visiting Florida State University and we welcome them to the campus. We hope their stay here is both profitable and enjoyable.

It is particularly fitting at this time for Brazilians to be visiting a campus in the United States. Relations between their government and ours are seriously strained at this point and the future is uncertain.

Brazil's President Joao Goulart, who has spoken of increased dealings with the Soviet Union, has been given an overwhelming vote of confidence by his people. The parliamentary-type government forced by pro-American, anti-communist military leaders has been shelved in favor of a strong-president form of government.

Unrest ferments. An attempted coup of the government by military leaders is not impossible. The United States watches and waits. The Alliance for Progress hangs in the balance.

Understanding is paramount in these trying times. Few United States citizens used to plenty of food, clothes and other material benefits, can truely appreciate conditions existing in South America. Neither can South Americans easily forget that citizens of the United States have often attempted to dominate and exploit their continent. Many rightfully harbor resentment of collusions between businessmen from the US and the wealthy classes of South America which are designed to exploit their nation and people to the fullest.

Brazil has made remarkable progress in many areas during the past decade. But it, like all South American nations, still has serious problems. To many Brazilians food and education are scarce. These people must be properly fed, clothed, and educated before they can become useful citizens.

Both North Americans and South Americans must realize and understand the problems involved. They must work together if these conditions are to be eradicated and the problems solved. Only through mutual understanding and mutual efforts can Americans, both North and South, prosper.

Exchange visitors such as those on campus now contribute much to mutual understanding. We welcome them. Bemvindos.

Senator Chans Speaks

Last night I had a reassuring dream. I dreamt that I was a television announcer and that I was conducting one of those person-to-person interviews. I found myself in a spacious office in which there was a huge mahogany desk. At this desk sat a stately looking gentleman, and behind him hung a portrait of himself, clad in untarnished armor, and underlain by the inscription, "Clean clear through."

"Today, ladies and gentlemen, we have the honor of visiting the busy offices of that distinguished state senator, Charlie Chans. Senator Chans has won wide recognition for his activities in ridding the teaching profession in Florida of less-than-desirable persons. He is also well known for his documented book, "Nasties, and How to Know 'Em." Senator Chans, could you give us some idea just how serious the situation is?"

"Well first of all, John," began the good senator with a grits-and-pot-liquor grin, "I wish you would call me by my nickname, --'God'."

"Uh-certainly, sir."

"Now to answer your question, John, let me give you an example of how grave the danger is: just today we apprehended a certain gym instructor at a local junior high school who was actually trying to teach his pupils...well... wrestling!"

"Gad, sir! The devil you say!"

"Dagnabbit-all-hang, John, we can't afford to waste time being shocked. We've got to hit this thing now and hit it hard!" The good senator banged his fist on his desk for emphasis. As he did so, he upset a small trophy on which there was mounted a silver greyhound with a tail between its legs.

"Sir, what has been done thus far to combat this menace?"

"I'm glad you asked me that, John. As you know, I am presently trying to have belly-button prints and ear-wax samples taken of every teacher in Leon county. I later hope to do the same to all persons involved in Florida education."

"Just how effective is this method, sir?"

"John, it has been proven conclusively that naval configuration and wax texture can readily reveal to the practiced eye, any person who is less than desirable."

"I see sir, but what can we do as individuals?"

"Well, John, you might follow the lead of a number of our citizens by spying on your neighbors, peeping in windows, and turning in nasty news to my committee."

"Sir, would you say that people who claim that you are conducting these investigations merely for free publicity in lieu of a gubernatorial race are actually those people who are relatively green--"

"Wouldn't 'inexperienced' be a better term, John?"

"Er, yes sir, sorry sir, -- inexperienced in the ways of the political world?"

"Yes, John, these spineless creatures that run around screaming that tripe about Freedom of Education are misled and have no idea of just how serious this problem is. But don't worry, John, we're tracking them down, too."

At this point I awoke to a ... new day. I looked into the crib ... sleeping daughter and knew ... need never worry about her le... less-than-desireable thing... there will always be people ... Charlie Chans.

Heaton contrasted the types of folk singers: the real and genuine, such as Sara Barmgardner, Gene Richey and George Redran; the very commercialized, such as the Kingston Trio, Frank Warner, and Peter, Paul and Mary; and the semi-pure, such as Joan Baez and Pete Seger.

It is a shame, Heaton pointed out, that this genuine music from the heart has been taken over by twist and marching band groups.

The lecture next switched to the banjo, which was once a three stringed instrument, he pointed out. In 1820, however, Jo Sweeney added two strings, making the present five stringed banjo.

Songs and demonstration of styles on the banjo were given by Heaton and members of the audience.

Mortar Board Holds Lecture; Piccard Speaks

Dr. Paul Piccard, associate professor of government, will be presented Wednesday night by the Mortar Board Last Lecture series.

Piccard will speak at 7:30 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall, on the topic "Perspectives on Justice and Policies."

The speaker said he will attempt to give his "highly personalized explanation" of what he thinks are the important and fundamental questions of the society.

He also will discuss the nature of government in society, and values, such as questions of right and wrong.

Piccard said it is upsetting that today's college students, who are advanced enough to recognize that values are relative, do not go beyond this point. He noted that to say "values are relative" does not answer the real question, which can only be resolved by application.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

American String Quartet Performs In Thomasville

The American String Quartet, acclaimed the most outstanding string quartet that this country has produced, will be presented in concert at the Thomasville Municipal Auditorium on Jan. 15 under the auspices of the Thomasville Entertainment Foundation.

Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

The four members of the quartet, Maurice Wilk, LaMar Alsop, David Schwartz and David Soyer, are all virtuoso performers with orchestras, in solo recitals and as members of chamber groups in almost every section of the world.

They bring vast experience, knowledge and talent to a quartet where musical and personal gratifications are achieved.

Maurice Wilk of New York is a Toscanini alumni and a former member of the Bach Aria Group. He plays a Bavarian Stradivarius, created in 1720. LaMar Alsop, descendant of a Mormon pioneer, has made extensive concert tours of the United States, playing a Giovanni Grancino violin dating from 1690.

The violist, David Schwartz, is from Detroit and was first violist with Rodzinski, Paray and Casals at the Osaka Festival in Japan and with the Paganini Quartet. His viola, a Gaspar de Salo, made in 1580, is the oldest instrument in the group. David Soyer has given cello recitals at Town Hall and Carnegie Hall and has played with the Bach Aria Group. His instrument, made by Joseph Guarnerius in 1714, is noted for its extraordinary tone.

Tickets to the concert may be secured by writing the Entertainment Foundation, Box 162, Thomasville. Single admission tickets are priced at $4 for orchestra, $3 for balcony seats.

The concert will be a program of selections by Mozart, Beethoven and Dvorak.

The ensemble will present the Mozart Quartet in B Flat Major, the Hunt Quartet, Beethoven's Quartet in F Minor, and the "American" Quartet in F Major by Dvorak.

Opera Auditions Are Scheduled

Auditions for the FSU Opera Guild's production of Puccini's "Triptych" will be held Jan. 22 and 23, it was announced today.

Singers who wish to audition for parts should begin preparing their selections. Each singer is requested, when possible, to sing an aria from the particular role for which he or she wishes to audition, and also another aria of a contrasting type.

Scores are on two-hour reserve in the Music Library.

The auditions will be held later this month in Opperman Music Hall, from 7 to 9 p.m.

The "Triptych" is a composite of three one-act operas, which includes "The Cloak," "Sister Angelica," and "Gianni Schicchi." Because of the nature of this work, a large number and variety of roles are available.

Unbeaten Frosh Extend Streak

By John Wood
Assistant Sports Editor

The St. Johns River Junior College Basketball team barged up the St. Johns and sank.

They were sunk by a hungry band of Seminole freshmen under the leadership of Coach Joe Williams. The FSU yearlings were paced by Bill Phillips' 25 points and Gary Schull's 11 rebounds.

This game represented a collision between two of the better "junior" teams in the state. FSU's frosh, being hailed as "one of the best" in the school's history, have swept past five straight opponents. St. Johns River JC, on the other hand suffered its first loss Wednesday at Jacksonville University and was one of the hottest of 14 junior college teams in Florida. The Vikings, after six games, led the state in defense and was averaging 80.5 points per game. They were also hitting a hot 53 per cent from the field.

The yearlings next tangle with another top JC in the state, Pensacola, in a preliminary to tonight's varsity-Georgia clash.

Also in the double scoring column were Ken Leakey with 11 points, Jim Wallace who tallied 14, and Bill Peacock and Mike Kingsberry who each put in 10 points.

The Baby Seminoles led 30-15 at the half, and hit 49.2 per cent of their field goal tries in the game.

After 77-74 Loss

Miami led throughout the first half, with the lead ranging anywhere from one to twelve points. Cal Huge knotted the score at 38-38 with a looping one hander, with about 46 seconds remaining in the initial half, and moments later he duplicated the shot to give the tribe a scant 40-39 edge at halftime.

FSU set a torrid pace for the first seven minutes of the final half, outscoring the Canes' 14-3, and with 12:49 remaining the Seminoles held their logest lead of the contest, 54-42.

But Miami began to slice the lead, and with 2:18 left to be played, guard Bernie Butts, a transfer from the University of Kentucky, stepped to the free throw line with the score standing 64-61 in favor of the hosts. Butts calmly sank his first shot, but he purposely missed on his second try, grabbed his own rebound, placed it back up, and the score was tied 64-64.

Both teams had opportunities to score following Butt's jumper, but all attempts proved futile, so the regulation game ended, 64-all.

Miami drew first blood in the overtime stanza, as Kenny Allen made good on two free throw attempts, but Pete Rogers countered seconds later with a pair of charity tosses, and again it was a tie ball game.

Rick Barry broke the tie in favor of Miami once more, as he also found the mark on two free throw tries. As the two teams broke down court, Rogers was once again fouled. His first shot proved true, but his second try banged off the rim, and after a short tussle for the ball, the Tribe's Cal Huge came up with it, flipped it out to Long, and he promptly drove in under the basket and easily laid it in. This made the score 69-68, FSU's favor.

But once again the tide turned as the Cane's Allen scored on a driving layup, making it 70-69, Miami. But, on the play, Allen charged Reeves, and the big Kentuckian capitalized on his first shot, making it 70-70.

With 2:16 to go, Allen again put Miami ahead, 72-70, with two free throws. But as the action returned to the other end of the floor, Long was fouled, and he sank his two charity tosses, again tying the score.

Captain Jack Spisak was guilty of an offensive foul, and the Seminoles regained possession of the ball. Long was again fouled, and once more he calmly sank both shots. This gave FSU a 74-72 margin.

FSU got the ball after Miami missed on a desperation shot, and Pete Gonzales was fouled bringing the ball up the floor. Gonzales made his first shot, and the Seminoles held a portant 3 point lead, 75-72.

Wayne Beckner brought the to within one point, 75-74 w seconds remaining as he sa free shots.

Pete Rogers was fouled in a s ble for the ball and with one to go, he completely insured vi making good on both charity t So, as the dazzed crowd began out of Tully gym, the final read: FSU 77, Miami 74.

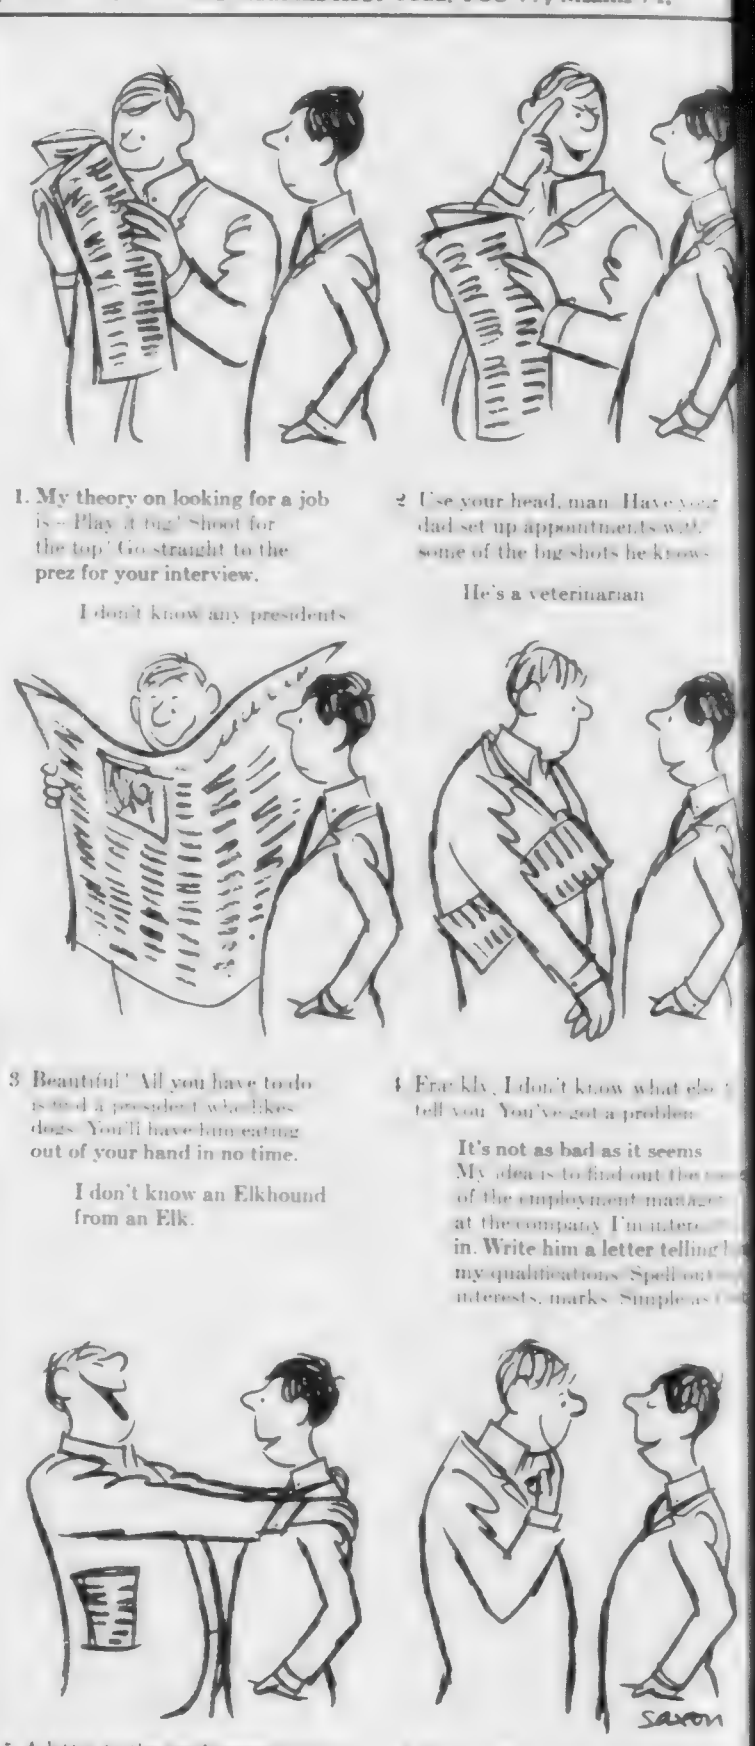
The International Soccer Club will hold a meeting tomorrow at 4:15 p.m. in 206 Tully Gymnasium, according to Coach Tom Martin. Former club members and all those interested are invited to attend.

'Our Best Game' - Says Tribe

By R. W. DENSMORE
Flambeau Sports Writer

According to Coach Bud Kennedy, "It was an 150 percent effort" that made the difference Saturday night, as the Seminoles quelled the formidable Hurricanes. Fifty percent was attributed to the magnificent 4,500 fans who froze the Cane's blood with their blood curdling chants.

After the game, the Seminole locker room was definitely on the gleeful side. When mention was made of Miami's national rank, the normally solemn Cal Huge almost choked on his sandwich with glee.



Practically none of the players could believe that they had out rebounded their foes. The student manager thought that they had brought up their football team by mistake, such was their stature.

It seems as though Miami had a little trouble comprehending it too. Dale Reeves, who filched 14 rebounds for the Tribe, told of big McCoy's tears in the final seconds. Reeves tried to console him after the game, but McCoy was lost in despondency.

When questioned about his thoughts during those last free throws, Pete Rogers mumbled something about the law of averages, giving one the idea that it's not too pleasant to recall that lonely feeling out there on the line.

Comparing the Cane's mode of play to that of the Gator's, Charlie Long thought Miami had the best "big men," and Florida the guards. "Miami seems to invite you to shoot so that they can get the ball," reflected Long. Not good policy when your opponents control the boards.

The team, as a whole, came away from the game with a great deal of respect for Miami's Barry. Barry snared 15 rebounds, the game high for both sides.

ALPHA PHI OMEGA INITIATES GOVERNOR BRYANT

Governor Farris Bryant will be initiated into the Florida State Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega Service Fraternity in ceremonies to be held Thursday evening in Longmire. Shown here as the Governor accepts his fraternity pledge paddle are Ted Dowdell, pledgemaster; Jim Jones, president; and Roger Sherman, ritual master. After the ceremony, the governor will attend the final rush party of the fraternity in the large lounge of Longmire at 7:30 p.m.

Alpha Phi Omega

Service Fraternity Initiates Three Honorary Members

Dr. John Champion, vice president of the university; Dr. Murray Kenna, registrar; and Ken van Assenderp, president of the student body, were honorary initiates of the local chapter of Alpha Phi Omega national service fraternity.

Those initiated into active membership are Louis G. DeLaVergne, Allen Dermott, Walter Glass, Carlton Johnson, Richard Kulp, Richard Long, Edward Malles, Barry McCullough, Clyde Stickney, Bud Susik, Bill Verigan and Joe Warren.

The initiation ceremony was Sunday night at the Tallahassee Federal Savings and Loan Association.

APO Formal Rush will be tonight and Thursday night in the Large Lounge of Longmire from 7:30 to 9:30.

Students Attack Flambeau Columns

By OTIS WRAGG
Flambeau Associate Editor

A move to remove from publication in the Flambeau all columns on political topics was initiated Thursday night at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Student Publications (BOP).

The request was made in a written letter of complaint presented to the board by Dallas W. Matthews. BOP members postponed immediate action on the request and called a special meeting for Thursday, Jan. 17 to consider Matthews' complaint.

Matthews charged his freedom of choice had been infringed upon in that he was forced to financially support the Flambeau through payment of student activities fees yet had no prerogative over what was printed in the paper. He felt he should not be forced to finance columns advancing ideas and philosophies with which he did not agree.

In the complaining letter Matthews said he "had become increasingly concerned with a series of articles ... advocating and expounding upon the assumed virtues of socialism." He cited several columns written by Flambeau columnist John Thomas Riggins calling them "fallacious, misleading and dangerous in meaning."

Matthews said "there exists a much cherished freedom in our society called freedom of choice, which is the basic tenet upon which I base my argument against further publication of such articles in the student newspaper. Quoting from a letter to the editor dated December 10, 1962, he added: "It is not my prerogative to deny individuals their right to advocate socialism, atheism, or any other isms, but I do deny the right of anyone to hold me financially responsible in providing them with a media of expression."

"It is not the purpose of a student newspaper to concern itself with these things (political philosophies), said Matthews. If I want to learn about socialism I can go to the library. In the interests of the student body as a whole I feel publication of articles dealing with politics and political philosophies should be terminated, he said.

BOP Adopts Ethics Policy At Meeting

Efforts to bring up to date policies of the Board of Student Publications resulted in unanimous passage of the third revision of Statement of Principles during an extended work session of the board Thursday night.

According to faculty board member Dr. Reid Montgomery, the original statement was redundant and included repetitious language. The last revision of the principles statement was made in 1955.

Text of the revised policy follows:

1-The editor of a student publication at the Florida State University has a highly responsible position. He is often viewed as an official spokesman for the students and the university although of course he is not.

2-The University is the publisher of all publications which bear its name. The University has an obligation, therefore, to see that they are in keeping with the aims and character of the institution.

3-Editors are expected to know and comply with the libel, lottery, sedition and similar laws applying to publications.

4-Editors are expected to exhibit good taste in the contents of their publications. Good taste excludes material which is salacious, obscene or vulgar, and which ridicules religious minority groups, human infirmities and the like.

...other man, responsible for per...ing the party to be held in his ...rtment, was sentenced to one ...mester of probation, required to ...ve on campus, and deprived of the right to use his car for six weeks.

Of the 14 men tried, 10 were sentenced to one trimester of University Court probation. These men were held responsible for taking university coeds to the party. Two of the cases were dismissed. One of the men had attended with a woman who was not a student of FSU; the other male student had not attended the party.

Fifteen women students presented their cases. All admitted that they had attended the party. Thirteen were given two weeks of full restrictions, one was sentenced to 10 days of full restrictions, and another received three weeks of full restrictions.

The University Court announced in sentencing these students that the cases could have been avoided by the simple procedure of having the party approved. A party with more than five couples is viewed as any other organized party, and must be approved by 4 p.m. the Tuesday preceding the weekend of the party. Two chaperones are required.

Only one chaperone is necessary for a party with five couples or less, and such a party must be cleared by noon the day of the party.

All parties must be approved by Miss Marie Williams, FSU social director, in Room 19 Longmire.

Among other cases tried this trimester, a freshman woman was given three weeks of full restrictions after being found guilty of returning to her dormitory after it was closed. After attending an unapproved party, she and her date returned to the dorm, where the woman student attempted to attract her roommate's attention to be let in. She was seen by a campus policeman, who escorted her to the late director's office, where she signed in 47 minutes late.

Her date was sentenced to 14 weeks of probation for taking a university coed to his apartment, where a small unapproved party was being held.

Women's Judiciary heard the cases of three university women who returned after the holidays on a date later than the one indicated on their sign-out cards. Two of these returning one day late, were given five days of partial restrictions.

Another was sentenced to three days of partial restrictions. She had signed to intern, and did not know the date of her second trimester registration appointment, and signed in one day late.

Speakers Board

Professor William W. Van Alstyne of Ohio State University Law School reported in the January issue of the University of Pennsylvania Law Review that "Campus censorship in 1962 easily rivaled that of any previous years. From coast to coast, and particularly in the Midwest, student bodies were quarantined from a variety of political heresies."

The Professor points out that a considerable number of guest lecturers, formally invited to state university campuses by recognized student organizations, have been turned away by members of the administration. It is significant that those to whom the students were forbidden to listen were very often unpopular figures."

Van Alstyne takes specific issue with the banning of speeches by Communist Party members. But he also indicates that these are not the only unpopular people with unpopular ideas from which students are shielded in many institutions around the nation.

Van Alstyne did not specify why administrators step in to ban speakers. But it is obvious for those who have had any association with a university. Many universities are harrassed by citizens who would have the institution teach only their particular beliefs; or conversely teach nothing with which they disagree.

FSU is continually under pressure from townspeople, politicians and organized pressure groups to stop freedom of thought. At this time, the University has no set board or committee set up to pass upon speakers and no criterion has been set for acceptability.

We urge the University to take steps to set up such a governing board and establish as wide a latitude on speakers as possible.

AROUND THE WORLD

WASHINTON--President Kennedy touched upon just about all issues in his third State of the Union message yesterday. But his main emphasis was on taxes. He urgently asked Congress for the biggest tax reduction in history. In his view of the world, the President pictured the Communist Empire in disarray. But Kennedy cautioned against complacency. The President also plugged for his Medicare program, aid to education and lower foreign trade barriers.

The President declared he wants a $13.5 billion tax cut which would become effective in three annual stages between 1963 and 1965. Kennedy said his plan would eventually lead to a balanced budget in a balanced full-employment economy.

The President commented on the Soviet-Red China ideological dispute by saying the Free World can find no grounds for rejoicing in the disagreement. Kennedy said the dispute is over how best to bury the Free World. The official Soviet news agency Tass carried a lengthy account of the President's State of the Union message. The dispatch from Washington was a factual presentation without comment.

PARIS--Not long before President Kennedy made his address yesterday, French President deGaulle told a news conference he is rejecting the U.S. offer of Polaris missiles for use in NATO defense. The French leader said France intends to build her own nuclear deterrent. West Germany accepted the U.S. plan today and Britain had done so earlier. DeGaulle all but closed the door to admission of Britain to the European Common Market, now led by France, Italy and West Germany. In London the French leader's position is described as confronting the British Government with a major policy crisis. The deGaulle statements came as British Deputy Foreign Secretary Edward Heath was renewing talks in Brussels on Britain's bid to join the Common Market. Heath rejected a suggestion by deGaulle that Britain accept associate status.

NEW YORK--Two United States experts on disarmament - William Foster and Arthur Dean - have expressed different views on reaching an agreement with Russia to end nuclear testing. Foster, who heads the disarmament agency, said that an agreement with Russia to end testing now appears to be within reach. But former Ambassador Arthur Dean calls the outlook for disarmament progress rather bleak. He says the Soviets are unwilling to admit the necessity for obvious inspection.

In New York, Foster led a U.S. delegation that opened talks yesterday with Russia on exploring possibilities of progress on a nuclear test ban. Foster reportedly made no new proposals but was ready to listen to anything new the Soviets might offer.

Semantics Is Useful Study

One of the things that makes semantics such a fascinating study is the alacrity with which people shape language and meaning to square with their own peculiar notions of what essence constitutes such intangibles as right, freedom, and self determination.

Communism and its apologists deem coercion, tyranny, and murder as right. Socialism seems to think that right and freedom is contingent upon social compulsion and abolition of free enterprise. Lets look at a few applications of these notions in current use.

The right to self determination is buried somewhere in the UN charter and supposedly this august body seeks collectively to ensure this right to each nation -- that is until certain ones try it.

Katanga since the first day of the Congo's "independence" sensed that its marriage to a chaotic, incompetent central government wasn't working out so well and sought to unshackle itself. The UN under the banner of preservation of political unity immediately cemented this undesirable marriage with a shotgun.

Now mind you, this operation was carried out strictly to preserve the peaceful right of operation for the central Congolese government. A l... ical domestic extension of this reasoning would ... to abolish divorce for the sole purpose of forc... men to live with shrewish wives, and women to ... up with drunken, irresponsible husbands.

"Right" takes on an interesting aspect when it ... used by those in favor of the elimination of che... and balances in Congress via the 15 member r... committee limitation. This action purports to up... our right to govern ourselves properly through ... chosen representatives.

So far nobody has taken any great trouble to es... mate how many people are in accord with ... "reactionary" group in the rules committee wh... they put the brakes on irrational legislation. 'Popular Misconception'

To The Editor:

Re. Flambeau Editorial "Education Doomed"

According to the Flambeau Editorial of January 9, "Education in Florida is doomed to remain mediocre for at least another biennium. . ." This statement referred to Governor Bryant's speech to the AAUP on higher education in the State of Florida and how to meet its increasing costs.

It has become a popular misconception in many areas that Governor Bryant is not working for higher education in the state. Let us examine the facts:

1. While the percent of state revenue used for higher education has not shown an increase over the years, the gross amounts spent have increased.

2. Florida State University's absolute operating budget request for the next biennium, as approved by the BOC, is $35,000,000. This request represents a rate of increase of $11,000,000 over the present biennium.

3. The BOC approved capital budget request for FSU is $29,000,000 dollars.

Even though some may oppose the idea and principle of the pay-as-you-go basis (deficit financing by issuing revenue certificates), the Governor's sincere interest in higher education is not indicative of a gloomy future.

In his speech, the Governor stated, "...we must remember that when we increase money allotted to one agency, we are taking it from another agency that needs the money for its own particular purposes." The Flambeau was harsh in its criticism of this statement. But, let us remember the State has many responsibilities to its citizens, one of these being education. It would be as unreasonable to neglect the other facets of the state's economy as it would be to neglect education.

Concept Of 'Class Struggle'

Are socialists being realistic when they speak of the "class struggle" or does their use of the expression betray a certain innocent naviete about the realities of life? The answer, of course, depends upon how we define the concept of "class struggle."

In most cultures, and especially ours, classes can be defined in terms of their functions in society. Thus we can discern at least two classes in our culture, the working class or proletariat if your prefer, and the middle class or bourgeoise, we can ignore the aristocrats in this analysis.

The proletariate's interests are higher wages and the like -- basically the greatest realization of the profits of their labor. The bourgeoise is viewed as the class that lives off the labor of the proletariat; therefore their interests are to keep down the profits of the workers and to themselves derive the benefits of them. Many people say that the middle class, as the owners of the means of production and distribution, are entitled to the profits they receive. For without their properties the workers would find no way to support themselves and so would be utterly helpless.

The workers are not living in the free type of productive society they are pictured as. ... Class Struggle diture of $300 for the annual Publiploited for the profit motive, there is a real meaning to the term "class struggle." The middle class is numerically inferior to the proletariat and though it is presently useful, it is not necessary because the functions it performs can be carried on by the workers themselves through the agency of government.

No longer would the profit motive keep the average wages of the Negro, for example, almost fifty percent lower than that of white workers. Society would be constructed on the principle of human needs rather than on gain of profit. The bourgeoise itself would be painlessly eradicated as the interest on capital melted away. The ideal of democracy, as elusive as the ideal of socialism, would at last take its place as an active force in the world -- for democracy should entail a Rule by the People, not only of their political life but of their economic and social lives as well. This can only be brought about by economic planning for and by the people (socialism) and by social planning in the same manner. The participation of the people in all aspects of their government would of course make socialism antithetical to both capitalism and communism -- which replaces the bourgeoise with a new bureaucratic class that again exploits the workers for its interests, (the socialist uprising in Eastern Europe shows the dissatisfaction with this system.) To sum up a brief (all too brief) thesis I think that the term "class struggle" is still very meaningful and important in analyzing society, and although the amount of exploitation and friction between the classes may not be as apparent or as grievous in America as in the rest of the world we must still try to wipe it out altogether. Cancer of the toe is as fatal as cancer of the heart or brain once it starts to spread.

Proctor Named Grid Assistant

Former graduate assistant Bill Proctor has been elevated to full-time assistant football coach here announced Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha.

Proctor, who will be 30 on Jan. 27, will handle the Seminole freshman team next Fall. His appointment as an assistant coach, however, is effective immediately.

Head Football Coach Bill Peterson didn't spare the praise for Proctor, who spent four years as head coach at Longwood's Lyman High School.

"Bill deserves recognition for the job he did for us this Fall," said Peterson. "He has shown the qualities it takes to make an outstanding coach. We're happy to have him as a full-fledged member of our staff."

Proctor was an all-state football player in high school at Winter Park. He later played tackle at Florida State, graduated in 1956 and was a draft choice of the Cleveland Browns as a tackle.

He decided to forego professional football and went to Orlando's Boone High as assistant football coach. A year later he went to Lyman High as an assistant, then took over as head coach there the next Fall. His four-year record as head coach at Lyman was 25-10-5.

Mancha said Proctor will fill the post vacated last summer by Charlie LaPradd, who resigned to pursue studies.

Proctor, born in Atlanta, is married to the former Pamela Duke.

Free Substitution Revived By NCAA Rules Committee

Free substitution has been returned to the college football game by the rules committee of the NCAA. During the 1963 season, free subbing will be allowed at all times, except the fourth down, and the "new" rule is expected to knock the bottom out of the three-team systems at many schools. Head Coach Bill Peterson of FSU was out of town and could not be reached for comment on how the rule will affect the Seminoles.

Coeds Cop Badminton Tournament

It was Florida State against Florida State as members of the newly-formed Badminton Club swept aside the other entrants to win the Collegiate Badminton Tournament in Columbus, Miss., last Friday and Saturday. Six colleges were scheduled to enter players, but there were three cancellations so the tournament featured players from Judson College and the host school, Mississippi State College for Women.

In the doubles competition Chris Padgett and Sandra Lee came in first, while Irene Washington and Pat Pessolano brought back the second place trophies. Paula Welch and Betty Wilkie captured third place.

The singles wins followed the same pattern although only four FSU players entered. Chris Padgett and Irene Washington split in the finals rubber. The time element prevented a play-off which will be conducted this week on the FSU campus. Regardless of the outcome, it was Florida State as one-two again.

Anyone who is interested in playing badminton with the group should contact one of the members for further details.

Tribe Downs Dogs

By R.W. Densmore
Flambeau Sports Writer

A well-disciplined Seminole team ran onto the floor last night and trounced a tired quintet of Georgia Bulldogs, 88-54. The Tribe played probably its best disciplined game of the season, controlling the boards and depositing 54.5 percent from the floor.

Georgia came on the floor just a bit weary after four grueling contests, which included Georgia Tech and Auburn. As Coach Red Lawson said after the game, "The boys are a little flat after the last four." Lawson added, however, he was going to give his team a rest, and that the next one was in Athens, a Bulldog advantage.

High man for FSU was Charlie Long with 21 points. Dale Reeves, Cal Hugh, Jerry Shirely, and Wally Dale hit for 16, 12, 11, and 10 points apiece. Reeves hauled in nine rebounds for the game high. Wally Dale, the junior guard from Coral Gables, sparked the defense all evening, at times out jumping Georgia's big men.

A definite sore spot for the Georgians was the loss of their 6-5 forward Charles Adamek. As well as being a decisive physical loss, Adamek's absence, no doubt, has caused a decline in morale.

The team manager paused in the Training Room last night long enough to pat the sweaty basketball. He said affectionately, "Tonight we used Ball 27. This is our second game in a row with this particular ball that we have won. We hope to break the record of eight or nine consecutive victories at home with one ball, set last year by Ball 25."

Some of the players getting ready to leave after the 88-54 drubbing of Georgia's Bulldogs had other ideas as to what won the game. Pete Gonzalez exclaimed, "We're beginning to play like a team now! It's great!"

Georgia Coach Red Lawson commented on the game, "We've had too many tough ones in a row. Coach Kennedy can tell you that we're better than what we appeared to be tonight. We have had four rough ones in a row, are are tired. I was just telling my boys that they deserve a rest and I am going to see that they get one and are ready for your men when they come visiting.

"We played unbeaten Georgia Tech and lost by only two points, then lost our last one to Alabama by a few points."

He brought in senior Captain Charleton Gill who said, "We'll be rested by Thursday night and will really come after you. That boy who guarded me, (Cal Huge) is a real hustler." Another unidentified player contributed his two cents worth by saying that the refereeing was lousy. "Don't bring them chaps with you when you come!" he shouted.

Dale Reeves was asked why he played ball with one sock up and the other one down. "It keeps falling down," he complained.

Pensacola Clips Freshme 81-79 For 1st FSU Lo

By JOHNNY DAVIS

Flambeau Sports Writer

A determined band of Pensacola Junior College Pirates staged a tremendous second half rally tonight, and went on to knock the FSU Baby Seminoles from the ranks of the unbeaten, 81-79.

Pensacola came into the game sporting a mediocre 7-5 mark, while the Florida State yearlings brought an unblemished 6-0 record into the contest.

The Bucs were down by as many as 13 points with slightly over 11 minutes remaining in the second half, but a great last minute surge gave the visitors the margin they needed for victory.

The triumph was keyed by Pensacola's pint-sized guard, Tommy Pittman. Pittman, who stands only 5-8, scored eight straight points during the victors final scurry. Another important figure for the winners was forward Tommy Neimeyer. Neimeyer tallied four-of-six markers in the fading moments to ice the victory for his team.

The leading scorer and rebounder for the Pirates, however, was 6-5 freshman Charles Fairchild. Fairchild topped all scorers with 20 points, and ranked first on the Buc's list in backboard duty with six rebounds. The 6-1 freshman Tommy Welsh was close behind with 19 markers, and Pittman was third with 16.

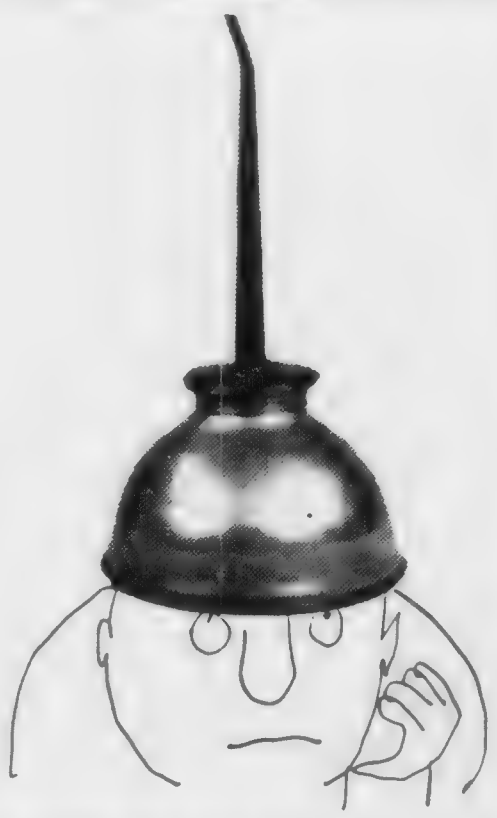
The leading Seminole scorer was 6-1 guard Ken Leakey of Fort Wayne, Ind., who ripped the Pirate defenses for 19 points. Following Leakey in the scoring department was big Gary Schull of Pompano Beach. The 6-7 pivot man, tallied 18 markers and pulled down 10 rebounds despite being hampered by an injured leg. Bill Peacock and Jim Wallace each contributed 15 apiece, and 5-9 Ken Hey added 10 points.

The Baby Seminoles, who he[ld] 34 edge at halftime, outrebound[ed] Pirates, 43-27, and hit a ver[y] 51.8 percent from the field. P[en]cola manged a 46.2 average fr[om] floor. FSU, as did the Pirates, even 84 percent from the free line.

The PJC team faces the Tribesmen two more times this son--Feb. 2, 15.

The frosh's next game is Sat[ur]night in Tully Gym, against St. Leo's junior college of Florida.

Tulane, Bam Take Tumble



The Florida State swimming t[eam] easily added its second and t[hird] dual victories last weekend b[y] feating Tulane University an[d] University of Alabama.

The Seminoles swamped Alab[ama] tankers, 58-37, Friday night in T[us]caloosa, Ala., as Coach Bim S[mith]'s men won seven of the 11 e[vents].

Then, the next night, Tulane in a 49-41 match.

Tulane's only moment of glory curred when the Louisianians' school record. Russ Hook, Dick [Wil]liamson, and John Frelinger to[ok] the 400-yard freestyle rel[ay] 3:42.4 to rewrite the old reco[rd] 3:49.5, which they established month.

Each member of the Tulane team then captured a first pla[ce] individual races, while Florida had a double winner in Jim B[ut]. The Tribesman swam the 200-butterfly in 2:32.7 and was a me[m]of the winning 400-yard medley squad.

Culpepper Proposes 'Chancellor' Over State Universities

The issue of whether the state supported universities of Florida should have a chancellor -- an administrator who would oversee all state universities -- has been aroused by a proposed policy of the Board of Control.

In the past, the Legislature has been opposed to the idea of a chancellor, who would act as a liasion between the universities and state governmental agencies. In the Board's proposal, state university personnel, including the president, would be restricted from contacting a state agency without permission from the executive director or chairman of the Board of Control.

"All personnel under the jurisdiction of the Board of Control shall not contact directly or indirectly the said agencies on matters effecting programs or projects of the university system without expressed consent of the chairman or the executive director of the Board of Control," the proposal said.

In effect, this provision would make a chancellor of the Board's Executive director, J. Broward Culpepper, who is author of the proposal.

The suggestion will be brought up at the Board of Control's meeting here Friday. Both FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell and Dr. Francis Allen, president of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors, declined comment on the matter, until they had obtained more information.

The original statement was presented Monday to the State Cabinet, sitting as the State Board of Education. Secretary of State, Tom Adams, filed an objection to the suggested policy, which has been termed a "gag rule" in state newspapers. Gov. Farris Bryant said an investigation would be made.

The Board's suggestion, entitled, "proposed policy on the dissemination of information," read:

"The Board of Control is by statute and by obligation to the citizens of the State of Florida responsible for the objectives, programs, and operation of the several institutions and it is therefore proper to expect that:

"Each member of the Board of Control and ther personnel under its jurisdiction should be alert to opportunities to disseminate information about activities of the board and the university system which would contribute to public understanding of their functions, to the end that the best interest of the university system is always served and that the respect and influence accorded the Board of Control and the institutions under its jurisdiction are enhanced dward Kilenyi, FSU professor of music, will present faculty recital on Friday evening. The public is vited to the program, which is the opening recital the trimester scheduled for 8:15 p.m. in Opperman sic Hall.

lenyi, a pianist who has made concert tours in this country and Europe, will play Chopin's "Variation on a Theme of Bellini," in what is believed to be its first public performance in Tallahassee. He will also play Chopin's "Etude in F minor," "Prelude in B flat minor," and "Scherzo in C sharp minor."

The pianist often appeared at FSU as two-piano partner with his longtime friend and teacher, the Ernst van Dohnanyi. He will include Dohnanyi's "Marche Humoresque" and a Dohnanyi arrangement of Schubert's "Valses Nobles" on the program.

Other numbers will be Bartok's "Six Dances in Bulgarian Rhythm," "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 8," by Liszt, Bach's "Fantasie in C minor" and Beethoven's "Waldstein" sonata.

Born in Philadelphia of Hungarian parents, Kilenyi studied at the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest, where he was also a student of Dohnanyi. He toured France, Holland, Germany, Algeria, Morocco and England (with Sir Thomas Beecham) before his American debut at New York's Town Hall in October, 1040.

Kilenyi's concerts and master classes this season are at Wayne State University, Detroit; University of Wisconsin; Women's College of the University of North Carolina; Texas Woman's University; St. Andrews College, North Carolina; Shreveport, La.; and at Pensacola and Ft. Lauderdale.

IFC Rush

Inter-Fraternity Council has invited all interested men to their Spring Formal Smoker Sunday.

The fraternity men will be home for visitors from 2 to 5 p.m. It is only necessary to visit the houses in which one holds a specific interest.

Spring rush is for those who did not participate in formal fall rush and are interested in joining a fraternity.

A more informal air lends itself to spring rush, because the fraternities directly extend the invitations and bids. This makes it unnecessary to sign preferential cards.

Rotary To Sponsor Scholarship House

The Tallahassee Rotary Club last week officially became sponsors of one of the FSU scholarship houses operated by the Southern Scholarship and Research Foundation.

The house, located at 641 West Pensacola street, is one of seven on the FSU campus which provide free lodging for financially-pressed scholars. The seven houses, four for men students and three for women, comprise the Foundation Scholarship Organization.

The house now will be known as the Rotary Scholarship House. The Tallahassee club is the first single civic club to take over purchases of an entire house, but several other such organizations in the state have made sizeable donations to the Foundation.

Usually clubs are allowed to make stipulations that their funds be used to help qualified students from their home towns, but since few Tallahasseans are eligible for the program (they can live at home with their parents while attending college), the Tallahassee Rotary club retained no privilege of naming occupants to its house.

The club has agreed to take over mortgage payments of $1500 a year for purchase of the house, which at present houses 14 students. These scholarship students pay no rent, do their own housekeeping and prepare their own meals.

Eligible students must maintain a "B" average and need the assistance to attend college. Many of the students also work to pay other college expenses.

The Foundation now has 145 students in its seven houses. Dean of the School of Education Mode L. Stone, who is executive vice president of the Foundation, said the SSRF eventually expects to have facilities for 300 students, as more donations are made to the organization.

The state association of Pilot Clubs recently pledged a contribution of $157,000 over the next five years.

Campus Chest Drive Slated

January 23 is a date to be remembered by FSU students since it marks the beginning of the annual Campus Chest drive.

This FSU version of the United Fund provides a single drive for student contributions to charitable organizations instead of individual campaigns for numerous groups.

Three groups have been selected for the concentration of contributions. Teofilo Abril, newly adopted by Campus Chest in the name of FSU, is an 11-year old Colombian boy. His family has 31¢ a day to live on, and a dole of 7 1/2¢ a day in addition.

The American Foundation for Overseas Blind, Inc. is the second group, which is dedicated to serving the needs of sightless persons throughout the world.

The third organization for major donations is the World University Service.

Last Lecture

PICCARD

"Perspectives on Justice and Policies" will be the subject of government professor Paul J. Piccard's "Last Lecture" tonight at 8 p.m. in Opperman Auditorium.

Dr. Piccard, a member of the FSU staff since 1953, is now also director of the University Honors Program. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Mortar Board, national senior women's honorary, sponsors the lecture series.

A Continual Struggle

The Board of Control is making another attempt to centralize their power over and tighten the reigns on state Universities. They will consider a policy Friday that will require all university employees and officials to clear any statements made to the public with Dr. J. Broward Culpper, director.

Since the statement to the state press that this proposal would be considered, Culpepper has been dodging and backtracking. Culpepper issued a "clarifying" statement contending that this procedure was designed "more to lay down guide lines for administrative procedure in the university system than for the dissemination of information in its popularly accepted sense."

Culpepper also left the door open for more modification by indicating that the policy might be clarified. He does not want the people of Florida to misunderstand the Board's position.

By quick and violent reaction to the announcement of the proposal, many Floridians have indicated that they understand the Board of Control's actions too well. And they don't like them.

The Board of Control has a fondness for dropping bombshells in the form of policy statements. This is the second major missile designed to wipe out University feedom launched in a matter of months. Fortunately, quick reaction by the University's administration, faculty, and students -- backed strongly by the state press and many concerned Floridians -- detonated the last in the air. No major damage was done by the proposal to tell University presidents how to select professors, students, and books.

But yesterday, only thirty-six days since the resolution of the Academic Freedom crisis, the Board is at it again.

The dangers are multiple if this resolution is passed. A virtual chancellor, in the person of Dr. Culpepper, would be established to regulate statements of university personnell. He would be in a position to limit any public criticism of Florida's University system, the Board of Control's action, or other matters pertaining to education. Further, he could halt speeches by University personnel to outside groups if he did not agree with their statements. Speeches like Dr. Michael Kasha ringing alarm at Homecoming could be eliminated.

This is not to say the Dr. Culpepper would use his position in this manner. But the creation of such a position open the door to censorship. A wall against free speech could encircle every Florida campus.

We do not expect censorship to result from Board of Control action. The Universities and people will not tolerate this. Dr. Gordon Blackwell, a shrewd manipulator as well as an excellent President, says nothing. But he will probably have a bomb or two of his own at Friday's BOC session.

Apparently, judging from Board action, the people of Florida will have to watch the BOC as closely as the Board watches the Universities. Freedom is a continual struggle.

Time To Debunk Norman Thoma

First of a Two Part Series

This seems to be the season to uncover popular American myths. Just last week we heard the debunking of General George Armstrong Custer of Little Big Horn fame. Now comes the time to debunk another so-called 'great American,' the "ardent foe of international communism," Norman Thomas. Thomas is the leader of the Socialist Party, USA, with which the FSU Young Peoples' Socialist League is affiliated. Members of YPSL must become members of Thomas' Party at the age of 21.

Mr. Thomas has always been a joiner. And some of his choices of organizations have been questionable, to say the least. Especially for a man of Thomas' supposed oracle-like powers to solve the problems of the world.

He has, for example, been listed as a member of the Board of Directors of the American Fund for Public Service--the notorious "Garland Fund." This fund, "established in 1922. . . .was a major source for the financing of Communist Party enterprises," e.g., the "Daily Worker." Among other Directors besides Thomas was William Z. Foster, longtime Chairman of Communist Party, USA.

Thomas was listed as a mem the Advisory Board of the Ame Student Union, cited as a Comm Front. This organization, "sul sult of a united front of youn cialists and Communists," sp ed free trips to the Soviet U The Young Communist League credit for its formation. This have been before Thomas be such an ardent anti-Communist.

Thomas has also been listed sponsor of the Consumers' Nat Federation, also cited as a C munist Front.

He also was a member of the visory Board, Russian Recons tion Farms, cited as a Commu enterprise, and which was di by Harold Ware, later head Ware Cell of undercover Comm ists in Government, whose mem included Alger Hiss.

When Mr. Thomas spoke here year he told us that Stalin w beast and murderer, but that Kh chev isn't as bad. This judgme the part of Thomas is obvio hindsight, inasmuch as all of above-mentioned activities "Communist" Thomas took while Stalin was in power.

It is no defense for Thomas to that all this occurred before pe were aware of the nature of C munism. Four American Presid refused to recognize the Comm regime of the USSR, so one conclude that Thomas couldn't through what was obvious to in American Governmen many years.

In the second column in th les, I shall discuss Mr. Tho latter-day compassion for ed Reds, and some of his mundane activities.

Silence Viewpoints Not Self-Financing

To The Editor:

Why restrict the attack on diversity to the Flambeau? Why not surgically excise diversity from the tax-supported FSU library, too? Surely the library fails to consult with Dallas Matthews prior to buying books with his tax money. But don't throw out just throw out just the leftist books-- throw them all out!

He's being fair about it. He's not insisting that only the left be silenced. He's for silencing all points of view that are not self-financing. If people are going to ouse things up with diverse views and opinions, well then, by jingo, let's drop all views, except those of folks rich enough to buy their own newspaper and build their own libraries. That's fair!

But let's have no diversity under communal auspices, where collective money is involved. No diversity in the student newspaper, no diversity in the libraries, and lets not forget book stores that offer many views. Book stores that are required to acquire commercial licenses to do business are having these licenses granted by tax-supported agencies! This is unfair to Mr. Matthews! But he wants to be fair! Best then, to dispose of all books, out of fairness?

It's easy to see the "cherished" freedom of choice this gentleman affirms when he chooses it as a basic tenet: the freedom to [illegible] yourself at heavy private cost. The rest of us share the choice, the choice to go to the library (well, not the library) to a book store (well, not a book st but well, the choice to ah, er, w our own individual books for own private use (I think). How a it, Dallas, old free choicer?

Village Facilities Seem Forgotten

To The Editor:

In order not to be "salacious, obscene, or vulgar," and in order to refrain from discussing such taboo topics as politics (about which I could not possibly know enough to formulate an opinion), I should like to ask the following question: Does anybody know when the new apartments in Alumni Village are going to get clotheslines, street lights, paved streets, and marked parking spaces?

I should like to humbly thank the Flambeau for printing this letter, thereby fulfilling its most vital function.

'Incredible, But True'

No Man Is An Island Revie

BY TIM CARR
Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

The fact that there is nothing praiseworthy about anything in this film does not detract in the slightest from its interest.

"No Man Is An Island" is the "incredible but true" story of an American sailor stranded for more than a year on Guam during the Japanese occupation.

The action ambles through dozens of harrowing and hair-raising situations. Our hero (played by Jeffrey Hunter) is all set to go back home to Minneapolis, but (drat the luck) Pearl Harbor gets bombed, general chaos ensues, and Hunter finds himself in charge of a group of fugitive sailors. This small band loses its members in rather gruesome ways (one flash of two decapitated cadavers is revolting) and Hunter is the sole survivor, as the title suggests.

Hunter begins printing a newspaper while hiding in a leper colony, giving the straight dope to the kindly Guamese. He then sets up light housekeeping in a cave with a [illegible] belle. Employing his American genuity, he rigs up a series of sign gadgets that makes Robinson Crus seem a veritable dude.

We are then led to believe Hunter prevents thousands American deaths by transmitting tal information with a home-m heliograph to a destroyer. Fina another ship steams right up to heavily fortified island and resc him.

Something we had begun to d in recent years was happily re firmed to us: Japanese soldiers know a rifle from a kimono. Twe Japanese riflemen fire point bl at an American dinghy crew for thr or four solid minutes inflicting even a scratch; a single burst fro an American tommygun sends these evil little rapscallions to the final rewards.

If "No Man Is an Island" we fiction it would be ludicrous. B the viewer is aware that it is a tr (or nearly true) story, and is co stantly amazed at this hitherto un filmed heroism.

WASHINGTON -- Assistant Labor Secretary James Reynolds says President Kennedy might act in the 24-day-old Atlantic and Gulf Coast Dock strike if the issues are not narrowed in a final attempt today. Reynolds did not disclose what action Kennedy might be contemplating.

BRAZIL -- A two-engine Brazilian airliner with 45 persons reported aboard has crashed into a row of houses in a suburb of Sao Paulo minutes before its scheduled landing. First reports said five persons were killed and 15 injured among the five crewmen and 40 passengers. There was no immediate report of casualties among residents of the Sao Paulo suburb.

ELIZABETHVILLE -- Katanga President Moise Tshombe has announced the end of his province's bitter 30-month secession from the Congo. The surrender came tamely in Tshombe's makeshift car capital at Kolwezi. Tshombe read to newsmen an official letter which said he will now cooperate in UN Secreatry General U Thant's plan for Congo unification. Tshombe's capitulation came in the 19th day of a war between the United Nations and Katanga. It was the third such conflict since Tshombe led his copper-rich province from the Congo after Belgium freed the former colony in 1960.

WASHINGTON -- Undersecretary of State George Ball says the United States will push development of a NATO nuclear force regardless of whether France participates. Ball spoke to newsmen in New York upon his return from a week's trip to Paris and Bonn for high level conferences. He said it's a matter of regret that France apparently has decided not to cooperate.

BERLIN -- About 1,500 American soldiers have conducted a practice readiness alert in West Berlin shortly after their arrival in the US sector of the divided city. The test coincided with the opening on the other side of the wall of the East German Communist Part Congress. A US Army spokesman said units arriving in Berlin are always put through this type of test to evaluate their ability to react to various crisis situations.

In the mass of protest heard after the policy was made public, the Board of Control issued the following "clarifying" statement.

"The board staff is presently engaged in rewriting the board's policy and procedure manual. The Board of Control and the university system have long had established procedures in transacting official business with regard to such matters as budgets, general policies, and program planning in role and function for the university system.

"This rewritten policy was designed more to lay down guide lines for administrative procedures in its popularly accepted sense.

"The material prepared is in tentative form and has not been considered or acted upon by the Board of Control. If it is not clear as to its intent then it no doubt will be modified.

"Certainly, the statement is not designed to limit the freedom of individuals or in any way to prevent free communication between the universities and the citizens of Florida."

Trackers Set For Take-Off

Florida State's track team, which has lost only two of its last 22 dual meets, will open the 1963 season by entering the indoor Coliseum Relays at Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 16.

The Seminoles' 1963 schedule, announced by Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha, will put FSU in four dual meets and a total of seven large meets. Dual meets will be held with Miami, Furman, Tennessee and Florida.

Coach Mike Long's 1962 team won all five of its dual events, plus the Piedmont Relays and the Memphis Indoor Carnival.

Long's '63 edition will be built around seven returning lettermen and several promising sophomores. However, losses by graduation were "the heaviest ever": 12 lettermen, including five school record-holders.

In eight seasons at FSU, Long's teams have recorded a 36-5 record in dual competition. Long previously coached high school sports in Ft. Myers and Sarasota.

FSU's 1963 track schedule:

Feb. 16--Coliseum Relays, Montgomery, Ala. March 2--Memphis Indoor Carnival, Memphis, Tenn. March 9--at Miami. March 16--Furman in Tallahassee. March 22-23--Memphis Relays, Memphis, Tenn. March 30--Florida Relays, Gainesville. April 6--Carolina Relays, Columbia, S. C. April 26-27--Penn Relays, Philadelphia. May 4--Florida State Meet, Gainesville. May 10--Tennessee in Tallahassee. May 25--Florida in Tallahassee. June 13-14-15--NCAA Championships, Albuquerque, N.M.

CRAIG JOHNSON
. . .co-captain

A pair of big-city boys were named to co-captain Florida State's 1963 track team, which opens its season on Feb. 16.

Elected co-captains for the season are seniors Craig Johnson of Houston, Tex., and Herb Kraft of Atlanta, Ga.

Johnson, 5-11 and 160, is a top-flight sprinter and hurdler for Coach Mike Long's Seminoles who ran the 100 in 9.7 last year. Kraft, 6-0, 150, holds the Florida State broad jump record and is undefeated in dual-meet broad jump competition over two seasons.

WHAT WOOD BE

Football Is Wrapped Up

By JOHN WOOD
Assistant Sports Editor

Due to the numerous pressures of the trimester system, I have just now gotten around to compiling my final percentage for the football prognastications made last season.

I hit home on 91 out of the 119 I attempted for a grand total of 76.5 percent. This isn't too bad for a first-timer.

My best pick predicted a Wisconsin upset of Northwestern, while the worst pick of the season by far occurred when I gave Texas A & M the edge over Florida's Gators, who squeaked out a 42 to 7 decision. The most difficult pick I had to make was when Georgia Tech played Alabama. The most heartbreaking wrong pick I made forecasted a 10-7 FSU triumph over that bunch of spoilers from Gainesville. My rival, the Sports Editor of the Florida Alligator, got the idea to predict the games himself soon after I came out with "What Wood Be." One of his picks proved more accurate than mine for a change, when he foresaw a 21-7 Florida victory.

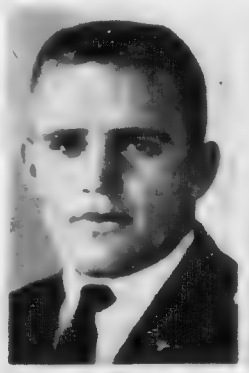
Four Seminoles On State's Elite; McDowell, Unanimous

Four star gridders on the 1962 Florida State football team made the starting lineup in the All-State selections announced recently by one of the leading newspapers in Florida.

Gene McDowell, who gained third team Associated Press national All-America laurels despite weighing only 195 pounds, was a unanimous pick by the sports scribes. He was joined by teammates Eddie Feely, John McConnaughhay, and Bruce Darsey.

Other state players on the team were end Sam Holland of the University of Florida, tackles Anton Peters and Frank Lasky of Florida and guard Jim O'Mahony of Miami. The backfield was composed of George Mira of Miami, Larry Dupree of Florida, and Nick Ryder of Miami.

For the first time ever, there were two quarterbacks listed in the first unit. Feely, the nifty little passing artist, was the fourth biggest vote-getter, far outdistancing Miami's Nick Spinelli for the final first team spot.



Coach Bill Peterson had these comments on the men chosen from his squad: "I can't say enough about these men, and what they have done for FSU football. They came as FSU was beginning to grow and they had plenty to do with any success we've had here. I like to send men like this out into the world and say 'That's the kind of man we make at Florida State.'"

Avery Sumner and Chuck Robinson made the second team, while Tom Slicker, Gene Roberts and Keith Kinderman landed on the third team. McConnaughhay and McDowell played for the South in the North-South football game last month.

Bryant's Education Conference Begins

Means of financing Florida's space age needs in the field of higher education--and the clarification of the needs themselves--will be discussed today, as the Second Governor's Conference on Higher Education gets underway in the House Chamber of the Capital Bldg. at 9:30 a.m.

It was announced by the Board of Control that approximately 70 persons representing various State organizations and public bodies interested in higher education will participate.

Governor Farris Bryant, who called the first conference last May, will open the session by outlining to the group some of his views on the needs of Florida in this field.

Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, executive director of the Board of Control, stated that the conference would discuss means of meeting educational needs of the State arising from rapid growth and the opportunities for attracting new space age industries through new educational programs.

"During the past year, Florida has experienced some of the most significant developments in higher education since 1905, when the Florida University System was created," said Dr. Culpepper.

"With careful planning and wise decisions, Florida now can move forward into greatness. It is imperative that higher education perform its role well in serving the citizens of the State so that they may meet the challenges of the Space Age successfully."

Dr. Ralph McDonald of Washington, D.C., director of the Space Era Education Study, will present a progress report concerning the needs of Florida in the fields of space sciences, engineering, oceanography and data compilation. The space education study is cheduled to be completed by March 1 so that recommendations can be made to the 1963 Legislature.

Gov. Bryant has asked the Board of Control to coordinate the recommendations of various groups in the field of higher education and evaluate them so the state can make recommendations to the Legislature for the best allocation of state resources.

The Board of Control is asking $145.6 million in general revenue funds for operating the state university system in the 1963-65 biennium. It also has listed $103.5 million in capital outlay needs for the state universities, to be met through general revenue appropriations and issuance of revenue certificates.

The Junior College System is asking $21.7 million in state funds for the minimum foundation program for operations and $36 million in first priority construction funds. The second priority building requests for the junior colleges amount to $24.5 million.

Included on the Board of Control's Capital Outlay Program for buildings and Improvements for FSU on the priority list for the 1963-65 biennium are as follows:

Utility expansion and other campus improvements, $913,000; chemistry unit I, $2,750,000; library addition, $1,490,000; social science building, $2,500,000; airconditioning Kellum, Cawthon, University School, Dorman Hall, Florida Hall, History and Psychology, $1,000,000; relocating greenhouse, physical education facilities, computer center expansion.

Molecular Bldg. loading ramp, $215,000; women's dormitory (600 students, total cost $2,860,000), $921,000; land acquisition, $550,000; child research laboratory, $300,000; and Oceanographic Institute coastal facilities, $200,000--a cumulative total of $45,384,000.

Charity Drive Set

Large mayonnaise jars are the things to be on the lookout for January 23-29.

These are the dates for the annual Campus Chest drive. These jars will be placed at strategic points on campus for the students to leave their contributions.

To prevent the students from being bothered by many individual drives, the Campus Chest sponsors a campaign once a year for student contributions to charitable organizations. The World University Service, the American Foundation for Overseas Blind, Inc., and the adoption of Teofilo Abril are the three designated field for aid this year.

Teofilo Abril is a young Colombian boy whose mother can not afford to give him an education so she put him up for adoption. Through the Foster Parents' Plan, FSU is able to provide this youth with a monthly cash grant of $8, food and clothing and special medical

WFSU-TV Holds Workshop

By CHRIS CLARKE
Flambeau Staff Writer

Plans for a television workshop for the university faculty were unveiled by Edward L. Herp, Director of University Broadcasting Services.

"At the present time, we are finding it difficult to stay abreast of recent progress made in the transmission of radio, computer, and television information via 'Telestar.'"

It is with the above idea in mind that WFSU-TV, Channel 11, has proposed a television workshop for interested faculty members. Six workshop sessions are scheduled. Held weekly, they will last for an hour apiece and cover the major aspects of television production and technique, both behind and in front of the camera.

Areas included in the workshop will be as follows:

1. A brief and non-technical explanation of familiar television equipment such as cmaeras, microphones, lighting, the control room, etc.
2. The use of visual materials--how film clips, pictures, slides, charts, maps, art work, etc. are utilized efficiently.
3. Camera presence--movement on camera, eye contact, use of the teleprompter, gestures, etc.
4. Tips about appearance on camera including clothing and make-up.
5. Formating of a program--this area of production work will deal with the pacing of a show and the variety and balance that go into making up a television program.

The workshop, to be held in February, has been created expressly for the faculty of FSU.

DeGaulle Dooms France

Progress has always been the guiding force in any free society. Sometimes it means that change must take place and old prejudices set aside. Those who continually resist will ultimately find the rest of the world leaving them behind and that the pains of change will be substituted by the disaster of stagnation.

French President Charles de Gaulle finds himself and all of France in the unique position or resisting progress in Europe on military, economic fronts to the degree that soon he and France will have to be left behind. Although being personally responsible for much of the new political stability France has known in recent years his continued refusal to allow integration of France with other European countries will destroy the respect and strength that country has known since his ascendancy.

In recent weeks he has taken steps which are destined to push France into the background of the new Europe which is emerging.

De Gaulle has long maintained that France will continue alone in her efforts to establish France as a nuclear power and has time and again refused to cooperate with the rest of Europe. The United States has pressed repeatedly for France's cooperation in establishing a joint nuclear striking force of the North Atlantic nations. In each instance de Gaulle refused to participate. Only last week he turned down President Kennedy's offer of Polaris submarines.

As if to assure France's decline, the French president has threatened to black ball Britain's entrance to the Common Market. The five other members of the economic union have united in a spirit of cooperation building toward Monet's dream of a United States of Europe. Yet de Gaulle, under the somewhat flimsy contention that Britain was not yet ready to link up with Europe, has once more impeded progress--not only that of France and Western Europe, but potentially the rest of the free world.

De Gaulle faces the prospect once again of standing alone--a role he has played before and often won out. But in this instance his stand may have a final ring as far as the future of France is concerned.

AROUND THE WORLD

WASHINGTON--President Kennedy has appointed a special board to mediate and make recommendations to settle the 25-day strike of longshoremen at East and Gulf Coast ports. Democratic Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon heads the board. Kennedy says, "If this case cannot be settled by private action, then further public action is required." He indicated he might ask Congress to pass special legislation. The government already has used all its powers under the Taft-Hartley Law in the dock strike.

Democratic Senator John McClellan of Arkansas has introduced bills to outlaw strikes at defense facilities... and to give the government a new weapon to deal with transport strikes. In the cases of defense facilities, such as missile bases, compulsory arbitration of labor disputes would be provided.

MOSCOW--Soviet Premier Khrushchev has made it plain he feels rebellious countries within Communist ranks should get in line with Moscow policy. In a speech to the East German Communist Party Congress, Khrushchev admitted there are differences, but called for unity. He rejected the Chinese idea of a conference on the subject, saying it would only heat up the arguments.

Khrushchev defended his Cuban policy, saying he had averted nuclear war. He spoke out about the horrors of such a war. Khrushchev coupled remarks about Soviet nuclear power with a statement that the U.S. could let loose 40,000 nuclear warheads capable of obliterating whole nations.

WASHINGTON--Senate Republican Leader Everett Dirksen of Illinois is throwing his support to Southern senators who oppose current attempts for rules changes to make it easier to kill filibusters. Dirksen says he'll force a showdown next week that could kill such efforts.

Life In A Fraternity House

Waking up to the random sound of harmonious alarm clocks is a little less than one could hope for to start another day. You half jump, half fall out of the third story bunk, your decorator must have been an old Navy man, onto the floor where your throw rug used to be--last night. This in itself is a real way to wake up when you aren't counting on landing on the cold floor, but then again you are warmed by the thought that one of your close brothers is climbing out of bed onto a nice warm rug--yours.

After getting dressed in the few clothes your loving brothers have left you, you attempt to horde enough edible food stuffs to justify a breakfast.

The dash to the car most often ends in frustration when you discover you were the first one in last night and everybody parked behind you. The catch comes with the fact that you have an eight o'clock class, the only one in the house, Oh well, what's another late class, more or less.

At lunch time you find the house all torn up because they're putting down new linoleum where somebody had dropped a gallon of battery acid while filling the battery from the housemother's car. Due to the inconvenience, they are having to serve lunch in the bedroom nearest the kitchen, yours. Squeezing your way into the corner with remnants from last Sunday's meatloaf and some watered-down kool-aid, you proceed to eat. By the time you get your closest friends, your good buddies, your fraternity brothers out of your room and take inventory of missing articles, it's time for your 3:30 chemistry lab.

Back for supper, you get your mail and find you haven't paid your dues for September and that you have a letter inviting you to a national leadership conference last summer. After depositing the mail in your room, you find a seat in the dining room between a bridge game and an art project and attempt to each cold spaghetti and drink warm ice tea.

After dinner, well that's the best time. You all sit around in the true spirit of brotherhood and sing traditional fraternity songs, three or four of which you've never heard. After this exciting participation in one of the binding traditions of fraternity house life, you gather together as many of your books as you find and hunt for a quiet place to study.

The study hall's filled with bridge games, a chess game, opoly game, a model car enth and a clarinetist. You saunter to the dining room, but the h mother's telling jokes and h out cookies to her boys, so out. The housemother's room ed with pre-med students wa the weekly Dr. Casey episode eventually wind up locking y in the bathroom to study.

After you've had about all th can bear, it's suddenly brea and the kitchen opens for Generally somebody forgets coffee in the pot, so you w drinking a grape out of the machine because that's all left.

With drink in hand you head your room and are fined twice ing $5.00; once for making noise, and the second time for a cold drink in the living

Thomas Myth Laid To Rest

Norman Thomas is a man of great compassion, especially if the object of his compassion is a convicted Communist. At various times, and as recently as last year (Thomas obviously became a staunch anti-Communist sometime last year), he has appealed for pardons or for clemency for an impressive list of Reds. A listing is tabulated here.

1. Supported clemency appeal for Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, convicted and executed as atomic spies for the Soviet Union.
2. Petitioned for a pardon for Junius Scales, Communist Party leader in North Carolina, convicted under the Smith Act.
3. Supported the release from prison of Morton Sobell, convicted with the Rosenbergs.
4. Urged the pardon of Henry Winston and Gilbert Green, Communist Party leaders, convicted under the Smith Act.
5. Signed several Christmas appeals for amnesty for Communists still imprisoned under the Smith Act.

In contrast with his concern for convicted Reds, he feels no such sympathy for the enslaved Cuban people. THE WORKER (4/23/61), official organ of the Communist Party, USA, lists him as a signer of "an appeal to President Kennedy to halt all aid to Cuban freedom fighters and to seek mediation with Castro." He also "associated" himself with the Fellowship of Reconciliation ad in the NEW YORK TIMES which denounced the Bay of Pigs invasion, and likened it to the USSR's crushing of the freedom uprising in Hungary.

The Socialist leader is also busy on other fronts. He has endorsed unilateral nuclear disarmament; the ad to which I refer (NEW YORK TIMES, 10/16/58) mentions nothing about adequate safeguards. He was supposedly for safeguards here in Tallahassee, so he evidently has either changed his opinion in the last years, or thought that unilatera armament would be too much FSU to swallow.

It almost goes without saying Thomas, is opposed to the H Committee on Un-American A ities. But, one might ask, who to prate about the "miniscule estic Communist movement." he has been hookered as many as he has?

It is too bad that space req ments preclude the telling of whole Norman Thomas Story. haps this brief accounting can you a glimpse of a man so a at rationalizing that he can say the Communist butchery of 25 lion persons was not as bad as ler's massacre of the Jews bec Hitler murdered a whole race, Stalin, Mao and Khrushchev di It takes a special kind of intelle understand arguments like that least one may hope that the Tho Myth has been laid to rest.

Korean Thanks FSU Students

But in Korea not all hunger is from lack of food. Recently, John Cummer, foreign student adviser, received an appeal from a Korean student, Nam Hur, who needed physics textbooks.

In response to his letter, which was published in "The Flambeau," 10 students brought in enough books to fill five packages.

Nam Hur won't receive the books until Monday, but he is expecting the package. Mr. Cummer wrote him about the gift and Nam has written back his thanks.

"Sir! I only pray God bless you and students, never had I realized human love more keenly than at this time after I was born. Just now yours image flit before my eyes.

The Poetry Of War

By TED HARVEY
Flambeau Staff Writer

Through the acceptance of bitter reality, Dr. Allen Thompson told the Liberal Forum Sunday, modern poetry has clearly shown war as the enemy of all men.

"In the 18th chapter of Revelations," Thomson began, "we read these words about the city of Babylon:

" 'Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city,
For in one hour is thy judgment come.' "

In his novel "Alas Babylon," Pat Frank writes of a similar, but man-made, destruction where: "those who died in North America saw nothing at all, since they died in bed, in a millisecond, slipping from sleep into deeper darkness."

"To the author of revelations, it was a God of Judgment sweeping away a civilization in an hour. Today, man has inherited that power, for he too can sweep down with a technological majesty and destroy himself in one hour.

"Man," continued Thomson, "is forever wresting with forces of destruction and creativity. Thus life often becomes a pattern of intolerable contradictions balanced between love and hate, desire and resistance, reality and ideal, life and death.

"It is with such universal themes of man's being, that the war poets, as all other poets, deal; differing in that the war poets write when the moral barriers are down, and men are killing each other.

"In time of war," Thomson declared, "the poet is confronted with the harsh realities of battle set side by side with his ideals and hopes. Bridging the dichotomy between them, he lives through his hell while clinging to his ideals.

"It is," Thomson added, "in this passionate need to merge the ideality of man's experiences with those of the harsh realities of actual war, that war poetry in any age stands out."

'As man hurtled into the age of World War and total destruction," declared Thomson, "the poetry of war and its ideals is more and more interlaced with the grim realities of battle. God is re-identified, as in the ancient Greek and Hebrew tradition, war and victory making possible the union of national ideals with divinity. Thus," he continued, "a mythology of terror is feasible, as in W. M. Miller's 'A Canticle for Leibowitz;' here, religious ritual takes this form:

'From the place of ground zero,
O Lord deliver us.
From the reign of the cobalt,
O Lord deliver us.' "

Romantic and idealistic poetic approaches to war, Dr. Thomson concluded, can no longer be accepted. Poetry has at last unmasked war—a crime, futile, wasteful, and horrible.

ROTC Team Takes 2nd

The U. S. Army ROTC Rifle Team of FSU captured the second place trophy of the U. S. Reserve Services rifle match conducted in Tampa.

A total of 27 teams representing 13 headquarters had entered the match.

The aggregate four-man team total for FSU in four positions was 1445 out of a possible 1600.

High individual for the FSU team was Charles E. Holmes, who fired 371 out of a possible 400.

The team finished the first trimester with a six and six record, defeating Auburn University in the last match on Dec. 15, 1962, with a score of 1409 out of 1500.

The Auburn University team will visit Tallahassee on Jan. 19, to compete in the next scheduled match.

INFERIORITY CAN BE FUN

...o second gravest problem confronting college students to- ...ay is inferiority feelings. (The first gravest problem is of ...ourse the recent outbreak of moult among sorority house ...ouses. Let us today look into the causes of inferiority ...eelings and their possible cures.

...sychologists divide inferiority feelings into three principal ...ategories:

1. Physical inferiority.
2. Mental inferiority.
3. Financial inferiority.

...Now we see there is also a fourth category: ichthyological ...nferiority, a feeling that other people have prettier fish— ...I suspect this is common only along the coasts and in the ...reat lakes area.

...Let us start with the feeling of physical inferiority, perhaps ...he easiest to understand. Naturally we are inclined to feel ...nferior to the brawny football captain or the beautiful home- ...oming queen. But we should not. Look at all the people, ...ugly nor beautiful, who have made their marks in ...istory. Look at Napoleon. Look at Socrates. Look at ...Attila. Look at Lassie.

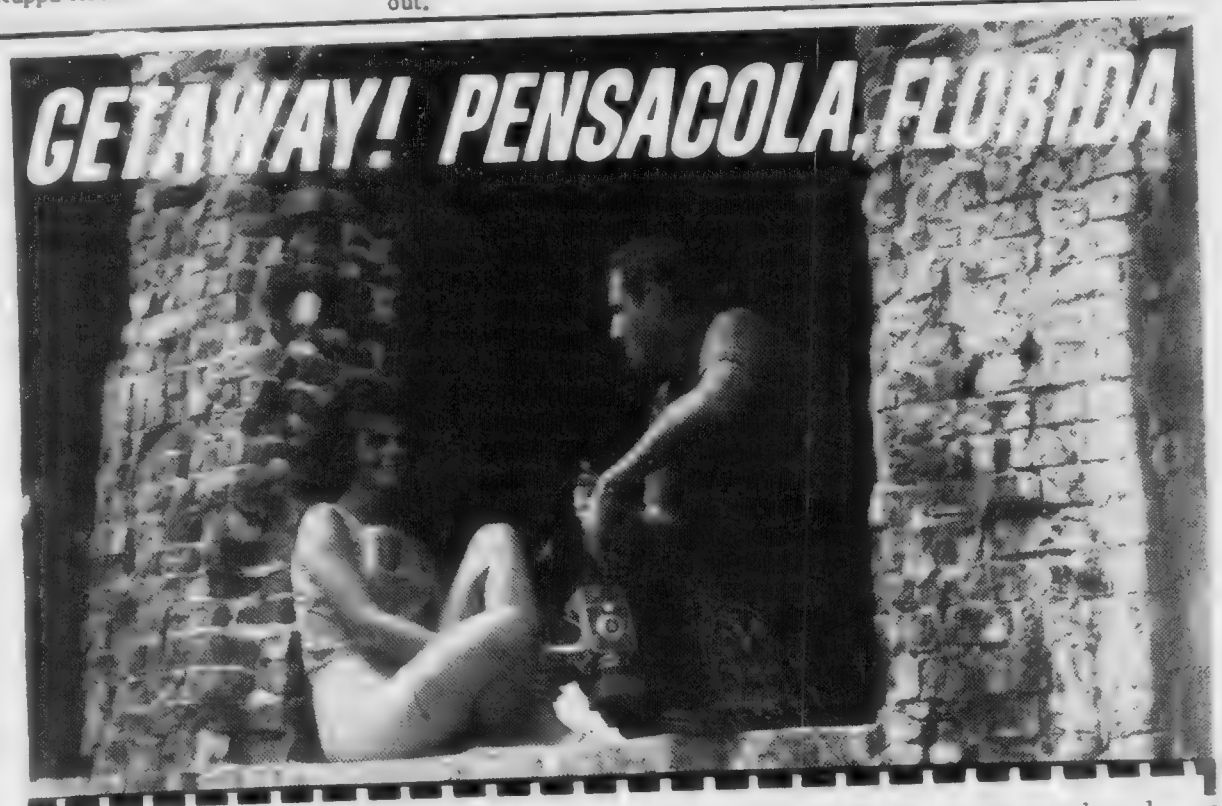
We are inclined to feel inferior

What I mean is that you can't always tell what's inside a ...ack by looking at the outside. Sometimes, of course, you ...an. Take Marlboro Cigarettes, for example. Just one glance ...at the bold, redesigned white package—so bright and part—so ...perfectly in place whether you are at ...—tells you at a level pace so invariably correct for ...town, court, or coalition—that you know at this paragon ...packs and you know it has to contain cigarettes of absolute ...excellence. And you are right! That pure white Marlboro ...filter, that fine, flavorful blend of Marlboro tobaccos, will ...be sure to make the world, rag, whatever that is ...you have just been sitting and admiring your ...Marlboro pack since the beginning of the semester, why don't you open a pack and light one? Light a cigarette, I mean. Then you can settle back and smoke your ...pack, at the same time, continue to gaze rapturously ...at the pack. Thus you will be twice as happy as you are ...(possible.)

I digress. Let us turn now to the second category—...financial inferiority. A lot of people think they are dumber than ...they are. This is not so. It must be remembered that there ...are many kinds of intelligence. Take, for instance, the class- ...ic sibling brothers, Claude and Sturbridge, stu- ...dents at Dorset. It was always assumed that Claude was ...the great brain because he knew more than Stur- ...bridge about the arts, the sciences, the social sciences, the hu- ...manities, and like that. Sturbridge, on the other hand, was ten ...times smarter than Claude when it came to tying granny knots. ...Everybody everybody looked down on "Stupid Sturbridge." ...Everybody ran and looked up at "Clever Claude," as they ...always did.

But who do you think turned out to be the smart ...one? Granny almost got loose and ran away? You ...betcha! Good old Stupid Sturbridge.

We arrive now at the final category, financial inferiority. ...The best way to deal with this condition is to increase your income. ...You can, for example, become a fence. Or you can pose for a ...life class, if your college is well heated.



...Another way to handle financial inferiority is to accept ...poverty gracefully. Look on the bright side of poverty. True, ...others may have more money than you have, but look at all ...the things you have that they don't—debts, for instance, and ...hunger cramps.

...What about friendship? You don't need money to have ...friends. But let me tell you something, good people: the older ...you get, the more you will realize that nothing is so precious as ...friendship, and the richest man in the world is the one with ...the most money.

Cagers To Visit Peach Stat

It was somewhere in the middle of football season when Florida State Basketball Coach J. K. (Bud) Kennedy sat down and scribbled his succinct prospectus on the 1962-63 basketball season:

"We should have a surprising season if for no other reason than the fact that nobody's expecting anything from us."

The man's a prophet first-class. People keep expecting nothing from FSU, and Kennedy's Seminoles continue to surprise 'em. And to some-- like Miami, for instance-- it's been a bitter surprise.

Standing 9-6, Florida State stands an excellent chance of finishing above the .500 mark this season as it packs off to Georgia for two games this weekend. The Seminoles will meet Georgia in Athens Thursday night, Georgia Tech in Atlanta Saturday.

A winning season would be something to write home about, since Kennedy has only one letterman and senior from last year's 15-8 club. FSU has played few patsies, either, meeting such teams as Auburn (twice), Kentucky, Florida, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama (twice each) and Miami.

It's been an up-and-down year. FSU opened with expected romps past Tampa and Valdosta State, but lost five of its next six -- losing seniors Faurest Coogle and Dale Ricketts via injury in the process. Now however, they've won six of the last seven, including a stirring 77-74 overtime win Saturday night over nationally ranked Miami.

Apparently, sharp coaching has played a large part. Kennedy says it's desire and perseverance.

"This team just wasn't supposed to do what it has done," says Kennedy, in his 15th season at Florida State. "They've put in a lot of long hours-- why, they didn't even go home for Christmas-- and they've refused to quit trying."

Forward Charlie Long of Louisville, Ky., the team's only returning starter and only senior, has been largely responsible for the latest FSU surge. In those last seven games -- during which FSU lost only to Tennessee, and by one point -- Long has hit 50.5 per cent from the field and averaged 16.9 per game. He's now the leading scorer with a 13.3 average.

Two others-- soph center Jerry Shirley and junior guard Pete Rogers-- are in double figures, with 11.7 and 10.5 scoring averages, respectively. Two of the team's big men-- 6-7 Dale Reeves and 6-4 Cal Huge-- have begun to play with reckless abandon.

Says Kennedy: "I don't know what to think. . . so I won't."

New Sub Rule Is Not Return To Platoons

College football's new free substitution rule does not presage a return to the unrestricted platoon system, one of the rule's main architects insisted in an AP release.

"If a college coach thinks the new rule gives him license to work with strict offensive and defensive units as he could 10 years ago, he may be in for a shock," said Dave Nelson, head coach of Delaware University in Newark, Del.

"We are not returning to the era of the specialist, the half-football player. Coaches will have to continue teaching the boys on both offense and defense and we still must have, with a few exceptions a team of players."

"When the rules committee prepared to draft the new rule, it was directed to try to meet three main objectives," Nelson explained.

"One was to do away with having to record every substitute, another was to eliminate the messenger service -- a coach sending in a play on every down, and the third was to retain the necessity to coach both ways.

"The free substitution rule eliminated the first of these problems. By limiting the two wild card men to two particular downs, we got rid of the second. Restriction on wholesale substitutions covered the third category."

"Perhaps some coaches feel that the rule will give them a chance to turn out specialized offensive and defensive teams, but they would be taking a great risk.

"For example, suppose I have my offensive team on the field and am trying to move the ball from deep in my own territory. Suddenly I lose the ball through a fumble or an interception."

"Unless there is a time out, I can only send two men into the game, so I am stuck with the situation of defending my goal with nine men who haven't been taught defense. If my time-outs are exhausted, I might never get my defensive team back into the game.

New Union & Pool

FSU Announces Completion Dates

August 6 is the presently scheduled completion date of the new "Z" shaped olympic sized outdoor swimming pool, according to the Secretary for the University Union Don Thigpin.

Also under the present plans, the new Student Union Bldg. complex is to be completed by July 15, 1964.

Bids for the $2.5 million Union Bldgs. are to be released March 14 and orders to proceed construction will be issued for April 15. Approximately 15 months will be required for completion of the construction.

Major areas of the Union complex include recreational facilities; Student Government, student publications and Union administration offices; meeting and conference rooms; and dining facilities.

Movies, lectures, conventions, and other programs will be housed in one of the principal buildings.

Recreational facilities, such as a bowling alley and billiard tables, will be housed in another building.

Spaces available for rent to private businesses for shops, such as a men's clothing store, women's dress shop, a barber shop, beauty salon, and a drug store will all be housed in the main building, which is three stories high. The top floors will contain offices and meeting rooms.

A two-story structure with dining and ballroom facilities will comprise the fourth unit of the complex. In this unit will be a restaurant-type facilities and rooms for private dinner meetings, besides the cafeteria-dining areas. The large ballroom can also be used as a banquet hall.

The Union-complex will contain other facilities for art exhibits, reading and listening rooms in addition to lounges and rooms for formal receptions.

Plans for the $300,000 pool were drawn by National Pools in Alabama and State Architect to the Board of Control, Forrest Kelley.

Said to be the first of its kind in the South, the unusual design of the pool will allow swimming classes and varsity swimming team practice in one segment, recreational swimming in another and diving practice in yet another section.

The outdoor pool plans include three diving boards and a diving tower, judging and press box, fold-away bleachers, and underwater viewing windows. The pool and deck will both be heated during cold weather.

These plans must be approved by the State Board of Health and by a Florida engineer before the bids are released March 2. The initial bid will be for the swimming pool only. There will be an optional bid for the diving tower and another optional bid for the locker room.

Orders to proceed construction of the pool are scheduled for April 3. Construction of the pool should require five months for completion.

Piccard Tells Audience Values Affect Decisions

elieve that the second great mandment is "Thou shall love eighbor as thyself." This does ly to love my white neighbor, y college-educated one, or my one, or my trustworthy one; less is it limited to my cap- ic, American neighbor; it en- me to love them all."

Paul Piccard, associate pro- of government, spoke these in his "Last Lecture," the sponsored by Mortar Board.

Piccard is counselor and coordinator of the basic division and upper class honors program. He spoke concerning how the values of an individual and the society in which he lives affect the decisions made concerning the policies and justice of their government.

"Policies seem to imply corruption and greed," said Piccard. The real consideration is to get satisfactory results.

"Regulation is not a purely negative thing." The test of policies is not slogans such as "that government is best that governs least;" it is not based on natural laws such as "the survival of the fittest." The controlling element of policy is, rather, measuring costs against benefits to get satisfactory results.

Costs, the speaker noted, are measured in terms of freedom and money. Both can be invested to produce greater returns.

Piccard continued with an approach to decisions. Decisions on how to achieve satisfactory results in policies must be made, he said, and

Following the noontime dedication, laboratories of this latest feature to FSU's Science Center will be open for tours by the public from 2:30 until 5 p.m. today.

Constructed with a grant of $475,000 from the National Institutes of Health and an appropriation by the state, the $1,080,000 building has been in use since October.

Most of the equipment, which includes expensive instruments used in the health-related studies of the Institute of Molecular Biophysics, was provided out of grants from the Atomic Energy Commission, which is currently supporting the program with $3 million extended over a five year period. The scientific equipment now being used in the building cost nearly $1,000,000.

The Institute for Space Biosciences, which is conducting research with equally extensive support from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, is temporarily using the fifth floor of the Molecular Biophysics Bldg.

Board 'Expenses'

Higher Education in Florida has all but been assured it has lean days ahead in the coming biennium. But a glance at some figures contained in the Board of Control's higher education budget reveal things will get tougher yet. Not only does the state government concern itself more with the building of highways, prisons and mental hospitals than it does the education of its children but now the Board of Control is desirous of being an even more plush bureauocracy.

Several days ago a proposal was initiated to increase the power of the Board's executive director, J. Broward Culpepper. The plan would make him a super-president, or chancellor over all state universities.

As if in anticipation of the executive director's increased importance the board of control budget included a $7,500 pay raise, a fancy car and an allowance to "promote good will."

In addition to a $25,000 a year salary for Culpepper the board asked $4,000 to provide him with an automobile in the Buick-Electra or Chrysler New Yorker class for his business and personal use. The good will allowance will amount to $2,500 a year.

For the 18 members of the Board staff that travel on state business $20,000 a year has been requested for travel allowance, an average of about $100 a month per traveling employee.

No expense is to be spared for Culpepper's new office and the Board meeting room when they move headquarters to a new state office building -- $20,000 has been requested for new furniture and equipment and an extra $5,000 is asked for drapes and carpet for the new offices.

We are curious about how many teachers salaries could be paid, or classrooms built, or laboratories outfitted with all the money spent on the Board of Control's new plush surroundings.

Brazilian Student

It has been a great experience to us Brazilians to be at Florida State University. We are getting many opportunities to know the American way of living and the educational system of the United States.

At the first moment we arrived on campus we were a bit confused and fearful, which is natural, I think. However, as we started to have contacts with the American students, everything changed. So great has been your interest in being friendly, kind and helpful that in a short time we found ourselves "at home." Every day we break another piece of the language barrier that stands between Americans and Brazilians.

Our English classes have already started. During the five weeks that we are staying with you we will do our best to be as friendly as possible, and we hope that you will excuse anything we might do wrong. Despite the cold which we are not used to, we have found everything quite wonderful. Thank you very much for your hospitality.

Communism, A Christian Heresy

Is Communism a Christian heresy? Perhaps this sounds like the sort of question that most people would dismiss as meaningless, and yet I think that it has great relevance to our time. For ours is a time when we have finally come to realize that both our world and that of the East are going to have to learn to live together and work together in harmony. Only a few diehards still cling to the phrase of "better dead than Red", and if we plan wisely the decision will never have to be made.

Since we must learn to co-habit with Communist peoples, we should try our best to understand their motivations and origins. It is for this reason that viewing communism as a Christian heresy may prove functional.

Social reform was lax in the first half of the last century. Many sensitive and intelligent people slowly came to realize that Christianity had failed to provide an adequate social ethic by which the majority of mankind could live. The three hundred years following the Renaissance had produced many changes in the Church--the Protestant heresy and Reformation and Counter-re tion, the rise of the middle and the spread of European alism had all combined to a radically different world.

Letter That Was Never Sent

BY TIM CARR

Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

Russia has reached the highest possible plane in the art of photography. There are no more worlds to conquer.

Unfortunately, even tragically, this beautiful film by the director of "Ballad of a Soldier" has been outrageously violated by some artless villain who splattered the script with Red ink.

This is a saga of four scientists--three men and a woman--who venture into the wilds of Siberia searching for diamonds; these hapless adventurers are overwhelmed and destroyed one by one by the vindictive forces of nature.

In scenes that are almost too powerful, the director mixes earth, fire, air and water--all bounteously--and through his celluloidal alchemy produces cinematic gold.

But propaganda-packed dialogue denies this film an otherwise-attainable immortality. For example: The explorers break open a bottle of vodka to toast their mission. The toast? "The Soviet government will conquer the uncharted wastes of Siberia just as it has conquered the cosmos." And later, when the group's survival is in serious jeopardy: "I sure am glad I had my Young Soviet Pioneer training. It has prepared me for emergencies such as these."

Intertwined with the action is a love story which really isn't very important to the movie. But it does show that while Senate committees might be able to keep Russia out of Hollywood, nobody can keep Hollywood out of Russia.

For the lover of fine photography, "The Letter That Was Never Sent" is mandatory viewing. But, to bend an old saw, those who would be offended by a gunshot in the opera had better pass this one up.

R.O.T.C. Furnishes Many Advantages

To the Editor:

In reference to your anti-military article on the welcome change in R.O.T.C. on the college campus presently being initiated by Secretary of Defense McNamara's plans, I would like to point out several very hasty generalizations.

As you seemingly indicated there are several of us who seem to be wasting our time in attempting to train and instruct the basic cadet in the School of the Soldier. The appeal of this article must have been met with overwhelming plaudits by the basic course cadets, for it was geared to their gripes and groans heard throughout the cadet's first two years orientation to a facet of military education.

But nothing is more erroneous than to state that "it is a waste of student's time to be forced to spend two hours every week playing soldier on the drill field." In a time of uncertainty when the future of our nation and the entire Free World relies on the strength and readiness of our armed forces it seems rather absurd to state "drill and classroom work occupy time that should be more profitably used." What is more profitable than the guarantees of freedom?

I'm quite sure that the majority of cadet corps (less the few like yourself who avoided the essense of the program) will admit, at least to themselves if not outwardly, that R.-O.T.C. assisted them greatly in realizing the necessity of nati fense and the importance o security, to say little of st ing even the most depleted acter.

In addition, the "forced two y has changed many cadet about the program, his duti responsibilities as a citizen, values of leadership.

Goal Is Repeating 'Good Words'

To the Editor:

These remarks are addressed to contributors to editorial pages, political cultists, ambulatory oracles, and other saviors of various segments of the species.

Briefly, our principal goal seems to be the attainment of maximum frequency and intensity in the repetition of Good Words. This is apparent in discussions of social problems; these largely consist of many Good Words and bad words such as "rights," "freedoms," "materialism," and "socialism." Most of the argumentation, as among "conservatives," "moderates," and "liberals," revolves around the question as to who possesses the best Good Words. This is quite unnecessary since mine are best.

One could talk endlessly about the nature of the beautiful, true Good Words. Although they are independent of man's behavior, they are usually encountered in the speech of those one respects. These words are very rich in meaning; in fact, a single individual can use one in innumerable vague ways. Only these make life meaningful; one can scratch any itch immediately and then say Good Words about oneself. Also, Good Words separate the Absolutely Right from the unc

Alas, almost all persons are gluttons, and cowards who a sessed with status, security, suality, circuses, and other s pursuits. Rather than constan peating Good Words, these o tunists say "Good Words a right in their place." It is the Believer's duty to guide and tect these cheerful robots.

Let us be more efficient in fulf the true task. Too many state contaminated by possible rele to reality appear occasionally.

34 Brazilian Students Study At FSU

By PAT FREEMAN
Asst. News Editor

English is on the upswing at FSU, even if freshman English instructors deny it.

But it's not the Americans who are learning to speak their native language this time... the newest exponents of our somewhat complicated language are 34 students from Brazil.

The abilities of these students vary from eginners, who have completed only a few lessons, and intermediates, with a fair knowledge of the language, to those in advanced classes who have all but mastered the difficult tongue. Three divisions based on speaking abilities are being taught five days a week, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. for a concentrated five weeks of study, in a program sponsored by Ponte Cultural (Cultural Bridge) of Brazil.

Classes began Wednesday morning, with students ranging in age from a young lady of fifteen who plans to teach elementary school in a few years to graduates and businessmen.

"We are here to learn to speak English," reported Professor Rui Azeredo, who serves as the director of the group. He asked for the cooperation and help of the students at FSU, and explained how the student body could asist the visitors in learning English.

"If you will only approach us, we will attempt to continue the conversation in English. Please do not hesitate to make the first move. We are anxious to talk with you, but sometimes are uncertain as to the proper way to begin," explained Azeredo. He also added that students "should help us by correcting our conversation methods, pronounciation and grammar."

Ronaldo Olive, an advanced English student, gave his impressions of FSU in excellent English.

"The campus is beautiful, and very large. I attend a smaller college in Brazil, and I find FSU as big as a town. The food is quite good, and the classes are right for us. We feel like one is so friendly. But it is so cold in Tallahassee... in Rio de Janeiro we have summer the year round."

Ronaldo explained that he needed to know English in order to read scientific journals which were printed in English. He is studying aviation in college, and plans to make a side trip to Cape Canaveral while in Florida.

"High schools in Brazil today are teaching English, but to have a better knowledge of the language many studnets take private instruction, under British or American tutors," added Ronaldo. He also explained the difference between the American school system and that of Brazil.

"In America, you go to elementary school, high school, and then to college in most cases. In Brazil, however, we go through elementary school and high school. We graduate from high school at about 16. Next, we attend a three year college preparatory school before entering a college."

A columnist on one of the oldest newspapers in Brazil. Olive writes scientific articles. The paper was first published in 1837, and "it is one of the oldest we have," said Ronaldo.

Ronaldo had 5 or 6 years of private tutoring in English, but said that he learned a good deal by listening to the radio and by reading anything in English he could get his hands on.

Professor Azeredo acted as interpreter for several of the Brazilian students who found no words in English to describe American food.

"They love the food," Azeredo commented, "and it is not so much the food itself as the way in which it is prepared."

An amusing incident occurred as two coeds were introduced to the Brazilian students who were having lunch in the Seminole dining hall. As the girls were introduced, the Brazilian men stepped forward to shake hands, only to be halted by Professor Azeredo.

"In America, it is the custom for the men to shake hands, but a gentleman never shakes the hand of a lady unless she offers it first," Azeredo explained to the students. A rather disappointed group of young men started to step back when the coeds obliged by extending their hands for the age old Brazilian custom of handshaking.

Several problems of English grammar were discussed by Ronaldo and Professor Azeredo. One of the greatest difficulties for Azeredo was in prepositions and such words as "yet" and "still." Azeredo demonstrated his problems by saying:

"I am still studying the English, but I have not learned it yet. Your words for among and between are confusing in usage, also. I may say that this is a talk between the two of us, but if I talk between more of us than two of us, it is no longer a talk between us, but a talk among us. Among means between more than two of us."

But the language barrier was the only obstacle detected, and even language difficulties seemed small compared to the warmth with which these 34 students are learning to communicate in English what one Brazilian student put into a sentence:

"We are all very happy to be here, and we have found FSU to be a friendly place to stay."

FSU Asian Studies Program

Indian Dancers Perform Here March 28

The Bharatiya Kala Kendra, one of India's foremost institutions for the preservation of Kathak, the tradition which produced the music-and-dance theatre of North India, will be presented here March 28 under sponsorship of the FSU Asian Studies program.

This season, the company is leaving its own theatre in New Delhi for the United States and its first American tour. Brought to this country by the Asia Society Performing Arts Program, the dancing group will perform at FSU in Westcott Auditorium for only one showing, at 8:30 p.m.

Only once before have dancers of the Kala Kendra left India--although they have performed in all major centers of their own subcontinent, where they are publicized as ranking favorites. On invitation from the Soviet government, a group toured Moscow and a few other cities of the U.S.S.R. in 1961, to resounding popular and critical acclaim--and much official attention.

The now well-known organization started modestly in 1952 by arranging public festivals of music and dance. Very soon, however, the directorate turned its attention to the important task of reviving the Kathak arts. Within the year, the Kendra had started its College of Music and Dance and attracted known teachers and performers in the traditional hierarchy--who also come from an hereditary line, centuries old.

Since then, the Indian government has awarded official scholarships to recognized dancers and musicians, so they may study in the advanced institute of the Bharatiya Kala Kendra and work with these masters. Promising young dancers have been accepted after careful screening for the preliminary training of the College.

All members of the company have come through this intensive process of study and rehearsal, even though several of the stars who will perform at FSU are themselves descendants in the hereditary line of the Kathak masters.

The Kathak tradition, regarded as one of the four great artistic developments in the long history of India (the others are Bharata Natyam, Kathakali and Manupiri), has an ancient and classical beginning. The dramatic quality and the rhythmic excitement, which are now its chief characteristics, were there in the beginning.

The recovery and restoration of this style of dance-theatre has been accomplished in recent years as a part of the general resurgence of ancient Indian arts and culture which came with India's independence.

In addition to reviving the style of Kathak, the Kala Kendra company has also created dance-dramas in that style, with leading Indian musicians collarborating to arrange the traditional music of North India.

For the American tour, short dramatic episodes, complete in themselves, have been excerpted from some of the longer works to be included in the repertory. In programs, these will be balanced with Kathak as it was seen in the courts of the Mughal emperors and ... purely rhythmical solos and ... numbers.

The dance style has been described thus: "Kathak dance and ... cannot be separated. The incred... rhythms, accented by hundred... tinkling ankle bells (controlled ... to the sound of a single bell ... silence), the lightning foot-beat... the dancers provide the percuss... along with the drums, for its e... orate orchestration, improv... with fantastic interplay at each ... formance. It is, by turns, drama... opera, pure dance and pure m... It is all of them at once."

Tickets will not be on sale in W... cott Ticket Office until earl... March. However, reserved ti... in groups of 20 or more may be ... tained in advance from Dr. Ge... Lensen, 215 History Bldg.

... Piccard

we need government to make these decisions.

Decisions must also be made concerning how the economy must be divided. The fallacy of the economy is the scream for full employment; more and more material wealth is not only what we want, but also more leisure time. "Americans are the laziest people in the world!" Piccard asserted.

All decisions are at one point individual and also collective. The real choice is between responsible and irresponsible decisions; another is between equality and inequality of the decisions. At least we are oriented toward equality in the pursuit of justice.

"Justice may be regarded as the social institution of right morals. Justice is essentially a matter of values," the lecturer said.

"Hurrah for the college student who has learned that blindly chanting, 'Our way is the right way,' is no substitute for a critical philosophy of life and justice."

Not all values hold an equal rank. "While I value the taste of honey in my own mouth, the realization of this value is insignificant compared to another of my values: the availability of bread for all children."

The speaker said, "I believe the teaching of an ancient rabbi, that "the first and great commandment" is "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." He did not give such rank and status to love of country. He said he pledges allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the republic for which it stands (not to the Stars and Bars and the false memories and latter-day riots for which it stands); one nation, under God, indivisible (not 50 sovereign states, under no god save the gods of local passion, easily divided against each other), with liberty and justice for all (not just for all the socially acceptable people who look and think just like me)."

ALPHA PHIs are honoring their alums at a tea Sunday, at the Alpha Phi house.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA was honored to have Dean and Mrs. Donald Loucks for dinner Jan. 16 at the ATO house. Denham Clements, a freshman, pledged Jan. 14. George Arnau was elected Worthy Usher recently of the Epsilon Sigma chapter. The ATO chapter will engage in monthly service projects in behalf of the University. This was announced at the recent General Chapter meeting.

DELTA CHIs are having a pledge and active football game Saturday afternoon at the reservation. Saturday night there will be a combo party featuring "Lawyer Smith." This will be a turnabout weekend at the Delta Chi house; the pledges will become actives and the actives, pledges. Open House will be Sunday afternoon, from 2 to 5 p.m.

DELTA GAMMA had their installation of officers last Wednesday night. The new officers are: president, Marilyn Mathews; first vice president, Charlotte Christopher; second vice president, Betty O'Berry; treasurer, Shirley Valdes; corresponding secretary, Karen Walker; recording secretary, Jo Lynda Edgar.

Attending the installation of officers banquet were the sorority's alumni advisors, Mrs. Jean Sheahan, province secretary, will be the guest of the D.G.'s over the weekend.

DELTA TAU DELTA is concentrating all their activities upon the new Neophyte class this weekend. Saturday night the initiation banquet will be held at the Holiday Inn, and after the banquet a combo from FAMU will play until 12 Midnight. Sunday the formal initiation will take place at the "Shelter," and 22 neophytes will become brothers.

DELTA ZETA pledges will have their annual campus dinner Saturday from 5 to 7:30. The meal includes steak, baked potatoes, tossed salad, rolls, ice cream, and cokes. The theme of the meal is a western cookout. Tickets will be available at the door.

The following are the newly elected officers of f Delta Zeta: Beverly Acher, president; Betty Drummond, first vice president; Ucola Lucke, second vice president; Charlene Bogart, recording secretary; and Jodi Manni, treasurer.

KAPPA ALPHAs will have their annual combo party Saturday night in honor of Robert E. Lee's birthday. Sunday, the KA's will participate in the IFC spring rush open house. All male students are invited to visit the KA house between the hours of 2 and 5 p.m.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA will be having a dessert with SX's Wednesday night. Lucy Bishop is a transfer from Michigan State to our chapter.

Newly elected officers are: vice president, Laura Jo Griffin; vice president of pledge education, Irene Dixon; corresponding secretary, Sharon Zimmerman; recording secretary, Marti Cheatham; treasurer, Cindy Lane; Nancy Lefbvre has been chosen to serve on the executive committee of Panhellenic.

KAPPA DELTA had a dessert with the Phi Delta Theta's Wednesday night. Five girls were selected as Phi Delta Theta little sisters: Fran All, Flo Ann Horne, Nancy Bradford, Sandra Kadar, and Patty Warren.

KAPPA SIGMA's "help week" began this week for neophytes. Friday night will feature the Untouchables at the house. New pledges are Ken Weaver, Jesse Clark, Reggie McNeill, Bruce Ramph, Corky Brumet, and Reggie Teague.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA will hold a combo party for brothers and their dates Saturday night featuring "The Castaways." The chapter welcomed Al Galbraith and Evan Jennings as new pledges in formal pledging ceremonies this week.

PHI DELTA THETA held a dessert party with the Kappa Deltas Wednesday night. Tonight they will hold a combo party with music provided by the Chaotics. All rushees are invited to a smoker at the Phi Delt house from 2 to 5 on Sunday. Bob Meagher from Jacksonville is a new Phi Delt pledge.

PHI KAPPA PSI's new pledges are Guy Sanderson and Tut Hisler. The Phi Psis had their first party at the new house, and so far the house is still standing.

SIGMA KAPPA is happy to announce the election of officers. They are: president, Lyndol Michael; first vice president, Marsha Ferlisi; second vice president, Mary Helen Stephens; recording secretary, Diane Tinker; corresponding secretary, Sue Collins; treasurer, Laura Wise; and registrar, Jean Edmonson. Our special guest this week is our traveling secretary, Pat Newman. A tea honoring the new house mother, Mrs. Edesta Kell, was given Sunday, Jan. 13.

SIGMA NUs are getting ready to entertain the Assistant General Secretary, Brother Dick Christy, who is here to faciliate the planning of our new house. The new pledges are George D'Alesandro, Robert Marott, Tim Hawson, Bill Blaylock, "Chic" Silvagni, and James Higgins. The new officers are Mitch Franks, commander; Tom Green, vice-commander; Tom Dennin, treasurer; Tim Gravey, recorder; Tom Pepper, reporter; Toby Harris, alumni officer; Jim Bassler, social chairman; and Jim Fisher, pledge trainer.

ZETA TAU ALPHA has recently elected new officers. They are president, Linda Wynn; vice president, Genie Maxwell; secretary, Jean DeRosay; treasurer, Anne Jamison; historian, Susan Burkhart; rush chiarman, Carolyn Biggs; and ritual, Dianne Dearinger.

SIGMA CHI presents its 12th annual Derby Day Saturday, 1:30, at the socker field. The new pledges are John Davis, John Hungerbugher, John Campbell, Tom Sealy, Gary Oates, Jim Campbell, Andy Nobles, Gary Seward, Rodney Tuce and David Fletcher. All the rushees are cordially invited to the Sigma Chi house this Sunday at 2:00.

PHI KAPPA TAU initiated nine men last Saturday. They were Norm Rosenburg, Jim Nixon, Ted Wasserline, Bill Boutwell, Ed Partolow, Jim Beard, Jim Gordon, John Cernuto, and Frank Kirk. We also have two new pledges. They are Fred Lamb and Race Hancock. Our biggest affair of the year is this Saturday night. It's our annual Bohemian Party.

PI BETA PHI's new officers are: president, Sally Dunlap; vice president, Beth Ann Legate; recording secretary, Phyllis Webb; corresponding secretary, Libby Gentile; treasurer, Pam Carlton; assistant treasurer, Bunny Hoffman; rush chairman, Judy Nealing; and social chairman, Patty Haer.

Tribe Wrestlers To Grapple With Jax YMCA In Tully Gym

THE MIDDLEWEIGHTS OF FSU'S.

...Wrestling Club discuss the ways to get a successful pinning combination Saturday night. The Seminole matmen are (l to r) Brian, 147-pounds; Butch Hoseler, 157-pounds; Jack Meyer, 147-pounds; and Earl Webb, 157-pounds.

The Florida State University Wrestling Club begins its 1963 home schedule tomorrow night at 6 p.m. in Tully Gymnasium as the Seminole matmen square off against the Jacksonville YMCA squad.

The visitors, who were defeated, 28-6, last year by the Seminole wrestlers, will be bolstered by several outstanding grapplers, featuring athletes who had been on collegiate and high school teams.

The Jax squad will be coached by Don Sayenga, a 220-pound Florida AAU champion. The heavyweight champion will also wrestle for the Jacksonville team.

From 220-pounds, for the heaviest the YMCA unit can go down, to 115-pounds for its lightest man, who is Billy Kennedy. Kennedy recently won the Miami military Academy tournament.

Four other champions are on the Jacksonville roster, said Budd Berringer, coach of the FSU squad. They are:

Jerry Haynes, the 1952 Oklahoma High School Champion; Fred Scott, the 1961 Mid-American Collegiate Champion; Andy Mason, the current 167-pound Champion; Bobby Trousdell, the 1958 Virginia High School Champion.

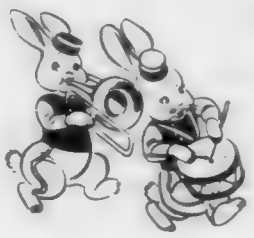
"Amateur wrestling is Florida's newest and fastest growing sport," Berringer said, "if students have never witnessed a collegiate wrestling match, they will undoubtedly have an enjoyable evening." One of the problems collegiate wrestling has is to correct the stigma attached to the sport by professional wrestling.

The preliminary exhibition matches will begin at 5:45, and the official dual meet will start at 6 p.m.

MAT STRATEGY IS CALCULATED

...by the lightweights of the FSU team. They are, (l to r), Erroll Gr... 137; Tim Kerns, 130; Butch Nunez, 123; and Dave Cooley, 115.

Tickets are now being sold on campus and will be on sale at the door. The prices: College students, 50 cents; high school students, 25 cents; non-students, 75 cents.



In this match, the FSU team will rely on the following people:

Lightweights--Dave Cooley, Butch Nunez, Tim Kerns, and Erroll Greene. Their weights range from 115 to 137 pounds.

Middleweights--Earl Webb, Jack Meyer, Butch Hoseler, and Brian Hampton. Their weights range from 147 to 157 pounds.

Upperweight brackets--Steve ... son, Joe Rogers, Flip Carey ... Brinkley, Joe Baker, Ron ... and Jay Bennedetti. Watson ... as a heavyweight and Bennedetti ... the other end of the scales ... pounds.

In February, the Florida ... wrestlers will have three home ... ches. On Feb. 2, the Seminole ... square off against the Auburn ... versity grapplers. In an away ... earlier this season, the Plains ... romped to an easy victory ove... Tribesmen.

Baya M. Harrison of St. Petersburg, chairman of the Board of Control, and FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell accepted the building in the ceremony, which was followed by an open house in laboratories

Built with the aid of a $475,000 grant from the National Institutes of Health, the building provides working space for more than 100 scientists at work on health-related problems in an area where the physical and biological sciences meet.

The building is the fourth in a Science Center Complex which is expected to be a $32 million cluster of science buildings by 1971. During the present biennium, work may start on a Physics Bldg. The Board of Control has asked $15 million for additional buildings during the coming biennium.

Kasha's remarks came before the principal address by the Harvard scientist, a distinguished researcher in the field of large molecules making up polymers and plastics, proteins and genes.

A physical chemist who was the one principally responsible for the launching of the Institute of Molecular Biophysics, Kasha said:

"Just three years ago, the Institute of Molecular Biophysics was a mere idea on paper. Its successful development to its present half-way point in a general way is owed to many individuals.

"The warm reception the development of the program received, first among the faculties, then on the part of the State Board of Control with its progressive policies for the development of higher education in Florida, was of primary importance in securing the strong Atomic Energy Commission research support which is the backbone of our program.

"In addition, the presence of a strong developing nuclear research program, entirely by state funds, had a profound influence on the award of the molecular biophysics contract, and illustrates what a fine investment our nuclear research program has proved to be, in addition to its own direct results."

Gov. Bryant Addresses Higher Education Group

Florida has been growing at such a rapid pace in the past 10 to 15 years that few of us have had time to catch our breath and see whence we have come and where we are headed, said Gov. Farris Bryant in his speech to the Second Governor's Conference on Higher Education, Thursday morning.

The population of Florida is estimated at about 5,500,000 placing Florida as the ninth state in total population as of last July 1. By 1970, Florida will probably be the eighth most populous state, with an estimated eight million residents.

However, Florida lacks the economic resources and industrial strides of the other states with large populations. Our per capita income in 1961, $1965, was the lowest of all the top 10 states.

Bryant formed three questions concerning the improvement of Florida's economy and the improvement of the average financial lot of each citizen. How do we move forward toward our destiny of being a great American state? How do we develop the resources to the utmost potential for a long range benefit? How can we utilize our opportunities in the space age?

"The answer is short. It depends primarily upon the education offered to the people of Florida. We must prepare our youth not only to compete with those from other states, but to provide the know-how and the ideas that will lift our economy in the scientific era in which we find ourselves.

"Education will determine our economic, political and social role in this region, this nation, this world," stated Bryant. "If this state is to grow in wisdom and strength, every able high school graduate should have the opportunity to develop his talents."

Only 31 per cent of Florida's college age population was actually attending college in 1960.

Florida needs more financial support for higher education as an investment in economic growth that will return dividends by providing a better

Board Of Control

Board Decision Drops Gag Rule

J. Broward Culpepper, executive director of the Board of Control, presented his statement concerning the proposed policy of dissemination of communication at Friday's meeting of BOC:

"By Board direction the Board of Control staff is presently bringing to date our policy and procedure manual. As a part of this possibility, the staff included in the present agenda a first draft of a policy which had as its purpose the establishment of lines of communication within the University system. This was our true intent."

"Our experiences within the last several days has led us to conclude that this subject is too sensitive an area and too close to our American inherent rights of freedom of speech to risk misunderstanding."

"Therefore we recommend that no policy statement on dissemination of information be included in the manual. Accordingly, I now ask that this item be withdrawn from the agenda and that we have no stated policy on this subject."

The Board agreed to this proposal made by Dr. Culpepper. Chairman of the Board Baya Harrison added to Culpepper's statement by remarking that the Board staff had no intent of attempting censorship or any form of "gag rule" as some had interpreted the dissemination proposal to read.

During the meeting, the BOC also adopted policies delegating routine powers between BOC and presidents of the state universities.

Culpepper announced that faculty committees would be named by university presidents, who would appoint faculty members to the committee for drawing up policies concerning tenure and dismissal of the faculty.

The Board recommended that a dental school be established at the University of Florida at the earliest time, and agreed to ask the 1963 Legislature for enabling legislation for the dental school.

Presidents of the four existing universities of the state reported that enrollment for the second trimester was about normal in relation to the second semester of last year.

Culpepper remarked that this was in contrast to rumors of huge drop-outs due to the trimester plan. He added that it was too early yet to say anything about the effectiveness of the trimester plan, but that continuing study would be conducted with modifications being made where necessary.

BOP Decides Editorial Case

By OTIS WRAGG
Flambeau Associate Editor

In a unanimous vote Thursday night the Board of Student Publications denied a motion by Dallas Matthews to terminate publication in the "Flambeau" articles dealing with political philosophy on the state, national and international levels.

The board met in special session to consider a formal motion by Matthews resulting from a letter of complaint presented informally at the last regular session. Board Chairman Toni DiCarlo presented Matthews complaint in the form of a motion to the Board.

Matthews, in his second appearance before the board in two weeks, complained that his freedom of choice had been infringed upon in that he was forced to financially support the "Flambeau" through payment of student activities fees, yet had no choice over what was printed. He felt he should not be forced to finance columns advancing ideas and philosophies with which he did not agree.

In an earlier meeting of the board Matthews said he "had become increasingly concerned with a series of articles advocating and expounding upon the assumed virtues of socialism." He cited several columns written by Flambeau columnist John Thomas Riggins calling them "fallacious, misleading and dangerous."

Matthews said his motion was pre-

BOC Misunderstanding

The Board of Control wisely backed off from its announced intention of revising procedures concerning dissemination of information from state universities to the general public.

Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, director, stated that the subject was "too sensitive" and "too close to our inherent American right of freedom of speech to risk further misunderstandings." Chairman Baya Harrison added that the "Board of Control should take no action which would constitute censorship of any individual."

The statement was a relief to those who feared a recurrence of universities versus BOC controversy regarding freedom. Those interested in the retention of freedom on the college campus can be reassured.

In all of its statements, the Board has referred to the controversy as a "misunderstanding." The primary misunderstanding was on the part of the BOC staff, which did not recognize that freedom in any form is sensitive to many Americans. They did not appreciate that any infringement in this area will draw strong criticism by the press and people of Florida.

We urge that the Board carefully figure public reaction before making policy statements. "Misunderstandings" between the Board of Control and the universities undermine public confidence in Florida's higher educational system.

Flambeau Crisis

As crisis sometimes affects other areas of campus life it occasionally finds its way into the offices of the "Flambeau."

This weekend was such a crisis, as all electricity was cut off to Longmire Building from Saturday noon until noon today.

Determining, above all, we must make available to students a paper on Monday morning all of Longmire Building was buzzing with news of the crisis and suggestions for solutions. Emergency calls went out to reporters, editors went into conference with productions lab personnel and tension mounted.

Out of the confusion came the decision--if we could have all material for Monday's edition prepared by 5 p.m. Friday it would be possible for that day's issue to appear. With the determination of a loyal staff and cooperation above and beyond the call of duty from members of the Proud Production's Lab staff we beat the deadline and will not miss a day of publication.

Our thanks go out to the many people who have made it possible for us to continue uninterrupted publications of the daily Flambeau. Staff of the "Flambeau."

Rebellion Against Liberalism

It must be a harrowing experience to be a liberal, to live in constant fear of the vigilantes of the Right, who swoop down at the first innocent remark to badger and ruin those of pure heart. We hear it all the time: the "right-wing extremists" are out to destroy all freedom of expression. We read about it in columns and letters, and see it in cartoons in which a person is grilled by the right-wing radical beasts because he is wearing a red tie. It must be terrible to be so persecuted, yet so noble and courageous.

But where are the examples of the persecution. Norman Thomas still lectures, while crying out at the persecution. "The Worker" is still published. No liberal has been silenced, or dragged off in the night.

But ah, there is criticism of the liberal position. That's the key. The left-wing persecution complex involves no more than ill-tempered displeasure at being challenged by the conservatives of the nation. Despite denials, the fact remains that college campuses for years have been an almost exclusively liberal domain. Rather than being a persecuted minority, valiantly fighting for a better life for all, the liberals are the majority; they control the national government. More than forty members of the left-wing ADA are in important executive positions in the federal government, but nary a right-wing extremist is to be found.

There had, in recent years, developed a conservative revival. Students are rebelling from the new liberal conformity, and are asking questions: why are we saddled with monstrous deficits in peacetime? Why are we usually caught, in international situations, sheepishly wiping Communist and neutralist spittle from our faces? Why is increased bureaucratic regulation the lot of the farmer, the businessman and the average citizen?

Liberal cliches are no longer enough: the liberals, having had little competition over the years, have grown soft, and are not effecti meeting the challenge.

So, instead of rational discuss we now have the air filled wit squeals of so-called persecute erals, admixed with the epit against the Right which they now to defend their position: right- extremist, Bircher, fascist, p noid, lunatic fringe...complete own list.

Conservative Bigots A Threat

The great folly of the conservative groups that preach anti-Communist hat doctrines is that they, the most avid defenders of what is sometimes called the "American way of life," have become the first major casualties of that which is most abhorent in Communism. Head Up, Or Be Damned

To the Editor:

Colored Man

I walk from the music building this Thursday morning Hello world. Hello pretty bird that contemplates from one bough to another. Hello pretty bush that stays in one place and contemplates, or doesn't, as he pleases. And hello, man...but you do not smile at my greeting as the bird, and the bush and the sky, and the world...you are not free. You hang your head at my approach. Why?

You are a colored man. Colored man you are a very depressing subject. Why should any human bow his head to me. Colored man what are you? What is a Colored man? If a man is all that he believes, and only all that he thinks, then, every man is Colored. Everyman has his ideas and beliefs colored one color or another...blue, grey, orange, red violet. . .or brown. . . who are you, Colored Man, to lower your head at my approach.

Hold your head up to another Colored human, or be damned. Say hello to the sky, the bush, the bird and the world that contemplates from one to another, or doesn't, as it pleases, oh what is a Colored Man;

Williams' First Comedy

Period Of Adjustment Review

By TIM CARR
Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

Tennessee Williams' first comedy has improved in its transition from the printed page to the screen. His characters, for a change, are not the incredibly sensitive, perceptive impossibilities like those in his previous works.

Jim Hutton (of "Where the Boys Are" infamy) is downright funny as a nervous bridegroom who will stop at nothing to avoid his also-very-nervous bride. Williams, the master of contrast and irony, thrusts this ridiculous couple into the middle of a tragic domestic struggle between Tony Franciosa and his wife, Jane Fonda.

This picture is filled with little magic moments. Williams had managed wonderfully to project his earthy wisdom through even more earthy characters.

Everything works out right in the end, as a proper comedy should. The final scene (on a roll-away bed in front of an open fire) is very witty, very happy, and very touching.

"The Four Saints" Appear In Westcott, February 9 & 11

"The Four Saints," a singing group that uses instrumental and comedy routines in its acts, will perform at FSU on Saturday and Monday, Feb. 9 and 11.

The quartet will appear at FSU under the sponsorship of the Student Artist Series. The performances, on both nights, will be at 8:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

Tickets, priced at $3 for the public and $2 for FSU students, will go on sale Monday, Jan. 31.

The singers, all from the state of Washington, have been performing together for more than 10 years in high school, college and with the United States Air Force Band.

As teenagers, Doug Evens, John Howell, Bob Erickson and Jerry Du Chene, launched their career as "The Kord Kings." Because of their outstanding reputations as vocalists, instrumentalists (they play a total of 31) and all-around musicianship, they received a four-year group scholarship to the University of Puget Sound, where they maintained scholastic averages in the honor bracket.

Their college career was interrupted by military duty, where they also remained together as a unit with the U. S. Air Force Band. Since that time, they have played an extensive run of engagements in all parts of the country. They have appeared frequently in the Racquet Club, Dayton, Ohio; Grandview Inn, Columbus; Tradewinds Hotel, Ft. Lauderdale; and on television.

The Four Saints are coming to FSU as the first of this season's Student Artist Series attractions. On April 1, as second in the series, the United States Army Field Band will perform in Westcott Auditorium.

Dr. Macridis Gives Government Lecture

Dr. Roy Macridis, political scientist from Washington University, will be the speaker tonight as the FSU Lecturers in Government series gets under way.

Macridis will speak on "Western Europe: Dilemma and Promise."

The address, sponsored by the Government Dept., will be at 8 p.m. in the Strozier Library Lecture Hall. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Macridis, whose fields of interest are comparative government (Western Europe, U.S.S.R.) and political theory, served in the Office of Strategic Services from 1943 to 1945 He has been a Ford and Rockefeller fellow and Fulbright lecturer at the University of Paris. Before joining the faculty of Washington University, Macridis served on the faculties of Harvard and Northwestern.

A former editor of "Foreign Policy in World Politics," he is the author of "The Study of Comparative Government" and "The De-Gaulle Republic--Quest for Unity." He holds a Licence-en-Droit from the University of Paris. His master's and doctor's degrees are from Harvard University.

sented "to assure that the rights of all students are respected." He asserted it was not a function of student newspapers to express views on national and international issues.

Allowing it was proper for these items to be printed in a free private press and for students to discuss them, he felt it should "not be done journalistically in a conscripted press like we have at FSU." He recommended publication of political articles be terminated as of Jan. 18.

Following the motions denial Board Chairman Toni DiCarlo said, "Mr. Matthews sought a revision of the board's basic policy of allowing student editors complete freedom within the boundaries set by libel, good taste and personal attacks. Although his interest is appreciated, Mr. Matthews did not present sufficient evidence to support such a drastic measure."

informed citizenry. Money will not buy all the academic excellence or expansion programs that we need, but it is a place to start.

Bryant listed some of the important developments that had taken place since the first governor's conference last May. A Space Era Education Study was set up to determine Florida's space age needs in the fields of science, engineering and research.

In September, the four state universities began the year-round trimester plan in order to utilize the already available facilities. The Board of Control plans to evaluate this plan with the purpose of improving it.

Construction has begun on the new Florida Atlantic University at Boca Raton, which will open in 1964. This institution will utilize the latest teaching techniques and equipment, and it will not be organized with the traditional educational methods and procedures. It is to be a two-year upper divisional, under-graduate university.

One of the largest building programs has been started by the University system, with an emphasis on the science areas.

In his concluding statements Bryant said that Florida's facilities and efforts for higher education were below the upper half of the states, but with the help of the Florida Legislature and the Florida people, we will accomplish the task.

"When we have made higher education an appropriate type available to every Floridian who can profit by it and as a result he will have additional money in his pocket -- when the education we offer is the best available, then our universities and junior colleges will enable us to make our rightful contributions to -- and derive our just benefits from -- the new space age technology, the new science and the new knowledge of man."

Georgia Gets Revenge 90 - 7

By JOHN WOOD
Assistant Sports Editor

A revengeful quintet of Georgia Bulldogs met and conquered Florida State's soaring Seminoles in Athens Thursday night by 14 points. The 90-76 Seminole defeat evened the score for the 'Dogs after an embarassing 88-54 defeat here last week.

Hustling and ripping the cords from the opening whistle, the Georgia crackers got off to an early lead and refused to budge. They outrebounded the Seminoles and scored the most points tallied against Florida State this season.

FSU led only once during the game, at 1-0. Georgia quickly erased this lead and posted one of their own with a 16 point margin. The Seminoles came back onto the floor after halftime down 49-41 and promptly pulled to within 4 points of the hosts, at 57-53, but could get no closer throughout the remainder of the game.

As 1500 Georgia fans roared approval, sophomore guard Billy Rado spurred the Bulldogs to victory with 24 points. He was closely followed by John Matthews, a 6-4 junior starting his first game, who notched nine of 12 from the field and 23 points.

Leading the Seminole assualt were Charley Long and Jerry Shirley with 18 and 14 points.

Though FSU made many floor errors, it was just a case of the crackers getting too hot on the home court. The Bulldog's ut through 33 of 63 shots for 52.4 per cent, and capitalized on free throws, hitting 24 of 29.

FSU had kept within reasonable range in the first half by hitting sensational 65.45 per cent of its attempts, versus Georgia's even 50 per cent. But the Seminoles dropped off sharply in the second half and finished the night with 31 of 62 for 50 per cent. They managed to sink 14 of 21 from the foul line.

One reason for the success of the Bulldogs was Charles Adamek. The no. 2 rebounder was not expected to play because of a pulled muscle, but did play, grabbing nine rebounds and scoring 12 points.

"Rebounding was the big difference tonight," said FSU Coach Bud Kennedy," and I though Adamek's prescence was a considerable factor. Time after time, he cleared the way for Rado to move in there, with his manuevers."

Georgia Coach Red Lawson, who had promised the Flambeau last week that his team would "be rested and really come after you," had this to say Thursday: "It was one of our best efforts of the season. Matthews did a big job for us."

In Tallahassee FSU had outrebounded Georgia by a wide margin, 59-34, but it was the Bulldog's who controlled the boards in the last clash. They grabbed 45 to FSU's 38.

As a point of interest, only one other team has scored as many as 90 points on the Seminoles in two seasons. Tampa managed to score 92 in a 123-92 defeat at the hand of last year's varsity.

The Seminole's, 9-7 for the season, take a day of rest before tangling with once beaten Georgia Tech in Atlanta Saturday night. The Engineers have won 11 and lost only to highly ranked Mississippi State. They are ranked no. 11 nationally in this week's Ap poll. They have been idle since Monday night.

NOTICE

Due to a temporary power shutoff for repairs yesterday, when the sports page is usually turned out, this news is all old news. Tomorrow's Flambeau will carry the complete results of the varsity and freshman basketball games and the wrestling meet.

Florida State's baseball team -- a semifinalist in last year's College World Series at Omaha, Neb. -- will open a 30-game 1963 schedule here on March 16.

The schedule, announced by Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha, will feature ten games against Southeastern Conference opposition -- including four against downstate rival Florida.

Coach Danny Litwhiler's Seminoles recovered from a comparatively slow start last Spring to finish 17-11 in regular-season play. They went on from there to cop the NCAA District III title at Gastonia, N.C., only to lose to eventual national champion Santa Clara in the semifinals at Omaha.

Litwhiler, a star major league outfielder for 12 years, expects another strong club this year at FSU. He has two players who will be strong All-America prospects: Catcher Buddy Teagle of West Palm Beach and shortstop Woody Woodward of Coral Gables. Teagle was a first-team selection last season.

In eight seasons at FSU, Litwhiler has sent six teams to the district NCAA playoffs and two of them to the College World Series.

March: 16--Auburn in Tallahassee; 21, 22, 23--Clemson in Tallahassee; 25, 26--at Auburn; 30--at Florida Southern.

April: 1, 2--at Miami; 5, 6--Furman in Tallahassee; 9--Valdosta State in Tallahassee; 20--at North Carolina State; 25--at Duke; 26--at East Carolina; 27--at Camp Lejune.

May: 3, 4--at Florida; 11--Valdosta State in Tallahassee; 13, 14--Georgia Southern in Tallahassee; 16--at Georgia Tech; 17, 18--at Georgia; 24, 25--Florida in Tallahassee. June: 8--Jacksonville Tallahassee.

Sims, McConnaughhay Top Football Awards

Graduating tackle Jim Sims of LaGrange, Ga., has received the fifth annual Bob Crenshaw Award as the Florida State University football player with "the biggest hear."

The award, presented at the Tallahassee Quarterback Club's recent Governor's Cup Jamboree, is named for former FSU football captain Bob Crenshaw -- a 1956 graduate who was killed in a jet plane crash five years ago.

Sims, selected for the award by his coaches, earned his third varsity letter last Fall and was a starting tackle for the Seminoles' two-way Chiefs unit.

Past winners of the award are Guard Abner Bigbie, 1960, West Palm Beach; fullback Paul Andrews, 1961, Greenville; guard Al Ulmer, 158, Clearwater; center Ramon Rogers, 1959, Pensacola.

Several other FSU footballers were honored at the Jamboree, attended by perhaps 200 here last week.

Senior end John McConnaughhay of Ocala was selected by his teammates to receive the Quarterback Club's Sportsmanship Award for Florida State players. In addition, McConnaughhay and quarterback Eddie Felly, guard Gene McDowell and center Bruce Darsey were recognized for being being named to the Florida Sportswriters Assn. all-state football team.

A former freshman baseball at Florida State University named the head baseball coach the University of Miami Hurri

Ronald Fraser, 29, will occupy post vacated by Whitey Ca The Miami athletic direct Fraser, also a former FSU star, will take over the UM immediately to prepare for training.

Fraser was a star for the Sem in 1955-56, and was later the Dutch National baseball the Netherlands.

SUCCESSFUL BROADWAY PLAYWRIGHT

Maurice Valency, goes over, with two student actors, some of the parts of his latest play, "The Long Night," which will be premiered at FSU Feb. 6. The students with Valency are (left) Sam Baker and (right) Al Smelko.

The Long Night

FSU Premiers Valency Play

Maurice Valency is here to help shape up his new play, "The Long Night," for its world premiere production, at FSU Feb. 6.

The play, written about three years ago, is based on a novel, "The Foreign Minister" by Leo Lania. The Theater Guild bought Lania's work and asked Valency to write a play from it.

Paul McGrath, a well known Broadway actor, will play the part of the main character. The Eddie Dowling Foundation production will be directed by Richard Fallon of the University Theatre.

The principal charagter, Karel Mestrovic, is a fictional counterpart of Jan Masaryk who was the Czech foreign minister that fought against the Communist take-over of democratic Czechslovakia in 1948.

"It is intended to be the study of a very complex Hamlet-like personality, a man of great intelligence placed in a situation which requires immediate and unreasoning action," said Valency.

Karel Mestrovic is pictured as a man full of doubt and questioning who comes to see that "democracy is the process of systematic doubt" and that it is better to die than to give up the "fundamental right not to give oneself completely to anyone or anything--least of all to the state."

The play presents "the predicament of a sincere liberal in a situation where a definite commitment to a political extreme is demanded," he said. "Under extreme Communist pressure he dies in defense of his belief in democracy and the liberal point of view, in defense of the liberal's creed."

Drama is a "secondary field" to Valency, a Ph.D. who is professor of English and comparative literature at Columbia University and whose principal concern is supervising a doctoral program in the Renaissance period.

Among Valency's scholary works have been "In Praise of Love" (MacMillan, 1958), a study of the Early Renaissance, prinicpally the Troubadours, and "The Flower and The Castle," a book about Ibsen and Strindberg which will be published by MacMillan next September.

He is best known, however, for about a dozen plays, some of which have been smash hits on Broadway. The latest was "The Gypsy Baron," 1959, which followed "The Visit," in 1958 starring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne. An earlier success was "The Madwoman of Chaillot," a 1949 adpatation of Jean Giraudouz which starred Martita Hunt and John Carradine.

He's very pleased with Tallahassee, which he has never seen before, and hopes the camellias and azaleas will be approaching their full spring splendor while the play is running. Mrs. Valency will be here for the opening on Feb. 6. The play will run for five night and two matinee performances through Feb. 10.

He did his undergraduate work at the University of Minnesota and the University of Tennessee, receiving the master's degree and Ph.D. from the latter school.

The scientist's research interest here has been in radiation genetics. With a grant from the AEC to Edington, FSU was able to buy and install its first deep therapy X-ray machine. This has enabled the scientist to implement his research interest in radiation genetics and has facilitated experimental work in many other phases of radiation biology.

In addition to his research and teaching, Edington has served as a member of the FSU Research Council, the Nuclear Advisory Committee, the Inter-Institutional Nuclear Science Committee, as acting associate director of the Institute of Molecular Biophysics, as a member of the University Senate, and for the past two years as an adviser for Honors students. He also initiated and was director of the first Summer Institute in Radiation Biology at FSU, sponsored by the AEC and National Science Foundation.

Edington will continue some of his research here while holding his new position.

S. G. Spring Elections Filing Date Announced

One week from today at 5 p.m. candidates may file a Declaration of Candidacy to run for a major campus office. The declarations may be obtained and returned at the main office of the Longmire Bldg.

The major offices available and their maximum expenses are as follows: President of the Student Body, $65; Vice President of Student Body, $45; Men's Vice President, $40; Women's Vice President, $40; Secretary of Student Senate, $30; Chief Justice of Honor Court, $40; Clerk of Honor Court, $30; Chairman of University Court, $30; Chairman of Traffic Court, $30; and Student Board of Publications, $20.

It will be required that all winning candidates attach all itemized receipts of expenditures to their final expense statements.

All candidates for major offices shall be required to have achieved an overall 2.3 scholastic average. No student may declare candidacy for more than one office at a given time.

The deadline for the filing of Declarations of Candidacy is Feb. 5 at 5 p.m. There will also be a mandatory meeting for all candidates at 8:30 that evening to explain the procedures for campaigning.

For further information, contact Secretary of Elections Ron Jones at 210 Longmire between 2-5 p.m. The election regulations are given in the Student Body Election Code.

Personnel & Architects Meet On New Union

Representatives of Florida State University met yesterday with architects from the Board of Control as plans progressed on the building of the new University Union.

Dr. R. R. Oglesby, dean of students' Ray E. Green, Jr., assistant business manager; Dr. Ivan Johnson, head of the arts education department; and Dr. Reid Montgomery, to be head of the union, discussed furnishings for the four-unit complex to be built adjacent to the present student center.

The plans in the office of Forrest Kelly, Board of Control architect, have been changed little since they have been reviewed by representatives of the student body and faculty on the University Union Committee.

One change that has been made for some time is the elimination of the men's and women's clothing shops and the drug store from the groud floor of the three-story Student Activities building.

These shops will not be needed in the financing of the building as was originally planned.

The schedule still calls for the completion of the union in July, 1964.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the student body as a whole or the administration of the Florida State University. Editorials represent the opinions of the editorial staff of the Flambeau with the initials of the writer following the editorial. Columns and letters to the Editor reflect only the opinion of the writer.

Brazilian Problems

A Brazilian friend was in the office recently. We discussed the current relations between his country and ours and the reasons behind current North American and South American problems.

The trouble in South America is greatly historical. For many centuries there have existed great gulfs between the upper and lower classes. It is the time honored story of the rich becoming richer and the poor becoming poorer. Great needs exist in this vast territory where many are deprived of basic necessities of human life and many are denied access to education. South Americans wish, like all underprivileged people, to better their position.

"The trouble is with John Foster Dulles," our friend stated. "John Foster Dulles, he forgot us. He took all American money to Europe. He forgot South America.

"Most people from our country don't feel badly toward America," he went on. "But you buy only coffee. We need to sell many other things."

This goes a long way to explain current troubles in South America. For many years, the United States, intent on rebuilding Europe as a wall against International Communism, elected to spend its resources in aid to these nations. This succeeded. But it left a great weakness in South America, which Communists are now attempting to exploit.

South Americans are in a dire position. They need to sell goods to provide capital to supply basic needs to many of their people. The United States does not buy everything the Brazilians need to sell so they look to other markets, like the Soviet Union.

Europe is now strong and should begin to carry its share of the load of freedom. The entire free world, and especially the United States, needs to direct aid to South America. When this is done, Communism will be trounced in this area as soundly as it has been trounced in Europe.

Today's News Roundup

FLAMBEAU NEWS SERVICES

OXFORD--The Justice Department has dropped charges against former Major General Edwin Walker and six other persons arrested in connection with desegregation riots at the University of Mississippi last fall. A U.S. attorney in Oxford, Miss., asked for the dismissals of the charges a few hours after a deferal grand jury adjourned without indicting the seven. The grand jury earlier had indicted four persons in case. The court specified dismissal of charges against the seven was without prejudice. This means the charges may be reinstated at any time within a five-year period.

COLUMBIA--South Carolina's last hopes to prevent admission of the first Negro to state-supported Clemson College have dimmed in two court actions. A Federal Judge in the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals and Chief Justice Earl Warren both have refused to delay effectiveness of an appeals court order that Harvey Gantt be accepted at Clemson as a transfer student from Iowa State University.

WASHINGTON--Democratic Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon predicts Northern shipowners will join the striking longshoremen in accepting a Presidential Board's proposal for ending the 30-day East and Gulf coast dock strike. Morse heads the board.

ELISABETHVILLE--A U.N. force has occupied Kolwezi in the Congo's Katanga Province peacefully. It was the last stronghold of Katanga President Moise Tshombe and he gave up, as he pledged, without resistance. It appears to be the last stage of military operations preparatory to return of Katanga to the Central Congo Government.

NEW YORK--West German Chancellor Adenauer and President de Gaulle of France have agreed to a treaty of close cooperation in diplomacy, defense and culture. It is open to other European states. This agreement came after conferences in France. It's said West Germany backed away from a proposed exclusive inner alliance with France inside the European and Atlantic communities.

WASHINGTON--The U.S. State Dept. has given out an estimate that Red China may be able to explode an atomic device late this year or in 1963. A Department spokesman added that there would be a long gap between this event and Chinese development of a meaningful nuclear capability.

Socialist Altruisms Examined

The Socialist quarter seems to think we should do our best to understand Communist origin and motivation. That is a good beginning and indeed it does make an interesting study.

The record of the chief Kremlin gremlin, Nikita Khrushchev, provides an outstanding case history of a typical product of Communist motivation and an admirable description of what it takes to be a successful Communist.

Space is too short to permit a proper analysis of the origin of communism, but a few highlights of Khrushchev's career should remind anyone in doubt of the nature of the beast that we are being exhorted to strew rose petals in the path of.

Khrushchev accomplished one of his most artful feats of genocide fairly early in his career when in 1933 he and his cohorts engineered the infamous Ukranian famine by confiscating 90 per cent of their produce for export. Something like 7 million people literally starved to death. All of this is properly documented information provided by competent survivors who had subsequently escaped and related their experiences to The House Committee on UnAmerican Activities.

If this wasn't enough to endear tricky Nicky to Stalin, then probably the clincher was his ingenious bacteriological warfare scheme which kille[d] indefinite number of people in 1936. Here he [p]medical capsules, public drinking water, and [c]rettes poisoned.

Of more recent vintage his crimes include [t]shooting of striking Ukrainian political prisone[rs] at Vorkuta in 1955. The same year he ordered [a] decimation of 500 women who were protesting pr[i]conditions at Vorkuta.

Hungary in 1956 was obviously a Khrushchev[-]debacle as was the murder of American airmen o[n] Armenia several years ago.

Escapees from various parts of the "worke[rs'] paradise" are constantly adding to the list [of] atrocities committed under the auspices of Khrus[h]chev and company.

The airing of facts such as these generally [m]apologists for Khrushchev, Castro, and Mao [Tse] Tung to cloud the air with such sick rationaliz[a]tions as would make anyone wonder just wh[at] of world they are trying to forge. If the socialis[ts] are really altruistic why do they always ap[olo]gize for people with backgrounds like Khrushchev?

"Everyone to his own taste," said the old l[ady] as she kissed the cobra.

Man Can Rule With Reason

The "Book of Common Prayer," I noticed the other day, points out another of the many contradictions in our social framework. In the "Articles of Faith" in the back of the book the holy fathers point out that it is a requisite of Christian religion that man is by nature lustful, sinful, un-trustworthy and really unworthy of Divine grace.

This view is characteristic of much of Christianity and I will not pass judgment on it, other than to mention that it appears antithetical to our equally cherished values of democracy. These values rest upon the assumptions that man is capable of reason and of deciding the best course of action to follow. Therefore, to the Democrat, mankind can be kept from evil due to his ability to reason, that the majority can rule their government and sinful and unlawful actions will be controlled because of the natural g[oo]d of man.

We know where the former o[f] came from and the latter we a[re] to the Enlightenment and the [de]anist philosophers who rejecte[d] ditional religion and were [m]less catagorized as Deists. [But] then is the contradiction -- [to] believe in tradtional religion democracy and still remain [in]ectually honest? How can [man] innately evil on one hand [and] be trusted on the other [with] control and governing of the[m]

This axiological schizo[phrenia] serves no useful purpose as [far] see it. Science and history [will] think, lead most people to [accept] the modern approach and to de[vote] themselves to improving demo[cracy] and by education impart to [man] the necessary knowledge to help [the] person, by his own efforts, to a[ttain] all that he is capable of [being].

Thus I would suggest that we [reject] all previous doctrines dealing [with] the evil nature of man or [with] the concept of democracy -- [which] is unalterably opposed to the[se] doctrine. And if we decide [on] democracy it should apply [to] economic and social lives [as well] as our political. For [man] can rule his political life [by] and education he can surely [also] rule his economic and [social] relations as well.

Review

Foreign Film 'Sensitive'

In the past few months I have discovered that it is pointless to praise the acting in the new wave of "slice of life" foreign films. It's like asserting that the Hope Diamond sparkles. A review gets so cluttered with adjectives that it approaches novelette size. The reader can't see the forest for the treatise.

Another criterion must be found. Photography? It is always adequate, and usually superb. Directing? Likewise. Music? Production? Editing? Dialogue? All ditto.

The only criterion left is the impact a picture makes upon me. And so, in the case of "The Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner," let's start with the assurance that all the above mentioned cinematic processes are as good as they could possibly be.

This is the story of a startlingly ugly young man named Smith who gets all the bad breaks from life and takes his revenge in a very simple and vastly amusing, wonderful way.

The action opens in an English reform school (the film is filled with flashbacks that don't detract at all from its vitality). We are shown his childhood, the poverty he lived in, his father's death, his mother's lover "before me father's cald in 'is grive," a series of robberies, trips to the seashore with streetwalkers, a burglarized bakery, the inhumanity of the police, and the rough initiation into the "trade school."

In the reformatory he gains quick favor with the authorities for his ability as a long distance runner. There are many, many fine shots of him running against an autumn background, sloshing through knee-deep tides of leaves, loping along a ridge silhouetted against the rising sun. Some of the best jazz I've ever heard accompanies his running.

Finally, the biggest day in the reform school's history comes up -- a public school is going to compete with the reformatory in athletics. The main event is the long distance run.

Smith is way ahead of his nearest rival, but he stops just short of the finish line, grinning at the outraged school officials as the public school runners pass him. Most of the inmates are yelling "Run! Run! Run!" but there are a few who look on with a knowing and approving eye.

This is a very sensitive film, warm and beautiful throughout. It has been time since I have empathized so strongly with a character.

Eleven Groups Form European Seminars

Eleven groups, each containing 20 to 30 selected American college students, will form seminars in various European cities this summer, to study the language, culture and civilization of these countries, during a nine-week stay.

Designed for the serious student who does not plan to see all of Europe in a short summer, Classrooms Abroad tries to give him a more profound experience through a summer of living in one of the following cities: Berlin, Munich, or Tubingen in Germany; Vienna, Austrai; Besancon, Grenoble, or Pau in France; Neuchatel in Switzerland; Madrid or Santander in Spain; and Florence, Italy.

Graded classes in small sections of six to 10 students, each under the supervision of American and native professors, will deal with the reading of classical and modern texts, the daily press, contemporary problems, conversation and composition, pronunciation and grammar.

Students also will head lectures on history and literature and meet with outstanding personalities. They will have full auditing privileges at the university in each of the selected towns and cities, and will participate in all academic and social activities with German, Austrian, French, Swiss, Spanish and Italian students.

Members of Classrooms Abroad will live with private families in each city, eat many of their meals with their hosts and share the activities of their sons and daughters. They will have ample opportunities to meet young people from student, religious, and political organizations.

Regular attendance at theatres, concerts, and movies, as well as visits to museums, libraries, factories, youth organizations, and other points of interest are included in the program. Each group will follow its seven-week stay in a city or town with an optional two-week tour of German, French, Spanish, or Italian areas. Since most programs end in mid-August, participants have a chance to remain in Europe for private travel after the program.

"We have found through many years of experience that it is quite possible, even if you don't know a word of the language, to learn more than a year's worth of college German, French, Spanish, or Italian in the course of a summer," said Dr. Hrischbach, director of Classrooms Aborad, "provided that we get serious and mature students who are willing to mix business with pleasure."

Dr. Hirschbach, who also heads the German-language groups, teaches at the University of Minnesota. The French and Spanish groups will be directed by John K. Simon and Robert E. Kelsey, members of the Romance Languages Dept. at Yale. The Italian group will be led by Charles Affron of Brandeis University.

Classrooms Abroad, now in its seventh year, has grown from eleven students in 1956 to an anticipated three hundred in 1963. Its former students represent some two hundred American colleges.

Full information can be obtained by writing to Classrooms Abroad, Box 4171 University Station, Minneapolis 14, Minnesota.

Film Club Presents Japanese War Film

Tonight at 8 o'clock in Westcott, the FSU Film Club will present "Men Who Tread on the Tiger's Tail."

Akira Kurosawa, one of Japan's foremost film directors, was ordered by the Japanese militarists in power during World War II to direct this film for propaganda purposes. Based on the great Kabuki favorite "Kanjincho," the film set in 12th century Japan at the time of that nation's civil wars, is conducted with traditional dignity in classical Japanese with English subtitles.

Major characters are Yoshitsune, a lord of the Genji clan, his chief vassal, Benkei, and the carrier or porter whom they meet. Yoshitsune, pursued by his brother, the reigning shogun, disguises himself and the whole group as monks to pass undetected across the border. Kurosawa's major insertion, the porter, speaks in the vernacular, symbolizing the common man and adding a new dimension to the classic.

The high Kabuki pomp of the province magistrate and the low comedy farce of the carrier combine to satirize traditional Kabuki values in this hour-long film.

FSU To Make 3rd SEC Entry Try

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Sports Editor

Florida State, backed by rival University of Florida, will make its third bid for entry into the Southeastern Conference this week in Atlanta, announced Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha.

Mancha said FSU will present a four-point program to the executive committee, which is made up of college president from the 12-member schools.

The four points emphasize and re-emphasize that Florida State is ready for big-time football and for SEC membership.

"First of all," Mancha said, "we have a comparable academic program and enrollment at Florida State. We rank with the best schools in the South.

"This is important to entry into the conference because several SEC members are worrying about the declining standards of SEC universities," Mancha said. The schools with higher standards object to colleges with lower standards admitting athletes who lack the proper grades.

"Our second point is that Florida State has comparable athletic standards," Mancha said. For the last five years, the Seminole teams have been operating under SEC rules and regulations in such areas as eligibility, grant-in-aids, and reciprocal agreements.

"Third, we feel that FSU has a comparable scope and quality of athletic program," Mancha said, and then re-emphasized the word "quality."

Florida State is playing big time football, and could do so in the Southeastern Conference.

"Our football team played five SEC teams, and the basketball team will play 13 SEC basketball games," he said.

The FSU budget is as big as most of the SEC colleges, Mancha said, and the Seminoles have held their own athletically. This season, the football team tied three SEC teams, Kentucky, Auburn and Georgia Tech; defeated Georgia; and lost to its SEC sponsors, Florida and UF Athletic Director Ray Graves.

"Our fourth point is our geographic location," Mancha said. "FSU has a better location than many SEC teams, and its central location would make traveling games easier on other SEC teams."

How will the voting go?

"Well, we want to be optimistic, because FSU is in its most favorable position so far. We feel we are big time in athletics and academics. And we feel we could contribute something to the conference."

On the other hand, Mancha admitted the SEC membership would contribute something to Florida State University.

"It would help us a lot in recruitment, because boys like to attend conference schools. The honors from the SEC would help us a lot."

"Membership in the SEC would make scheduling easier and more attractive, he said. Additional SEC games would be automatically scheduled and the independent Florida State wouldn't be stuck with a piecemeal schedule.

The SEC membership would boost the Seminoles financially, because the additional SEC games would be an enticing drawing card to sports spectators in the South.

Mancha admitted that football and basketball are the mainstays of the financial programs and would be boosted most by SEC membership, by the smaller sports at FSU would move to the top in the conference.

"Bim Stults, our swimming coach, would have been the top SEC coach for eight straight years, because each year the Florida State swimmers defeated everyone around."

The baseball team defeated SEC champ Florida in the District III playoffs in Gastonia, N.C.; and then finished fourth in the College World Series. This was the second time that baseball coach Danny Litwhiler had taken an FSU crew to the series.

"And the golf and tennis teams have been whipping the conference champs for years," Mancha said.

Florida State made its first formal application bid for membership in the winder of 1956. At this time, FSU had no particular proposal and its bid was voted down.

Meanwhile, feeling had developed in the conference that the SEC had too many members already. Many felt that 13 colleges would rock the boat of the bulky conference and investigated expanding the SEC to 16 teams, which would be divided into eight-team divisions--one from the east and one from the west.

Therefore, in Jan. 1960, Florida State once again appeared in the picture. At that time, Florida sponsored FSU and Miami for the eastern teams, and the University of Mississippi sponsored Mississippi Southern and Houston for the West.

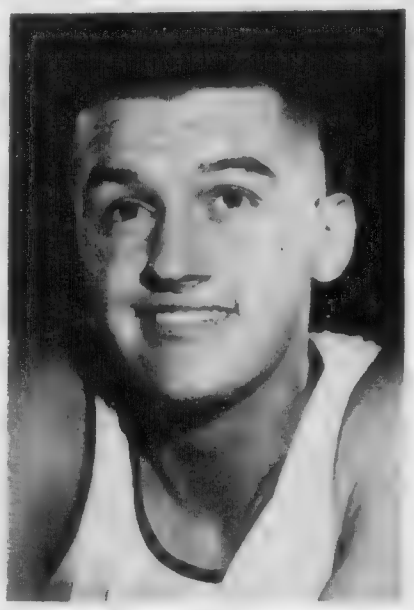
The motion failed in an 8-4 vote.

"If FSU does get into the conference this time, it will be largely through the efforts of its president, Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, who has worked long and hard with the presidents of the other colleges," Mancha concluded. Voting will take place either Thursday or early Friday morning.

It will take a majority vote of the conference presidents to get Florida State into the SEC.

A 13-member conference would not be anything new to the SEC, for, when it was formed in 1933, there were 13 members.

However, Sewanee dropped out in 1940, and the SEC members have voted down several attempts to enlarge the conference.



This time, the support of Graves is expected to give Florida State strong backing. Graves said he supports membership for FSU for two reasons: FSU has a good location and the Gators have to play the Seminoles anyway.

Earlier, the coaching staff of the Georgia Bulldogs voiced allocades for the FSU football team.

Former coach, now athletic director, Wally Butts of Georgia said the FSU Seminoles rated SEC membership. He said this at the half time of the FSU-Georgia football game, which the Bulldogs lost, 20-7.

Assistant Coach Jim Whatley expressed Bulldog sentiment before the Tallahassee Quarterback Club when he pointed out that FSU deserves membership because it would help to better balance the league and improve the calibre of the conference, FSU has better facilities than helf of the SEC teams, FSU has a larger student body than half of the SEC, and FSU has a better overall sports program than eight SEC schools.

Furthermore, Whatley continued, FSU guarantees for SEC teams that play in Tallahassee equal or excel the quarantees that over half of the SEC schools give each other.

Georgia Tech Stings FS In 70-55 Basketball Gam

The Florida State Seminole basketball team, reeling from a loss at the hands of the Georgia Bulldogs, were slammed to the mat once again when the Goergia Tech Yellow Jackets won 70-55.

Assistant Coach Hugh Durham attributed the loss to the full-court defensive press that Tech used.

Nearly 7,000 fans saw the Jackets lead all the way to the end with a fairly comfortable margin. At the halftime, the score was 42-26.

Another reason for the Seminole defeat is the number of Techmen in the double figures. Jim Caldwell, the 6-9 Jacket, bucketed 11 points. Harry Eidson hit 14 markers, while Ron Scharf got 12 to John Herbert's 11.

Only two Seminoles scored over 10 points. Charley Long sank 17 points, while Jerry Shirley downed 10 points.

The Seminoles, who only hit 32.2 percent of their shots the first half, as compared to Tech's 39, exploded in the second half to outscore 21-9, in the last eight min

The rebounding laurels went Yellow Jackets, who brought 52 missed shots to FSU's 37.

Wrestlers Whallop Jacksonville

The newly formed Seminole wrestling team downed an improved Jacksonville Y squad, 23-14. The Tribe's points resulted from four pins and one deicision out of the nine matches. A crowd of about 250 was on hand in Tully Gum to witness the grapplers' debut as a full fledged team.

On Feb. 2 the Tribe will encounter the formidable Auburn tusslers. For the last ten years, Auburn has practically owned the SIWC.

IN 75--60 CONTEST

St. Leo Scuttles Frosh

By JOHNNY DAVIS
Flambeau Sports Writer

The St. Leo Junior College Lions, led by juco All-American Bill (Spider) Schmeider's 29 points, handed the FSU Baby Seminoles their second loss of the season Saturday night, 75-60, in Tully Gymnsaium.

Schmeider was named to both the AP and UPI Junior College All-America squads last season, mainly by virtue of his 25-plus game scoring average. He was dubbed "Spider" (it rhymes with Schmeider) by Tampa sports scribes because of his lithe, slender frame, and also becasue of his long, gangling arms. Schmeider, who stands 6-3 but only weighs 145 pounds, lead all scorers with his 29 markers, three above his current average.

Leading the losers in both rebounds and points was 6-7 Gary Schull. He brought down 12 missed shots to tie the Monarchs' Bob Ely for game honors and he also contributed 21 points.

Bill Phillips, a 6-7 pivot-man from Okeechobee, followed Schull with 10 rebounds and 15 markers. Guard Ken Leakey rounded out the Seminoles hitting in double figures, as he managed to push in 11 points.

The contest was relatively close until the final five minutes, when the Lions went on a final scoring spree, and out scored the FSU yearlings 18-6. The Monarchs owned a two-point 38-36 edge at intermission, and they led by as much as nine points during the first half. Before the Lions broke the game wide open, their longest lead of the final period had been only five points.

The victor's coach, Ed Sparling, naturally had praise for Schmeider, but he also lauded the work of Bob Ely and Mark Werner. "My All-American (Schmeider) was really the big difference tonight," stated the beaming Monarch Mentor. "surely you can't overlook the s ded jobs turned in by Werner Ely." Werner, a 6-1 guard co buted 14 points to the victory and played an outstanding game, while Ely, who measures pulled off 12 rebounds, and through with 12 markers.

Sparling said he thought this the best freshman team he had seen at Florida State. "They caught us on a good night. were real tough."

The Baby Seminoles will ca 6-2 mark into their upcoming with Florida's freshmen in Ga ville Wednesday night, and the arch's will return to St. Leo w 11-4 slate. The two teams are sc uled to meet again next month Leo.

FSU Tags On Sale

By SARAH RHOADES
Flambeau Staff Writer

Omicron Delta Kappa, national men's leadership honorary, has begun its annual sale of FSU car tags. The tags are made to fit any car and will cost $1. They may be obtained from any ODK member.

Donations and all proceeds obtained from the sale will be placed in the Bob Crenshaw Scholarship Fund.

Three scholarships, amounting to at least $50 each, are awarded annually to undergraduate men by ODK. The men are chosen for the scholarship on the basis of character, leadership, scholarship and need.

"Each year ODK launches a tag sale fund drive in order to give large scholarships to needy students. This tag sale is the sole means by which we finance the scholarship program, so I hope that all students will cooperate," said the ODK President Johnny Smith.

This trimester ODK is awarding citations and engraved plaques to the man in each of the three undergraduate classes with the highest academic average. An award will also be presented to the Outstanding Sophomore.

The organization places primary emphasis on the development of the whole man. For that reason, equal recognition is given for achievement in all the major areas of campus life.

In addition to being the first national college honorary to recognize outstanding leadership, character and service, Omicron Delta Kappa also strives to bring together the most representative men in all phases of campus life and to bring together faculty members and students on a basis of mutual interest, understanding and helpfulness.

Blackwell Appoints Forum Committee

Public Forum Committee to recommend policies [illegible] procedures for special lecturers and speakers on [illegible] was appointed by FSU President Gordon W. [illegible]kwell today.

The committee will be composed of Dr. Werner A. Baum, dean of the faculties, as chairman; Dr. R.R. Oglesby, dean of students, secretary; three faculty members, Dr. Richard M. Baker of Business; Dr. Adolph Karl of Art, and Dr. Stephen S. Winters of Geology; and three students, Jim Blue of St. Petersburg, a senior; Tom Haney of Panama City, a junior; and Julian Proctor of Tallahassee, a sophomore.

Until Baum's return from leave on March 1, Dr. E. Laurence Chalmers will serve in his place.

Purposes of the committee, the university president said, are:

"1. To assure a vital platform of public discussion at the University.

"2. To achieve balance in the scheduling of general lecturers and speakers, and to insure that over a period of time a wide spectrum of points of view will be heard. (Determination of who shall be invited to speak on academic topics to classes, seminars, meetings of students in a given department, etc., will be left to the professional judgment of the individual instructor or faculty of the department.)

"3. To develop adequate mechanisms to assure that the University's platform will not be exploited by persons who would advocate illegal or immoral activities.

"4. To recommend and administer policy and procedures regarding the University's position in these matters so as to achieve the foregoing objectives."

Dorman Fire

There was a small alarm at Dorman Hall Monday evening. Smoke was billowing from the house manager's apartment and concerned students were afraid that she had been asphyxiated. Mrs. Hertha Rehde, the house manager, always precise and careful had left her apartment for a few minutes. She locked the door and forgot that a pot of tea was cooking on the stove. The Tallahassee fire department came to the rescue, but instead of dramatically breaking down the door, they let a campus policeman give them the key. There was little fire but much smoke.

'Signals' Date Set

"Smoke Signals" proudly (and finally) announces that it is going to make another effort at publication.

Deadline for the receipt of student contributions in the "Smoke Signals" office in room 410 Longmire Bldg., is March 1. All students are invited to submit articles reasonably free of scatological excess yet rife with the elemental spice and seasonings on which a general interest magazine thrives.

Short stories of reasonable length, black-and-white art work, rough cartoons, poetry, essays and love letters are welcomed and solicited.

Incidentally, the mysterious dingy white boxes which Smoke Signals has deposited in the student center, student post office, Seminole Room, Soda Shop and Ticket Office at Westcott not only serve as handy receptacles for used razor blades, ashes from cigarettes, cancelled stamps, empty Hershey packets and ticket stubs; these boxes are also convenient for the student to deposit his literary master-work (or just a little joke--we need those too) which will reach the SS office eventually.

On all contributions, please include name and return address. If your adjustment to the trimester system has not been complete enough to teach you not to ask questions, we are available with many answers in 410 Longmire Bldg., phone 2367.

Dance Set

The Junior Class will sponsor a "Trimester Stomp" Saturday night following the FSU-Houston basketball game, class president Mike Woods said today.

Woods said the dance will be held in the Suwannee Room from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight, and will feature "The Untouchables."

All FSU students may attend, he added.

Admission will be $1 per couple.

Europe Threatened

Conflict within the European Common Market over Britian's application for membership has previewed the possiblity of deep and far reaching strife within Europe. Overshadowing the trouble within are Khruschev's conciliatory moves toward nuclear disarmament and inspection and a new soft line approach to Communist ideology which are destined to have significant effects on Europe's internal political structure.

Principal antagonist of the present confusion is French President Charles de Gaulle. His firm stand against Britian's entrance to the Common Market could ultimately mean that the organization will be unable to achieve its greatest potential. When moves toward political unification are begun Britian's presence in the union will be essential to offset France's apparent intention to control Europe.

Within France the anti-Gaullist movement has been gaining momentum. Although able to gain approval for his programs through referendums, De Gaulle has found much trouble with organized political elements. In the last general elections French Socialist Leader Mollet directed his sympathizers to vote for Communist candidates in the second round of balloting in an effort to defeat De Gaulle.

In Italy much the same situation has begun to develop with socialist leaders leaning toward a reconciliation with Communist factions.

Should De Gaulle die or be removed amidst the present confusion, France and other countries reached by her dominance might well find internal communism a grave threat.

Khrushchev, through ideological conciliation and a continued effort to maintain trade ties with Western Europe is not unaware of the ramifications of the existing situation. Continued strife stands only to enhance his position.

Formation of a strong and efficient economic community, which will in turn open the door for political unification of Western Europe, would deal international communism its most serious setback since inception. Europe and the United States, united politically and economically, would bring to a sudden halt Soviet Russia's design for world domination.

If De Gaulle maintains his stubborn attitude of protecting France's position by keeping Great Britian out and if Khrushchev's friendly gestures to Western socialists are received, the effort to unify Europe against Communism may turn into another Communist victory.

R.O.T.C. Is Investment In Future

"If I had it to do over again, would I take Army ROTC?" asks Lieutenant Irving P. Gungho. "You bet I would, and I'll tell you why. Take me. As a student, most of my life was drab conformity and routine. Nothing to do but go to classes. Eat meals. Study. Sleep. Take tests. No challenge -- no meaning. I often wonder if I could have survived without Army ROTC.

From my very first indoctrination lecture I knew that here, in the midst of barren pursuits, was a challenge with true meaning. Long and diligent hours I spent polishing my Shoes. Loving care went into every stroke as I shined my Brass.

How I patiently awaited that Great Hour each week, when I could don that Symbol of manhood and loyalty, walk out to the Drill Field with my head erect and join my comrades in singing that heart-stirring song, "left, right, left, right, left..." 'Here is my life,' I thought as an officer praised me for my sharp appearance.

So I took the advanced course. Now I could wear a bright shoulder-cord. A bigger, shinier piece of brass adorned my cap. People saluted me. I was becoming important. With higher rank came greater responsibility. Now instead of just keeping my own uniform clean and shiny, I was responsible for seeing that other men kept their uniforms clean and shiny. I tried to make myself worthy of this Great Trust, and when I graduated, I received more shiny medals, and smiles from my commanding officers.

Now I am an officer in the Regular Army. Was it worth all of that sacrifice in my college years? You bet it was, men, and I'll tell you why. As an officer I enjoy privileges whose value cannot be measured by mere words. I can go to the Officers' Club -- I can wear more and shinier medals -- and of course, my pay is higher.

And with all of these glorious things comes the character building experience of responsibility. I know my duty. I must impart this peace which passeth all understanding to the men in my command. I must train them to be more than just lost souls wallowing in doubt and searching for meaning -- I must train them to love the Army and its glorious cause. They must learn to hate the sinful barbarians, to kill them and destroy the homes of their families; to die in the service of the True Way.

So think it over, men. ROTC is an investment in the future of America, and in the men and machines which make it great...it great...it great... it..."

Picasso Cubism A 'Farc

Many students are either now taking or have taken Humaniti in which the cubisms of Pablo Picasso are studied. Some stude they like the cubisms, and others say they think such paintings a thing but art. It would be interesting to read what Picasso has sa his own cubisms. He told the esteemed Italian author, Giovanni the following:

"From the first moment that art ceases to be the food that fe best minds, the artist can use his talents to perform all the tr the intellectual charlatan. The 'refined,' the 'rich,' the profes 'do-nothings,' the 'distillers of quintescence,' desire only the pe the sensational, the eccentric, the scandalous in today's art.

"And I, myself, since the advent of cubism, have fed these fellow they wanted and satisfied these critics with all the ridiculous ide have passed through my head. The less they understood them the they admired me! Through amusing myself with all these farces, I celebrated, and very rapidly...

"Today, as you know, I am celebrated. I am rich. But when I am I do not have the effrontery to consider myself an artist at all, not grand old meaning of the word. Giotto, Titian, Rembrandt, G great painters; I am only a public clown, a mountebank.

"I have understood my time and have exploited the imbecility, the greed of my contemporaries. It is a bitter confession...more than it may seem, but it, at least, and at last, does have the m being honest."

Cubisms have never agreed with me. I agree with Picasso; I are a "farce." I don't see why I can't say what I feel -- eve versity campus -- since, it appears to me, Picasso doesn't see sider himself a real artist when he refers to his cubisms.

Art should express the inspired and aspired thought of the ar kind of art is expressed from "ridiculous ideas?" From w said, it seems to me that the only "art" to come from such that designed for the ignorarnt critics and not the real lovers of the grand old meaning of the word."

Whatever is taught in class, the student should remember this When he looks at and studies a Picasso cubism, he should r kind of ideas the painting came from. If for some reason he do the "art," he shouldn't feel stupid or lacking in his appreciation of be

Gigot. Gleason Simply Absurd

By TIM CARR
Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

I am not an unsentimental sort. I loved "Bambi," and still make an annual pilgrimage to weep through "Gone With The Wind."

But "Gigot" is simply absurd. Jackie Gleason, in his role as a kindly, super-lovable, unkempt mute who devotes his life to the care of a consumptive streetwalker and her child, sheds enough tears to float the Spanish Armada.

And to make matters even worse, throughout this woeful deluge we kept seeing disconcertingly familiar scenes. For example: Gleason, pursued by a Parisian lynch mob, falls into the Seine. He is assumed drowned, but later turns up, quite alive, at his own funeral. We knew we had been a passenger on this train before.

During the sloshing climax, when Gleason's ductile outpourings could have dwarfed Old Faithful Geyser, we could barely resist the urge to leap to our feet and scream, "For God's sake, somebody call a plumber!"

If you see "Gigot," better take your umbrella.

Research 'New Yorker' On Brubeck

To The Editor:

For those of us who are awaiting the Dave Brubeck concert on the thirtieth of this month, I would like to suggest something of interest. The June 3, 1961 issue of "The New Yorker" magazine, page 41, has an interesting and informative article about the quartet.

This issue can be found in the library. It tells about each of the members: their backgrounds, capabilities and techniques on stage.

To read this article before hearing the quartet would add to your understanding and enjoyment of their performance.

Stubbs Talks On 'Living'

Last week Dr. Bartlett of the History Dept. kept a large audience captivated by the "Wild Myths" of the West at the American Studies lecture.

Dr. David Stubbs, a former graduate student at FSU who spent a number of years in Japan will be the speaker in the FSU American Studies Lecture Series tonight, according to Dr. William Randel, program director.

Third in the series on "American Myths," the address, entitled "Experiment in Living," will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Strozier Library Lecture Hall. The lecture series is open to the public.

Bartlett spoke mainly from his recent book, "Great Surveys of the American West." In this book are stories of his boyhood in Colorado, and tales told by the old miners and the many foreigners who moved west in a search of land, prosperity and freedom.

Probably the most fascinating part of the lecture was Bartlett's explanations of all the myths. He described, in detail, the picturesque mountains and forests and all the other wonders that the West holds for man.

"The Myth of the West," said Bartlett, "is the single greatest myth in history;' it shaped the American character and inspired a unity within the nation.

WASHINGTON -- The White House says President Kennedy hopes acceptancy by New York shipping firms of a mediation board's proposal for settling the Maine-to-Texas dock strike will lead to the soonest possible start of shipping. The President was described as gratified by the action of the New York Shipping firms. The settlement plan was endorsed Sunday by the striking International Longshoremen's Association. The Union's endorsement is subject to ratification by the membership.

The vote of the New York shipping firms was not unanimous. This has underlined concern in Washington that shipping firms in Southern Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports might refuse to go along with the Northern ports on the settlement recommended by a Presidential Board.

WASHINGTON -- Two high American Red Cross officials have flown from Miami to Havana at the invitation of the Cuban Red Cross. This has sparked speculation that their mission might deal with the 17 or more Americans still held in Cuban prisons. Talk of freedom for the imprisoned Americans arose after New York Attorney James Donovan successfully negotiated the freedom of the invasion prisoners.

But a Red Cross spokesman said in Washington that he has no information that possible release of the imprisoned Americans will be discussed.

OXFORD -- The Justice Department has accused officials in Sunflower County, Mississippi, of illegal discrimination against Negroes who were seeking to register as voters. The Justice Department made the charge in a suit filed in US District Court in Oxford, Mississippi. Sunflower is the home county of Democratic Senator James Eastland of Mississippi. He said there's no foundation for the charges.

WASHINGTON -- Washington police have removed protesting students from Iran who had camped in the lobby of the Iranian Chancellery since Monday. An embassy spokesman said police were called in after the students began shouting and created disorder. The Iranian students -- about 20 of them -- had come to Washington from various parts of the United States to protest a forthcoming referendum in their homeland.

Long, Shirley Hea Seminole Statistic

The Florida State basketball team will go against ditional rival, the University of Florida, tomorrow in Gainesville.

The two teams have already met once this year, a Gators came away with a stunning 80-59 victory. In games, however, both teams have put in surprise formances.

Florida, for instance, robbed Alabama of a victory in Gainesville recently, and the Crimson Tide cagers have been defeated twice by the Seminoles. Florida was twice defeated by the Miami Hurricanes, a team which the Tribesmen stifled in Tully Gym in a 77-74 overtime match.

Florida State will be seeking its fourth triumph over the Gators, whom it defeated both home and away last year.

The bulwark of the Seminoles will be a senior and a sophomore.

Senior Charlie Long is the high scorer for the Tribe with 235 points, and a 13.8 average in the 17 games. Thirty-five points behind Long is sophomore Jerry Shirley, who has a 11.8 average.

These two cagers also dominate most divisions of the individual single-game highs.

Long and Shirley are tied for total points scored in a single game: Long hit 24 points against Tennessee, while Shirley duplicated the feat against Chattanooga. Against the Vols, Long hit 10-of-16 field goals for a game-high.

Shirley tied junior Pete Rogers for the most free throws scored in a single game. This occurred when the sophomore bucketed 8-of-11 charity tosses against Chattanooga. had scored on 8-of-9 attem Tennessee game.

In the accumulative statist leads the Tribe in field tempted and made, having 199. However, the perce belongs to pivotman Dal (57.1); Pete Gonzalez is se 51.6 percent, while Shirley with 50.0 percent.

Long also holds top h free throw line, having att high of 69 tosses and bucke of 45 for a 65.4 percent, Shirley's 38-of-50 tries ga high for the starters with 7 title of free throws attemp single game, however, bel Rogers, who shot 12 time Miami.

The rebounding king is ley, who has pulled do shots. Cal Huge is rebounds, while Long is 70. But Dale Reeves ow game laurels, after his 14 s against Miami.

Senior Long proved that human by grabbing the of most personal fouls (50). and Huge are tied for seco 45 each.

3rd Intramural Season Starts

Games in both bowling and horseshoes began the first sports season of 1963, the third in the school year of 1962-63. DeGraff won two of the bowling games in the first day of competition; the other teams have not reported in their scores. The horseshoes competition, which also began yesterday afternoon, will be played at Tully Gym.

The new sports managers for this sports season are Diane Hall, horseshoes; Kay Fry, basketball; and Nancy Kropp, bowling.

Deck tennis singles was won by Linda Ingalls; doubles was won by Sandy Lee and Shirley Hardison. Table tennis single was won by Lee Brown; doubles was won by Gretchen Uzzell and Mary Ann Thurmond. Shuffleboard singles was won by Barbara Rambo and the doubles rivalry was copped by Peggy Hartly and Kay Fry.

The fourth and final sports season will include swimming and tennis, plus softball as the team sports. The new sports season for the final term will not begin until the last of March.

All those interested in participating in the sportsday which the Women's Recreation Association will sponsor the first of March, are urged to look for posters and announcments concerning the entrants so they may sign these sheets.

Tribe Has 9-8 Mark

Coach Bud Kennedy of FSU now has a 9-8 basketball record.

The Seminoles gained the wins by defeating Tampa (92-60), Valdosta State (65-42), Alabama twice (72-63 and 49-48), Georgia twice (77-69 and 88-54), Georgia Southern (79-60), Chattanooga (72-55), and Miami in overtime (77-74).

The Tribe was tripped by Florida (80-59), Auburn twice (65-47 and 77-70), Richmond (62-56), Kentucky (83-54), Tennessee (66-65), Georgia (90-76), and Georgia Tech (70-55).

Against Southeastern Conference foes, the independent Seminoles have won four and lost seven. Five of the wins and three losses came in Tully Gymnasium, while the Indians have a 4-5 road record.

Senate Lengthens Term Of President

A bill providing for a change in the term of office for the president of the student body was passed after heated discussion by Student Senate yesterday afternoon.

The major change affected by the bill was the added stipulation that the candidate for election for president of the student body re required to sign a pledge promising to attend school during the three trimesters following his election; that is, the 3rd, 1st, and 2nd trimesters. A further provision stated: "Failure to sign the pledge shall be grounds for immediate disqualification."

Senator Jim White pointed out that since the bill involved a constitutional change, it would have to be ratified by the student body in a constitutional referendum. This referendum would normally be held during the major student body election. As Senator Dennis Lanahan stated, if this referendum is conducted at the same time as the major student body election, it would be an "ex post facto" provision.

After a ruling by Attorney General Lyman Fletcher, Senate amended the bill by adding an enactment clause stating: "This bill shall become effective the first day of school of September, 1963." By passing this measure, the bill would not pertain to this year's election for student body president.

A senate bill pertaining to the election code was returned to Senate from President van Assenderp for clarification. It was referred to the Elections and Appointments Committee for further revision.

Senator Arnie Gibbs, Chairman of the Senate Labor, Student Services and Education Committee, announced the committee's recommendations for passage of Senate Bills 15 and 16, with the following amendment: "The Student Body President shall appoint four associate court members with the advice of the elected Chairman and any University he might deem necessary. Freshmen are not eligible for appointment to this office." The bill passed by a large majority, after extended debate.

Student Senate Bill 19, concerning the appointment of an Undersecretary to serve as Chairman of the FSU Student Government Retreat Bureau was introduced by Sen. Gibbs. The bill was referred to the Labor, Student Services and Education Committee for further deliberations.

Senator Joyce Killian, Chairman of the Organizations and Finance Committee, announced the unanimous decision of the committee to reject the recognition of the Young Peoples Socialist League on the basis of their constitution. This recommendation was accepted by Senate.

Senate President Johnny Smith appointed Senators Joyce Killian and Louis Barnett to meet jointly with Thomas Riggins, chairman of the Young People's Socialist League, to discuss any new material he might want to offer concerning his organization.

Ross McVoy, Chief Justice of the Honor Court, administered the oath of office to newly appointed senator Van Miller.

Senator Killian announced that the Women's Senate "bill" concerning the wearing of bermuda shorts was defeated in a straw vote by eight to seven. Since the legislation was more properly a suggestion, it will be returned to the Social Standards Committee to be decided upon officially.

Among other legislation, the Organizations Committee presented a bill revising the constitution for Freshman Flunkies. Senator Sandra Brooks, one of the authors of the bill, explained that the major changes were the establishment of individual dorm groups, as opposed to the present organization which includes all freshmen women in one group. The bill was passed unanimously by Women's Senate.

The freshman women from Gilchrist were official guests of Senate.

FSU Theatre Dance Gives Studio Performance

By PAT FREEMAN

e Bull in a China Shop" suite be the closest many students come to standards of modern technique, but such was not ase at the open studio for ad- modern dance techniques by the Theatre Dance group, the direction of Miss Holly man, instructor of physical ed- on and recreation.

hnique in modern dance is as rtant to the 25 members of the tre Dance group as erasers g finals. Technique is the s through which the dancer dev- the muscular strength, flexi- and balance required of all aspirants wishing to perform oncert Dance.

Clarity, control, and sensitivity in this performing art are the result of many long hours of careful and intense concentration on practice in the technique studio. A dancer of the Theatre Dance group strives constantly for "performing freedom" through the discipline of the modern dance technique.

Members of Theatre Dance gave demonstrations of technique before a capacity crowd of over 325 persons Tuesday night in the Dance Studio of the Women's Gymnasium.

Tryouts for Theatre Dance are held annually in the fall, with additional members being selected from service classes during the year.

Miss Robin Leeger is now serving as president of Theatre Dance. Majoring in English and Dance, Robin is a senior at FSU, having studied at the Connecticut College of Dance and the Martha Graham School of Dance in New York City before coming to FSU.

How much time do members spend in practice? Most of the girls spend an average of eight hours a week in the studio. Miss Chapman explained that "you have to avidly interested in dance, as modern dance demands and takes a great deal of concentration on the part of the performer."

Miss Chapman also added that freshmen and sophomores who are interested in learning technique should practice and try out for Theatre Dance, "espcially if you happen to be a young man."

At last report, there were only two male members of the group. Since a year and a half is required before the student is ready to perform publicly, it might be wise if the fellows began practice right away.

Rehearsals of the members begin next week for the Annual Spring Concert which will be held in Westcott Auditorium on March 12 and 13.

A "Works in Progress" program will be held in the latter part of February to give the public a preview of the numbers coming up at the Spring Concert. At this demonstration, which will be informal and open to the public, the dancers will perform the dances tentatively scheduled for the Concert. If the techniques are smooth enough, the piece will probably be one of the works slated for the Spring performance.

After the Annual Concert, which is the big event of the year, the Theatre Dance group may become a Theatre Dance troupe by taking a road show to Pensacola Junior College.

A highly entertaining and successful show was predicted by Miss Chapman, who offered the students of FSU a preview peek of the tentative program. She explained that a wider variety of choreographical sources were being used for this year's show, providing a larger choice of interests to be represented.

The preview schedule of dances includes one based on Latin American rhythm, one for the longhair set based on a balletic movement, one developed from a poem by Dylan Thomas and there's even one for the liberalists: a satire on the Swan Lake Ballet.

Easter Exams ?

At least a full year will be required to work out all bugs in the new trimester system. Many were smoothed out during first trimester, with the help of observant students. One particular alteration was made concerning the Thanksgiving holidays when it was discovered that classes were scheduled for the Friday following Thanksgiving. Students would have been prevented from celebrating the holiday at home.

A compromise was reached on this issue. The Friday following Thanksgiving was declared a holiday, allowing students the long weekend at home. Time lost from classes was made up in this instance by requiring the missed classes to meet on Saturday several weeks later.

A look at the final examination schedule for second trimester reveals we are faced with a similar situation but in different context.

Final exams begin Saturday, April 13 and continue the following week. Easter Sunday is wedged between the first two days of exams, falling on April 14. Not only will students be prevented from returning home for Easter but Saturday examinations will probably prevent them from attending church services throughout the day on Good Friday, April 12.

It would definitely be asking too much to grant students an extended holiday around Easter. However, as was done for Thanksgiving, if Saturday examinations were pushed up to Monday and extended a day at the end of the week many complications would be eliminated.

A trip home during this period would still be impractical, but at least time would be available for those students desiring to attend church services on Good Friday and again Easter Sunday morning without sacrificing too much valuable study time.

OW

Slow Down, Buses

We have noticed recently that bus drivers, in their efforts to keep on a time schedule, have been barreling around campus with abandon. In particular, as buses pass Dodd Hall they pick up speed like a roller coaster and whip past pedestrians at a rate exceeding the speed limit. Unwary students crossing the streets come dangerously near being mowed down by one of the plummeting vehicles.

The danger is not only with the buses. Pedestrians should watch before they walk. But bus drivers would insure a safer campus if they would watch speed limits closer and drive with more caution. No one has the right of way to aid an accident.

Explains Support Of K.

There seems to be an impression in the minds of some conservatives that when a liberal or radical expresses a favorable opinion of Mr. Khrushchev what is really implied is a blanket support of both the Soviet Union and of its leaders. This is a serious misconception that can hurt the conservative movement as much as it can the liberal or radical movements.

It must b e clearly pointed out that the present support some left-wing groups give Khrushchev is neither all inclusive, unreserved or indicative of support of other Communist leaders such as Mao Tse Tung or Castro.

What then does "support" of Khrushchev amount to. It means simply that after having to deal with a unified Communist World ruled by the political machinations of lin and Stalinist groups, whose aim was to destroy the Capit world by whatever means available, and to substitute a w wide Communist dictatorship wi because of its totalitarian meth would mean an end to democrac human rights, it is a great joy t liberal mind to see a Soviet le who seems serious about wantin existence and disarmament.

It does not mean that past C munist atrocities have been for ten, nor does it imply that the U has risen in the liberal estima as a great source for world brot hood. We are well aware of the toric role of the Soviet Union an have no intention to fall into kind of moral laxity which a us to whitewash the barbrous d that the leaders of the Russian ernment have in the past been ponsible for.

Our feelings for Khrushchev based on a most sobering and r istic appraisal of the current in national situation. All sane me gree that a nuclear war would the end of our way of life on ea Khrushchev realizes this and we. Necessity and not love of fellow man has forced co-exist upon us. Necessity will like force upon us the need for a mament. These are the ideals peaceful men everywhere and to the realization of these idea we should try to direct most ous actions. This is the co commitment of all mankind a the leader of the Soviet govern will go so far as to risk the union of the once solidified munist world over his propos peace and tolerance then the li mind is not going to close its and try to ignore the fact that our worst foes can at times with us for the common weal.

Let's Show Southern Hospitality

To The Editor:

I have had a chance to meet our friends from Brazil who are studying English at the University. They have expressed a desire to meet more of us more frequently. Right now, they find it hard to get to know us for four reasons.

First, they live by themselves uptown in the Hotel Cherokee. It would be a much better arrangement if they could live with us in our dormitories and off-campus houses. This living arrangement isolates them from us.

Second, they study English all by themselves and have not been integrated in the regularly held classes. This again isolated them from us.

Third, they have come to a strange country and are not familiar with our customs. For that reason, they are holding back, expecting us to approach them.

Fourth, most of us find it difficult to sit with them in the cafeteria because we usually do not do this. I think that some of us would like to sit with them in the cafeteria but do not have the courage to take this step.

It is true that some of us have gotten to know them but my friends from Brazil tell me that they would like to meet more of us. For that reason I have invited some of them to my apartment. They are eagerly looking forward to the opportunity to practice their English and to get to know more of us. If more students could invite our Brazilian friends into their apartments and dormitories, they would appreciate this very much. The easiest way to do this would be to call the Hotel Cherokee and to leave a message with the operator stating your name, when you wanted to invite them many etc. I also think that we s make a special effort to get to k them in the cafeteria and on cam They are our guests and it is obligation to take the first step to make them feel at home.

Let's show them our Southern pitality.

Barabbas Achieves Depth

By TIM CARR
Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

This is far more worthwhile than the average run of DeMille bu spectacle. The film's merit lies, however, not in Dino de Laurent rather dwarfish, imitation-"Ben Hur" scenes, but in a good, screen play supported by some outstanding acting by Anthony Q Ernest Borgnine, Jack Palance, and Silvana Magnani.

This is the first bible-era movie I've seen that has achieved real logical depth. Quinn, as the Quasimodo-like Barabbas, cannot unders why he, a common murderer, has been spared instead of Christ, an entire movie (more than three hours) is devoted to a thorough, schol study of this enigma. The script writer must have rent his flesh righteous wrath upon seeing what finally became of his labors. "Barab could have been a a truely first-class work of art had it not been clo in the same cinematic vestures that wrapped (yea, even stifled) "Kin Kings," "Ben Hur," "Demetrius and the Gladiators," and all the spectaculars.

De Laurentiis has managed to screen several quite gruesome sce and these could have added immeasureably to another, less reward movie, but they only detract from "Barabbas." Our hero is sentenced a life of slavery in a sulphur mine (shades of Lew Wallace), and twenty years of wading around in bubbling brimstone, Barabbas esca in the midst of a holocaustal cave-in. Photographically, this is the spot of the film, but it doesn't compare in excitement to the chariot in "Ben Hur." Later (much, much later) there is a gladiatorial bo which is calculated to nauseate even those with moderately strong st achs.

If you've seen "Ben Hur," you've seen everything "Barabbas" ha offer from an action standpoint. As I've said, the real value of this lies in its highly enlightened screen play.

Campus Sing Change

A change in starting time of the 1963 Campus Sing was announced today by Joyce Faggioni.

Miss Faggioni said that this year's musical contest will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 2, instead of at 9 a.m.

She explained that this change of time will allow those taking the Graduate Record Examination Saturday morning to participate in the sing. Twenty-three entrants have registered with the Campus Sing committee.

The Campus Sing program, to be held in Westcott Auditorium, will be sponsored jointly by Sigma Alpha Iota and Phi Mu Alpha.

Campus Drive Under Way

By MARSHA LYNN

"Push Campus Chest--Pull Campus Chest" signs on each side of doors in practically all the buildings on campus designate the beginning of this year's Campus Chest drive as of January 23. $1,600.00 is the magic number this year to be reached by January 29.

To prevent the students from being bothered by many individual drives, the Campus Chest sponsors a campaign once a year for student contributions to charitable organizations.

Libby Gentile, chairman of the Campus Chest committee, has announced the goals for the various living quarters as follows: all sororities and fraternities, $20.00; Broward, $33.75; Cawthon, $66.25; DeGraff, $37.00; Dorman, $68.50; Florida, $61-50; Gilchrist, $68.50; Jennie Murphree, $73.00; Landis, $91.25; Magnolia, $40.75; Reynolds, $61.50; Smith, $100.00; Kellum, $100.00.

These goals are based on a $.25 contribution from each member of the above groups. Large mayonnaise jars are scattered over campus in business establishments and class buildings for individual contributions.

Teofilo Abril, a young Colombian boy, recently adopted by the Campus Chest in behalf of Florida State, will be the major subject for contributions this year. Each month a portion of the money obtained from this drive will be sent to this youth to aid in his education, food and clothing. At the present time Teofilo is interested in becoming an engineer.

The World University Service, which provides aid in the field of education for foreign students in war-torn countries, and the American Foundation for the Overseas Blind will be the other areas where the Campus Chest funds will be distributed. Additional information concerning these areas for contributions can be obtained by listening to the radio and to a loudspeaker car which will travel around the campus every afternoon.

"Operation Abolition," produced by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, documents the 1960 San Francisco riots in opposition to the committee, which were said to be Communist-inspired.

Considerable controversy has surrounded the film, with critics maintaining that the film creates false impressions, and that the editing of the film has contributed to this.

Recently, however, the Senate Military Preparedness Sub-committee has recommended that the film be made available for showing to U.S. troops as part of their educational training program.

The presentation, sponsored by Young Americans for Freedom, is free and open to the public.

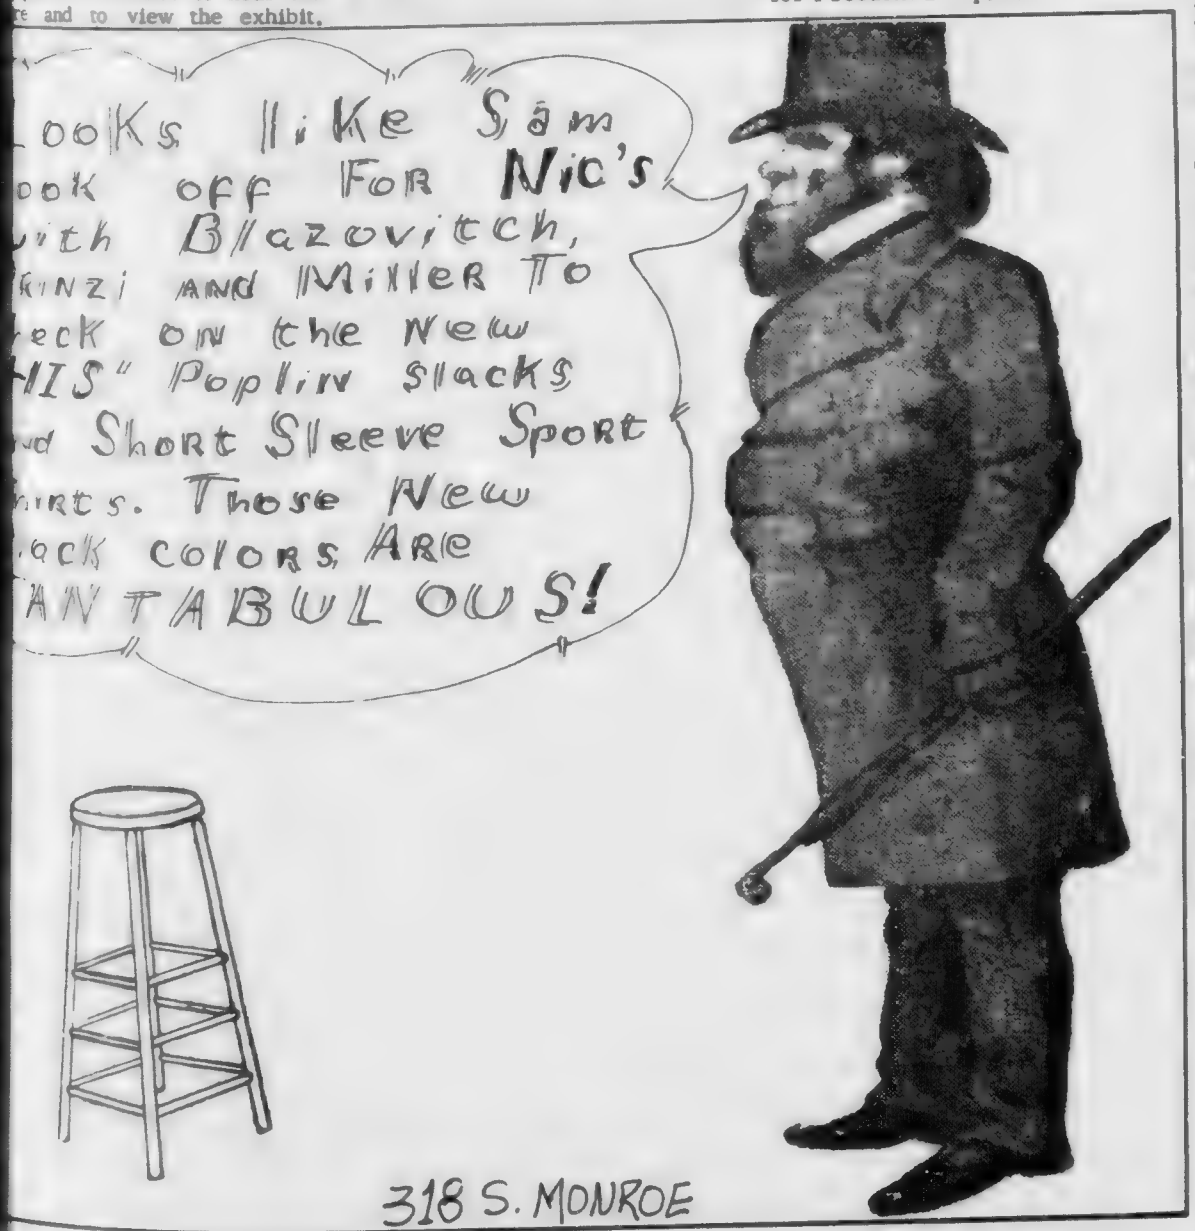
Today's News Roundup

FLAMBEAU NEWS SERVICES

NEW YORK--An end to the East and Gulf Coast dock strike appears to get nearer and nearer. Representatives of striking longshoremen from Lake Charles, La., to Brownsville, Texas, have agreed to accept the recommendations of Presidential committee. New Orleans shippers have fallen in line with those recommendations. East Coast longshoremen have started to vote, unanimously, thus far, in favor of the proposals, which would give them a package increase of 37¢ an hour.

NEW YORK--The New York "Times" News Service says Soviet forces in Cuba are reported working around the clock building and improving ground and air defenses. The report said large shipments of weapons and other materials are continuing to arrive in Cuba.

The Coast Guard in Miami said yesterday that a fleet of five Russian fishing trawlers was sighted off Palm Beach--apparently headed toward Cuba. It's reported that Russia is constructing a fishing port in Cuba.



PARIS--West German Chancellor Adenauer and French President de Gaulle wound up three days of talks in Paris yesterday, with an agreement to submit the question of Britain's entry into the European Common Market to a study commission in Brussels. Adenauer sidestepped the question of whether he'd asked de Gaulle to take a more conciliatory attitude on the matter of British entry. He said, "We must be calm and patient. The more wind we make, the higher the flames will jump."

Adenauer praised the new French-German pact, signed in Paris, as a prerequisite for further progress toward a United Europe. Adenauer said he is convinced that he and de Gaulle accomplished great and good work for their two countries.

French sources said the Common Market Commission in Brussels--headed by a West German professor--will be asked to examine the issue of British entry and report back to the six Common Market foreign ministers on the chances of success.

KARACHI--The Foreign minister of Pakistan, Mohammed Ali, died yesterday at the age of 53, after a brief illness. The foreign minister was a good friend of the United States and represented his country in Washington in the late 1950's. That friendship was severly tested after the outbreak of the border war between India and China when Pakistan strongly protested the shipment of U.S. arms to India.

LONDON--Britain yesterday became the first West European nation to establish diplomatic relations with Communist Mongolia, which lies between Russia and Red China. Diplomats in London say the United States is planning similar action.

SEC Voting Nears

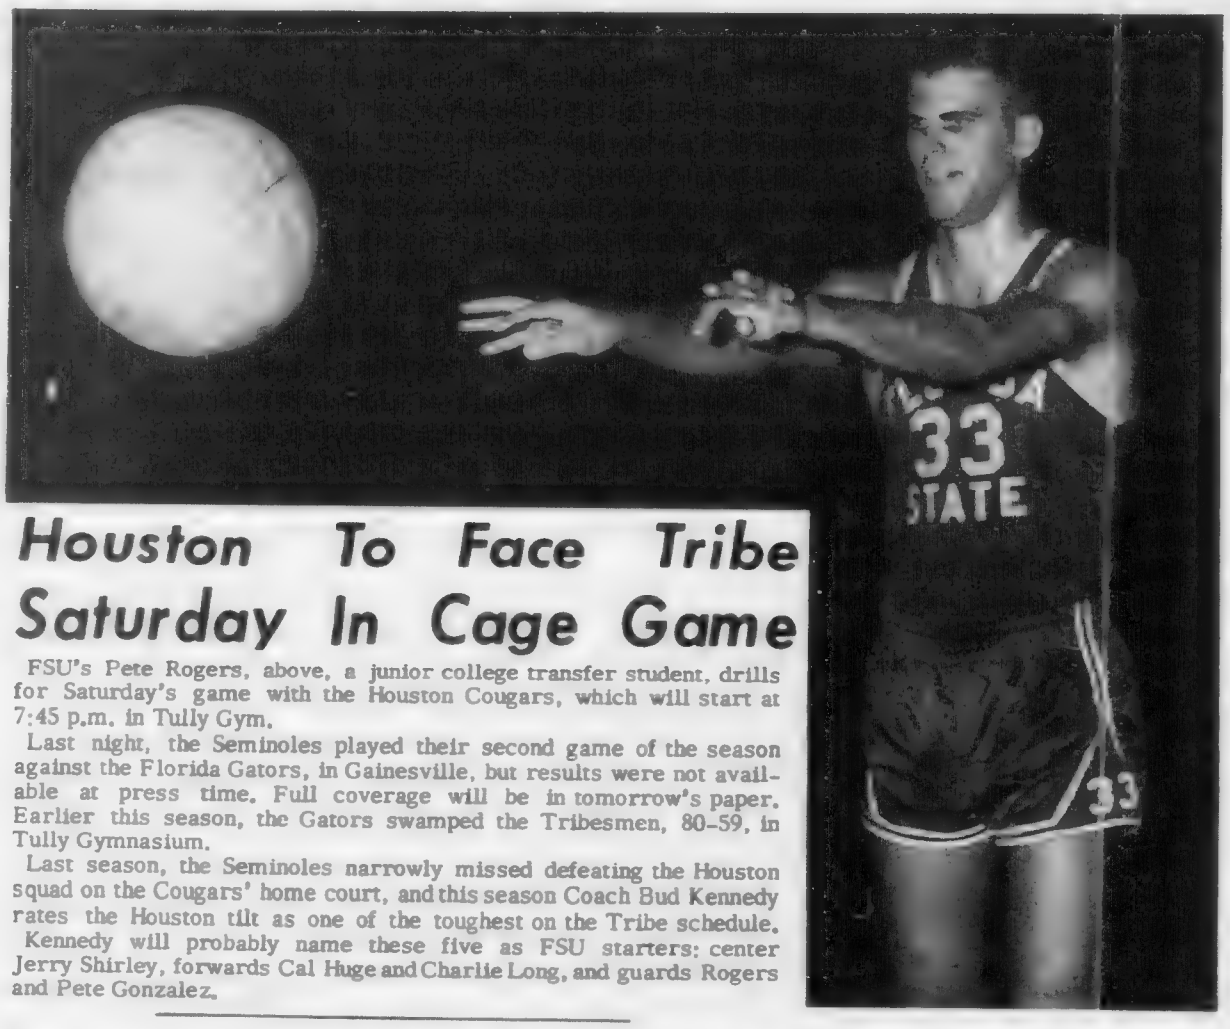
The executive committee of the Southeastern Conference will vote today or early tomorrow on Florida State's request to enter the SEC.

The voting is anybody's guess, but FSU does not have a sure chance at getting in the athletic association. The reason: The 12-member schools don't think the conference should have another college in the SEC, because the conference is too big as it is. Numerous attempts to enlarge the conference since Sewanee's 1940 withdrawal have been voted down, and on two occasions the Seminoles have been refused admittance.

However, this is definitely Florida State's best year for entering the conference, because athletically, the Seminoles have more to offer the SEC than in the past.

The football team held its own against top SEC competition: beating Georgia; tieing Georgia Tech, Auburn, and Kentucky, and losing to Florida, the Gator Bowl champs.

The baseball team finished fourth in the nation, beating the SEC's Florida in the District III playoffs.



The basketball team has not been fazed by SEC competition in the past years.

The other sports -- swimming, tennis, and golf -- would be walk-aways for conference laurels if FSU were in the SEC.

In addition, to the state of being of the sports themselves, Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha said Florida State University is worthy of entry to the SEC, for both academic and athletic reasons.

Houston To Face Tribe Saturday In Cage Game

FSU's Pete Rogers, above, a junior college transfer student, drills for Saturday's game with the Houston Cougars, which will start at 7:45 p.m. in Tully Gym.

Last night, the Seminoles played their second game of the season against the Florida Gators, in Gainesville, but results were not available at press time. Full coverage will be in tomorrow's paper. Earlier this season, the Gators swamped the Tribesmen, 80-59, in Tully Gymnasium.

Last season, the Seminoles narrowly missed defeating the Houston squad on the Cougars' home court, and this season Coach Bud Kennedy rates the Houston tilt as one of the toughest on the Tribe schedule.

Kennedy will probably name these five as FSU starters: center Jerry Shirley, forwards Cal Huge and Charlie Long, and guards Rogers and Pete Gonzalez.

Duffers Might Hav Off-Season--Odene

Florida State's golf team will play 19 dates in 19 announced Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha. F match is scheduled for Feb. 15 in Tallahassee aga Jacksonville Navy.

Coach Bill Odeneal fears a relative "off-season" for the Seminoles, who have established a 56-22-3 record during his five years as golf coach. Only two lettermen return, although one of them is Tallahassee's Dave Philo--top man last Spring with a 74.3 average.

Odeneal expects better things for the future, however, boasting of "the greatest crop of freshmen we have ever had."

FSU's 1963 golf schedule:

February: 15-Jacksonville Navy in Tallahassee; 18-at Florida.

March: 1-Florida in Tallahassee; 18-Ga. Tech, Georgia, Springfield College in Tallahassee; 19-Springfield College in Tallahassee; 20-23-Florida Intercollegiate tourn Ocala; 25-Purdue and Michigan in Tallahassee; 26-Purdue, M gan State, Auburn in Tallaha 27-Purdue Michigan State in T hassee.

Pan-Am Picks FSU's Fauls As Trainer

One of the highest of honors has come to dapper little Don Fauls, trainer for all athletic teams at Florida State University.

Fauls, 41, has been notified of his selection to the medical staff for the Fourth Pan-American Games, to be held April 20-May 5 in Sao Paulo, Brazil. His job, of course, will be to look after some of the United States' finest athletes.

"This is what all of us dream about," said Fauls, in his eighth year as Florida State's trainer. "This has to be the biggest personal thrill I've ever had in sports."

Fauls, a native of Ithaca, N.Y., came to FSU in 1954 after several years as a trainer in the St. Louis Cardinals' baseball chain. He graduated from Ithaca College in 1948 with a degree in physiotherapy.

During his tenure at FSU, Fauls has become recognized as one of the top trainers in the country. He gained nationwide publicity recently as a leading exponent of "isometric contraction"---a newly-developed method of muscle development.

SEMINOLE SHORTS

High Standards Might Help Bid

One of the reasons the Seminoles think they have a good chance of getting into the Southeastern Conference is the high standard of this university, both athletically and academically. Since there is some dissention between low- and high-standard schools in the conference, FSU hopes the 12 committeemen might vote FSU in to help raise standards. But a rule to unify the entrance rules of the SEC schools would stop some members from admitting the below par student-athletes. . . Thus kill FSU's arguments.

* * * * *

Bill McGrotha, sports editor of the Tallahassee Democrat, maintains that the conference wouldn't admit FSU if it were Notre Dame. "It's just too big," he told the Flambeau.

When asked who would vote against FSU, he said, "Everyone. . . it's nothing personal. It's just that it's too big."

* * * * *

The Seminole cagers have no one sinking 20 per cent of his shots this season -- unlike last year when forward Dave Fedor finished with a 20.4 average. High man so far is forward Charlie Long with 13.8 per cent. Last season, Fedor had 470 total points for team-high, and Long is halfway there with 235 markers.

* * * * *

Football edged out baseball, the national sport, when the Associated Press chose the "Team of the Year" recently. The Green Bay Packers, the winners of the National Football League crown, towered over the New York Yankees of baseball's American League.

The 191 sports writers selected the Packers by a 2-to-1 vote.

CZECH LEADER'S LIFE IS DISCUSSED

Play Portrays Czech Leader

In March, 1948, as the Communists were completing the take over of Czechoslovakia, Victor S. Mamatey was in Paris broadcasting the western point of view in the Czech language to listeners in the eastern European country.

This week Dr. Mamatey, FSU professor of history, was drafted for a part in a new play about one night in this Cold War period. The play, which will be premiered at FSU on Feb. 6, is "The Long Night" by Maurice Valency. The action the last night in the life of Jan Masaryk, Czech foreign minister who fought the destruction of democracy in his country.

Mamatey, who is 45, is the son of a Czech immigrant to America. Although born in Pittsburgh, Pa., he went to high school in Czechoslovakia and then to Comenius University. He finally left the country as it fell into Nazi hands after the pact of Munich in 1938.

Following wartime service in this country, including two years with the Office of War Information, he worked on his doctorate at the University of Paris, and also served from 1946 to 1948 as a news commentator for Radiodiffusion Francaise (French Broadcasting System.) His broadcasts were beamed to Czechoslovakia.

Mamatey met and interviewed Masaryk once in New York and again in Paris in 1946. He also has written about the country and about Russian diplomacy in this part of the world. One of his books, "The United States and East Central Europe, 1914-1918 " won the George Louis Beer Prize of the American Historical Association in 1957; another, "Soviet Imperialism," will appear in paperback next August as an Anvil Book.

When Valency arrived a few days ago from New York to help the production of "The Long Night" together, Director Richard Fallon got the playwrite and historian together. Then remembering the part of Ivanov, a Russian ambassador who appears briefly in the first act, had not been filled, Fallon asked Mamatey:

"What about your taking the part?"

Mamatey was hesitant. "I've never acted one single part in all my life," he said, "not even in a Sunday school play. I'm not stagestruck at all--in fact acting has not appealed to to me. But I accepted because of the nature of the play and because I wanted to help out."

After rehearsing a couple of times with the student and professional acting troupe in Conradi Theatre (Paul McGrath, veteran Broadway actor, plays the leading part) Mamatey still is doubtful.

"They may throw me out yet," he said. "I think Mr. McGrath is awfully patient to put up with someone like me in the cast. Acting is quite an art and I have a lot of respect for it. It's more than just using the voice. Suddenly you get up there and find you have two arms and two legs and don't know what to do with them. And you can't stand and talk with your back to the audience.

"Just be yourself," advised Valency.

Because of his knowledge of Czechoslovakia, Mamatey also has been called on for some technical help, and two of his suggestions have been accepted. Two of the fictional names of characters, carried over by Valency from the historical novel of Leo Lania on which the play is based have been changed.

Karel Mestrovic, the character representing Masaryk in the play, is changed to Karel Moravski, and Wenzel Musar, the character representing Czech President Benes, is changed to Vaslav Musar.

Overseas Study Grants Available

Undergraduates entering their sophomore or junior years who wish to receive scholarships for a year's study in Vienna, Paris, or Freiburg, West Germany, must submit applications to the Institute of European Studies by February 15, 1963.

There are seven scholarships being offered for study at the Institute's centers in those cities, to unmarried students between the ages of 18 and 24.

For the Institute's program at the University of Vienna, one full scholarship and two partial ones are available. The course combines English-taught liberal arts courses with intensive German instruction; previous knowledge of German is not required.

The Paris program includes one full and one partial scholarship. Intended for superior students, the program offers opportunities for independent study at the University of Paris and other institutions of higher learning in Paris.

For the program at the University of Freiburg, one full scholarship and one partial one are being offered to juniors only. All classes are taught in German.

Awards based on academic achievement, financial need and recommendation of the applicant's "home" university will be announced May 1, 1963. Forms and descriptive literature are available from the Institute of European Studies, 35 East Wacker Drive, Chicago 1, Illinois.

Dorman 'Fire Drill'

Much worry and complex planning are put into fire protection on campus. Elaborate fire alarm systems have been constructed and precise fire drills planned and practiced. Even the Tallahassee City Fire Department has cooperated to the fullest. Any alarm sounded from the University will be treated as a major emergency with all equipment rushing to the campus.

All of this sounds good, looks good on paper and is even more impressive when viewed during fire drill practice, when dorms and offices are emptied with orderliness, calm and in record-breaking time. Everyone agrees that disaster could never poke its ugly head on the FSU campus.

Sadly enough, the past tense must be used now. All of the above things were true--until Monday night at Dorman Hall. All was peaceful when smoke suddenly poured from a window and soon fire trucks were converging on the scene. Students streamed from buildings around Dorman. Crowds of the curious gathered around the women's dormitory to watch firemen in action against a real fire.

Girls living in Dorman were curious too. They all threw open their windows and leaned out to see what had caused the crowd to gather around their hall. Some manage a friendly "hello" to friends below and a few even cheered the firemen on. No one was concerned about the smoke pouring from the building--and after all, no one set off the fire alarm.

Long and short of this episode was that the fire was minor, and no real danger existed to the rest of the building or its tenants. Perhaps it would be best to just do away with fire drills and let brave firemen rescue dorm residents in the future.

Poverty In America

Dwight MacDonald's article in the Jan. 19 issue of the "New Yorker" should give us all cause to reflect upon the results of the way of life that middle class America has produced. Space precludes my going into detail but I think an enumeration of the most interesting features is in order.

Defining poverty in the traditional sense, we are presented with these figures: 40 to 50 million Americans, or almost 1/4 of the population live in poverty.

If we distinguish between poverty and deprivation, then we must define deprivation as "above poverty but short of minimum requirements for a modestly comfortable level of living." The combined number of these people is upwards of 77 millions, or almost 1/2 of the population of the country.

The US Bureau of Labor Statistics gives the following wages, or income as defining characteristics of 1)poverty--$4000 a year for a family of 4, and $2000 for a single person; and 2) deprivation--$4000-$5999 for a family of 4 and $2000-$2999 for a single person.

Of course these figures vary significantly from one area of the try to another, and from age to age group. But the point made. Despite the fact that the richest nation in the wor despite the usual syrup and that we are fed as r fare of vast number we are beginning to l poverty and want in both widespread and

Argument Not Marxism Or Socialism

...the Editor:

...he solution to the problem of wast-...resources proposed by Mr. Rig-...s did not seem to me to be parti-...arly bright. It's been tried and it ...esn't work. His arguments are not, ...believe, even good Marxism, and ...certainly not good socialism. And ...even if they were, the majority of ...people do not like socialism in ...its extreme form, so that they are ...against this kind of a republic ...today.

...But, by golly, he has a right to re-...mark them. He can say anything he ...pleases as long as he doesn't "advo-...cate the violent overthrow of the ...government" with words backed by ...force or action.

...Furthermore the authors of the ...Constitution have written that the ...basic rights are supplied by the Con-...stitution and the government deny ...the guaranteed freedoms such as ...freedom of speech and freedom of ...the press.

Of course Lenin felt otherwise about the rights of the people, or masses as he called them. Those who could not see eyeball to eyeball with the authorized opinion should be removed, in his opinion.

In view of these facts, just who is being communistic--Mr. Riggins or the Florida State Legislature?

Now I am not about to advocate a rebellion here. The inability of the Florida State Legislature to reach a decision about anything of importance is manifest in the recent re-apportionment hen party. Clearly they are not dangerous enough to waste ammunition upon.

But on the other hand the Legislature does resemble the praesidium far more than Mr. Riggins resembles a communist.

And perhaps we need the practice.

Broadway Correspondent Criticized

To The Editor:

As an avid movie fan I must raise protest concerning your "Broadway" correspondent. I have always been under the assumption that a film should be reviewed when it is first released, or at least before it is shown locally. Every review I have read in the Flambeau has been about a picture that had been shown locally during the preceding week. I am of the opinion that the Florida Theatre is the nearest to Broadway he has ever gotten. Shouldn't he be called the Flambeau's S. Monroe Correspondent?

Is he also a frustrated actor? He has constantly objected to the works of the finest talents in America. Does nothing please this man? I take that back. He did enjoy "Bambi."

Revise Women's Rules

You can hardly live on this campus for long until you begin to wonder why and for what reasons certain things are done the way they are.

For instance, the archaic restrictions imposed on the Florida State coeds. Granted, Freshman, Sophomore and even Junior and Senior status shouldn't warrant a complete freedom of restrictions; that deals in the realm of absurdity. However, within the same boundaries, why is it necessary to adhere to an antiquated manual from the girl's school tradition? This kind of tripe is well based regarding scientific background and research, but just how practical is it?

From Margaret Meade to Ann Landers we have our omnipotent leaders in all aspects of personal and group relationships. Margaret Meade is fine to read to get a very basic background on the subject, while Ann Landers is nothing more than a comical editorial of human events.

Specifically, on this campus we have our antiquated manuals which run the gamut of absurdity. "Knowledge for College" is basically a very good idea for the dissemenation of rules, but it is written just vaguely enough to fill the various judiciaries with problems of such magnitude as coming back to campus after closing time on the second night school opens. You will have to admit, this is truly a serious offense. Let's get serious, these rules drastically need changing.

As ludicrous as these rules are, they are further enforced by a pseudo elite group of do-gooders. Breath checks, bed checks and the like are so far out of the question on a college campus that it ceases even to be funny.

Another ridiculous rule is the one pertaining to bermuda shorts. Just how more suggestive is a pair of bermudas than a tight skirt. Of course maybe this isn't the basis for judgment, maybe it is frowned on just becuase it says so in the old girls' school manual. It seems evident that if this very serious problem ever were to get completely out of hand that social pressure if nothing else would dictate. College students surprisingly do have some morals not imposed by authorities.

I'm not attempting to advocate a complete and drastic revision of women's rules, far from it, it would be impossible when dealing with myriads of personalities. I do believe, however, that given rights commensurate with college level students, the rules could be revised and therefore strengthened and meaningful instead of bordering on hypocrisy as many of them now do. It wouldn't hurt to have a look.

Political Films Nauseating

BY TIM CARR

Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

I went to see a double feature which I thought would leave me raging politically against both Leftist and Rightist totalitarianism. Instead, I left the theatre feeling nauseated.

The films were "Cuba, Castro and Communism" and "Hitler." The former was composed entirely of newsreel sections, and was narrated by Westbrook Somebody-or-Other (not Pegler, but just as frothy). This film would insult the intelligence of a maggot. Its style--dramatic music along with patriotic epigrams by the narrator, a total disregard for the chronological order in which events occurred, snide and sarcastic comments--is remarkably similar to that of "Operation Abolition," and just as obnoxious. I don't need some film-cropping jughead to tell me I should fear Communism, and neither does the American public.

"Hitler" was just plain silly. Richard Basehart, trying to affect a Hitlerish accent, sounded disconcertingly like Maurice Chevalier. I kept waiting for him to break into a chorus of "L'Amour" and do a soft-shoe dance. An amateur psychologist apparently wrote the script--we are asked to believe that Hitler's only reason for trying to dominate the world was because he loved his mother a bit excessively.

Neither of these films has any value whatsoever--cinematic or historic.

Today's News Roundup

FLAMBEAU NEWS SERVICES

WASHINGTON -- President Kennedy has minimized reports of a new Russian buildup in Cuba. Kennedy told his new conference there has been "no military influx" into Cuba recently except for one Soviet ship. He said the best information this country has is that one ship with military cargo has arrived since the end of the Cuban crisis over missile bases and bombers. And the President said, there is no evidence that this ship carried offensive weapons.

The President was asked at his new conference about the reported removal of land-based nuclear missiles from Italy and Turkey. Kennedy said the United States is going to put Polaris submarines in the Mediterranean. He said these are much more modern weapons, so he thinks we're going to be in a stronger position in the Mediterranean.

WASHINGTON -- President Kennedy has expressed hope that a compromise can be reached soon to bring the New York Newspaper Strike to an end. Kennedy told his news conference that while the strike does not represent a national emergency and the Taft-Hartley Act provisions cannot be invoked, the stoppage still is working a great hardship.

WASHINGTON -- President Kennedy says he will be sorry if Negro student James Meredith decides to leave the University of Mississippi. The President told his news conference yesterday that the government had no other course than to protect the 29-year-old Negro's right to be there. Meredith has indicated he may not return to "Ole Miss" for a second semester.

NEW YORK -- A killing cold wave has been spreading more death and damage across Europe from the Baltic to the Bosporus. The bitter winter thus far has been blamed for nearly 200 deaths in Europe. And now reports have come from Communist Bulgaria indicating a major disaster in the making there. Bulgaria is buried in three feet of snow.

Mamatey admits to being a little picky about such details, but that's the way with historians; and he objected to the name Mestrovic for the leading character and to the first name Wenzel for the Czech president.

Mestrovic actually is a Yugoslav name, he says, the name of a sculptor who probably is the most famous 20th century sculptor in his country. "To the people over there calling a Czech leader Mestrovic might seem like calling a French foeign minister Leonardo da Vinci," says Mamatey.

About the play Mamatey had nothing but praise. It is an accurate picture of a liberal in a bad dilemma, he said.

Faculty Woodwind Trio Presents Receital Tonight

FSU's Faculty Woodwind Trio will present a recital at 8:15 p.m. Friday, in Opperman Music Hall.

Trio members are Nancy Fowler, oboe; Harry Schmidt, clarinet; and Ronald Waln, flute and bassoon. The recital is free and open to the public.

The faculty members will open their program with Haydn's "London Trio" followed by a Paul de Wailly number and a suite by Roger Goeb.

On the second part of the program will be a suite by Milhaud, a sonata by J. F. Fasch, and a trio by Antoni Szalouski.

The trio recently appeared at the Florida Music Educators. Association Convention in Daytona Beach; during the summer it was selected to appear on the Evenings in the Appleby Garden program of the Augusta-Richmond County Summer Series.

Miss Fowler, who has been a member of the FSU faculty since 1955, was formerly on the faculty of Ohio State. She holds a master of arts in music theory degree from Ohio State, and has studied in Amsterdam under a Fulbright scholarship.

Schmidt, a member of the faculty since 1949, holds a master of music degree from New England Conservatory. Waln served on the faculty of the State University of Iowa prior to joining the FSU faculty in 1959.

The faculty members have been performing together since last April.

SNAFU: Seminoles Nipped After Foul Upheava

Houston Is Next

The Seminoles, hoping to get their 10th win against nine losses, will battle tough Houston Saturday night in Tully Gymnasium in what Coach Bud Kennedy describes as one of the roughest games of the year.

Smarting from the wounds received from the Florida Gators, the Tribe will be given a chance to get Florida State's first victory over the Houston team. Last year, the Cougars won, 84-76, on Lone Star soil.

The University of Houston, surprisingly enough, has never been defeated by a Seminole team in any sport. Last season, the football, golf, and basketball teams went down in defeat; and the Cougars spoiled the 1962 Homecoming in a 7-0 football game.

Although the Cougars will be favored in the cage match tomorrow, Kennedy's crew has proven that it can grapple with the big ones.

GAINESVILLE -Florida State played inspired basketball, but lost to the University of Florida Gators here Wednesday night, by surrendering 46 points at the foul line. Florida's record is now 9-6, while the Seminoles' mark is leveled at 9-9.

This game, which many conceded to Gainesville by a 20- or 30- point margin, showed remarkable performances by both teams -- when FSU showed it had the gumption to shake off a 13-point deficiency and when Florida smashed its free throw record.

And truly, when the Gators smashed the charity mark, they clinched the winner's crown. Hitting 46-of-53 free throws, the Gators shot more from the line than from the field, and Coach Norm Sloan's quint broke the old free throw record set against Tulane in 1955 and Joe Hobbs in 1958.

Besides adding to the Gators' score, the FSU fouls depleted the ranks of Coach Bud Kennedy's team -- four men fouled out, including three starters. Rapidly building up personal fouls (Florida's first eight points came at the line), FSU lost Jerry Shirley in a suspicious situation with 14:37 left in the game. Shirley, who had four fouls on him at the time and probably would have finished the game, excited when a referee called Shirley's number (43) at the scoring table after originally appearing to call it on Number 33, Cal Huge.

Then Wally Dale and Huge were fouled out in rapid succession, leaving Kennedy without three of his starters. The fourth, Pete Gonzales, fouled out in a desperation attempt to keep Florida from freezing the ball.

Barbee's free throws, plus his 4-of-9 from the field, allowed him to tie FSU's Charlie Long in total points.

Long, who was not given the tremendous foul shots, scored on 9-of-18 field goals and then bucketed 6-of-8 free throws for 24 points, which tied the individual game-high mark for Seminoles. Previously, Long hit 24 points against Tennessee.

Coming from the basketball country of Kentucky, the 6-4 senior Long was also FSU's top boardman with 10 rebounds.

Three other Seminoles cracked the double figures. They were junior Pete Rogers, Dale, and Reeves. Rogers scored on 6-of-16 from the field and 3-of-5 from the line for 15 points, while Dale was only one mark behind with 6-of-12 field goals and 2-of-3 free throws. Dale Reeves, also a Kentuckian, had a total of 11, which came on 3-of-8 field goals and 5-of-6 free throws.

Florida's Tom Baxley cracked double figures, with 22 points (10 of them from the foul line), while Bussy Bales had a perfect free throw record of 6-of-6 plus 6-of-10 floor shots for 18 points. Bales was the only Gator to foul out. Taylor Stokes scored 17 points.

So it was a foul night, during which Florida State was penalized 32 times as compared to UF's 19, but the Seminoles redeemed themselves somewhat by nearly breaking the game open from the floor and on the backboards. The Tribesmen outscored FSU, 35-24, on the floor, getting 11 more field goals than Sloan's crew; and they outrebounded the Alligators by 11.

The 7,200 member crowd saw a slow-starting game, which immediately showed it would be a foul line show by Barbee, who tallied eight straight. With six minutes left in the first session, the Seminoles shortened UF's lead to 12-9, and nine minutes later, the Gators led by only two markers (24-22). At this point, Stokes, Bales and Barbee went to work and FSU fell behind by as much as 14 points. By the half the Tribe shaved the margin to 10 points.

When the second half started, the score was 56-46, and it seemed that FSU could do no wrong...except, of course, for the fouls. Using the zone defense, the Seminoles surged ahead on the shooting of Dale and Rogers, and six minutes later the score was 61-57. There was only a three-point difference six minutes later (68-65), and then the Seminoles tied it up, 71-71, two minutes later. Rogers came through with a jumper to put FSU ahead for the second and last time in the game with 4:32 left with 80-79 on the scoreboard.

The lead was shortlived, because seconds later Baxley bucketed a 20-foot jumper. However, the Tribe threat was still present, for during the dying minutes of the game, Dale cut the scoring margin to one point on two occasions, while Rogers and Long did the FSU dirty work two other times.

A layup by Stokes lengthened the Florida lead to 83-80. Being fouled on the effort, Stokes added another at the foul line. Reeves and Long then scored for the Tribe and sliced the scoring margin to one point, but, at this point, fouls reigned supreme.

UF's next 11 points were charitable gifts that it received at the foul line. Florida State, more blessed but less prosperous, scored only two times more on Reeves' successful free tosses.

Nine of the 11 UF final points came within one minute when the Tribe vainly attempted to take the l... of the icebox. But the buzzer with 94-86 on the board.

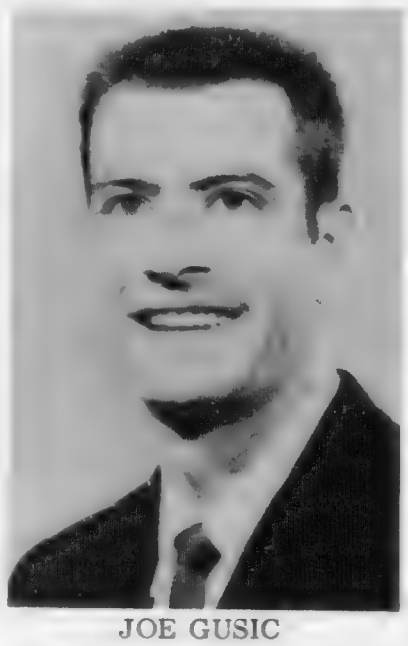
Tribe Gymnasts Meet Yellowjackets Saturday

Coach Joe Gusic, in his fourth and final year as gymnastic coach at Florida State, will take the Seminoles to Georgia Tech Saturday to open FSU's 1963 season.



The Yellowjackets, who had a tough-to-beat sophomore team last year, might be of great strength this season, Gusic says.

Gusic's teams, which have competed as an independent for three years, have won 10 championships and goes to Georgia Tech with hopes of extending its 5-0 dual meet record.

The FSU gymnasts have not been as fortunate as the Jackets, because only four experienced men are returning. Rick Miller again leads the way, along with Mitch Weinstock, Jim Hampton, and Guy Atkinson. A St. Petersburg Junior College transfer student, John Kimbrough, is expected to boost the Seminoles, while the inexperienced John Cory is an outstanding prospect.

The schedule:

Jan. 26-Georgia Tech in Atlanta; Feb. 15-16-Georgia Tech in Tallahassee; 23-University of Florida in Gainesville; March 9-Dade County Junior College in Miami; 22-23-the SIGL Championships in Gainesville; April 6-Dade County JuCo in Tallahassee.

SEMINOLE SHORTS

Oklahoma State approached Florida State's Bill Peterson to be its new football coach, but the FSU mentor said no deal. Peterson, who finished with a 4-3-3 mark, also said he was staying at FSU after the 14-14 tie with Auburn when many said Vanderbilt was trying hard to get him.

BROTHER EYES NEBRASKA U.

You can't blame Cal Huge of Florida State's basketball team if he follows with uncommon interest the doings at the University of Nebraska.

Cal's brother, Jim Huge, recently was named to the All-American academic "team" after completing a third year as a starting end on the Nebraska football squad.

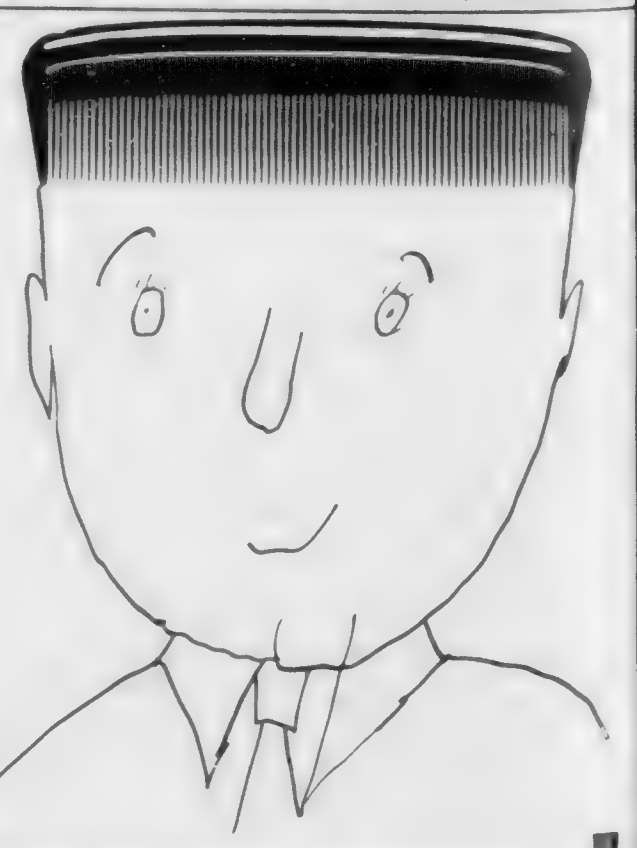
Both are from Madison, Wisconsin. Cal is doing all right for himself, too: he's a sometimes-starter at forward for the Seminoles, a sophomore who's third on the team in rebounding.

Frosh Fall, 64 To 53

GAINESVILLE - The Florida frosh gained revenge on the Florida State fledglings Wednesday night by handing the Tribesmen their third loss of the season in a 64-53 contest.

Earlier, the Baby Seminoles had triumphed, 82-55, in Tully Gymnasium.

Having heard a win-or-else statement from coaches, the Baby Gators continually fought off the Seminoles during the first part of the game, and managed to build up a 32-25 lead at the half.



The two teams kept the modest margin between them to the end of the game. High scorer was UF's Richard Peek with 17 points. The freshmen, who only scored two points against the Seminoles the first game, put in his best effort of the year. Bruce Moore was second for Florida with 16 markers.

Leading Seminole scorers were Bill Peacock and Gary Schull. Both Peacock and Schull bucketed six from the floor and two from the foul line.

The FSU frosh will battle the University of Jacksonville freshmen Saturday in Tully Gym in a preliminary match starting at 5:45 p.m.

ougars Fall For First Time To FSU

e Florida State basket- team pulled its second gest upset of the season rday night in Tully nnasium when it defeat- he highly-touted Hous- Cougars, 76-69, before fans.

s: as when FSU played Miami Hurricanes, the noles were "sup- posed" to lose, but instead Coach Bud Kennedy's crew tripped up the favored Houston, which had never lost to the Seminoles in any sport.

The game pushed the Seminoles into the winning brackets. The Seminoles have now won 10 contests and lost in nine games.

Again, just as in the Miami game, the two big shots of the Seminoles were forward Charlie Long and center Dale Reeves. Long played the entire contest and scored 20 points, while Reeves came in late and tallied 21 markers.

Reeves, a 6-7 Kentuckian, also pulled down nine rebounds, while Long, a fellow Blue Grasser, grabbed seven missed shots.

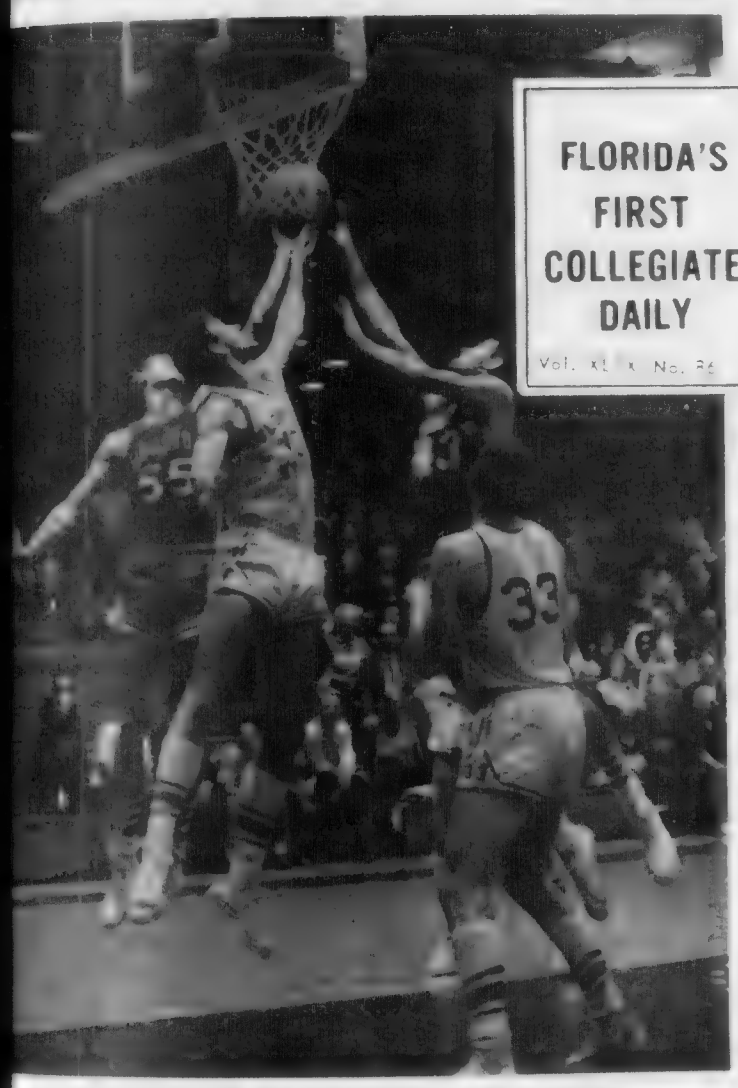
However, the high-scorer for the game was a Houston cager--Lyle Harger, a potential All-American who measures in at 6-7.

Harger sliced the nets for 22 points, and proved that he was dangerous at the free throw line by scoring eight charity tosses. The tall man also got eight rebounds.

When the contest opened, it seemed that Coach Guy Lewis' Texans could do no wrong, for the towering Texans dropped the ball through the nets with alarming alacrity.

But the Seminoles met the power push by gradually pulling within scoring distance of the Texans, and a field goal by center Jerry Shirley tied the game, 13-13.

The Cougars slipped on their next scoring effort, and FSU's Long tallied a field goal and a free throw to give the Tribesmen their first lead at 16-15.



Moments later, the Cougars erased this margin, but then Long sank a 20-footer for a 20-18 score to give Florida tate a permanent lead, which was always in danger of being destroyed.

By the time of the half, the Seminoles had a 10-point lead, 39-29.

In the second half, the Houston basketballers came on just as they did at the start of the game: hard and fast. And they managed to slice the margin to three points on one occasion, but the Seminoles, relying primarily on the shooting of Long and Reeves, pulled in front to as much as 11 points before the Houston onslaught began anew.

Three more times during the game, the Cougars came with five points; and, in the final seconds of the game,

Flambeau Policy Supported

Poll Reveals Interest In World, National Affairs

An overwhelming majority of FSU students and faculty, polled in a cross-section study, believe that the "Florida Flambeau" should be concerned with news outside the university.

A large majority also think that the publication should have columnists of various political beliefs comment on the news. The survey showed that an even larger majority believe the "Flambeau" should print news of local student political parties.

Student and faculty opinion was revealed in a poll taken last week by two classes in public relations under the directions of Dr. Sidney Kobre, professor of communications and public relations, School of Business. The polling was a class project, as the students were studying public opinion and the methods which organizations and companies use to get basic facts through research.

"No member of the 'Flambeau' staff was allowed to participate in the poll, either in interviewing or tabulating," the professor said.

The poll surveyed 411 persons. These included 345 freshmen, sophomore, junior, senior and graduate students. They were enrolled in Arts and Sciences, Business, Education, Music and other schools and departments. The 69 faculty members represented various schools. Students interviewed persons in the History, Conradi, Education, Business, Meteorology buildings, the Student Center and dormitories.

In answer to the question, "Do you think the 'Flambeau' should be concerned editorially with current news events outside the university, students and faculty responded with 286 "yes's" and 122 "no's," with three questionnaires being rejected, because there were not clear or no answers were given.

"The ratio, therefore, was about two to one in favor of the editor's being concerned with outside happenings," Dr. Kobre explained. "The faculty had a higher ratio--three to one on this question."

When asked, "Do you think the 'Flambeau' should publish news relating to student organizations interested in national politics?" the response was even stronger than on the previous question. For 318 members of the student body and the faculty believed that such news should be printed, while only 87 were opposed. There were six rejects. Faculty ratio was five to one in favor of publication.

Students and faculty think the FSU daily should publish columns written by students with various political views, as the ratio was 4 to 1. They answered with these results: 326 for printing such articles, 76 opposed. Nine rejects were recorded.

A fair distribution of students and faculty was made, according to political beliefs. Of those polled, 196 considered themselves, "liberal," while 153 thought they should be classified as "middle-of-the-roaders." One socialist gave his opinion, but 46 gave no clear-cut answer, or didn't answer. All of the questionnaires were anonymous.

The question of the type of news and columns the "Flambeau" should publish was raised recently by Dalles W. Matthews, a student who opposed such publication because he had to support the "Flambeau" through payment of student fees, and didn't want such a publication because it printed views opposite to his.

As the poll-takers sought to get some comment on the questions, the interviewers asked "why" the person believed as he did on the three issues. A variety of answers was given.

One freshman, voting "yes" to the question, "Do you think the "Flambeau" should be concerned editorially with current news outside the university?" gave this typical reply, "News of the outside world is of concern to everybody." In answer to the question regarding the publication of news of student poli-

Model U.N. Is Rejected

By KATHY VALLETTA
Flambeau Staff Writer

van Assenderp has rejected ations to the Model United Na- General Assembly at Florida M University and the regional conference at the University of North Carolina, Feb. 21-23.

The basis of the rejection of the invitations was given by President van Assenderp as not having enough time to prepare for the conferences because details were sent late, and the meetings usually bogged down in college rivalry.

FAMU put on its first local conference last year; FSU did not participate in this conference either.

The invitation to the FAMU conference was extended by Willy Adams, president of the Student Government Association. Willy Carl Rogers is acting chairman of the FAMU planning committee.

The purpose of the conferences is to discuss international problems, relations and debate on pertinent issues. The college delegations must research the countries they are representing in the Model UN, and debate on issues with their particular country's interest in mind. Other delegations are allowed to challenge the nation's stand on certain issues, protesting that it is not in line with economic and political demands of that nation. That nations must support its stand and attempt to pass resolution in its favor.

The model UN General Assembly works similarly to that of the official United Nations Assembly. Committees are established to thrash out world problems in debate. They are then put on the agenda for debate in the General Assembly.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the student body as a whole or the administration of the Florida State University. Editorials represent the opinions of the editorial staff of the Flambeau with the initials of the writer following the editorial. Columns and letters to the Editor reflect only the opinion of the writer.

Model UN Worthwhile

Florida State University has been extended an invitation by Florida A & M University to participate in a joint model session of the United Nations General Assembly. This session would be aimed at promoting a better understanding of the operation and workings of the United Nations by placing students in place of delegates and allowing them to go through the motions of proposing legislation as UN delegates.

The technique is a familiar one, employed by many of the better universities of the nation as a means of giving students a vivid, realistic contact with a representative body. Universities such as Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and other outstanding educational centers have from time to time employed the technique. In the South, the University of North Carolina annually promotes these sessions and sponsors a regional model UN session.

To be most effective these projects are proposed, managed, and implemented by students. This is what A & M student leaders, who sponsored a similar session last year, proposed to FSU student government leaders.

Student Body Pres. Ken van Assenderp rejected the offer on the grounds that Student Government did not "have enough time" to properly prepare a program. He also squelched any effort to send delegates to the regional model session in North Carolina on the grounds that since the YMCA and the YWCA are joint sponsors with the CCUN, the conference at UNC is "too high schoolish" for FSU.

Both of these reasons are flimsy.

Van Assenderp obviously stated that Student Government did not have time without consulting all of his workers. Several have expressed an interest in setting up such a conference and probably would be willing to chair a committee, separate from presently working SG officers, to carry out the program. This would not drain the present Student Government structure which cannot spare the time. The conference, proposed for the first part of March, certainly could be prepared by a month of labor.

The rejection of the bid to North Carolina is equally silly. Perhaps the conference is not everything that FSU would like it to be. But rejection serves no good purpose. If FSU participated it could work to better the conference and make it a worthwhile project. And certainly "inter-school politics," of which van Assenderp complains, is as prominent in SUSGA as it could be in any conference -- yet FSU participates.

Hidden motives may well exist. Conservative state legislators find the UN repugnant and van Assenderp does not want to do the least thing to offend these gentlemen.

Student Government seems too timid to undertake such a project, despite van Assenderp's contention that they want to make FSU "great." They have the right to refuse. But great universities use such sessions to contribute to the free flow of ideas and opinions and to make their campus an intellectually exciting place. In great universities, education is not confined to the classroom.

Other organizations could undertake the project. The International Club would be a natural for the job. The Government Dept. could also get behind the project and encourage their students to participate. This would be of special interest to International Affairs majors.

The project is worthwhile. Some group should come forward to pick up the ball that Student Government has fumbled and move the university towards greatness.

Value Of Student Opinion?

By attacking Picasso's cubist paintings -- and by implication, the sincerity of the University's Humanities program -- Mr. Dermott has afforded this writer a long awaited opportunity to discuss a somewhat annoying matter: the importance of the individual student's opinion of the subject matter presented him in the class room.

It would appear that the purpose of a university is to convey to those who attend it, certain facts, ideas, and in some cases, evaluations, which the student is presumed not to know. In a course such as the Humanities, the teaching problem is doubly difficult as value judgments figure rather prominently in the presentation of its subject matter. And contrary to popular opinion, any judgment of man's creative efforts is based entirely upon human evaluations which are not subject to any universal law. That one student may feel uneasy about Picasso's "Cubisms" is not unusual; that the student should express his opinion on the editorial page of his school paper in such a manner as to cast aspersions on the integrity of his teachers, shows more haste than thought. Granting the "right" of every American to have and express opinions, the deterioration of our universities would ensue if student opinions were allowed to influence the selection of subject matter in a given course. What? Is it possible, then that all opinions are not equally valid? One is reminded of a famous Welsh poet who when asked what he thought of Dickens as a writer, replied that he was a poor one. When asked next what he had read by Dickens, the poet replied: "Really! You don't expect me to read the books of a poor writer."

It would not do to ask how many original Picasso "Cubisms" Mr. Dermott has seen, for obviously he has seen many in order to form such a strong opinion. Nor would it do to bring up the fact that hundreds of museums and individuals have purchased paintings by Picasso, and that this same artist has been discussed, written about, widely admired for many years -- a while ag attended a retrospective exhibition of Picas work in London, and the halls were jammed to doors; if I remember correctly, the museum rec ded the largest crowds in its history. All of becomes quite unimportant in light of certain se deprecating remarks (quoted by Mr. Dermo which Picasso made to an Italian writer. Picass affiliation with Communism would alone pro ample explanation for his deriding the very p which Russia has so often labeled decadent. more importantly, Picasso is an old man, an his many years he has said many things about own work, the sum total of which gives us v little -- for these is hardly an opinion, pro or which he has not expressed. Must we then acc single statement by Picasso as a total invalid of a rahter large segment of his artistic Perhaps, after all, we have missed the real entirely. Frankly, Mr. Dermott, I susp opinion of Picasso is not much higher tha -- but it seems unwise to reveal such notions at the risk of injuring the feelings of thousands of "disillusioned" people who th otherwise. Indeed, one could hardly be less disc if one advised a cannibal that the scar patter his face and the bone through his nose were barous and ugly -- presuming, of course, that is a visitor in his jungle! It is possible, th that if one spent a lifetime among cannibals might learn to appreciate their sense of b It is equally possible that had the Welsh read enough of Dickens he may have cultiva taste for him, just as you -- after suffering t Humanities 202 -- may find yourself, in a w moment, admiring a Picasso painting. But whet you learn to like Picasso or not, is unimport What is important -- as far as a Humanities tea is concerned -- is that you be made aware of fact that lots of people around us do like Picas and many of them do so in spite of what either or Picasso have so far stated. And in regard t last, I suggest you reconsider your sentence: should express the inspired and aspired thoug the artist." Since when have "inspiration" "aspiration" been categorically l "beauty" or any particular "grand old meanin the word" art, as you seem to imply?

Editor's note: Mr. Wear is a graduate assistant in the Humanities Department.

S.E.C.? Who Needs It?

TO THE EDITOR:

S.E.C.? Who needs it? Florida State has made it as a football power. Now that we have come all this way, we should subject ourselves to the degradation of being "considered" for a birth in such tiriviality? FSU is above the S.E.C.! Let anyone tell us differently. Not to mention football -- ask Coach Kennedy what they say of FSU in Wisconsin; ask Coach Stults what Ohio thinks of our swimming team -- or Coach Long in Pa. Go anywhere and you hear FSU praised as one of the most prominent independents in the South. Do we really need "dependency" on such a conference?

Tennis, in South Carolina?, or baseball in Arizona?, then tell me we should confine ourselves to a mere section of the country. Coach Gilbert: ask him how Canada reacted to FSU of "Wide World of Sports" not too long ago -- FSU international proclaim? Florida State has made it in the whole nation!

Certainly the S.E.C. is big and powerful, but FSU by itself is bigger and more powerful than most of its so called "peers" of the Southeastern Conference.

Go anywhere and you no longer hear, "Oh, FSU, that's in Gainesville isn't it?" -- remarks such as "that was quite a ball club you had this past season -- you're going to be tough next year" -- ask any player.

A big decision is should FSU go conference or should we continue our pursuits standing on our own shoulders? Look at the past record and it will be clear -- if our growth continues its present course we'll be "the" independent southern team in only a few years.

Think it over Coach Peterson and President Blackwell, I feel w making an awfully big mistake. has already made it.

tical parties, he said "yes," responding, "It is of interest to all."

This student, however, said "no," he was opposed to student commenting on political news, because such a policy would stir up controversy.

Other students voting "yes" on the question of the FSU publication's being concerned with international and national events thought the students don't read daily downtown or out-of-town newspapers and the "Flambeau" filled a gap. "Every student should be informed about the world situation, as the U.S. is involved," he declared.

Many of those who voted "yes" on this question thought it desirable "to inform students," and give the student writers an opportunity to think and express themselves on current issues.

"America is a free republic, with freedom of speech," one replied. "Interest is stirred by different student opinions."

Another answered, "There is only one way to bring out the good and bad points of certain political views and that is through constructive and destructive criticism."

In disagreement, many who voted "no," on the question of students' commenting on political and world affairs, said the "Flambeau" writers "were not competent enough" to do the job. One felt that the "Flambeau" editors should give more space to fraternities and sororities as they were active, and that the publication should devote less space to events outside the campus.

NEW YORK--The Cuban government says it has broken up two rings of spies and saboteurs. The Castro government says the rings worked separately under U.S. Central Intelligence Agency orders and from the U.S. Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay in Eastern Cuba. Broadcast and published accounts say numerous arrests have been made in Oriente Province, and funds and arms were seized. The official report says at least 36 persons involved in subversive activities have seized.

Washington is taking the spy claims from Cuba calmly. A State Dept. spokesman says, "We've heard this type of charge before, but have no comment." The Central Intelligence Agency maintains its policy of silence.

NEW YORK--Longshoremen in Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina have agreed to a new contract and are expected to go back to work today. These were the only states where ports were still idled by the recent strike.

WASHINGTON--Treasury Secretary Dillon predicts Congress will pass a comprehensive new tax program this year. He says it will include structural changes and substantial rate reductions. In an interview, Dillon says he expects some changes in the plan proposed by President Kennedy.

PARIS, FRANCE--In Paris, the National Secretary of the de Gaullist Political Party accuses the U.S. of trying to take control of the European community's foreign policy and defense. The charge was made to a meeting of leaders of de Gaulle's Union for a New Republic. The speaker said the great majority of Frenchmen feel de Gaulle's policies are building a European Europe and not a satellite one.

NEW YORK--Red China's Peking People's Daily challenges Russia's Khrushchev to adopt China's tough line as a basis for Communist unity. The editorial says, "We must state in all seriousness that the International Communist Movement is at a critical juncture." Among other things, the Chinese demand that the Russians discard their recently resumed friendship with the Communist government of Yugoslavia.

they repeated the tactics of the Miami Hurricances by fighting in a vain attempt to get the ball out of the Seminole ice box.

But, just as the Seminoles failed in these same attempts against the Florida Gators only nights before, the ball stayed frozen.

When the final buzzer sounded, FSU had a seven-point lead.

Statistically, the Houston Cougars were also outdistanced as the Seminoles hit on 34-of-70 field goal attempts for a 48.6 average as compared to Houston's 24-of-59 tries for 40.7 percent. At the line, the Seminoles bucketed 8-of-17, while the Cougars hit on 21-of-29 attempts.

. . . hits 21 points

The true significance of the game cannot be realized until it is pointed out that the Cougars which fell this year were essentially the same team that went to the National Invitational Tournament last year. The 1961 Cougars defeated the "best team in FSU's history, 74-67."

One of the reasons for Houston's win was Harger and Houston having a home court, for, with 11 minutes left in last year's game, the Cougars wiped out an 11-point FSU lead and won by seven points.

The Seminoles this year, playing inspired though at times ragged ball, perhaps did not surpass their best game of the 1962 season (against Florida), but it did get the rebounds, score the field goals, and stop the potentially disasterous Houston scores at the most crucial moments --which was enough to let the more inexperienced team win.

Frosh Snap Losing Skein

The Florida State freshmen snapped a three-game losing streak and defeated the University of Jacksonville frosh, 77-58, Saturday night in Tully Gymnasium.

Coach Joe Williams' Baby Seminoles now have a 7-3 record.

The expert gun that hit the target for the Tribesmen was forward Gary Schull, 6-6, of Pompano Beach. Schull dropped in 7-of-15 shots from the floor and sliced the nets for 6-of-6 at the foul line to grab team honors of 20 points.

In addition, Schull was the night's best rebounder with 14 snatches of missed shots.

But the most dangerous shot was Jacksonville's Ralph Sanders, who bucketed 10-of-15 shots and 4-of-7 free throws for a game high total of 24 markers.

Second for the Dolphins was Don Copeland, who hit 7-of-12 from the field and 2-of-4 at the charity line. He tallied a total of 16 points.

Likewise, the Seminoles had a man with 16 points--guard Bill Peacock. The 6-4 Peacock was successful with 7-of-12 field goals and 2-of-3 free throws. The other Seminole to score in double figures was guard Roy Smith, 5-10, of Tallahassee. Smith had a total of 10 points, coming on 5-of-12 field goal attempts and 2-of-3 free throws.

Cagers Glad To Break Houston Winning Streak

By BOB DENSMORE

Saturday night was a good night for the Tribe; everyone was happy. FSU defeated Houston for the first time in any sport by the score of 76 to 69, and Dale Reeves finally got his right sock to stay up.

Ball 27 came through for the Seminoles again. Perhaps the tribe should write to the Spaulding Company and get a whole shipment of 27's. Ball 27 is thus far undefeated.

The team concensus gave the Cougar's Lyle Harger the potential-villain-of-the-night award. When Harger made one of his spectacular dunk shots, Reeves complimented him. Harger explained that it was his percentage shot. Reeves said no more. That tattoo on Harger's arm was a longhorn with Harger inscribed between the horns. Wonder if he smokes Marlboros?

program of band and choral numbers will be pre-ented by FSU's Symphonic Band and the University ingers tonight.

wind instrument will assist in the program at 15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. The concert will e free and open to the public.

The Symphonic Band, directed by Manley R. Whit-mb, will open the program with the "Suite from e Music for the Royal Firewords" by Handel, fol-wed by Mozart's "Serenade No. 10 in B Major."

Featured in the Mozart number will be a wind in-strument ensemble made up of Philip Koonce, Bev-rly Snell, oboes; Sylvia Lynes, Valerie Wilson, arl Vollrath, Rodney Hoff, clarinets; Elwood hite, Ben Godfrey, Bill Lawyer, Monty Hobbs, rench horns; Gary Bennett Brad Buckley, bas-ons; and Douglas Greer, tuba.

The second part of the program will be "Mass in Minor" by Anton Bruckner, performed by the niversity Singers with the wind ensemble. Dr. Wiley L. Housewright will direct the 76 mixed-oice group in the number.

The Dave Brubeck Jazz Quartet will perform at FSU at 7 and 9 p.m. this Wednesday, in Westcott Auditorium.

The Quartet is sponsored by Sigma Chi fraternity. Tickets may be purchased from fraternity members or at Westcott Ticket Office. They are priced at $3 and $2 for college students.

A foremost personality in the field of jazz, Brubeck has become recognized in other countries where he has performed on State Department Cultural Exchange tours.

Other members of the Brubeck Quartet, which has won virtually every poll and award in jazz, have also gained recognition. Paul Desmond, alto saxophone, recently won first place in the Down Beat Readers' Poll. Joe Morello has won one poll after another for drummers in the past several years. Gene Wright, bass player, was featured with Count Basie, Cal Tjader and Red Norvo before he joined the Quartet in January, 1958.

Brubeck recordings include "Dialogues for Jazz Combo and Orchestra" and a record version of his musical show, "The Real Ambassadors."

2nd Year Of Existence

University Party Meets Tonight

The University Party will hold a convention tonight at 7 p.m. in the Women's Gym to nominate candidates for Student Government elections.

The first convention of the party was held April 10, 1962, in the Women's Gym.

The purpose of the organization is to promote interest and participation in sound Student Government on campus.

This is the second year for the party as an active organization, and a full schedule is planned for the convention tonight. Lyman Fletcher will open the convention with a short keynote talk concerning the need for more active interest in Student Government. Fletcher's talk will include reasons to keep the two-party system going strong on campus, now that FSU is under the trimester system.

Nominations will be held for candidates to represent the University Party in the offices of President of the Student Body; Vice President of the Student Body; Men's Vice President; Women's Vice President; Secretary of Senate; Clerk of Honor Court, and Chairman of the University Court.

The Student Party convention will be held Thursday and Friday, at 7 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

Informed sources predict a heated battle for party officers, which will also form part of the slate of convention business. Officers for the University Party to be filled are Chairman, vice chairman, recording secretary, corresponding secretary, campaign chairman and treasurer.

A second convention of the University Party will be held March 5, 6 and 7, when nominations for class officers will be determined.

'The Late Liz'

Behana Talks Tonight

Gertrude Behanna, author of the best selling autobiography, "The Late Liz," will speak tonight at the Episcopal Chapel of the Resurrection-Ruge Hall.

Mrs. Behanna, considered to be one of the most effective laypeople in the Episcopal Church, describes herself as "The Late Liz," daughter of one of the country's wealthiest industrialists, and heiress to a fortune, who is now all but penniless... by choice.

Gertrude Behanna was raised in New York's Waldorf-Astoria, and received a brilliant education at the hands of private tutors in Europe and this country. In her words, she has "tried just about everything in life on a sensational binge... money, liquor, hope, multiple marriage, and suicide."

Just over 15 years ago, the life of Mrs. Behanna, "The Late Liz," changed abruptly, she gave away her fortune, and has since then, spent her time talking to people throughout the world, telling them what brought this change.

Mrs. Behanna's talk is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. All members of the student body, faculty, and staff may attend.

4,000 Expected This Summer

an of Faculties Werner A. Baum rted that 39 percent of students enrolled at FSU will be attending full third trimester.

he survey sheets taken during ring registration indicated an ad-tional 18 percent of the students n to attend only the first term of third trimester, while another 2 percent are planning to re-n for the second term only.

ean Baum said that 41 percent e indicated that they will not at-the third trimester, while add-that the statistics were "almost ctly what we have been planning all along."

full curricular program is being ned by the schools and colleges the third trimester at the pre-t, and Baum reported that the ff already scheduled for the third mester will be adequate.

During the third trimester some courses will run the full trimester and some only during the A or B part of the trimester.

Some of the departments, such as the Government Department will not offer any courses running the full trimester.

The summer trimester will be very flexible. Students may attend either or both of the sessions offered and earn up to 18 trimester hours of credit.

KNOWLEDGE TEST

The "Knowledge for College" test will be given to all transfer students, today at 5 p.m. in Longmire Auditorium.

Filing Open Today For Major Offices

Filing begins today at 5 p.m. for major student government offices.

Declarations of candidacy may be picked up and returned at the main desk of the Longmire Bldg. Filing will be open until 5 p.m. next Tuesday.

The major offices open are President of the Student Body, Men's Vice President, Women's Vice President, Secretary of Student Senate, Chief Justice of Honor Court, Clerk of Honor Court, Chairman of University Court, Chairman of Traffic Court, and three elected members for the Student Board of Publications.

The Elections Bureau has the authority to to disqualify any candidate who makes false statements about his qualifications for office either in print, in writing or in public speech.

Active campaigning will begin Feb. 12. No campaign material is to appear on campus before that time.

Candidates seeking party nominations are cautioned that any materials used at the conventions cannot be distributed on campus.

All printed materials for distribution on campus must be placed on file in the Elections office prior to its distribution. Candidates may begin turning in their materials as soon as they file their declaration of candidacy. The files containing the campaign materials will be locked.

There will be a compulsory meeting of all candidates who have filed a Declaration of Candidacy Feb. 5 at 8:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Longmire. The procedures for campaigning will be explained at this meeting.

When each candidate files, he will be able to pick up a copy of the elections rules at the main desk in Longmire.

Housing Rules Changes

A new priority has been announced for the placing of students in dormitory housing, Miss Edith McCollum has announced.

If a student has attended the fall, spring, and summer trimesters, his application for the following fall trimester takes precedence over that of the student who left after the spring trimester.

Even if the student attends only half of the summer trimester, his housing request will be considered before the application of the student who has attended only two consecutive trimesters.

Anyone planning to attend the first half of the summer trimester must pay housing fees by April 1, she added. The fall trimester fees are due July 1.

Parties Violate Own Constitutions

The campus' two major political parties swing into action this week with both holding conventions. The activity promises a shot in the arm for Student Govt. Election week is the only time when the great mass of the Student bureaucracy takes an active interest in their jobs, even if this interest is short-lived.

Chief phobias for both parties in the past elections have been their impeccable honesty. Both have taken great pains to include in their constitutions provisions for insuring that selection of their delegates is open and above board. This year, neither have insured voter confidence by complying with regulations specified by their own constituions.

THE UNIVERSITY PARTY Constitution in Article IV, Section 2, part E. contains the provision: "Any delegate may be contested at the convention and shall be replaced by an alternate if said delegate is found by the parliamentarian to be serving illegally. A list of all delegates shall be made available to any interested person prior to the convention."

Despite the provision, there is no list of University Party delegates available for publication, though the convention is tonight.

THE STUDENT PARTY Constitution is more specific. Article II, Section 3, part F. states: "The list of delegates shall be made available to the "Florida Flambeau" for publication not less than two weeks prior to the convention."

The "Flambeau" did not receive the delegates list two weeks prior to the convention. In fact, we have yet to receive the Student Party delegates list.

Unfortunately, there are no provisions in either constitution for enforcement of the provisions stated therein. Neither forces itself to comply with its own regulations.

But there is no real need for self-enforcement. Voters can examine the merits of the parties which violate their own constitutions and judge them accordingly.

What Price Liberalism?

Last year a West Virginia photo firm hit upon a system which, if nationally adopted, would reveal in graphic terms just what portion of each American's salary goes to Washington.

The company instituted a policy of making routine payroll deductions only on each fourth week. Typically a single employe earning $70.00 a week after three deductionless weeks received a notice that he owed the government $4.75. An $80.00 a week man got 83¢ for his fourth week and a $128.00 worker got $22.68. Interestingly enough the Bureau of Internal Revenue threatened to sue the firm.

History Is Full Of Butchers

One of the favorite arguments of the Conservative Camp against trusting the Eastern block is based on the immoral and savage way in which they deal with their opponents. Since the Communists have butchered and maimed millions of people, and since they have surpressed freedom and human dignity in the past, we cannot trust them in the future. In fact, because of these deeds we should not be willing to listen to them or to try to cooperate with them.

This conservative position seems to rest upon a very elemental axiom -- morality is a matter of quantity not quality. What has happened in the Soviet nations is not unusual. Throughout history social revolutions have wrought terror and death to innocent victims. Minority groups have been destroyed since the days of Ur. What bothers the conservatives, it seems, is the large numbers of people killed. "It is less moral to kill 25 million peasants than to kill 9 million Jews."

But this is not a logical consequence to the liberal. What is upsetting is the political philosophy that permits the justification of such killings--regardless of the numbers involved. It is revealing to note that the Russians did not institute this kind of political behavior -- it is as old as mankind and the only thing that differs in the Soviet situation is the technological efficiency. Had the US the means and needs that the 20th C. has produced in the 1800's there would probably have been a complete extinction of the Indian. The attitude involved is the important and deciding factor.

Whether I kill one person or 1000 I am guilty of murder. It is regretable that so many people have perished throughout history -- killed by religion, war, political philosophy, forced starvation and the hate of race prejudice. But if we are to prevent such occurences from reappearing in the future we cannot forever assume some sort of moral superiority because we have killed less than they. We cannot disdain to associate with our enemies.

We must cooperate to build a be world, a world free of such -- and to do this we people the benefit of the doubt. amongst us who advocate intoler and war as a last resort will succeed in bringing again t worlda plague of hate, death, i erance and crime. Now, while is a real possibility for w erations and international co ation, we must actively enga movements leading to peace and derstanding.

'If Man Answers'

Situation Comedy Dismal

BY TIM CARR
Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

This could be a very witty situation comedy but it has been utterly destroyed by the abyssmal acting of Sandra Dee and Bobby Darin. Miss Dee's dismal performance was to be expected and forgiven, but Darin's flop was doubly disappointing after his recent success in "Pressure Point."

The gist of the story is that women are basically smarter than men. Miss Dee's mother, who is a former French chorus girl, instructs her in the various ways of capturing and keeping a man. Sandra snatches Bobby, a professional photographer, from the bliss of bachelorhood and plunges him into the married life. Miss Dee's ever-present mo then gives her daughter an inst tion book on dog training to be (not altogether inappropriately Darin.

At this point, the story and acting are at opposite poles. situation is hilarious but the formances are bad enough to barrass the Three Stooges.

A fictitious lover is introduced the action, but he doesn't re ethereal for long. When he s up in flesh and blood, there is g opportunity for a series of roll ing, risque scenes, but this, collapses.

"If a Man Answers" is a se of anticlimaxes interspersed periods of boredom, and is hear unrecommended.

The founder, Noyes, interpreted the Scriptures to mean that love relationships between two persons, such as man and wife or mother and child, are selfish and ungodly. Therefore, lasting relationships were discouraged in Oneida, and sexual relationships were arranged by intermediaries for any two members of the community who so desired.

To free women from the tyranny of uncontrolled child-birth and to produce superior off-spring, Noyes introduced into the community the process of "stirpiculture." By this process, the Council would select those members most suited for parenthood.

Fifty-eight so-called "stirps" were born in the Oneida Community and were found to be above the American average. The parents, of course, were all highly selected and above average, as well. This experiment was significant, in that it began thirteen years before Galton's experiments in eugenics.

Stubbs pointed out that the failure of this society did not reduce its importance. It is through experiments that progress is made. Noyes was an American who put his beliefs into action and dared to try something new. And during his lifetime, his experiment grew to be a $600,000 concern.

By prophecying something new, Noyes was criticizing the old. The Oneida Community used American co-operation and methods to become economically successful.

IFC Officers Installed At Weekend Retreat

A work-filled spring trimester will tax the administrative abilities of the new Inter-Fraternity Council officers: George Harriet, Sigma Chi, president; Bill Greenwood, Kappa Alpha, vice president; Mitch Franks, Sigma Nu, secretary; and Gary Southworth, Kappa Sigma, treasurer.

The officers, taking over their duties at the Panacea retreat this past weekend, discussed fraternity problems under the trimester system. Investigation into the present intramural program and rushing policy brought many recommendations.

Proposals were advanced for organizing a platoon rushing system, where rushees could visit houses in even groups, rather than descend on a few houses in waves of three hundred or more.

Hal Smith commented on the success of the weekend retreat. "The seriousness with which the men approached the discussions, and the various suggestions and ideas passed, indicated they were well informed on the problems and wanted to solve them and improve the system as a whole."

Last weekend, the IFC conducted an open house rush in an attempt to arouse interest and to better acquaint rushees with the fraternities on campus.

Next on the IFC agenda is the state IFC Conference, Feb. 23, which will be held on the FSU campus.

BRUSSELS--The first session of the European Common Market meeting in Brussels, Belgium, has ended with France standing firm on President de Gaulle's bold bid to deny membership to Britain and to reduce American influence in Europe. The session lasted more than four hours, with French Foreign Minister Couve De Murville steadily resisting pressures from ministers of the other common market countries. As the deadlocked session ended, Britain's chances of entering the continental trade and political grouping appeared slimmer than ever.

There will be another meeting in Brussels today. It will be preceded by a meeting of French and German ministers, who'll try to find some compromise that could keep Britain's application alive.

WASHINGTON--A Defense Department spokesman has disclosed what appears to be a tougher money policy toward the allies. His remarks indicate the U.S. now expects allies to share the costs of developing advanced weapons they get from this country. For one thing, he says the U.S. assumes the British will share in research and development costs of the Polaris missile, since the U.S. has shared in such costs of British projects.

WASHINGTON--President Kennedy, in an annual report to Congress, said 1962 was the most successful year in America's brief but active space history. He also gave a blueprint of many space projects planned for the future... topped by putting a man on the moon.

CLEMSON, S.C.--South Carolina, acting under court orders, has admitted a Negro student, 20-year-old Harvey Gantt, to state-supported Clemson College. State police and patrolmen were on hand to keep order, but there was no trouble. Gantt said, "My main purpose is to get an education." He is the first Negro to be enrolled in a publicly-supported South Carolina white school.

OXFORD, MISS.--Negro student James Meredith will hold a news conference Wednesday to announce whether he will return to the University of Mississippi for the spring semester. There have been numerous reports that Meredith, the first Negro knowingly admitted to the school, is quitting. He has said nothing definite about this.

BOSTON, MASS.--The condition of 88-year-old poet Robert Frost has weakened in the past 48 hours. Word from a hospital in Boston is that Frost's heart has not been responding to treatment as well as in previous weeks.

Seniors To Enter Air Force Training

Twenty-two FSU seniors and graduate students have applied for the Air Force Officer Training School, Lt. Col. Preston B. Hardy, professor of air science, announced today.

The Air Force is seeking additional applicants during the current calendar year for entry into the three-month course.

Last year, the Air Force increased its annual requirement for officers by several thousand, placing the task of increasing advanced course enrollments upon AFROTC. At FSU, the junior year enrollment numbered 73 cadets, largest in University history, and nearly triple enrollments for September, 1961. These students, however, will not begin to enter the Air Force until April, 1964.

At the present time, the Air Force is looking to its Officer Training School to fill the immediate requirement for officers and is seeking applicants.

Unruly UF Crowd Is Blasted

By HOWARD DENSON
Sports Editorial

For a supreme example of unsportsmanship, one only has to examine the recent Florida State-University of Florida basketball game, in which the Seminoles were nipped while playing "their best game of the season" (to quote Coach Bud Kennedy).

If Florida State's cagers were at their best, then surely the Florida fans were at their worst, for their behavior was strictly "bush," to again quote Kennedy.

The examples of the poor behavior are many. Before the game began, the crowds were engaged in childish hooting when the FSU team came onto the court for its first pre-game drills. This hooting resides in the realm of school spirit, but it was a hint of what was to come.

For example, the childish chortling inspired the Gator fans to thievery. Before the Seminoles returned to the court for the second pre-game drills, a member of the crowd swiped the Seminole basketballs, one of which (valued at $20) was never returned, and began a gigantic game of gymnasium "volleyball." From one end of the building to the other, the fans threw, bounced, and batted the basketball, disrupting any semblance of order and setting the stage for further unruliness.

During the game itself, the crowd plummeted to a new nadir of unsportsmanship.

It threw ice from their concession cokes upon the floor, causing several needless falls and countless delays in the game for the referees to wipe up the liquid. Besides being annoying, a slippery floor could be turned into tragedy in the future -- and not necessarily for only a Seminole.

The crowd engaged in a thing called the "yellow paper caper," which was a morbid thing thought up by the school newspaper. In the caper, the audience would wave yellow copy paper when the cheerleaders asked, "What color is FSU?"

Coach Kennedy and the few Seminole fans there objected to this for several reasons. One is that it is an unneccessary nuisance for a person shooting foul shots; another, is that the paper clutters the court; and a third, is that time-outs frequently have to be called.

These problems can be alleviated. Coach Norman Sloan of Florida has glared and growled at the crowd for many games, pleading with them to cease their misconduct. During the FSU-UF tilt, he personally ran out to the center of the court to remove a piece of ice.

The coke cups and ice cream wrappers would not be found, if the concession stand were outside the gym proper -- just as Florida State has its stand.

And we would not ask the Gators to practice the things we preach unless we also practiced them. Coach Kennedy showed he liked the opposition to have a square deal during the Houston contest when he asked a portion of the high-spirited spectators to quit blasting the Cougars with "bounces" while UH was at the foul line. The "bounces" stopped.

So should such unsportsmanship at away games.

Tribe Gymnasts Upend Techmen

Senior Rick Miller took first-place honors in four events to spark Florida State's gymnastic team to a 64 1/2--63 1/2 victory over Georgia Tech Saturday. Coach Joe Gusic expected a close meet and this it was; going into the last event Tech had a one point lead, 56 1/2 to 55 1/2. Miller and Atkinson overcame this lead by taking first and third in tumbling for the winning nine points.

Rick Miller registered a total of 34 points, placing first in floor exercises, parallel bars, tumbling, long horse, and second in the high bar and side horse.

Mitch Weinstock totaled 16 points, placing first on the long horse, third on side horse, fourth in rope climb, floor exercise, parallel bars, and fifth in the still rings.

Guy Atkinson totaled 6 1/2 points, placing second in floor exercise, third in tumbling. John Kimbrough totaled 6 points by winning the high bar and fifth in long horse. John Cory in his first meet picked up 2 points with two fifths in rope climb and side horse.

Jim Hampton had a mishap on the still rings. Losing his grip, Hampton snapped off the rings injuring his foot, thus preventing him from competing on the high bar, the other event he was to enter.

Coach Gusic's gymnastic team will host Tech in Tallahassee, Feb. 15-16 in their next competition.

Meyer Resigns Grid Post; Pete Hires Bobby Bowde

Assistant Coach Ken Meyer of Florida State's fo team has accepted a coaching position at the Unive of Alabama. Meyer, who is the only assistant the Coach Bill Peterson brought to FSU, will be rep by Bobby Bowden, head mentor at Howard Col

Meyer, who will begin duties Friday in Tuscaloosa, is expected to assume a position as an offensive backfield coach, a post he held at FSU. Previously, the 35-year-old Meyer coached the offensive line. Considered Peterson's Number One assistant, Meyr has generally been the overseer of FSU's offensive since he came here three years ago.

Meyer is a native of Erie, Pa., and played three years on the Denison College (Ohio) football team, which was coached by Ohio State's Woody Hayes at that time.

Then for six years, he was the backfield coach at Denison and later joined the Wake Forest staff as an assistant. He stayed at Wake Forest for two years.

Meyer said his stay at Florida State has been an enjoyable one, but that he couldn't pass up th bama position. "I give Coach son a lot of credit for teach things that I knew nothing ab I am sorry. . . I won't be when Coach Peterson realiz goals he has set for FSU; definitely think FSU is on th to those goals," Meyer said.

Bowden's Birmingham (Ala. played such schools as Furm Virginia Tech. Peterson sai den will join the FSU staff two weeks.

How far can your ideas take you in the new world of opportunity in data processing at IBM?

Growth and discovery: The development and application of data processing at IBM open a new world of exciting opportunities for individual career growth. Data processing is producing some of the most far-reaching developments of our age. Each basic advance in technology and application requires new concepts. Ideas—new thinking and new ways to approach problems—are needed. For the individual who likes to discard conventional solutions and find new ideas, there's room to grow in IBM.

IBM offers graduates with Bachelor's or advanced degrees in Engineering, the Sciences, Business Administration, Economics, or Liberal Arts challenging assignments in the marketing of information systems and equipment. These opportunities increase with each new system that is designed to meet the growing needs of business, industry, government, research, education, and space. Each technological advance and each new application can enlarge the scope of your own career at IBM.

A wide range of positions: Rewarding opportunities will exist in more than 190 IBM Sales and Service Offices, located in major cities throughout the United States. Positions open include:

Marketing-Sales: The IBM Data Processing Representative is a consultant to his customers. He calls on customer executives, giving timely information, presentations, and demonstrations for better business management and controls through data processing.

Systems Engineering: IBM Data Processing Systems Engineers are men and women who study customer requirements in depth, devise the best approach, define a preferred machine and operational solution, and assist in the implementation of this solution.

Customer Engineering: The IBM Customer Engineer is a specialist in precision data processing machines and systems. He is responsible for the installation, maintenance, and functioning of IBM's vast line of electronic and electromechanical equipment.

Opportunities for advancement: IBM offers you extensive initial training, both in the classroom and on the job, in the area of your special interest. This training continues as you advance along a planned career path leading to professional or managerial positions. IBM also offers company-sponsored education programs to keep you abreast of developments in your field, and a tuition-refund plan to give you financial assistance for graduate study.

Company-paid employee benefit plans are comprehensive, and include life insurance, family hospitalization and major-medical coverage, sickness and accident pay, and retirement benefits, to name but a few.

See your college placement director to determine when IBM will interview on campus, and make an appointment to see our representative. We will be glad to discuss openings and opportunities at IBM, including our training and education programs, financial rewards, and company benefits. IBM is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

WESTCOTT SWINGS TONIGHT

Dave Brubeck Quartet Performs Here Tonight

By CHRIS CLARKE
Flambeau Staff Writer

...ave Brubeck Quartet appears ... two performances in ...estcott Auditorium. ...ack, as pianist, will be assist... drummer Joe Morello, alto ... and bass player ... Wright. Brubeck, Morello ...Desmond were recently selected as the top jazz instrumentalists in the nation by "Playboy" magazine.

Tickets for the performances at 7 and 9 p.m. are still available. Prices are $2 for students and $3 for non-students.

Until 1951, Brubeck was leader of the Dave Brubeck Trio. In that year the sax of Desmond was added and so it has remained ever since.

Brubeck, the youngest of three boys, was born in Concord, California. His mother was a music teacher, providing him with both a musical background and lessons. A natural interest in music was furthered when he made his first contacts with jazz through his older brother. At 13, he was playing such diverse styles as hillbilly, swing and two-beat with local dance bands.

His musical studies were continued in college. In the army he met Paul Desmond. After his time in the service he returned to college, studying with composer Darius Milhaud at Mills College.

At Mills he organized a group known as "The 8." Jazz impresario Jimmy Lyons discovered them and the rest is jazz history. He is the world's top seller in the area of jazz records and has traveled extensively overseas with the Quartet.

Always on the lookout for material, he has incorporated rhythms and impressions gained throughout the world in his music. A recent album has dealt with themes and ideas picked up from these overseas travels. Along the same lines is his just released album "The Real Ambassadors" featuring the Brubeck Quartet, along with Louis Armstrong, Carmen McRae, and Lambert, Hendricks and Ross.

Another group, performing almost as often as the Quartet, is the Dave Brubeck Quintet. All the members of this ensemble have the same last name... Brubeck. They are Dave and four of his six children. Each child plays at least two instruments with the piano forming the basic instrument for everyone.

Tickets for the evening's performances are available in the Westcott ticket office.

Student Party Convene Opens Eleventh Year

Now in its eleventh year, the Student Party will open its 21st convention tomorrow night at 7 o'clock in Opperman Music Hall.

First order of business tomorrow night will be nominations for party officers, present party chairman Bill Greenwood announced today. Then will come the important task of the delegates--the nominations of party candidates for top campus-wide Student Government offices.

A charge of 25 cents a night for the two-night convention will be levied for delegates and visitors, with money collected to be used in the up-coming election.

On the agenda for tonight are nominations for the following Student Party offices: chairman, vice chairman, treasurer, recording secretary, corresponding secretary, campaign manager and publicity chairman. Delegates will then proceed to the Student Government nominations.

Candidates will be nominated for student body president, vice president, men's vice president women's vice president, secretary of Senate, and all other major offices not excluded by Constitutional prohibition.

Greenwood said that no posters may be attached to the wall in the auditorium, although posters and other literature may be distributed at the convention. Originally scheduled to begin tonight, the convention has been cancelled for one night because of conflicting student activities.

"Party officials predict a successful convention, with many exciting surprises for everyone who attends," Greenwood added.

In addition to Greenwood as party chairman, other party officers now include George Miller, vice chairman; Joe Prater, treasurer; Barbara Boermea, recording secretary; Kathy Alonso, corresponding secretary; Dick Johnson, campaign manager; Mike Green, publicity chairman, and Jan Walker, chairman of dorm whips.

Homecoming Set For 1963

The dates for FSU's Homecoming for 1963 have been set for Nov. 15-16, the weekend of the North Carolina State College game.

Dr. Warren Nation, professor of marketing, will be chairman for the 1963 observance, President Gordon W. Blackwell said, and Patrick W. Hogan, director of public relations, will be associate chairman.

Co-chairmen will be Ed Eissey of West Palm Beach, president of the FSU Alumni Association, and a member of the student body to be selected after the spring elections.

Dr. Blackwell also announced that Legislative Day has been set for Oct. 12. On that date, FSU will clash with Wake Forest in a night football game.

Ceramics And Weaving Exhibition Is Scheduled

A ceramics and weaving exhibition showing the work of nine of America's leading crafts-designers will open at the FSU Art Gallery, Thursday.

All the designers represented in the FSU show are on the faculty of the School for American Craftsmen, Rochester Institute of Technology. The exhibition in the gallery, located on the second floor of West Dining Hall, will be up through Feb. 19.

Among the crafts included in the show are a silver service, silver chalices, ceramics, weaving, furniture and mosaics. One of the more unusual examples of craftwork is the custom-made silver holloware.

A silver teapot by Hans Christianson is considered a good example of the silver holloware craftsmanship.

Trained in Denmark and Sweden, Christianson since coming to this country in 1957, has won many top awards for his silver design.

Another award winner represented in the show is Frans Wildenhain. Although he is best known for his pottery, he recently completed commissions for mosaics and large ceramic bas-reliefs for new buildings in New York and Washington. Included in the exhibition are several of his ceramic containers. Wildenhain was trained at the Bauhaus in Germany.

Included in the exhibition are works representative of new techniques in weaving and furniture construction. One of these, a walnut chest by Wendell Castle, is noted for its joining of wood and construction.

The School For American Craftsmen was established by the American Craftsmen's Council as a center for advanced study and research in crafts design. From the faculty have come some of the new innovations in techniques and materials found in the field of design. In the exhibit are many pieces that reflect the creative research of the faculty.

Writers Blast Riggins

To the Editor:

As a follower of what passes for political commentary in our student newsletter, I feel called upon to pick up the gauntlet which has been hurled with such vehemence by our whimsical partisan of socialism.

I feel that when our friend repeats his party line on such subjects as foreign policy, economics, and social reform, he is serving a useful purpose as an apologist for an unpopular view. However, I object to the attempts at creativity in his trying to draw philosophical conclusions from an obvious ignorance of the implications of such propositions. I refer specifically to Mr. Riggin's article entitled "Men Can Rule With Reason." Contained within this article are two assumptions which I would question. First is the view that the Christian doctrine of the innate depravity of man is contradictory to our cherished views of democracy. Secondly is the suggestion of the author that we reject all previous doctrines dealing with the evil nature of man or that we give up democracy. Such propositions reflect abysmal ignorance which the lessons of history have attempted to rectify. Allow me to enumerate:

Primarily, I would answer that the view of man expressed by legitimate Christianity does not disagree so much with the fact that man can rule himself in the political realm as it does with the fact that man as such cannot perfect himself completely and come to self-fulfillment entirely through political and social manipulations. This view implies that man cannot achieve all he is capable of being by education and "the necessary knowledge." It does not imply that man is incapable of making his world better and fulfilling himself in the political realm. It holds to the fact that man is a finite creature ultimately dependent upon his creator for his self-fulfillment. Thus the implication become the fact that man must accept some limitations in terms of his political life if he is to have any self-fulfillment at all, i.e. note our constitution's insistence upon checks and balances in regulating the governing of the people and their own participation in this process.

Secondly, I would answer that Mr. Riggin's suggestion that we abandon the view of man's limitations (i.e. evil nature) or abandon democracy is somewhat abortive. This choice was made, as you no doubt will remember, Mr. Riggins, when the political exponents of the philosophy of the Enlightenment enshrined the goddess of reason in Notre Dame, the ultimate end of which was the reign of terror. History amply demonstrates that in accepting the proposition that man is a creature of pure reason and amenable to rational persuasion will lead inevitably to a reign of terror.

Thus I think Mr. Riggin's obviously sincere concern over the axiological schizophrenia which he finds when he attempts to develop his social philosophy stems from a misunderstanding of both his philosophy's fuller implications and the teachings of both the church and history.

William Collins

Doesn't Apply To Human Beings

To the Editor:

Mr. Riggins' article ("Man Can Rule With Reason") asserts that democracy assumes a natural goodness in men. Democracy assumes nothing about human ethical values. In fact, it only assumes one thing, viz. that popular participation in government is a feasible method of political activity. The assertion that mankind is to be "kept from evil due to his ability to reason" is the epitome of naivete. This supposed relation between reason and ethics simply doesn't exist. The suggestion that "we" give up all former doctrines of man's evil nature means that Christianity would be given up. But to ask that Christianity be given up is to ask for something that has already been done, 2000 years ago in fact. Perhaps Mr. Riggins is confusing Christianity with Christendom. Perhaps, too, he thinks that democracy possesses some ethical superiority too, say, monarchy. Ethically, democracy differs from monarchy only in that it allows political iniquities to be committed by everyone, instead of by just one person. Take your pick, Mr. Riggins. I find them both repulsive. In short, your meliorism, based on "science and history," is beautiful. It simply doesn't apply to human beings.

Sincerely,
John Hopkins

Letters Policy

Letters to the editor and student comment are welcomed by the "Flambeau." We firmly believe that students should have an organ through which their opinions and views can be aired.

We will attempt to print all letters received that meet standards of good taste, conciseness of thought and quality of presentation. In addition, letters must be held to a maximum of 250 words.

At no time will letters containing material which is libelous or in bad taste be printed.

K. Retains Basic Aims

To the Editor:

Reply: Riggins' "Explains Support of K."

While I support Riggins' right to write as he wishes, I feel that some obvious misconceptions were presented which need to be more fully examined.

Khrushchev has not given up the basic aims of the Stalinists. He still intends to control a Communist world, and he will use the best means available to accomplish this end. He realizes, moreover, that nuclear war would only mean the destruction of all mankind--both Capitalistic and Communistic; therefore, he continues to use a slower, but thus far just as sure, method of obtaining world domination.

It would be dangerous to assume, as many Americans have, that this "peaceful" co-existence will continue indefinitely. As soon as Mr. Khrushchev feels that he is losing ground he will not hesitate to unleash the full arsenal of Soviet might in an effort to complete the world-wide fulfillment of the Communistic movement.

Yours truly,
Carl J. Domino

"Exactly! Why Shouldn't He Break Away?"

Counselors Deserve Than

To the Editor:

The other day, while surveying the spaciousness of the Kellum in my usual lack of attire, I was startled by what I woman's voice. I didn't know whether to run in an attempt to young thing's shock at seeing my near nudity or to turn and sounded to me like an utterly sensuous young damsel.

Because of my obesity, running would have been difficult, but, alas, it was only one of our busy Assistant Counselors. All to know was why I didn't put some Scotch tape on the heels flops so as to cut down the disturbing noise. I informed him was an extreme shortage of tape because he had used it all up signs pertaining to various activities such as: drinking, qui Smokers, and the use of the John.

I think this points out what a fine and sensible job those offshoot cancers) of the Offices of the Deans of Men and Women are doing functions in the dorms. I think they all deserve a little thanks--

Harvard Lecturer Initiates Accounting Lecture Series

Dr. Robert T. Sprouse, visiting lecturer in business administration at Harvard University's Graduate School of Business Administration, will initiate a lecture series on accounting procedures at FSU Thursday.

Dr. Sprouse was recently selected as the Florida Institute of Certified Public Accountants Lecturer for 1962-63. His address will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Starry Conference Room and the public is invited.

Dr. Sprouse, during 1957-58, participated in a study to provide methods of cost, schedule and budget control over missile system programs at the Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Ala. He has served as research consultant for the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and is the author of "A Tentative Set of Broad Accounting Principles for Business Enterprises" accounting research study, American Institute of CPA's, New York, 1962.

He is at the present time a lecturer at Harvard while on leave from assignments as chairman of the accounting faculty at the University of California School of Business Administration.

WFSU—FM

"Where Minds Meet," an examination of man's speech as a means of communication, will be broadcast over WFSU-FM tonight at 8 p.m., according to the radio program schedule for this week.

At 8:30 p.m., Dr. Paul J. Piccard, associate professor of government and honors program director, will be guest moderator on "FSU Forum." Dr. Earl Beck, professor of history, and Miss Elke Frank, assistant professor of government, will participate in a discussion entitled "New Franco-German Relations."

WASHINGTON--Congress has received President Kennedy's new Federal Aid to Education bill without any great show of enthusiasm. Some members quickly criticized the idea of putting all education proposals in a single package. The President said the single-package bill was designed to meet objections that smashed his school bill hopes in the past.

NEW YORK--The American Red Cross has announced that a third ship to carry ransom supplies to Cuba will start loading at Baltimore Monday. The vessel will be used to carry drugs, medical supplies, powdered milk and other supplies to Cuba. This will be another installment in the supply operation agreed upon for the return of 1,113 prisoners taken in the Bay of Pigs invasion. of Cuba.

JACKSON, MISS.--James Meredith plans to reveal today at a news conference in Jackson, Mississippi, whether he will return for the spring term at the University of Mississippi. The 29-year-old Negro has not yet given any inkling of what his decision will be. His enrollment as the first known Negro at Ole Miss came last October after a massive struggle between state and federal forces.

In South Carolina, Harvey Gantt went through an uneventful first day as the first Negro student at state-supported Clemson College.

NEW YORK--U.N. Secretary General U Thant says prospects of achieving a nuclear test ban treaty are brighter now than at any time in the history of the United Nations. Thant made the statement at U.N. headquarters--as U.S., British and Soviet negotiators switched their talks on a nuclear test ban treaty from Washington to New York.

WASHINGTON--The nation has paused in its many affairs to mourn the passing of a poet--Robert Frost--who died in his 89th year. President Kennedy said Frost's death "leaves a vacancy in the American spirit."

CALPURNIA, HERE I COME

[illegible] college year approaches its mid-point, one fact [illegible] clearly: you are all going to flunk everything.

[illegible] things you can do about it. First, you can [illegible] I don't mean you marry the money itself. I mean you marry a person who has money. Weddings between [illegible] and currency have not been legal anywhere in the United [illegible] since the Smoot-Hawley Act. But I digress. I was saying you can marry money but, [illegible] you will not because you are a high-minded, clean-[illegible] pure-hearted, freckle-faced American kid. Therefore, to [illegible] you must try the second method you must [illegible] lecture notes.

It may, incidentally, be of some historical interest to point [illegible] Californians are not the only people who don't know [illegible] lecture notes. The Romans didn't know them themselves. I suppose they could tell you how much V or X were or like that, but when it came to real cuties like LXI or MMC, they just flang away their styluses and went downtown to have a [illegible] at the circus and maybe stab Caesar a few times. [illegible] wonder why Rome stuck with these ridiculous [illegible] the Arabs had such a nice, simple system. Well [illegible] that the Emperor Vespasian tried like crazy to [illegible] numerals from Suleiman the Magnificent but [illegible] didn't do business—not even when Vespasian [illegible] up to 100,000 gold piastres, plus he offered to throw [illegible] Coliseum, the Appian Way, and Charlton Heston.

[illegible] stuck with Roman numerals—to its sorrow, as it turned out. One day in the Forum, Cicero and Pliny got to arguing about how much is CDL times MVIX. Well sir, pretty [illegible] in town came around to join the hassle. In all the excitement, nobody remembered to lock the north gate and wham!—before you could say pecca fortiter, in rushed the [illegible] Visigoths, and the Green Bay Packers.

Well sir, that's the way the empire crumbles, and I digress. Let's get back to lecture notes. Let's also say a word about [illegible] cigarettes. The makers would be so pleased! And is it not fitting that we should please these honest tobacconists—[illegible] fond of square dancing, water sports, protein, [illegible] tattoos—these tireless perfectionists who spend all of their [illegible] trying to please us—searching everywhere for the best of all possible tobaccos, aging them with patience, blending them with tender, loving care? Sour Grapes Conference Is Planned?

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Sports Editor

Plenty of pro-Southeastern Conference has been voiced on campus, but there is still the anti-SEC feeling present. Even this writer has at times joined the crowd that screams at FSU's having to lick the heels of the SEC--in hopes of gaining future membership.

Every time the SEC executive committee blackballs the Seminoles, FSU students and fans are apt to say, "We don't need the SEC. We are much better than the SEC."

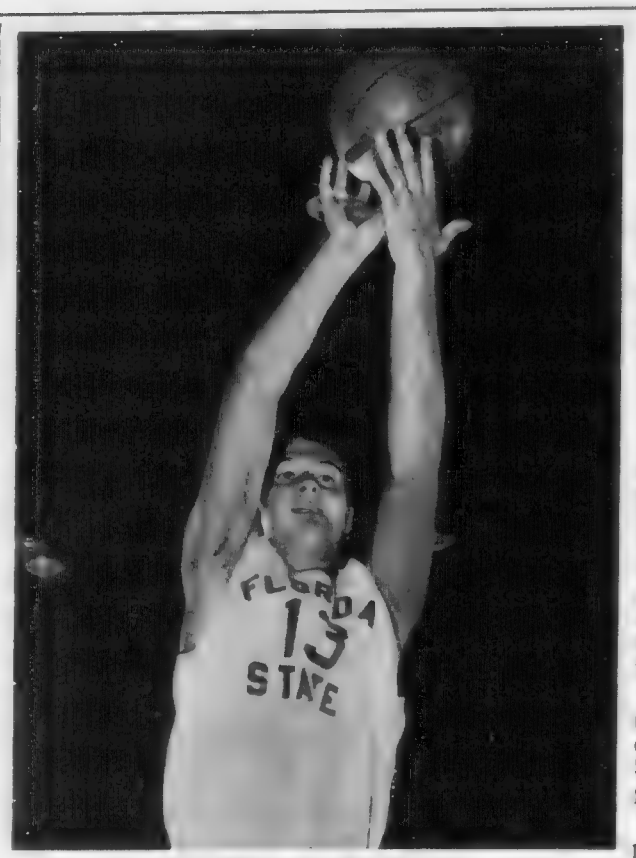
Of course, this truth is relative. In academics, many SEC schools would even make the rating scale in comparison with the Seminoles; and the Seminoles have to strain to make the football rating of someone like Bear Bryant.

The near future may alter that statement, but let it suffice for now.

Nonetheless, despite the truth being sought, it all boils down to the fans' and administration's wanting the FSU teams to be nationally-known. The SEC is one of the quickest ways to obtain this national reputation.

But, some say, so is a vigorous, high-spending athletic budget such as the University of Miami has, for not so long ago, the Hurricanes were belaboring under the reputation of just a small college.

Either course--through the SEC or an independent program--will bring national attention to our money sports, which are football and basketball.



And to designate a sport as a $$$-sport angers many students, who point out that Florida State once had the championship U.S. gymnastic team, the swimming team is a consistent regional champ, the golfers and netters knock off all opposition... and this is all true, but it still doesn't alter one fact: FSU is not at this time a nationally-known and feared university in sports.

If FSU were, the northern press would have selected the Seminole basketball team to attend the National Invitational Basketball Tournament last year instead of Navy, which had a poorer record and lost out in the first round.

"Well, then," several students ask, "why must FSU join just the SEC; aren't there other conferences?" Yes, there are: the Southern and the Atlantic Coast, but Florida State appears too big to wear the pants of these leagues.

The Flambeau, looking for a third solution, suggests that all the major independents--FSU, Miami, Houston, Memphis State, Southern Mississippi, etc.--get together and form their own association.

It could be called "The Sour Grapes Conference," featuring teams that are too good for the SEC.

TURNS THE TIDE

Senior Charlie Long, who has been hitting a 21-point pace in the last nine games, tallied 23 markers against the Crimson Tide and dropped in the winning FSU field goal.

Long Keys Tribe Win

The Florida State basketball team edged past the Alabama Crimson Tide Monday night when senior Charlie Long sank a last-second overtime field goal. When the buzzer sounded, the scoreboard read, 63-61, and Coach Bud Kennedy has gotten his third win over Bama this season and upped his record to 11-9.

For the Crimson Tide, however, it meant a 10-6 record.

For a while, the Tide threatened to pull a home court victory, for the Alabamans regained the lead with two minutes left in the first half. At the halfway mark, Bama led, 35-31, although it had been behind as much as seven points in the first session.

Going into the stretch, however, the Seminoles and Crimson Tide swapped the lead 14 times and at the end of the regulation time, the contest was tied, 56-56.

It looked like Alabama's game in the overtime as J.W. Berry, who tallied a game high of 26 points for the Tide, gave Bama a 58-56 lead. Then James Booth bucketed another for Bama.

Finally the senior Long, who scored 23 points, dropped in a free throw for FSU's first overtime score; but Alabama erased the point with a charity toss by Buster Sullivan.

Alabama was trying for another point, when guard Pete Gonzalez stole the ball and charged down the court for an effortless layup. The score was 61-59. Then Long tied it u 61.

With 45 seconds left, Bob Ek of FS mied another Bama score by a secon and allowed Florida State to freeze th The ball came out of the icebox for goo 14 seconds left. When the overtime was over, Long shot a one-handed jumper fr top of the key to break up the game.

In all major statistical departments (free throws), the Seminoles were ahead nedy's crew sank 27-of-50 from the flo compared to Alabama's 20-of-51, and rebounded the Crimson Tide, 32-31. Th was hotter at the charity line, 21 to FSU's two double figure scorers were who sank 10-of-18 field goals and 3 free throws, and center Jerry Shirley 14 points. Shirley, who nearly snak a 3 desperation shot in the last second regulation time, was successful on 7- tries from the floor. Not getting to free throw, Shirley grabbed game re ing honors with 14 missed shots.

Besides Berry's 26 markers, Alaba only one other player that cracked 10 Bob Andrews did this by tallying 12 on 4-of-13 field goal tries and 4-of- throw attempts.

In the freshman game, the FSU team so successful, for the Alabama frosh 58-53. The leading scorer for the gam Alabama's Tommy Parker.

SEC Blackballs Seminole

Florida State has once again failed to gain entry into the Southeastern Conference, "losing" by a unanimous vote at the executive meeting in Atlanta. The executive council, which is made up of the college presidents of the 12-member conference, turned down a motion by UF President Wayne Reist to enlarge the conference.

There was never a second, so FSU's third bid failed.

Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha of FSU said the university would try and try again, but he admitted that the Seminoles may not succeed until one of the 12 members withdraws.

Earlier, probably Florida State's only support came from Athletic Director Ray Graves of the University of Florida. Graves, also the head football coach, had a somewhat selfish reason for supporting FSU: The Gators have to play the Seminoles anyway, under state directive.

And, adding this compulsory game to the six required SEC geames, the Gators can play only two intersectional contests.

As expected, however, Florida's advocacy of FSU fell upon deaf ears, for all SEC members do not want the conference enlarged, maintaining it is too cumbersome as it is. FSU entry would boost the number of schools to 13, the number that the conference had when it was formed in 1933.

Potential entrants in the conference have put forth ideas of splitting the conference in order to quiet the "too big" cries. In 1960, it was proposed the conference be split into East and West divisions with eight teams each. This would have opened the door for Florida State and Miami in the East and Houston and Mississippi Southern in the West. However, this motion failed too.

Another reason for member schools opposing FSU's entry is that an extra member would ruin the scheduling of basketball games, for the conference is divided into three groups, wich play each other. FSU would cause an odd man.

Although FSU would make the football scheduling easier, many members do not want the Seminoles to share in the wealth that has been built up in recent years by Director Bernie Moore.

Mancha said FSU would be helped by SEC membership in such areas as recruiting, scheduling, and finances, while FSU could help the conference by offering stabilization of athletic and academic quality.

Two paths now lie before the Seminoles:

Wait for an SEC member to drop out or for the conference to be split, thus letting FSU in.

Start a vigorous independent program, such as the University of Miami has done. The Hurricanes, after fighting the small college reputation for years, have buried the old bit nickname and have the ra reputation that the FSU admin tion desires.

Since Florida State is waiti entry, the SEC will probably upon the Seminoles most favo Mississippi, which already ha SEC teams (par for the course cept in Florida), will probably little luck getting Southern M sippi into the conference. Like Memphis State, which wants in SEC, will lose out to FSU becau volunteer state has two SEC te Houston is too far away and do offer the central location tha does.

FSU Audience Hears Norman Cousins Speak

Norman Cousins, one of the nation's best-known editors and authors, will be the first speaker in FSU's University Lecture Series, appearing in Westcott Auditorium at 8:30 p.m. tonight, with a talk on the subject "World Report," which will be free and open to the public.

A former newspaper reporter and the editor of the "Saturday Review" since 1939, Cousins has made the world his "beat," traveling widely and sending back reports which have sometimes put him in the middle of raging controversies.

One of his most recent dispatches reported from Rome on the "open window" policy of Pope John and the current Saturday Review carries his eyewitness report on a kind of counter-revolution of taste in the Soviet Union, where art lovers are operating without official criticism in departure from the "poster art" that the government has heretofore insisted upon.

In connection with his editorship of the Saturday Review, Cousins has been in every corner of America, around the world several times. In 1959 he visited and lectured in the Soviet Union under the American-Soviet cultural exchange program. He was the first American to speak on questions of foreign policy before the Praesidium of the Soviet Peace Committee. He also lectured before the Soviet Writers' Union and the Academy of Social Science. In November, 1960, he was organizer and co-chairman of a conference held at Dartmouth College between Soviet and American scientists, economists and other leaders from the two countries in the first of its kind. Subsequently, he has been co-chairman of the second of these conferences in the Crimea, and the third in October, 1962, held here in the States. He was also American representative to the Indian Government's observances of the Tagore Centenary.

As an interpreter and analyst of history-in-the-making, Cousins has made trips to the Far East since the end of World War II. He has represented not only the Saturday Review, but the National Broadcasting Company at such events-as the Egypt-Israel crisis in 1956-57; the Asian-African conference in Indonesia in1955; the East-West crisis in Germany in 1953; the Korean War in 1951. Another trip in 1951 was under the sponsorship of the US Government, during which time he lectured in universities and public forums in India, Pakiston, Ceylon and Japan on the subject of America's relationship with the rest of the world. He was exchange lecturer in Japan under the auspices of the America-Japan Institute for Cultural Interchange.

In 1958 and 1959 he traveled to Poland to arrange for the visit to America of some 38 Polish women, victims of Nazi medical experimentation. Earlier, he had carried out a similar project to aid Japanese victims of the Hiroshima A-bombing.

His books include "In Place of Folly," an outline of the essential facts of the nuclear arms race together with a specific presentation of alternatives; "Dr. Schweitzer of Lambarene," a personal account of his discussions with Albert Schweitzer at the jungle hospital; "In God We Trust," dealing with the philosophies and religious beliefs of the American Founding Fathers; "Who Speaks for Man," a plea for the end of the age of anarchy and the beginning of the age of world law; "The Good Inheritance," a case history of Athenian democracy with a comparable analysis of American democracy; "Modern Man is Obsolete," which grew out of his widely-circulated editorial; "Talks with Nehru;" "A Treasury of American Democracy," a collection of aphorisms of freedom; and "The Poetry of Freedom," edited with the late William Rose Benet. He was also the editorial supervisor of March's "Dictionary Thesaurus."

Student Govt. Elections

University Party Nominates Slate

At the University Party convention, Johnny Smith and Julian Procter were chosen candidates to head the party ticket in the upcoming campus Student Government elections to be Feb. 19.

Smith, presently holding office as vice president of the student body, received the UP nomination for student body president. Julian Procter, who will run for student body vice president, now is president of the Sophomore Class.

Nominated for men's vice president was Frank Ryll, who is now a student senator. Andy Olsen is running for traffic court chairman, and Phyllis Doud will be the UP candidate for secretary of the Senate. Nominated for two of the three elected positions on the Student Board of Publications were Bob Foss and Lana Murray.

Lyman Fletcher, party chairman, was the keynote speaker. Results of party elections were as follows: Louis Barnett, party chairman; Gary Woods, vice chairman; Carolyn Grismer, recording secretary; Joan Spann, corresponding secretary; and Steve Squires, treasurer.

Two amendments were passed changing the University Party constitution. The first stipulated that the publicity director, campaign director, and platform chairman will henceforth be appointed by the chairman, with the approval of the executive committee, instead of being elected.

The other amendment stipulated that party officers shall maintain a 2.0 overall average in order to continue in their positions.

The party platform, read by Arnie Gibbs and adopted unanimously, contained several major points, including: a true division of the Senate legislature into two parties, for the better functioning of the Student Government under the trimester system; realization of the University promotional film; promotion of Student Senate Bill 12, concerning Honor Court revision; improvement of Student Government through year-round operation.

Freedom of expression for FSU through academic freedom and responsible freedom of the press; increase in freedom for women students; improvement of communications between Student Government and the student body; promotion and construction of a new University Hospital, now being planned; and vigorous expression of student views.

Republic Day Is Celebrated

Students and faculty members from India Saturday celebrated the thirteenth anniversary of the Republic Day of India.

A large number of Americans and foreign students participated in the celebrations. Mrs. Padmini Rajappa began the program with an invocation song, which was followed by a welcome address by Mr. Khandekar and a speech by Mr. Surendra explaining the significance of Republic Day.

Khandekar then played some Indian songs on the flute, and three movies were shown. Subjects of the three movies were the Republic Day celebration at New Delhi in 1955; the Bharat Natyam dances performed by a South Indian dancer; and Dr. Hartley Price's film made during his stay in India as a Fulbright scholar in 1958-59.

The program was concluded with the singing of Indian and American national anthems.

A small exhibition of Indian costumes and handicraft was arranged and Indian refreshments were served.

Senate Convenes; Takes Retreat, Trimester Action

A bill providing for the appointment of an Under-secretary to serve solely as chairman of the FSU Student Government Retreat Bureau was passed in Senate yesterday.

Senator Arnie Gibbs, author of the bill, explained that the bill had been drawn up upon the recognition of the present Secretary of Intercollegiate Affairs, Kitty Miller.

Women's Vice President Jeanie Perlitta contended that the office of Intercollegiate Affairs had been created mainly to facilitate the retreat. "If we keep on adding people, we're going to have just a huge bureaucracy with a lot of people doing nothing. I think we should strengthen our cabinet positions by giving them more to do," she added.

Gaines Pickett, presently serving as Under-secretary of Intercollegiate Affairs, maintained that under the present statutes, it was extremely difficult for the secretary to perform all the duties of her office. The bill was passed by a favorable majority.

The Trimester Committee introduced a bill pertaining to the tenure of office for the Chief Justice of Honor Court, Chairman of University Court, and the Clerk of Honor Court. The bill was referred to committee for further deliberations.

Senate waived the rules of procedure to consider Senate Bill 23 which amends the elections procedure. Senator Joyce Killian, one of the authors of the bill, explained that the bill corrected an oversight in the Statutes. In the past it has been the policy of the Secretary of Elections to include the office of Clerk of the Honor Court on the major student body elections ballot. However, there has been no provision in the statutes for such a decision. The bill was passed unanimously.

A resolution urging that certain of the cabinet officers be required to continue in year round service was introduced by the Trimester Committee. The bill was based on a recommendation of President Ken van Assenderp.

Secretary of Finance Frank Milwee pointed out to the senators that a resolution cannot "require" of anyone but its members. The resolution was amended to read: "strongly recommend." Secretary Milwee went on to explain that the President could operate without a cabinet, but that the cabinet could not operate without a President. "The cabinet merely functions as an advisory unit to the President. Our actions are not legal without his sanction," said Milwee. The resolution was defeated.

A further resolution authored by Senator Tom Sisco calls for an investigating committee "to study the feasibility of giving the responsibility of signing a form excusing bedridden students from their classes to dorm counselors and housemothers of sororities and fraternities, and that these forms be sent to the respective Dean's Office for approval." The bill was passed and a committee consisting of Senators Sisco, Brooks, Marshall, and McDowell was appointed to study the situation and to present appropriate recommendations.

Chief Justice Ross McVoy administered the oath of office to newly appointed Senators Gene McDowell and Justus Reid.

The residents of Landis Hall were the official guests of Senate.

Luther H. Hodges Gives Commencement Address

Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges, a former governor of North Carolina, will be the speaker at FSU's 1963 commencement April 20.

Commencement ceremonies will be held at 2 p.m. in Campbell Stadium and Governor Farris Bryant will introduce the speaker, according to an announcement by Duncan Moore, president of the Senior Class.

Hodges joined the Cabinet of President Kennedy on Jan. 21, 1961, just after the President took office.

Hodges was born in Virginia 64 years ago. His family moved to North Carolina in 1900. He was graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1919 and after brief military service began his career in the textile industry.

In 1938 he became general manager in charge of manufacturing for Marshall Field and Company and in 1943 became vice president of this corporation. During World War II he served as head of the Textile Division of the Office of Price Administration and as a consultant to the secretary of agriculture.

In 1950, after retiring from private business, Hodges went to West Germany for more than a year with the Economic Cooperation Administration. Becoming lieutenant governor North Carolina, he succeeded to two years of a gubernatorial term on the death of the incumbent, and then was elected to a four-year term.

The Saturday commencement, completing the second trimester of the 1962-62 school year, will be the only commencement of the year.

A Statute Needed

Like a frustrated farmer, Student Senate is attempting to close the barn after the horse has gotten out. It is an exercise in futility.

Last week the Senate trimester committee recommended a constitutional amendment that would bind the Student Body President to serving this summer. Since the amendment would be passed simultaneously with the election, the Senate adjudged it ex post facto and set the effective date as September 1.

Yesterday, a resolution was submitted asking that five key cabinet members, Secretary of State, Secretary of Finance, Secretary of Student Welfare, Secretary of Student Events, and Attorney General, be "required" to be in school during the third trimester. It was amended to state "strongly recommended" that they stay since a resolution actually has no binding force.

If their objective is to keep Student Government going during the third trimester, then they should go about it properly.

According to the Constitution, Article III, Section I, "All executive powers of the Student Body shall be vested, furing the regular session, in the President of the Student Body...." During the Regular Session is the key phrase. This has not been clearly defined.

The Senate could define this with a statutory change stating that a "Regular Session" will consist of three full trimesters. Since this would be passed before election, ex post facto would not be involved.

One problem arises. The Constitution, Article VI, provides for a Summer Council. This however, could be struck by an amendment deleting it from the Constitution.

If in the unlikely event the amendment fails, Senate could simply pass a bill deleting the definition of "Regular Session" from the Statutes, averting a problem of having two governmental structures.

All of this could have been avoided had the Trimester Committee proposed the Constitutional amendment last Trimester, so that could have been legally effected. Their indolence has caused this needless confusion. A strong argument could be prepared indicating that there will be actually no real need for a full Student Government this summer, since anticipated enrollments are low. This could well be true. But if the Senate is intent on requiring that the President remain, they should go about it in a proper manner. BCS

LONDON--In a nationwide address, British Prime Minister MacMillan says the present government of France is looking backwards, not forwards. He adds: "They seem to think one nation can dominate Europe." MacMillan says Britain must cooperate with the rest of the world, with the U.S. in an equal and honoarble partnership. And he says, "That is why we in Britain are determined to stand by the Atlantic Alliance."

MacMillan's angry, 12-minute broadcast last night was his first public comment on France's veto Tuesday of Britain's application to join the European Common Market.

WASHINGTON--The U.S. Government says France's blocking of British entry into the Common Market can do no more than delay strengthening of the Atlantic Community. The State Department calls the breakdown of negotiations for British entry "most unfortunate." But the states adds the U.S. will continue to pursue policies to strengthen NATO, create a multi-nation nuclear defense force and liberalize trade.

NEW YORK--The U.S. accuses the Castro Regime in Cuba of declaring war against the hemisphere, and urges Latin American nations to redouble their vigilance against Castro subversion. That's the substance of a note handed to the chairman of a special Organization of American States Committee on Cuba.

WASHINGTON--The Pentagon proposes a drastic shakeup of the reserve officers training program. It would withdraw support of the junior ROTC course in high schools and streamline the college program.

Legislature Needs Bible

The legislature is back in special session again to try and solve the problems of reapportionment. This brings to mind that great debt that we as students owe to the lawmakers of our state. Despite the fact that they are pressed for time and busy trying to iron out their sectional differences, they still find room to care for our welfare and ideals.

After the furor about last trimester's articles in the Flambeau--rputed by some to be similar to the "Manifesto"-- I turned to my Bible for comfort and solace. Fondly holding the old book I turned to "Acts" 4:31-35 and silently read:

"And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together: and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness. And the multitudes of them that believed were of one heart and one soul: Neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common. And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all.

"Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and bought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need."

The words seemed familiar, almost like something I had read in a book a few hours before. Some 19th century German philosopher and a friend of his had written it but the names escaped me for a moment. At least it was good writing, but soon the implications of what I read began to dawn upon me. Many people in our small part of the world are unduly shocked by such sentiments as I had just seen expressed. They might even feel that prolonged expo ideas of this sort might have a rupting effect on them. Well thank goodness we a legislature that worries ab and well it is that some legi feel compelled to shield u such evil literature.

As I put the Bible down, I to really feel sorry for all the problems that face our tired an rassed lawmakers-- perhaps only had a theological school everyone read the Bible and s religion and philosophy we w even need a legislature.

Hell's Made Of Word Magic

TO THE EDITOR:

These are some of the best means of solving human problems. The best general method is the proper incantation of Good Words and bad words.

Say: "The victims are inferior, deserve their fate, and prefer it." "There is good and bad in everything." "Alll have some facet of the truth." "You can't fight the system." "There is nothing that an individual can do." "Don't disturb team spirit." "Let Jack do it." "Everything is 'Jes fine'." "The future in unrelated to the past." "No one is responsible; I follow orders and the leaders are crazy." "There is still time brother." "Science will produce a gadget at the last minute." "It is a State's Right" (to avoid responsibility). "Concern is due to a guilt complex." "Everything I do wrong is someone else's fault." "Everyone does it." "Private greed is more important than public need." or "It builds character."

Others: Have a good cry. State good intentions. Repeat wishful statements and pious platitudes. Pass resolutions. Assign it to a committee. Throw out an authority's verbal fog. Develop impossible plans. Discuss "means" that are goal descriptions. Declare it to be due to man's uchangeable nature, accident, history, or mysterious forces. Blame conspirators and witches. Exorcize demons. Punish devils. Balance the budget exactly. Twist, anyone?

The hells on earth are constructed of rationalizations and word magic. Here are some Good Words: "...I am involved in Mankind; And therefore never seem to know for whom the bell tolls; It tolls for thee."-- John Donne.

Brazil 3-FSU 2

By Ronaldo Olive

A team of Brazilian students, at FSU for an intensive five week study of English, defeated the FSU Soccer Club 3-2 yesterday.

That was the second time the Brazilians defeated FSU in soccer. Last week they scored two to one against the Soccer Club.

The game started at 4:30 p.m. During the first half, Samuel Reitman and Sergio Vilela scored for Brazil. Hunz Haas scored for FSU.

In the second half, Reitman scored again for Brazil. Haas made the second goal for FSU.

The FSU Soccer Team invited the Brazilians to a game against the University of Florida that will take place in Campbell Stadium February 9.

Since Jan. 15, 1962, the Circle K-ettes have been a probationary chapter of Gamma Sigma Sigma, national service sorority whose purpose is to assemble university women in the spirit of service and friendship.

Women students interested in being rushed by Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority may sign up by Saturday in their respective dormitories.

Since Gamma Sigma Sigma is based on service, it is the policy of the sorority to include in its membership both social sorority members and non-members who are duly enrolled and in good standing with the university.

When can one join? Rush will be held Feb. 10, by invitation only, from 3 to 5 p.m. One girl will be asked by each member of the chapter, and two girls from each dorm who have been suggested by the residence counselors will receive rush invitations. Of the rushees, approximately 15 girls will be pledged. If those interested (who have a 2.0 average) will speak to their junior counselors, they will be recommended for invitations to the rush.

His interest in the field of nuclear energy began the day the first atomic bomb exploded. That day he wrote the editorial, "Modern Man is Obsolete," defining the basic challenges of the nuclear age. The book foresaw the tensions that would emerge between the great powers and called for development of a United Nations strong enough to administer both world security and world justice. The editorial, translated into seven languages, had a total circulation of seven million copies. In 1953 his book "Who Speaks for Man" developed this concern. The book was voted the most important non-fiction work of Spring, 1953, and went into five printings.

Gray, FSU Graduate, Named To US Team

Florida State's Downing Gray, who finished second in the National Amateur Golf Championship Tournament, has been named one of the members of the 10-man team which will meet Great Britain's amateur golfers.

The 10 Americans, including Labron Harris, Jr., who edged Gray in the final round of the am tourney, will compete May 25-25 at Turnberry, Scotland, in the Walker Cup matches.

SEMINOLE SHORTS

Former FSU baseballer Ron Fraser, recently named baseball coach at Miami (Fla.), has spent some time coaching the sport in Holland and is called "Mr. Honkbal"

FSU Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha has about polished off his 1963 football schedule, and he's striving to help sportswriters who have tight deadlines on Saturday. In the past, FSU has played almost all home games at night, but Mancha wants to play 'em in the afternoon. "There are other reasons," he says, "but I realize how tough it is on a writer when the game isn't over until 10 or 10:30."

Tribe Tusslers To Meet Auburn In Tully Match

The Florida State Wrestling Club will meet the Au University Tigers Saturday in Tully Gymnasium, a Seminoles compete in their second home match o season.

Coach Budd Berringer's Tribesmen opened the h slate earlier this month against the Jacksonville Y squad and defeated the Jax team, 23-14.

In their first away match, the Seminoles were wh washed by the Auburn Tigers, winning one match default.

FSU's impetus will come from the following:

Butch Nunez in the 123-pound division; Tim K in the 130-pound division; Erroll Greene in the Brian Hampton in the 147; Jay Bennedett in the Ron Yersak in the 167; Larry Brinkley in the Joe Rogers in the 191; and Steve Watson in the he weight.

Berringer said the Seminole fans would see s excellent wrestlers in the FSU-Auburn match.

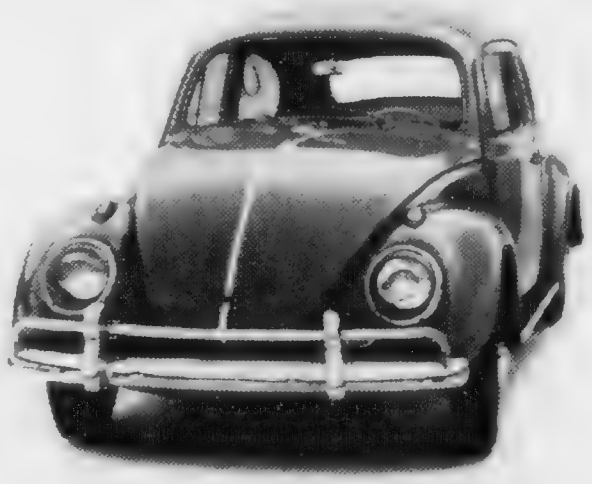
Baby Seminoles To Face Jackets In Cage Battle

The Florida State freshman basketball team, looking for its eighth win against four losses, will battle the Georgia Tech frosh cagers Saturday night in Tully Gymnasium.

Coach Joe Williams' team sufferred its most recent loss this week in Tuscaloosa, Ala., when the Baby Crimson Tide prevailed, 58-53. Other losses have come at the hands of Pensacola Junior College (81-79), St. Leo JC (75-60), the Florida freshmen (64-53).

In earlier matches, the Seminoles defeated both the Alabama and Florida freshmen teams. The Tide was nipped 59-56, while the Florida frosh fell, 83-55, in Tully Gym.

Other victories were extracted from Manatee JC (72-43), Chipola JC (69-63), Jacksonville frosh (71-62 and 77-58), and St. Johns River JC (71-36).



The probable starting lineup:

At forwards, the 6-7 Jim Wallace of St. Petersburg and the 6-7 Gary Schull of Pompano; at guards, the 6-1 Ken Leakey of Fort Wayne, Ind., and the 5-10 Kenneth Hey of Shawnee Mission, Kan.; at center, the 6-8 Bill Phillips of Okeechobee.

Against Alabama this week, the FSU fledglings were paced by Bill Peacock, who dropped in a Seminole high of 15 points. Teammates Leakey and Phillips bucketed 14 markers each for Florida State's other scorers in double figures.

Heard any Volkswagen jokes lately?

Remember the one about the lady who looked under her front hood and thought somebody stole her engine?

Or the one about the guy at the gas station who didn't know where the gas went? Or the water?

Today, the gas station attendants know enough to put the gas in front. And they don't bother checking your water or trying to sell you some antifreeze.

(After all, they've seen enough VWs to know that our engine's in the rear; and that it's cooled by air, not water.)

The point is this: People used to make fun of our car, now they have fun with it.

Which helps explain why our joke file's been getting a bit low. So, if you've heard any good VW quips or sayings or jokes, why not send them on?

Just write to John Stanley, Volkswagen of America, Englewood Cliffs, N. J. He'll start them on their rounds.

After all, nobody enjoys a good VW joke better than we do.

14th Annual Campus Sing Held Saturday

By WALTER MARTINDALE
Flambeau Staff Writer

Saturday the fourteenth annual Campus Sing begins with twenty-one Florida State organizations participating.

The Campus Sing will be held in Westcott, where the organizations are requested to be seated before the first performance begins.

Judges for this year's Campus Sing are Dr. Wiley Housewright, director of University Singers; Dr. Ramon E. Meyer, director of the Collegians; and Miss Betty Jane Grimm, director of the Women's Glee Club.

The groups will be judged on tone, blend, tone quality, and diction. In judging the musicianship the vocal rhythm, breath control and phrasing is taken into consideration. Diction will be judged on vowel and consonant clarity, while costumes used and stage presentation are other points judged.

The judges will choose the top three women's groups and the top three men's groups as finalists on Saturday evening. The winning group will be contacted by phone and will be announced over the local radio stations.

The finalists will perform again Sunday at 2 p.m. where the winners of the men's and women's groups will be chosen.

IT'S JUST EIGHT MORE DAYS

. . .till the Four Saints will come marching into Westcott Auditorium for the first of two of their shows here at FSU. They will perform one show on Feb. 9 and one on the 11th. Tickets arenowon sale for both of these shows, at the Westcott Ticket Office. The members of the Four Saints are (from left to right): Jerry DuChene, Bob Erickson, Doug Evans, and John Howell.

Filing Ends Tuesday

Seven Declare; Deadline Near

Seven students had filed declarations of candidacy for only six of the major student body offices as of yesterday afternoon.

The deadline for filing is Tuesday at 5 p.m. A student may change his declaration of candidacy at any time prior to 5 p.m. Tuesday, but cannot declare for more than one office.

Secretary of Elections Ron Jones said that there has been some talk of having no qualified candidates for Chairman of the Traffic Court.

Article 4, Section 4, Part A of the Student Body Constitution states that the Chairman of Traffic Court shall be a junior or senior who has over one full semester's experience on either the Honor Court, the University Court or the Traffic Court.

"This means that anyone in the court system that is now a sophomore or junior, has a 2.3 overall scholastic average, and has been in the courts for more than one semester is qualified to run, stated Jones.

There will be a mandatory meeting for all candidates who have filed a Declaration of Candidacy Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. Jones said that it would be wise for the candidates to bring along their campaign workers tothis meeting so that they, too, could be familiarized with the rules.

Those who have filed, along with the office filed for and the party affiliation are:

Johnny Smith, University Party, student body president; Julian Proctor, UP, student body vice president; Frank Ryll, UP, men's vice president; and Clyda Stokes, women's vice president.

Phyllis Doud, UP, secretary of Senate; Marsha Lynn, Independent, clerk of Honor Court; and Janet Rodebaugh, Ind., clerk of Honor Court.

Dean W. Baum Receives Honor

Dr. Werner A. Baum, dean of the faculties and professor of meteorology at FSU has been elected one of five councilors of the American Meteorological Society.

Dr. Baum, who will serve a three year term, has been the editor of the "Journal of Meteorology," the "Bulletin of the AMS," and the "Meteorological Monographs."

Currently, he is chairman of the new Commission on Education and Manpower of the AMS; and he is associate director of the Space Era Education Study in Florida.

The FSU dean completed his undergraduate studies at the University of Chicago.

The Dave Brubeck Quartet Swings At FSU Concert

By CHRIS CLARK

"The whole idea of jazz is to have the effectiveness of creativity on the spot." So said the best-known personality in the jazz world, Dave Brubeck. In a mid afternoon interview with this reporter and Don Vogt of the "Smoke Signals" staff, Thursday.

During the hour long talk, he gave his views on a number of subjects ranging from the problems incurred from having a Negro musician with the Quartet to the use of jazz as an instrument of international relations. In the former instance he told of cases where dates have been refused by him because there was prejudice against his Negro bass player, Eugene Wright. Brubeck said most of our internal problems boil down to a question of the practice of Christian ideas, or the lack of such practice.

He feels jazz to be an especially effective instrument of cultural exchange due to the fact that it has so many varied forms. These can be suited to the musical concepts of the people for whome the group is playing at the time. Thus, while on tour in India he made it a point to include pieces emphasizing strong rhythmic backgrounds.

When asked what he thought of the standing ovation he received after the second performance Tuesday night he replied that although it was appreciated he felt it was a matter of one person standing and the rest of the audience following suit.

When asked how he managed to stay fresh for an evening's performance after a hard day's travel he said, "Most of it's in the way the audience receives you. When they're good and receptive, they pick you up."

Brubeck feels the one thing wrong with classical music is the fact that it no longer includes the element of improvisation. "One thing wrong with classical music is it chickened out on improvising. Mozart did it, Bach and Beethoven did it. But now its died out."

Also in the area of cultural exchange he is very much in favor of having groups from other countries sent here. "There are lies printed about us (The United States) in every part of the world. If we could have performers say, from Russia, come here and see us, they would no longer believe the lies."

Rotary Foundation Offers Study Fellowships Abroad

The Rotary Foundation has announced that they are offering Fellowships which will provide qualified applicants with one fully paid year of graduate study abroad.

The awards will provide funds for round trip transportation, full tuition and registration fees, books and study materials, room and board, and for a limited amount of educational within the country of study.

The purpose of the Fellowships is further understanding between people of different nations.

To be eligible for one of the regular fellowships, an applicant must have a friendly, outgoing personality, a bachelor's degree or its equivalent by the time the fellowship is to begin: and ability to read, write, and speak the language of the country in which he desires to study. The applicant must also be a male between the ages of 20 and 28, and a citizen of the country in which he resides permanently.

Ten additional Fellowships with slightly different qualifications are also offered. To receive one of these fellowships, an applicant, who may be male or female, need not have complete knowledge of the language of the country, but he must be willing to learn.

The bachelor's degree requirement may be waived in an exceptional case. Citizenship in the country of permanent residence is not required.

Applicants must be sponsored by and make application to the Rotary Club nearest their residence not later than April 15. The applicant will be required to list at least five universities, not more than in one country. The schools selected must also be in a country with Rotary clubs.

The fellowship, if granted, may be to one of the five schools listed, or to one of the Rotary International's choice. The fellowships start approximately one year after awards are made.

Rev. Wylie Presents Four Lecture Series

"Christians in a Post-Christian World" will be the theme of a series of four lectures, beginning Sunday evening, to be given at the Episcopal Student Center.

The Rev. Samuel J. Wylie, rector of the Church of the Advent, Boston, Mass., will be the lecturer. Before assuming his present position, the Rev. Mr. Wylie was Associate Secretary of College Work for the National Council of the Episcopal Church and had previously served as chaplain at the University of Virginia and Brown University.

"Because of Rev. Wylie's wide experience in ecumenical ventures, we especially invite members of other denominations to hear him," said the Rev. George Bedell, Episcopal chaplain. He also is dedicated to the proposition of making Christianity vital, as the theme for the lectures indicates.

Titles for the lectures will be "Public Worship: Community Custom or Radical Adventure?" on Sunday evening; "The Layman in a Frontier Church," Monday; "One Lord, One Church--When?" on Tuesday; and "Christian Morality in a non-Christian World." Wednesday.

The lectures will begin at 7 p.m. at Ruge Hall, 655 West Jefferson Street.

Sunday morning at the 9:30 and 11 o'clock services, Rev. Wylie will be the commentator at an Instructed Eucharist at the Chapel of the Resurrection. He will explain various parts of the Holy Communion service as it is in progress.

"The public is invited to attend both the services and the lectures," Rev. Bedell emphasized.

'State Rights'

State's Rights is the current topic of conversation in the Florida Legislature. Coming from this group, it is hypocritical.

History was made yesterday in a pair of court decisions which put the already confuesd state political situation in a turmoil. The Florida Supreme Court ruled out the Constitutional provision limiting the number of Representatives and Senators the legislature must have. This means the legislature is free to pass any plan it desires with no constitutional limitations.

Other limitations exist. The Federal District Court in Miami announced its intention of stepping into the issue and hearing the case. The Court has indicated that they may add senators and representatives to any plan passed by the legislature in an effort to equalize representation.

Gov. Bryant has told legislative leaders that he intends to veto any plan that is not more equal than the plan rejected by the people in November.

Both Gov. Bryant's statement and the announcement of intent by the Federal Court are proper. But federal intervention lies not with the three judges in Miami, but with the Legislature itself.

"States Rights" do not exist without state responsibility. And one of the primary responsibilities of the state is to provide equal representation to all its citizens. The citizens are correct to demand that they be justly represented by their government and to seek whatever legal means necessary to chieve proper apportionment of their government.

For years the people appealed to the state legislature with no results. Those in power will not relinquish it, regardless of the will of the people.

The people were forced to appeal to the Federal Government to coerce the states into living up to a fundamental responsibility of government.

No one wants federal intervention if proper apportionment can be accomplished otherwise. But apparently, this can not be. "States Righters" are only deluding themselves. The primary rights are "Peoples' Rights" and the people demand that hypocrisy be shelved and responsible, representative government be provided -- even if the Federal Government has to do it.

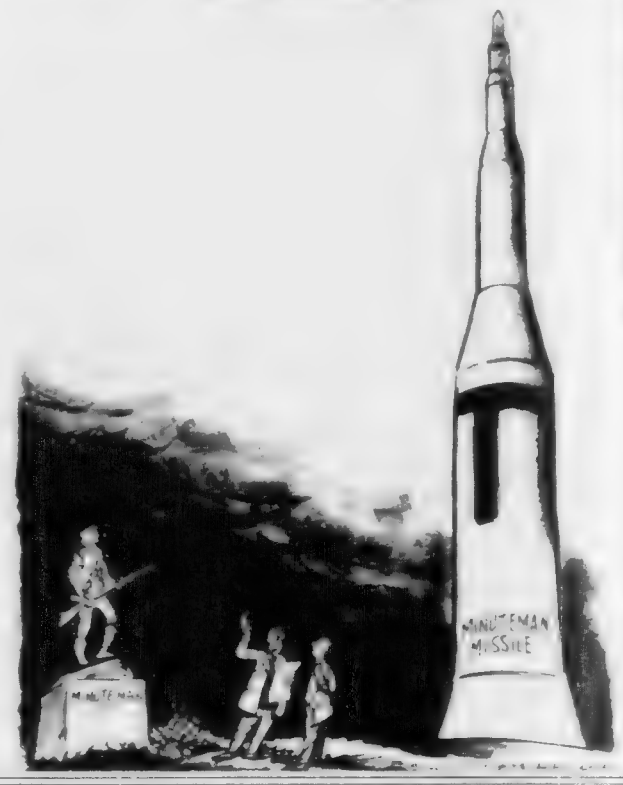
It's A Game Of Chance



It has come to my attention lately--as I was threatened on three sides by vehicles, while going into the Molecular Biophysics building--that parking lots are games of chance. After extensive questioning ("Yes?" "No."), I discovered that no one seems to know where the rules are posted.

So I sat down with a book on game theory ("The Power of Positive Thinking," or "What To Do Till The Campus Cop Comes"), with the thought of drawing up a few. Here, then:

1. Arrange the game board in the form of parking lots, with lines ruled off to show where cars may be parked. This may be a problem in design, home economics, or choreography, but certainly not one for geography or topology. Lay out areas for professors, staff, and students. Ignore the fact that graduate students may spend at least as much time in the building as staff does. Ignore the fact that graduate students are more numerous than professors. Ignore the graduate students.

2. Lay out specific regions for cars in each of the specific regions for professors, staff, and students. Lay out regions large enough for Chevies for professors, regions large enough for Corvairs for staff, and regions large enough for Volkswagens for students. Leave a little bit of room at the corners for people who are pulling in and out. In and out of breadboxes. Ignore the fact that graduate students may want to drive by the door of the building ...they can't, and that's that! Ignore the fact that graduate students teaching classes ought to have as much parking time as instructors or professors teaching classes that [illegible] the same amount of time. Ignore the fact that graduate students [illegible] nored.

The Price Was High

Jose Miro Cardona, Cuban exile leader and former Prime Minister of Cuba is a liberal who has learned much that is valuable. Recently he spoke at the University of Florida in a plea for help to overthrow the government he helped bring to power.

Cardona is the type of liberal who has profited from his errors, and sincerely wishes to make amends. The price of his, and others' mistakes has been high. . .the freedom of the six million persons who lived in the most advanced Latin American nation.

The speech at Gainesville gave listeners an insight to just what went wrong in Cuba. Cardona said [illegible] intellectuals played a large pa[rt] the Communist rise to power t[o] manding freedoms and exaggera[ted] social and economic abuses [of] mocratic nations, while ig[noring] curtailment of those rights in [the] Curtain nations.

Cardona's observation is a[n] one. Why else would ten thous[and] Harvard liberals give a tumult[uous] welcome to Fidel Castro at a t[ime] when most other Americans [were] sickened by his firing squads, [his] insults to our nation, and his [total] disavowal of the promises [that] made to the Cuban people?

It is too bad that such [liberals] cannot apply the same st[andards] dictatorships and tyrannies [on] left and right. If they would, [for] example, expend half the energ[y] fight Communist slavery a[s they] to overthrow Batista and Castro, [we] would not have a Communist men[ace] to worry about.

If we value freedom, and thi[nk] worthwhile, we must, in keeping [with] our supposed idealism, be willi[ng] help others to attain it. It is [time] we heeded the pleas of Jose [Miro] Cardona and the other Cubans [who] have learned such a bitter less[on]. "Our sad privilege, as exiles g[ives] us the right to ask for moral [and] material support from all the dem[o]cratic nations.

Our goal is not only to destroy [the] Russian military base in Cuba [but] to construct a democratic Cuba [with] free elections, free speech, [free] press and academic freedom." [If] we do less than help Cardona [and] his fellow exiles attain this g[oal]

3. Place the players on the [game] board. Place more players [on the] board than there are places for [them] to play. And then let players [from] the game next door come on[to the] game board. See the fun. Look. [Look.] look.

4. Allow all the players to [move] through the bottleneck. Watch [them] as they discover that the bottlen[eck] extends all the way to the high[way] Laugh yourself silly.

5. Solve the problem the way [an] honorable player would: [Have] another drink and sit back to e[njoy] the show.

Watch That "Good Tast"

To the Editor:

In last Wednesday's "Flambeau" a letter to the editor, written by Mr. Mike Hrebec, was printed with the caption, "Counselors Deserve Thanks." We feel that anyone has the right to express his opinions in print as long as he is not stating or implying untrue degrading characteristics of an individual, the overthrow of the Federal Government and other such things. Mr. Hrebec's letter, however, certainly violated the first of these: implying untrue degrading characteristics of an individual. He not only implied it of one person, but also clearly of the other two assistant counselors and the rest of the Dean of Men's staff in our dormitory.

We also question the editors' right to print such a degrading letter. Two columns over from this letter by Mr. Hrebec was the "Letters Policy." The editors said that they "attempt to print all letters received that meet standards of good taste" and so on. Mr. Hrebec's implications certainly were not in "good taste." Editors should investigate the validity of such implications before printing such a letter.

In closing we wish to state that each member of the Dean of Men's staff in Kellum Hall deserves the respect for his high aims, qualities, and position.

The Executive Council of Kellum Hall

Editor's Note: The "Flambeau" was not aware that the letter in question was in reference to a particular individual. We welcome Kellum Hall's defense of an individual unfairly attacked and apologize for our part in the incident.

Follow Daniel

BY MARY ANN STEVENS
Flambeau Staff Writer

Dr. Piccard, in his Last Lecture, said that he was following the example of Daniel by speaking of his faith. I, too, would like to follow the example of Daniel in recommending the series of lectures to be given by Samuel Wylie entitled "Christians in a Post Christian World". The house divided is not supposed to stand. Christianity has been divided many different ways but, some say, it is still standing.

Rev. Wylie is Rector of the Church of the Advent in Boston. He has traveled widely in Europe working for the Ecumenical Council in efforts to bring Protestant and Catholic doctrine closer, with the view in mind of one Christian church.

The main objective of his lectures is to make Christianity more relevant to modern life, believing that today we must all be theologians in order to know what and why we believe. He is also concerned with making symbolism more understandable and meaningful. This series, to begin February the 3rd at Ruge Hall, should be of interest to the curious as well as the confirmed.

Philosophy Club Lecture

Dr. Copi Addresses FSU Audience

The Nature and Importance of Metaphysics" was the topic of a ecture presented by Dr. Irving M. Copi, professor of Philosophy at the University of Michigan, before the Philosophy club and public Tuesday night in the Library Lecture Hall.

Copi, who received his doctorate in Philosophy in 15 months, was introduced by Dr. Robert W. Beard of the FSU Philosophy Dept.

A definition of the term by Aristotle served to open the lecture. Aristotle called metaphysics the first philosophy, sometimes theology to go above physics, and thus Aristotle became the first known metaphysician.

Four definitions by different groups concerning the development of metaphysics were presented by Copi, with each group's theory of the true nature of metaphysics.

The Aristotelians, decided that metaphysics should encompass the realm of being qua being, and that all areas should be excluded from study.

With the Renaissance came Rene Descartes and followers who turned their backs on the systems taught by the Aristotelians, and looked instead at the Epistimological questions. Descartes wished to rid metaphysics of misconceptions in the never-ending search for "truth," to reach truth through exploration of the limits of what man can know, with metaphysics beginning where empiricism left off.

Kant and the Kantian philosophers discarded this limited aspect of metaphysics and reached the conclusion that there were some questions which couldn't be answered by reason. . .indeed, that some thoughts were too profound, deep, elevated and high for man to reach without distortion of reality.

Hegal, a Neo-Kantian offered the fourth means of using metaphysics with his method of dialectics.

Next came the anti-metaphysicians, beginning with David Hume. Hume represented his anti-metaphysician position with the theory that "every word we utter makes sense only if it refers to, or describes an idea or impression."Hume maintained that metaphysics dealt with notions, and thus these terms must be strictly meaningless.

Dr. Copi added a few examples of the erroneous use of the "a priori" reasoning by Descartes proof that there could not be a vacuum. Science has somewhat refuted this theory, as well as Aristotle's doctrine that animals were of a fixed and immutable species. . .Darwin disagreed.

Copi also mentioned the logical positivist's opposition to metaphysics on the basis of metaphysics lack of verifiability.

Problems of metaphysics, according to Copi, "arise in attempting to think clearly about conduct."

Seniors & Grad Students Register For Interviews

AROUND THE WORLD

WASHINGTON -- The State Department has announced that exploratory talks with Britain and Russia on a nuclear test ban treaty have ended at Soviet suggestion. However, there is an understanding that they'll be resumed next month in Geneva. The opening of the talks in New York on January 14th followed an exchange of letters between President Kennedy and Soviet Premier Khrushchev. In the letters hopes had been raised here and abroad for an early breakthrough on the long-deadlocked test-ban problem. As the talks ended there was no outward evidence that the breakthrough was in sight.

ENGLAND -- The MacMillan government of Britain beat back a Labor Party bid for a vote of no-confidence today in the House of Commons. The vote of 337 to 234 came after the Prime Minister told the House Britain will not give up its independent nuclear deterrent and leave France as the only atomic power in Europe.

ENGLAND -- Britain has offered to assign its nuclear strike force of 180 bombers to the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance. It's one of several moves London made toward strengthening Britain's role in the world and in NATO, in the wake of France's veto of its bid to join the European Common Market.

CANADA -- The Canadian government has charged the United States with unwarranted intrusion in Canadian affairs by saying last night that Canada should arm with nuclear weapons. Prime Minister John Diefenbaker said today that Canada will not be a US satellite and will not accept external interference in making decisions.

OXFORD -- James Meredith registered at the University of Mississippi for a second semester. Meanwhile, the university turned away a second negro student -- 22-year-old Dewey Greene of Greenwood, Mississippi-- for failing to meet qualifications.

WASHINGTON -- The three-weeks-long Senate battle over the filibuster-busting rule reached its climax today. And the bloc battling for a tougher rule met resounding defeat.

TALLAHASSEE -- Florida's Senate adjourned until tomorrow morning following the House rejection tonight of the proposed 42-senator, 112 representative plan. Federal court members say they will reapportion the state themselves if it isn't done by April 2.

Puccini's "Triptych"

Cast Is Announced

The Florida State University Opera Guild has announced the cast for its March 22 and 23 production of Giacomo Puccini's "Triptych." The "Triptych" is a series of three one-act operas of contrasting character which includes "The Cloak," a realistic work set in 19th century Paris; "Sister Angelica," a more unworldly piece set in a 17th century Italian convent, and "Gianni Schicchi," a lively comedy set in 13th century Florence.

"The Cloak" will include: Lonnie Keene as Michele, Ethel Donaldson and Hedi Svendsen as Giorgette, Walter James as Louis, Nash Noble as Frugola, Clark Bell as Tinca, Earl Foster as Talpa, Joyce Graham and Gary Bowen as the lovers and Barney Ingram as the song vendor.

"Sister Angelica" will include: Ethel Donaldson and Hedi Svendsen in the title role, Phyllis De Kalb as the Princess, Joan Converse as the Abbess, Rose Wildes as the monitor, Laurie Bunte as the mistress of the novices, Karen Kadel as Sister Genevieve, Ann Bowman as Sister Osmina, Frances Easterling as the Nursing Sister, Becky Ellis as the first Lay-Sister and Valerie Browne as the Tourieres. The Women's Glee Club, directed by Betty Jane Grimm, will provide the chorus for the work.

"Gianni Schicchi" will include: Richard Collins in the title role, James Haygood as Rinuccio, Jane Newton as Lauretta, Sarah Rideout as Zita, Barney Ingram Cherardo, Barbara Collins as Nella, Minge Riechmann as Marco and Joyce Graham as La Ciesca.

The production will be under the direction of Richard Collins, and Robert Sedore will conduct the Opera Chamber Orchestra. Design and costumes will be Harlan Shaw.

Symphonic Band Takes Annual Tour

Dr. Manley Whitcomb, conductor of Florida State University's Symphonic Band, announced today that the band will make its annual concert tour Feb. 7-15, giving concerts in Orlando, Tampa, Sarasota, and Panama City.

The performances are being scheduled at the invitation of high schools and junior high schools in each of the cities.

On Thursday, Feb. 7, the band will appear at Colonial High School and Howard Junior High School in Orlando. On Friday, Feb. 8, it will play at Chamberlin High School in Tampa and on Saturday, Feb. 9, at Sarasota Junior High School. It will end the tour with an appearance on Friday, Feb. 15, at Mowat Junior High School, Panama City.

The program of traditional and contemporary band numbers includes a Harty arrangement of Handel's Suite from the Music for the Royal Fireworks; Rhapsodic Fantasy by Liszt featuring a marimba solo by Diane Bishop of Atlanta, Ga. and Morton Gould's "Dixie."

Local Youth Symphony Gives Concert Sunday

The Tallahassee Youth Symphony, an organization sponsored jointly by the FSU School of Music and School of Education, will present a concert Saturday.

The concert, second of the season, will be at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall. It is free, will be open to the public and children are especially invited, according to Dr. Swartz, conductor.

The 60-piece orchestra made up of junior and senior high school students will open the program with Wagner's "Procession of the Mastersings," followed by the [illegible] movement of Mendelssohn's "Symphony in d Minor," transcribed for orchestra by Swartz.

Included on the program will be the second movement from Tschaikovsky's "Symphony No. 5 in E minor"; three selections from the "Nutcracker Suite" and "Farandole" by Bizet. Glenn Heinlen, director of music department in the University School and co-conductor of the Youth Symphony, will conduct the orchestra in the second Tschaikovsky number and the Bizet number.

The Youth Symphony plays four concerts each year. It has as its purpose the development of college orchestral interests; community service to Tallahassee and vicinity; and it serves as a music education laboratory for college students.

Now in its fourth season, the Youth Symphony was first organized by Swartz in the fall of 1959.

Coffee Hour Hears Spratt

Dr. J. F. Spratt of the Florida State University music faculty will be the speaker at the English Coffee Hour today at 4 p.m. in the Westminster House.

The Coffee Hour, sponsored by the English Department, is free and open to the public.

Speaking on "Music and Poetry," Spratt will discuss the common denominator of music and poetry which he says is the creative process. He will use references to works by Dante, Shakespeare, Goethe and by Bach, Mozart, Beethoven and Stravinsky.

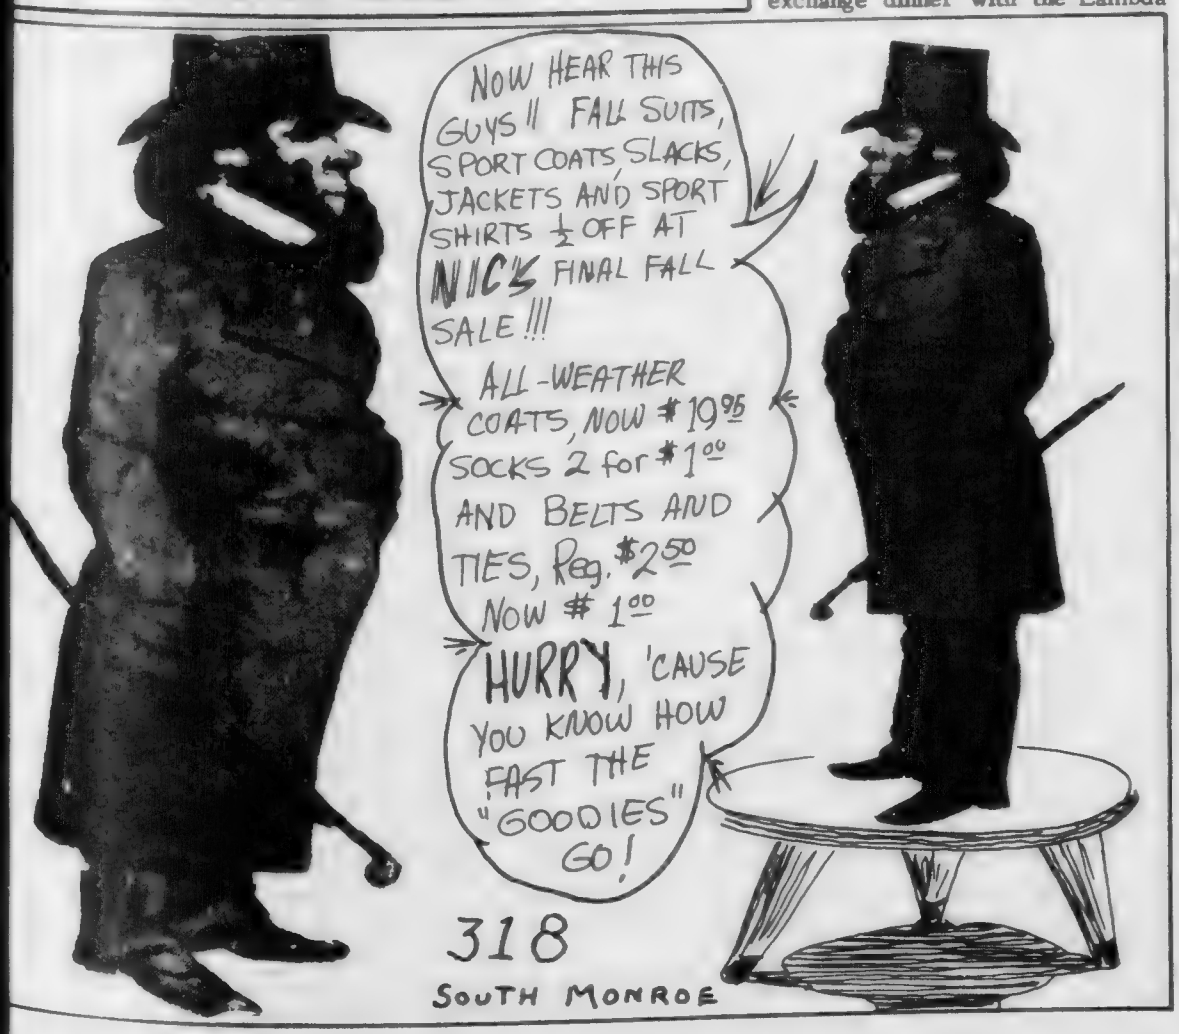
Young Democrats Club Is Suspended

The FSU Young Democrats Club is among 34 Florida clubs which have been suspended by state YD President Bill McCoy pending action of the state YD Executive Committee.

McDoy said, "In some cases there may be valid reasons that the suspension will be lifted without having to appear before the executive committee, such as a mistake on this listing."

He said that none of the 34 suspended clubs could take any official action including holding elections, collecting dues, or adding new members until the meeting of the executive committee at noon in Orlando Feb. 9.



FSU Young Democrat President Al Milton said that he would be present at the hearing to make an appeal. He said that the probable cause of the FSU's club suspension was lack of communication from state headquarters.

PERRY MOSS
. . .loses pro job

Former FSU Coach Is Fired

Moss Gets The Toss

Former Florida State football coach Perry Moss has been fired as Head Mentor for the Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern F ootball Conference.

Moss, who coached at FSU in 1959, announced he was fired by the board of directors. "As a coach," he said, "I knew that someday I would be fired. I just didn't know the day. I guess this is it."

The 35 year-old coach guided the Alouettes through three so-so seasons, his team finishing third last season. Nonetheless, the controversial coach saw his team make the Canadian playoffs, although it was defeated by the Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the league final.

During his 4-6 Seminole season, Moss apparently became the first football coach in Florida State's history to be hanged in effigy. After complimenting the students for their display of school spirit, he accepted the pro offer in Canada, where he was hanged in effigy several more times.

Moss was also athletic director at Florida State.

ALTHOUGH CHARLIE LONG (13) IS FIGHTIN
. . .hard against the Houston Cougars, the Seminoles will be i week. However, the FSU frosh will battle the Baby Yellow Jacke Georgia Tech in Tully Gym tomorrow night.

Grapplers, Cagers To Battle In Tully

The Florida State Wrestling Club will take on the best wrestling team in the South and the FSU basketball team will battle one of the best frosh squads in the South tomorrow night in Tully Gymnasium.

The FSU Wrestling Club will meet Auburn in preliminary bouts starting at 7:15. The official dual meet will begin at 7:45.

FSU, directed by Budd Berringer of the physical education department lost to Auburn earlier, 31-5. In their only home meet to date, the Seminoles upended Jacksonville YMCA, 23-14.

Berringer said the Plainsmen have one of the most feared wrestling schools in the South and have dominated the Southeastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Conference for the last 10 years.

Actually, he said, Sewanee, the University of the South, rivals the Tigers in strength, and there will be a clash between the two powers right before the Sewanee squad battles the Seminoles Feb. 23 in Tallahassee.

After the Feb. 23 clash with Sewanee, the Seminoles will enter the Southeastern Intercollegiate Wrestling tourney at Emory University in Atlanta, March 1-2.

Likewise, Coach Joe Williams' Baby Seminoles are expecting tough competition from the freshman basketball team of Georgia Tech.

Looking for their eighth win against four losses, the Baby Tribesmen hope to erase the memory of its most recent loss: a 58-53 contest to the freshmen of the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

Earlier in a home match, the Baby Crimson Tide had tumbled 59-56. In addition, the frosh team has defeated such teams as Manatee Junior College (72-43), Chipola JC (69-63), Jacksonville frosh (71-62 and 77-58), and St. Johns River JC (71-36).

The University of Florida frosh were defeated in the first FSU-UF contest, 83-55, but upended the Seminoles, 64-53, in Gainesville. FSU's first loss came at the hands of the Pensacola JC Pirates in a 81-79 game that broke a six-game Seminole winning streak. St. Leo JC won over Williams' crew, 75-60.

Bear's Nearly Bare At Meyer Interview

Former FSU Assistant Football Coach Ken Meyer, who's just taken a job with the University of Alabama, will never forget his interview with Coach-Athletic Director Paul (Bear) Bryant:

"I met him at his motel and talked to him--and was hired--while he was standing there in his pajamas shaving."

Fantasy Car To Be Exhibited Saturday

A $75,000 "Fantasy Car" that can be driven by remote control and responds to spoken commands will be on display from 2 to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at Tallahassee Motors.

The exhibit, which is open to FSU students, features "Golden Sahara II," the car that was used in the Jerry Lewis movie "Cinderfeller."

In addition, FSU hot rod fans will be able to see the hot rod used by Edd (Kookie) Brynes on the television show "77 Sunset Strip."

Is this the only reason for using Mennen Skin Bracer?

Skin Bracer's rugged, long-lasting aroma is an obvious attribute. But is it everything?

After all, Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the after-shave lotion that cools rather than burns. It helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Helps prevent blemishes. Conditions your skin.

Aren't these sound, scientific virtues more important than the purely emotional effect Skin Bracer has on women? In that case, buy a bottle. And—have fun.

Fourth Gershwin Festival Concert Held Tomorrow

By CHRIS CLARKE
Flambeau Staff Writer

The fourth all Gershwin Festival Concert will be given in Westcott Auditorium Tuesday night at 8:15 p.m., with Thomas Wright, pianist and associate professor of music, as the featured soloist.

The program will include all major piano works of American composer George Gershwin. Assisting Wright will be Robert Glotsbach and Paul Svendsen, pianists, Charlotte Reinke, soprano, and Herman Gunter, baritone.

Wright will open the program with "Three Preludes for Piano," which will be followed by a piano transcription of "An American in Paris." Three pianos will be heard in the second group of works, which will include the "Concerto in F" and the "Second Rhapsody." Wright will play the solo parts while Svendsen and Glotsbach will play the parts written for orchestra.

The third part of the program will feature the voices of Charlotte Reinke and Herman Gunter. This section of the program will be made up of selections from "Porgy and Bess." Among the vocal numbers will be "Summertime," "I Got Plenty of Nuthin'," "Bess, You is My Woman," and others.

Closing the program, Wright and Svendsen will play piano arrangements of "Variations on I Got Rhythm" and "Rhapsody in Blue."

The first Gershwin Concert was given here in 1951 with such enthusiastic response that it was decided to repeat it periodically. The present program is similar to one that was presented by Wright and School of Music faculty members in 1959.

Thomas Wright, principal performer in the concert, is associate professor of music at FSU, where he teaches piano and is head of radio-television instruction for the School of Arts and Sciences. Before joining the faculty of Florida State, he had given concerts extensively throughout the United States.

His interest in the music of Gershwin came when he heard the composer in concert. In one nationwide concert tour, he played the "Rhapsody in Blue" ninety times in six weeks.

Charlotte Reinke, assistant professor of music, has sung professionally both here and abroad. She received her M.A. degree from Syracuse University. Among other appearances she has been soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and the Northwest German Grand Opera Company.

Herman Gunter was born in Tallahassee and became a member of the faculty in 1946. In addition to his singing here, he has appeared in New York. Besides teaching voice Gunter is the conductor of the FSU Choral Union.

Robert Glotsbach joined the faculty in 1950. He teaches piano and keyboard literature. Last year he was featured on an education television program, "Piano Tunes for Teens," which was shown on WFSU-TV.

Paul Svendsen is a graduate student in piano. He will receive his M.A. degree in piano in April of this year. Svendsen has given solo concerts in Tallahassee, Miami, and in Virginia.

Mathis Leads SP Nominees

Miss Jackie Mathis, first woman to be nominated for Student Body President since 1952, heads the Student Party ticket. Election day is February 19.

Running second on the SP ticket is Senator Miles Williams, candidate for vice president.

Nominated for Men's vice president was Ted De Lavergne, former Freshman Class Senator.

Tomorrow Ends Candidate Filing

The deadline for filing declarations of candidacy for the major student government offices is tomorrow at 5 p.m.

No one will be permitted to file after that time. Each candidates' qualifications will be checked against the Student Body Constitution. An announcement will be made as to whether or not their declarations will be accepted or rejected.

The 16 candidates who have filed as of yesterday are: Jackie Mathis (SP) and Johnny Smith (UP), president of student body; Julian Proctor (UP) and Miles Williams (SP), vice president of student body; Ted DeLaVergne (SP) and Frank Ryll, men's vice president.

Clyda Stokes, women's vice president; Pam Cornely (SP), and Phyllis Doud (UP), secretary of Senate; Kelley Reid (unaffiliated), chief justice of Honor Court.

Marsha Lynn (unaffiliated) and Jan Warren (unaffiliated), clerk of Honor Court; Vicki Voyles (SP), chairman of Traffic Court; and Pattie Childs (SP), Bob Foss (UP), and Lana Murray (UP), Board of Student Publications.

Clyda Stokes, former Senator and President of Reynolds Hall, is the Student Party nominee for Woman's vice president. Miss Stokes is unopposed by a University Party nominee.

Pam Cornelly, secretary of the student body president, is a candidate for Secretary of Senate.

Betsy Boote and Vicki Voyles are candidates for Chairman of University Court and Chairman of Traffic Court respectively.

Board of Publications positions will be sought by Patti Childs and Walt Martindale. Three positions are available.

George Miller was named new chairman of the Student Party to replace Bill Greenwood, outgoing chairman. Other Party officers are Al Milton, vice chairman; Lind McGuirt, treasurer; Ginny Boyd, recording secretary; Ruth Doyle, corresponding secretary; Gaines Pickett, campaign manager; and Rick Frost, publicity chairman.

Miss Mathis, presently Secretary of Senate, is the first girl to run for the top Student Government spot since 1952, when Miss Ruth Summers was elected President of the Student Government Association.

Miss Mathis is the second girl to seek the presidency since the days of Florida State College for Women. Miss Dalia Santes served as president of the College Government Association during the last year of FSCW.

Kellum And Landis Halls Cop Campus Sing Awards

Kellum Hall and Landis Hall were the two winners of the annual Campus Sing, with twenty-one campus organizations taking part.

Inner of the winner's groups was Landis Hall singing "Miserere Mei," and "Jenny Jenkins." Receiving the first place trophy was their director Barbara Morris. Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority was second; receiving their trophy was Laurie Bunte. The third place winner was Cawthon Hall, with Joyce Faggioni receiving their honor.

First place in the men's groups was Kellum Hall singing "Last Words of David," and "The Happy Wanderer." Ray L. Holland accepted the first place trophy for Kellum. The second place winner was Smith Hall; Jimmy Harrison received the honor. Theta Chi fraternity was third in the men's division. Accepting the award on behalf of the fraternity was Bob Sopher.

Presenting the honors for the women's finals was Julie Adams, president of Sigma Iota, women's honorary music sorority while Kim Swartz, president of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, honorary men's music fraternity, gave out the award for the men's group. The two organizations were sponsors of the contest.

The Delta Delta Delta sorority started the event followed by the Alpha Delta Pi sorority, the Sigma Kappa sorority, and Landis Hall. The first men's group to sing was the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, with the Kappa Delta sorority and the Theta Chi fraternity following. The Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority performed next, followed by the Alpha Phi sorority, the Chi Omega sorority and the Phi Mus sorority. Smith Hall, the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity, Magnolia Hall, and the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority were the next groups singing. Following were Kellum Hall, Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, and Cawthon Hall. The Alpha Omicron Pi sorority was the last group to perform Saturday.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the student body as a whole or the administration of the Florida State University. Editorials represent the opinions of the editorial staff of the Flambeau with the initials of the writer following the editorial. Columns and letters to the Editor reflect only the opinion of the writer.

South Fights Again

The overt clashes between Southern and legal elements at Little Rock and Ole Miss have shaken the land, but the most momentous battle south of the Mason-Dixon line seldom makes the headlines of the world. This is the unseen battle of Southerners' minds weighing social consciousness against the tremendous power of the Federal government.

The average Southerner sees his social institution standing on a salt pedestal--which is being washed by the waves of the Federal forces. Viewing past Southern successes, John Rebel makes an unspoken statement that he is losing and that his ideals are dissolving.

Such sentiment was expressed by a Troy State (Ala.) College newspaper editorial by Billy Martin, who said the South would end up with "inevitable-integration."

Listening to the "segregation now and forever" statements by Gov. George (The Little Judge) Wallace, Martin noted that the "inevitable would be interesting."

"How Mr. Wallace and the Alabama National Guard will fight the entire nation and Bobby Kennedy and his Feds should be more than interesting, even if he uses the Alabama National Guard to help him," Martin said.

"Maybe he has some plans up his sleeve or knows a few more plans that our neighbor, Gov. Barnett of Mississippi, did not know.... Regardless of what he has or knows, he is going to have to prove himself to himself and to the people of Alabama for his strong segregation platform soon--very soon," Martin continued.

The student editor himself reflected the internal turmoil of the modern South--a desire for the ancient ideals vying with the dark form of the inevitable. He said, "... We are not suggesting that Wallace nor the State of Alabama should first throw in the towel, forget it, and let it happen. That would not show the backbone and strength of Alabamians."

Martin, however, wanted to cling to law and order and to avoid the stigma of Ole Miss. "Surely," he said hopefully, "Mr. Wallace must have some legal points in mind or he would not have made such strong promises."

Quite obviously, Wallace has two choices: Fight and become national figures like Faubus and Barnett, or submit to "Bobby Kennedy and his Feds." Martin said the former would place Alabama on the map "across the front pages of all major newspapers everywhere."

Submission? Martin said, "If he submits to integration, which is very doubtful, he will be finished in the State of Alabama--politically and every other way. He will be finished even though Alabamians know about the inevitable."

So goes the South, fighting with itself.

Grad Students Should Write Mo

There is a need for more graduate students to write guest columns for the "Flambeau." They should not put off untillthe long awaited opportunity before expressing their ideas and opinions on any certain subject. In other words they need not wait for a columnist to express his ideas, feelings, or opinions contrary to theirs before they express their own ideas about the concerned subject.

There are many differing ideas in almost any field of study -- especially in those fields which require the more subjective evaluations. Graduate students with these differing opinions should get together to write the main principles and feelings involved on each side. These columns could be run side by side in the "Flambeau," or even on separate days with an editor's note telling of the coming coulumn. In this way students can compare and contrast the differing ideas.

Such activities by graduate (and undergraduate) students can bring a wealth of ideas to the campus. Expressing contrary opinions brings richness to the minds at any university.

I have noticed these errors which are made by a few graduate students in their guest columns. These errors should be held to a minimum.

First, teachers must remember that when they take a pole by a raising of hands, they usually come up with a distorted view. Many students will not voice their opinions that differ from that of a teacher or the writer of a textbook for fear that the subjective evaluation of the teacher will influence their grade unfavorably.

Such evaluation is not necessarily the fault of the teacher; it is only human nature for teachers to form opinions of students. Research has proven that a teacher will vary the grade on any one essay from A to F over a period of years. Thus a graduate student must avoid hand-raising-poling results as backings to his views.

Also, he must be careful when saying or implying that the opinion of another writer is being expressed only by that writer or what the graduate student feels is only a small minority to which taht writer belongs.

Secondly, the value of graduate statements in guest columns and letters to the editor seems to carry more weight when the advanced student doesn't say that undergraduate opinions on certain subjects should not be voiced in the "Flambeau."

Thirdly, the graduate should not write that another's ments are invalid and the his authority as an advance as making his denial true. add his own point of view the reader compare the ideas.

By these statements I feel that graduate irrationally tearing page. This is far Most irrational from the underwra myself, I'm sure). is that the advanced write more and also The latter is pos above errors are few who employ them.

'Mother Murphree Land

"Welcome to Mother Murphreeland" says the sign that has gotten a little torn since the trimester began. Inside on the bulletin board is an announcement promoting coloring books and crayons, jacks, an official Sammy Seminole tea Party outfit and Joan Baez dolls at the University Toy center. The recreation room is open and the sandbox, rocking horses and blocks will be out for the kiddies in the dorm from 5 till 7 p.m.

At this fine university it was long ago realized that kiddies sometimes tend to resent being told to do things for their own good so they now make games out of everything in order to sneak the rules by the little darlings. During the week they play like it's raining outside and rain is bad, so in order to keep the nasty rain off the children they should wear raincoats.

Now any six-year-old knows that if you have bermudas on, you surely get some nasty rain on you, s good that someb idea of waring rain

Supreme Court Rulings Ridiculous, Illeg

To the Editor:

While at the present time many other issues are receiving more attention than the Supreme Court, I believe I have some things to say about the Court which will be of interest. What this letter contains is factual, and I say without hesitation that it is indisputable.

On August 23, 1958, at The Conference of Chief Justices, thirty-six State Supreme Court Judges adopted a formal resolution accusing the Warren Court of abusing the power given it by the Constitution.

Let the candid reader further be informed of the findings of the American Bar Association's Special Committee on Communist Tactics, Strategy, and Objectives. The Committee stated in their 1958 annual report that in two years the Warren Court aided and abetted the Communist conspiracy by ruling twenty cases in their favor!

This Court of nine men has made it almost impossible for state or local governments to fire communists from jobs in state or Federal tax-supported institutions. This includes FSU. This act communists to infiltrate cational system was dec Slochower Case in April

'Lola' -- A French Mystery

This is a mystery movie: was it a comedy or a tragedy, and why did the French send it over here in the first place?

It is the story of a Very Big Day in the life of a dancing girl who makes a few Francs on the side. First, the father of her child and the love of her life, who has been absent for seven years, arrives in town (which she doesn't know, but we do. This provides Suspense). Meanwhile, she has picked up a very trustworthy, loyal, helpful, etc., American sailor who reminds her of Love No. 1. This provides Sex (but not enough to make it worthwhile from that angle). And then she meets her childhood sweetheart. She tells him he hasn't changed a bit, and he tells her she hasn't changed either -- well, not too much. This provides Sentimentality.

Loves No. 1, 2, and 3 dart in and out of doorways, unaware of each other, true to the finest Abbott and Costello tradition.

In the meantime, Loves No. 2 and 3 alternately become attached to a little girl who reminds them of the Lola of Ages Past. The relationships are purely Platonic, making "Lola" a sort of "Lolita" with the "it" left out.

Finally, Love No. 1 (or wast it No. 3?) rides off into the sunset with Lola, leaving no trace of Loves No. 2 and 3 (or were they 1 and 2?).

Bring your slide rule and your No-Doz, and you might understand it.

Personal Interview With Norman Cousins

Cousins Is Man Of Wide Interests

By PAUL STEEL

To Norman Cousins, Tallahassee must hardly have seemed an outpost of progress.

The Sunshine State was so heavily fogged there was some doubt his plane would arrive, the restaurant where he had breakfast had no fresh oranges, organge juice or grapefruits, not even California type. The Legislature was meeting again and "Americanism" was flourishing, but in spite of all this, Cousins arrived smiling and on time to greet a large audience.

Although a man of wide interests, his lectures are literary in a strict sense, but form a plea to the University and its students for action where it is possible and profitable. Communication with the organizations and institutions necessary for the dialogue are the needs his generation has sought and the hopes we must realize.

He was instrumental in developing a group to make public the facts concerning nuclear policy. This organization has done its job of spreading the almost incomprehensible nuclear facts, and Cousins moves on to other needs.

A military decision is not possible. For action on the next level, a forum must be found. This may be a local group, a national magazine, or an international organization. We must talk with the "enemy," for when communications break down our military strength can turn against our people.

The U.N. has served such a need from the Iranian case in 1946 to the Cuban Crisis in 1962. Before present conditions become unbearable or another great power enters the race "law backed by force" must prevail through international organizations.

Local groups are one of the best ways to support such a plan. This is an old idea in American history, but must not be pushed too fast or too far lest present gains are lost.

If the "Saturday Review" seems to occupy a unique position in the literature of our time, Cousins would be the first one to understand. Henry Seidel Canby, founder of "The Saturday Review of Literature," had created a magazine that Cousins and his generation felt was "something sacred."

By the end of the thirties, SRL was having business difficulties and Henry Canby felt it was time to turn the magazine over to new hands. Cousins was in the same building editing "Current History" and was only too glad to help out Dr. Canby and Amy Loveman. Cousins has made it his point to work in the back room and spent his evenings laying out "The Saturday Review of Literature." In 1936 Henry Canby was ready to retire.

Cousins said, "Dr. Canby and I offered the editorship to Edmund Wilson, to both the Van Dorens and practically every major literary figure in the area." The SRL struggled on until 1939, when Cousins became editor. The magazine's interests became more general and the title was shortened to "Saturday Review."

To us who grew up with Cousins' "Review," it must seem as sacred to us as Dr. Canby's was to him.

But a literary magazine with political overtones, I asked--how do you explain that? There are two ways of editing a magazine, he said, "You go to the business office and ask them what will sell, or you turn it over to the editor and let him write his book." Dr. Canby knew this and understood that his interest in politics would find reflection in the magazine.

It was remarked that the FSU Circus was the best training grounds for future politicians, as tight rope walking is at a premium these days, and Cousins had earlier remarked that the "Presidency had become a juggling act."

After the lecture, Cousins relaxed with friends at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Jackson Ice.

North Carolina Ruins Seminole Record

The Florida State swimming team lost more than a meet Saturday afternoon, for when the tough North Carolina tankers finished ahead, 51-44, FSU Coach Bim Stults saw a spotless record succumb.

Actually, the outcome was decided in the first and last events, the medleys, for these were the divisions that gave the North Carolina team the winning margin.

North Carolina took the opener, the 400 yard Medley Relay, on the efforts of junior Harold Mann, sophomore Harrison Merrill, sophomore Larry Roberts, and junior Peter Swift. The four tankers toued the course in 3:15.7 to set a new Montgomery pool record.

The old record of 3:52.3 was set last year by the University of Florida Alligators, who also thrashed the Tarheels Friday in Gainesville.

With a 7-0 lead to their credit, the Carolinians then exploded in the 200-yard freestyle when senior Bill Bloom of Baltimore, Md., outdistanced sophomore Gene Dayton of FSU for first. Bloom's time was 1:57.9.

Third behind Dayton was North Carolina's Thad Adams, a sophomore from Charlotte. North Carolina now held a secure 15-3 lead.

However, freestryler Dale Smith, a FSU junior from Jacksonville, negotiated the 50-yard freestyle in :23.2 to give the Seminoles their first first-place of the afternoon. Smith finished ahead of North Carolina's sophomore Richard Woodrow of New Jersey and FSU's Charles Tandy, a sophomore from Louisville, Ky.

Despite the FSU first place, the Caroliniants still maintained a 16-9 lead and in the 200-yard individual medley they lengthened the margin to 24-10 when Mann swam the course in 2:10.0.

Mann's time approached the pool record set by Bucky Hiles in 1961 when the Seminole was clocked at 2:09.8.

Second place in the 200-yard medley also went to a Tarheel senior, Barry King of Washington, D.C. Third was FSU's Mark Cohen, a sophomore from Tampa.

It was no contest practically in the diving event, which Florida State won handily, cutting the margin to 25-18.

Sophomore Neal Allen was first, while FSU's sophomore James Payne was second. North Carolina's Earnest Oare was third.

Once again, FSU sliced the margin when it won the 200 yard butterfly. Risto Ryykko, a senior from Tallahassee, grabbed fist place with a time of 2:10.0, finishing ahead of North Carolina's Bloom and FSU's Pete Combes, a senior from Sarasota.

The Tarheels bounced back in the 100-yard freestyle when Merrill outswam Smith of FSU in :50.6. Third was Woodrow of North Carolina. This upped North Carolina's margin to 34-27.

Florida State's Jim Mullally, a sophomore from Queens Village, N.Y., swam the 200-yard backstroke in 2:14.9 to finish ahead of North Carolina's Scott Smiley, a sophomore from Greenville, N.C. Third in the event was senior Pete Davis of FSU.

But the three-point difference was lengthened to seven points when the North Carolina tanker Frank Lea of Norfolk, Va., finished the 500-yard freestyle in 5:28.4, ahead of FSU's Dayton. Third was junior Mike Bissell of North Carolina.

FSU's Doug Kruger, a sophomore from Fort Myers, broke a new pool record in the 200-yard breaststroke and brought the Seminoles within points of North Carolina. His 2:30.5 clocking rewrote a 2:30.6 mark he set a few weeks ago.

And then North Carolina's 400-yard freestyle relay team of Merrill, Adams, Roberts and Mann, smashed a pool record with a clocking of 3:25.4. FSU was dis-qualified in the event, and North Carolina had broken up FSU's perfect home record, 51-44, and ruined a 1963 winning streak.

Previously this year the Seminoles had swamped the University of Alabama, the University of Georgia and Tulane University.

Next on the Tribe slate is Sewanee, the University of the South in Tennessee. The two teams will meet Feb. 9 in Montgomery Pool.

FLORIDA STATE'S FIRST FIRST PLACE

Pensy Defeats Frosh Cagers

The Florida State freshman basketball team sufferred two defeats this weekend at the hands of two Pensacola teams.

Friday night, the Pensacola Navy triumphed, 74-63, although the Baby Seminoles were playing one of its better games. The contest was neck and neck throughout most of the game, until the crucial closing minutes of the game.

At this point, the Pensacola Navy too advantage of FSU's team being depleted by the loss of three "big" Seminoles via the foul route, and the Swabbies dropped in the winning points.

At the half, the Seminoles were still very much in the game, for the Navy cagers only led by three markers.

FSU's leading scorer was forward Jim Wallace, a 6-7 18 year-old from St. Petersburg. Wallace tallied 18 points, while guard Bill Peacock of Campbellton dropped in 10 markers.

The next night, the Baby Tribesmen tried to gain revenge on the Pensacola Junior College Pirates, but failed in a 68-51 contest, as the Five Flags cagers sliced the nets with a 67 percent average.

Tied for first in scoring for FSU was Pensacola's own Ken Leakey, a 6-1 guard who sank 13 points. Guard Kenneth Hey, a 5-10 cager from Kansas, hit the same amount, while center Bill Phillips of Okeechobee was third with 10 points.

Earlier the Pensacola team, which also defeated the University of Florida freshmen, nipped the Seminoles, 81-79, in Tully Gymnasium.

Out of 13 starts, the Seminoles have fallen six times. The Pensacola team, which halted a six-game winning streak for FSU at the start of the season, was the third loss in a row for the Baby Tribesmen.

Tonight at 7:45, the Seminoles will battle the Chipola Junior College cagers, whom they defeated, 69-63, in the second game this season.

Tennis Slate Is Announced

Florida State's 1963 tennis team will play 25 dates this Spring, announced Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha. The Seminoles, coached by Eddie Cubbon, have their first match slated for March 6.

Cubbon doesn't have any returnees from 1962, when FSU was 14-11 and Eastern Intercollegiate champ. A couple of junior collge transfers and several sophomores, however, make the outlook promosing. FSU's schedule:

March: 6 - Ft. Eustis in Tallahassee; 9 -- Florida in Tallahassee; 14-15 -- Georgia in Tallahassee; 16 -- Miss. State at Pensacola; 18 -- Ga. Tech in Tallahassee; 23 -- Northwestern in Tallahassee; 26 -- at Florida; 28 -- Valdosta State in Tallahassee; 30 -- at Valdosta Tallahassee; 30 -- at Valdosta State.

April: 1 -- Hope College and Amherst in Tallahassee; 2 -- Hope in Tallahassee; 3 -- Columbia Univ. in Tallahassee; 4-5 -- Columbia and Furman in Tallahassee; 6 -- Columbia in Tallahassee; 11 -- Presbyterian in Tallahassee; 19-20 -- Cincinnati in Tallahassee; 22 -- at Georgia Tech; 23 -- at Georgia; 24 -- at Mercer; 26-27 -- Rollins at Winter Park; 30 -- Miami in Tallahassee.

Football Games To Be Set In Afternoon, Says Mancha

Florida State announced today that it would play only one home football game at night next season. That one will be the first one at home, against Texas Christian University on Sept. 28.

This heralds a switch in FSU precedent. Generally the Seminoles have played all home games at night except those that fall in November when the weather is colder. There have been exceptions, but this has been the pattern.

Other home games this season, all of which will start at 2 p.m., are with Wake Forest, Virginia Tech, Furman and N.C. State. The latter will be the homecoming game.

"We're doing this for the benefit of everybody involved," said Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha, "After lengthy consideration, we decided that night games put a lot of pressure on several different groups -- the fans, [illegible] writers, the players."

Mancha mentioned that it has [illegible] times been difficult for [illegible] such places as Pensacola, [illegible] and Jacksonville to travel to Tallahassee for a night game and return home in one day.

"We feel night [illegible] some adverse effect of [illegible] dance," he said.

The schedule:
Sept. 20-at Miami (8:15)
Sept. 28-TCU (1:00)
Oct. 12-Wake Forest (2:0[illegible]
Oct. 19- Mississippi S[illegible] Mobile (9:00)
Oct. 26-Virginia Tech (2:0[illegible]
Nov. 2-Furman (2:00)
Nov. 9-at Ga. Tech (2:00)
Nov. 16-N.C. State (2:00)
Nov. 23-at Auburn (3:00)
Nov. 30-at Florida (2:00)

Many Positions Vacant

Filing Ends Today For Major Offices

By SUSIE RHOADES
Flambeau Staff Writer

"As it now stands, there are no candidates for either Chairman of the University Court or Clerk of the Honor Court," stated Secretary of Elections Ron Jones.

"Only one person has filed for each of the positions of women's vice president, chief justice of Honor Court and chairman of Traffic Court. Only three students have filed for the three positions on the Board of Student Publications.

"This situation has been brought about largely by the constitutional requirement of prior court experience in each of these court areas. Many persons who would be qualified to seek these offices are not interested in running. Many persons who are interested in running do not meet the constitutional requirements.

"It is interesting to note that the president of the student body and the vice president of the student body have no requirements other than a 2.3 grade average and the specified class standing.

"It is unfortunate that our own constitution is so restrictive as to prevent many competent and interested persons from seeking these offices. The Senate should take immediate action to revise and make more realistic the requirements for the various court postions.

"There is no apparent reason why previous experience is required on some of these jobs. It is unrealistic that Traffic Court experience should qualify a person for Honor Court or the University Court; or, on the other hand, that Honor Court experience should qualify anyone for Traffic Court or University Court experience.

"All these regulations do is to insure that a certain predestined group will be able to perpetuate themselves in office. This is no reflection on the persons now seeking office," added Jones, "but is rather a hold-over from years ago."

The positions of chairman of University Court, clerk of Honor Court and chairman of Traffic Court are open to any junior or senior who has had over one semester's experience on either the Honor Court, the University Court or the Traffic Court according to the Student Body Constitution.

Today at 5 p.m. is the last opportunity for students to file their declarations of candidacy for the major student government offices.

Those students who have filed as of yesterday afternoon are Jackie Mathis (SP) and Johnny Smith (UP) for president of Student Body; Julian Proctor (UP) and Miles Williams (SP) for vice president of the Student Body.

Vicki Voyles (SP) for chairman of Traffic Court; and Pattie Childs (SP), Bob Foss (UP) and Lana Murray (UP) for Student Board of Publications.

Janet Rodebaugh has withdrawn her declaration for clerk of Honor Court. Marsha Lynn and Jan Warren have been disqualified in their filing for clerk of Honor Court because of lack of proper court experience.

There will be a mandatory meeting of all candidates tonight in the auditorium of Longmire. It has been recommended that candidates bring their campaign workers in order to familiarize them with the rules for campaigning.

...Wright Featured Tonight

...he Fourth Gershwin Festival Concert, featuring ...mas Wright, pianist, assisted by Robert Glotz...ch and Paul Svendsen, pianists, Charlotte Reinke, ...prano, and Herman Gunter, baritone, will be pre...ted in Westcott Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. tonight. ...e concert is free.

"Three Preludes for Piano" (1926) and "An Ame...an in Paris" (1928) will be played by Wright to open the program of Gershwin music. Wright is associate professor of music at FSU and director of radio-television instruction.

Wright will be joined at the second and third pianos by Glotzbach, a fellow faculty member, and Svendsen, a graduate student, in "Concerto in F" (1925) and "Second Rhapsody" (1931) as the second part of the program.

Wright will be joined at the second and third pianos by Glotzbach, a fellow faculty member, and Svendsen, a graduate student, in "Concerto in F" (1925) and "Second Rhapsody" (1931) as the second part of the program.

Following an intermission Miss Reinke and Gunter, both also on the faculty will sing five selections from "Porgy and Bess," with Wright at the piano. The final part of the program will consist of two two-piano numbers, with Wright and Svendsen at the pianos: "I Got Rhythm" variation for two pianos (1934) and "Rhapsody in Blue" (1924).

Wright has appeared on several television shows and as a soloist with symphony orchestras. His keen interest in Gershwin gained him a wide reputation as a specialist in the interpretation of Gershwin music and on one nationwide tour he performed "Rhapsody in Blue" 90 times in six weeks. Since 1951, he has been presenting Gershwin festival concerts with all the major piano works of the composer in one evening.

Miss Reinke, an assistant professor, has appeared as soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and on ABC's "Metropolitan Auditions of the Air."

Glotzbach, equally at home as an accompanist or as a soloist, is known both for his accomplishments in serious idioms and contemporary jazz. Svendsen, a graduate student, earned his bachelor's degree here as a student of Franciszek Zachara and expects to receive his master's in April.

'Ugly Man' Voting Set

The annual "Ugly Man on Campus" contest, sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, is coming.

Voting for the contest will be Feb. 7, 8, and 9 at both the Student Center and Westcott. Fifty per cent of the money made will go to a student scholarship. The other 50 per cent will go to the APO Campus Improvement Fund.

How does one vote? Just by placing a penny or another coin in the container corresponding to the desired picture.

Bills also can be used. Extra bonus votes are given as follows: $1, 110 votes; $5, 600 votes; $10, 1,300 votes; and $20, 3,000 votes.

The winner will be presented an Ugly Man trophy at the Sigma Kappa Variety Show, Feb. 16.

Sovereign States?

States rights and representative governments were dealt severe, crippling blows during the special session of Florida's legislature last week.

Not only did the lawmakers completely defy the wishes of the overwhelming majority of the state's voters in handing down a disproportionate and minority weighted reapportionment measure, they became part of a national movement to curb the power of the federal courts to force state legislatures to allow equal protection of the laws within their state.

The 43-senator, 112-representative redistricting plan hammered out in the last frustrating hours of the session Friday does apportion more seats to the large counties. But the power of both legislative bodies is still in the hands of the minority Pork Chop Gang.

Legislators have apparently decided that the power of government should no longer rest with the people, but in the hands of those presently in power. They passed the new district plan in the form of a statute. Accompanying the new plan was a constitutional amendment which would make it a part of the state's constitutional amendment which would make it a part of the state's constitution. However, regardless of whether the state's electorate approves the plan by referendum in the 1964 general election, the statute will remain law, as passed Friday. In this decision-- of how the people of the state will be represented-- the people didn't have a choice, nor were they in actuality consulted.

This whole problem brings us back once more to the hypocrisy of southern state politics. Whenever it suits the purpose of a selfseeking, law defying state legislature they will defend the sovereignty of a state or in turn fall back on the federal government.

Whenever states are forced to obey the law of the land, to allow their citizens freedom from descrimination or equal protection of the laws, or the right to vote, they scream loud and long of the ferocious federal tyranny stamping out their freedoms.

The present legislature is a prime example of this kind of thinking. Because they were almost forced by the federal court to allow the people of the state a voice in their government, a move was organized to form a "council of the union" which would be empowered to keep the federal courts and government out of such private state issues.

But the paradox of the matter is crystal clear when we find the states running to the federal government for aid and assistance, as long as obeying the law is not required in return for help given. Federal-state highways, urban renewal, aid in many ways for education, (as long as they don't require all citizens to be accepted for enrollment), federal housing loans, small business and farm loans, and at any time when natural disaster strikes.

This is only a partial list of the numerous ways states are dependent on the federal government. States cries of sovereignty seem somewhat ridiculous.

Christianity And Nuclear War

The article "The Fear of Death" by Dr. Edward Carrell in the Jan. 30, 1963 copy of "The Christian Century" poses some searching questions about the role of the Christian in relation to the nuclear arms race.

After developing an admittedly liberal position in his article, Dr. Carrell leaves us in some doubt as to how far a Christian should go in opposing a direct attack by nuclear weapons. His thesis is that a Christian should not be afraid to die-i.e. that he should be always ready to face his Creator.

Carrell first proposes that we try disarmament but should that fail he implies an acceptance of God's will--"...if the threat of war mounts let us remind ourselves that God is sovereign." His concluding remarks are even more definite--"And if it is God's will that we must face apocalyptic times, let us calmly learn to say...'I have been crucified with Christ who lives in me; and the life I now live in the flesh I live by faith, in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me'...

As the apostle Paul noted long ago, whether we live or die we are the Lord's. What more could the heart desire?" A good question that should be answered by the people of the world--a majority of whom are non-Christian. What answer do we think these people would have for us.

I doubt that many would agree that Dr. Carrell's notions, making the acceptance of war less onerous is in the best interests of mankind. But this should not upset us--the true Christian can rest assured that "God loves him." This does not, I suppose, imply that Christians are loved especially, but I am sure that the sentiment is there.

Perhaps I have been a bit harsh with Carrell's article, but it is concerting in a time like ours-- the threat of war looms ever sent before us--to see such wri in the press purporting to exp the Christian viewpoint. Whe the Prince of Peace these day way? I wonder if the Church in A ica even remembers who Nuclear war is the greatest t to man since the beginning o tory and spokesmen for the Ch instead of presenting us with cles that prepare us for the i table, or rationalizing a way w accept war--should be using means at their disposal to make the contemplation of such a str inconceivable. Fear of de dying, says Carrell, bu fear of facing God that Chris must not submit to. I should that after viewing the last years of "Christian" history I have some qualms even in God.

Senate Bill Explained

Revision Of Honor Court Necessary

EDITORS' NOTE: Legislation has been introduced in Student Senate calling for revision of Honor Court. In the following article Men's Vice President Gene Brown, author of the Honor Court bill outlines the purpose and effects of this controversial bill.

By GENE BROWN

Since Bill 12 concerning the proposed revision of Honor Court was introduced in Student Senate, there has been much confusion as to its intended purpose and probable effect. Some contend that it would turn the Court into a Perry Mason-type of showpiace with the primary emphasis on the talents of the prosecutor and defense counsel rather than on the guilt or innocence of the student. They say it would establish nothing more than proving ground for young lawyers-to-be, similar to the student courts of law schools. Some argue that it would give an unfair advantage to the defendant. Because of these and many other misconceptions, a brief explanation of Bill 12 as it now exists in the Senate Judicial and Rules Committee is needed.

The Bill provides for the appointment of four defense counsels and three prosecutors, with the Attorney General serving as a fourth prosecutor. Selection would be by a committee composed of the following: Dean of Women, Dean of Men. Assistant Dean of Students, (Faculty Review Committee) Student Body President, and Chief Justice of the Honor Court.

The Bill requires Honor Court to compils a written rules of procedure.

Any student pleading not guilty to an alleged Honor Court violation could choose one of the counsels to assist with the investigation and preparation of a case in his defense. Similarly, one of the prosecutors would be appointed by the Chief Justice to investigate and prepare the case against the student. Both the counsel and prosecutor would be required to prepare a written brief of their respective cases.

Actual trial procedure, estab by the Court, would pr this general pattern. The pr distributes a copy each member of the Court. He then read the brief and tions concerning it. After left, the defense counsel would forth and go through the same cess. There would then be a p in which the Justices could com the briefs and decide the basic of the case. Next the defendant be thoroughly questioned by bers of the Court. Under this cedure, there would be no cr examination, no and no verbal argument the prosecutor and defe It would simply assure that tinent facts are presented to Court in a logical,

This system would per Justice to serve as a judge, since he would ally involved in the investig and presentation of each case would also increase the effect ness of other members of the Co as each Justice would have a wri account of all the facts and ar ments on both sides before the fendant is questioned. They wo no longer be dependent on the ver accounts given by the Chief Just and the defendant. By compar these briefs to determine their points of difference, each Just could formulate pertinent, syste atic questions for the defen and valuable court time would be wasted in simply establis agreed-upon facts. The Court w have a permanent record of all evidence, including any which defendant might forget under pressure of Court interroga

It should be clearly underst the defense counsels and pr cutors would be students chosen their ability and integrity, w main purpose would be to assist Court in finding the truth, not "win" the case. They would be oath not to deceive or withhold formation from the Court. The pr psed system, therefore, would a great disadvantage to a student pleading innocent before Court, but quite helpful to an i nocent student who had been false charged.

Bill 12 provides a simple, clear defined system under which ri of the defendant are guaranteed. also assures that each case wou be fully investigated and consider by the Court, without being bogge down with legal technicalities without losing its secrecy. It w result in an efficient Honor Co which could be understood by students.

U.N. To Destroy America

To the Editor:

I cannot understand why you consider it a great calamity that FSU didn't participate in the mock United Nations Assemblys. You assume the U.N. is of benefit to America.

The U.S. has no greater vote in the U.N. than a "nation" of a few million primitive savages. This violates any known principles of proportional government. Secondly, the U.N. leaches one third of its expenses out of America. This is fine if one subscribes to the henious principle of "To each according to his need, from each according to his ability." But it violates the spirit which built up America from a wilderness.

Lately the inherent nature of the U.N. has emerged in Katanga. The U.N. suppressed the Katangese in order to loot Katanga's mines and its citizens' labors to benefit other areas formerly colonized by Belgium. Armed robbery, looting, murder of Katangese civilians, and rape by U.N. mercenaries, some of whom practice canabalism, is just what I named it--even if a majority of the U.N. "votes" for it.

If as some envision, America and all other nations gave up their armies and depended upon a U.N. Army to keep peace, this would be bad. The U.N. would soon decide America wasn't contributing according to ability, and would send troops into America to take from Americans all the U.N. considered it "needed." This would be the greatest prize of any looter in the history of the world. Seemingly, liberals believe Americans deserve this.

Last Year At Marienbad

BY TIM CARR
Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

This is a wonderful experience if the viewer knows what to expect. We inadvertently arrived at the wrong movie-house expecting to see a drama. Only when we had sat through the movie a second time did we understand that there is nothing to be understood in this beautiful, dream-like film.

An overwhelmingly sensuous work of art, "Last Year at Marienbad creates a mood of utter melancholy which might easily be found in an insane asylum. Strains of Bachecho through endless corridors of an immense, over-ornate palace, in which the most mundane subjects are fervently argued by the guests, or inmates, whichever they be. The viewer is continuously reminded of Pope: ". . .the women go to and fro/Talking of Michelangelo."

This might turn out to be the best foreign film of the year.

American Studies Lecture

Minus Speaks On Religion

By MILA ARNOLD

...just muster enough faith, enough prayer, if we are just religious enough, we will get what we are after."

This quote demonstrates the American feeling toward religion, as it was described last Wednesday night by Chaplain Paul Minus at the American Myth lecture series.

According to the lecture delivered by Minus, statistics show America to be religion-conscious outwardly. However, there seems to be a great discrepancy between the actual Judeo-Christian tradition to which Americans pay verbal homage and the goals and ideals they put into practice, he observed. Although Americans in general say that they consider religion important, they do not make it an active part of their business, politics, and daily life.

Perhaps one reason for this discrepancy is the fact that "In the last analysis, it is 'peace of mind' that most Americans expect of religion." Minus quoted Will Herberg, who once said, "Religion, in short, is a spiritual tranquillizer, designed to allay the pains and vexations of existence."

Another disconcerting factor active in American religiosity is a complacency brought about by a "God's Chosen People" complex. Americans are not only inconsistent, but blind to their own faults. According to the speaker, "The suggestion that on some counts God might think Russia better than America, or communism better than democracy, is virtually inconceivable for most

The lecturer stated, "... if my analysis of American religion is correct, we are in a precarious position before the Almighty. If we have a right to expect anything from God, it is not His smiling approval, but His chastisement."

The view presented by Minus was not altogether pessimistic, for he added, "I do see evidence that remnants of this (the Judeo-Christian) faith survive and are operative. To the extent that Americans can recognize a discrepancy between what is and what ought to be, to the extent that they can hear and take really seriously the prophetic criticism, there is room for hope."

The hope for American religion lies in an honest effort to get away from contentment with the status quo and from a "do-it-yourself" worship aimed at specific results. Minus stated that such an effort is presently being undertaken by younger clergy and laymen, and that there is a growing uneasiness about American religion.

Minus hopes and feels that perhaps through such efforts, "... we can begin to see more sharply and feel more keenly the distinctive content of the Christian faith, and our betrayal of it can begin to be corrected."

Library Receives Three Manuscripts

The Strozier Library has been given three original manuscripts of books by author Wyatt Blasingame of Anna Maria Island, whose daughter, April, is a student at FSU.

The manuscripts, received this week, are for "The Golden Geyser," "Halo of Spears," and "For Better, For Worse." Miss Nancy Bird, head of Special Collections, said that she had received a letter from the author, in which he said he also is sending the editor's copy of "Live From the Devil," a novel which traces the development of the Florida cattle business from 1900 to 1945.

"The Golden Geyser" tells of the days of the Florida boom of the 1920's, and "Halo of Spears" goes back to the Florida penal system around 1900, with the sidelights on the growing turpentine business.

"For Better, For Worse" was his first novel (1951). It deals with veterans returning from military service to college life and was based on material gathered at Florida Southern College.

Blasingame has published more than 400 short stories. A former member of the faculty of Florida Southern College, he taught evening classes in Florida history at Manatee Junior College last year.

Wednesday Through Saturday

Tarpon Club Show Schedul

A star studded aquatic show is planned by Florida State's Tarpon Club Wednesday through Saturday nights, Feb. 6-9, when the swimmers present their annual show built around a space age theme.

Entitled "Tomorrow the Universe," the show will be held in Montgomery Gymnasium swimming pool at 8:15 p.m. nightly. Tickets, priced at $1 for the public and 50 cents for students and school children, are on sale at Westcott Ticket Office.

The Tarpons, directed by Miss Glynise Smith of the physical education faculty, will open the hour-long water show with a composition entitled "Sun," which depicts the Sun as the center of the universe. Choreographed by Madge Clements of Leesburg, swimmers in the opening number will be Millie Bishop of Jacksonville, president of Tarpon Club; Pam and Phyllis Doud of Fort Lauderdale; and Cynthis Sward, also of Fort Lauderdale.

One male performer is appearing as guest swimmer in this year's show. Mitch Weinstock of Philadelphia, Pa., a gymnast, performs a duet entitled "Venus" with Pat Anderson of Jacksonville.

"Star" is the title of the water solo number in the show. Performed by Millie Bishop of Jacksonville. It combines many figures such as a dolphin, a spiral, front and back walkovers, a Catalina and a waterwheel.

A composition entitled "Jupiter" will be performed by six swimmers and other numbers represent Mercury, Mars, Neptune, Uranus and the Moon.

Candidates to become Tarpon Club members (called minnows) will present an aquatic compositon called "Milky Way." Choreographed by Phyllis Doud of Fort Lauderdale it will be performed by Carol Agerton of Winter Haven, Valerie Bishop of Avondale Est., Ga., Marian Blount of Pompano Beach, Tina Bunker of Madison, Susan Frantz of Winter Haven, Marsha Jones of Sun City, Karen Klisch of Fort Lauderdale, Judy Lester of Lake Worth, Terry Lord of Tallahassee, Jennie Murphree of Gainesville, Jean Osborn of Gainesville, Beth Peyraud of Melbourne, Diana Todd of Tampa, Carol Van Sant of Winter Haven and Karen Williams of Tallahassee.

The final number is called "Infinity." It will represent a rocket moving into the sky. Eighteen swimmers will perform the composition choreographed by Cynthia Sward of Fort Lauderdale, Tarpon Club historian.

Other officers of the club include Phyllis Doud, Ft. Lauderdale, vice president; Pam Doud of Fort Lauderdale, secretary and Madge Clements of Leesburg, treasurer.

The Tarpon Club is a swimming honorary, organized in 193 mote synchronized swimm women students. It has i been filmed for a Grand sports short and perform Steve Allen "Tonight" sh the group performed by at the National Conventi American Association of Physical Education and R in Miami. On Feb. 22, th Club has been invited to show for the Autolite Di Ford Motor Co. at the Ba Club at Daytona Beach.

Seminole Basketball Squad To Take On Valdosta State In Return Match

The Florida State basketball team, which defeated Valdosta State, 65-42, earlier in the season, will have a return match with the Georgians tonight in Valdosta, Ga.

FSU Coach Bud Kennedy will be trying for his 12th victory in 21 starts. If a recent trend holds true, the leader of the Seminole attack will be senior Charlie Long, who has been scoring at 20 point clips in the last nine games. Long, the team's only senior has 76 for 131 from the field for 58.1 percent, which has upped his overall average to 15.1.

Long is the statistical leader in eight departments. He has taken the most shots from the floor (247), he has been successful the most from the floor (122), he has shot more free throws (87), he has made more field goals (58), he has the most points (302), he owns the dubious distinction of the most personal fouls (60), and he has the best average (15.1).

However, the percentage title has been taken from Long is several departments. Forward-center Dale Reeves, for instance, has the best average from the floor with 54.6 percent, having been successful 65-of 119 times. Second in this department is center Jerry Shirley (50.8), who has dropped in 94-of-185 tries. Long is third in field goal percentage (49.4).

At the foul line, sophomore Shirley has laid claim to the percentage title, having sunk 38-of-52 shots for 73.1 percent. Long is second with 66.7 percent, while guard Pete Rogers is fractions away with 66.2 percent.

In rebounding, there is only one person to consider: Shirley. The Mobile, Ala. cager has snagged 147 missed shots in the 20 games for a 7.4 average. Second is forward Cal Huge with a 4.7 average and 94 rebounds. Reeves is second in number of rebounds with 105.

Senior Long and sophomore Shirley also dominate most divisions of the individual game highs.

Long and Shirley are tied for total points scored in a single game: Long hit 24 points against Tennessee, while Shirley duplicated the feat against Chattanooga the next night.

Against the Vols, Long hit 10 of 16 field goals for a game high.

Shirley tied junior Pete Rogers for the most free throws scored in a single game. This occurred when the sophomore bucketed 8 of 10 charity tosses against Chattanooga. Rogers had scored on 8 of 9 attempts in the Tennessee game.

The Seminoles gained 11 wins by defeating Tampa (92-60), Valdosta State (65-42), Alabama three times (72-63, 49-48, and 63-61), Georgia twice (77-69 and 88-54), Georgia Southern (79-60), Chattanooga (72-55), Miami in overtime (77-74), Houston (79-69).

The Tribe was tripped by Florida twice 80-59 and 94-86), Auburn twice (65- and 77-50), Richmond (62-56), Kentucky (83-54), Tennessee (66-65), Georgia (90-76), and Georgia Tech (70-55).

Ragamuffin Soccer Team To Battle Florida Gators

Florida State's soccer team, which might be called the "Ragamuffin Seminoles" because of the assorted costumes it wears on the playing field, will play a return match with a team from the University of Florida at Doak S. Campbell Stadium at 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

Coached by Tom Martin, a graduate assistant in the Physical Education Dept. the informally-organized FSU team is sponsored by the department and has several International Club members on it. Members wear borrowed football jerseys, basketball shorts, baseball socks and hockey shin guards and pay their own way to out-of-town contests since there is no financial support for the team.

Next Saturday when FSU battles the University of Florida booters, FSU's team will have four or five Brazilian players from among a group of 33 studying English in a five-week course at FSU. The game will be free and the public is invited. It will last about an hour and 40 minutes.

The Florida team has a record of 63 wins, three losses and three ties since it was organized in 1953. It hasn't lost a game since the first one in 1958, having compiled a record of 39 straight wins. When the FSU team played at Gainesville last fall the score was 7-1.

Captain of the team is Suwat Pananon of Thailand.

Eighteen Declare

S G Election Filing Closes

Eighteen students have filed Declaration of Candidacy for the 12 positions open in Student Body Elections.

Filing for the major student government offices closed at 5 p.m. yesterday.

Candidates and their campaign workers were informed of the rules and regulations for active campaigning at a compulsory meeting last night.

Active campaigning begins Tuesday at 5 p.m. and the primary elections will be Feb. 19.

No campaign materials are to be distributed or posted prior to Tuesday at 5 p.m. Bulletin boards will be placed on campus for the campaign posters of candidates. Each candidate will be allowed only one poster, 10"x14" in size on each side of each board.

Election posters may be posted in residence halls in the places designated by the residence counselors. No campaign materials are to be placed on any public property. This includes trees, sidewalks and signs.

Candidates must have the permission of the owners of private property in order to post their materials thereon. The Elections Bureau, with the owners' consent, has set up regulations governing candidates use of private properties.

David Wiles (unaffiliated) for clerk of Honor Cout; Betsy Boote (SP) for chairman of University Court; Pete Haddad (unaffiliated) and Vicki Voyles (SP) for chairman of Traffic Court.

Patti Childs (SP), Bob Foss (UP), Walt Martindale (SP) and Lana Murray (UP) for Student Board of Publications.

The Long Night World Premiere Plays Tonight

The first performance of "The Long Night" by Maurice Valency will be presented tonight at 8:15 p.m. in Conradi Theatre.

Tickets are on sale in Westcott Ticket Office for $1.50.

The play will run Wednesday through Sunday nights with matinee performances Saturday and Sunday afternoons. "The Long Night" is the 1963 production of the Eddie Dowling Foundation, in cooperation with the FSU University Theatre.

This latest play by Valency is about a Czechoslovakian foreign minister, Jan Masaryk, the last night of his life, as Communists overtake his country. Paul McGrath, a leading Broadway actor, will take the part of Masaryk.

Other members of the cast include Dr. Victor Mamatey, FSU history professor, as Ivanov; Rhett Bryson as Czerny; Al Smelko as Josef Munda; Dean Patterson as General Razumin; Sam Baker as Vokurka; Ellen Brewster as Hedi Svendsen; Jim Martin as Vatslav Musar; Pat Howard and Christine McGlasson as Berta; and Al Clarke as Morton. The director is Richard Fallon.

Two of Valency's other plays are being produced by the university theatres at the University of Florida and at the University of South Florida.

"The Four Saints" Present Shows Saturday, Monday

As the first Student Artist Series attraction of the season, "The Four Saints," male quartet, will perform at FSU Saturday and Monday.

The performances will be at 8:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium on both nights. Tickets at $3 for the public and $2 for FSU students are now on sale at Westcott Ticket Office.

The quartet is made up of Doug Evans, John Howell, Bob Erickson and Jerry Du Chene, all from the state of Washington. Along with their singing, the group works in a considerable amount of comedy. The performers play a total of 31 instruments.

The Four Saints began their singing career together as a teenage barbershop quartet. They received an all-together scholarship to the University of Puget Sound, where they were honor students. When they were called into military service, the four remained together in the United States Air Force Band.

After their tour of military duty, the quartet began a round of nightclub, hotel, and television apearances that has taken them to all parts of the country. Most of the clubs have requested repeat performances.5

They record for Warner Brothers and their current album is entitled "The Four Saints." It includes instrumental and vocal numbers such as "Away on the Wind," "Bugler's Holiday," "Lillette," "Heaven Help a Man," "Jimmy Valentine," and "Till There Was You."

Canadian Dispute

The United States and Canada are bickering over the placing of American controlled nuclear warheads in Canadian territory. Prime Minister John Diefenbaker has made statements of defiance toward this country and has indicated that his nation will not stand for having the United States "interfere" with Canada.

The surface subject of the dispute is nuclear warheads, but the underlying reasons go far below this.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker is in serious personal political difficulty. After his last election, Diefenbaker announced that Canada was in serious fiscal trouble and instituted an "austerity" program to keep Canadian money in the country. Duties were increased in an effort to keep out imports, particularly American goods.

Canadians began clamoring for the Prime Minister to convene Parliament to have them debate the program. Apparently fearing a no-confidence vote, which would force a general election, Diefenbaker refused. In summer elections, the Liberal Party swept into Parliament and secured control of the Legislative body.

Diefenbaker knows now that his days with Parliament are limited. John Pearce, Liberal leader, has been verbally assaulting the Prime Minister. A general election cannot be stalled off indefinitely.

Canada has some legitimate complaints with the United States. The State Department openly criticized Canadian policy while closed-door discussions were being held between the two countries. Canadians feel that the United States was too quick to chastise their closest friend while allowing Charles De Gaulle to defy the Western Alliance without condemnation.

Historically, Canada has been jealous of its sovereignty. It has been closely tied to the United States and greatly dependent upon its neighbor to the south for centuries. But the nation does not like to be reminded of its dependency, and does not like to feel obligated to the US. Political candidates for many years have used nationalism to win votes.

Diefenbaker is trying the same tactic. Seeing his political future slipping away, the Prime Minister is trying a last ditch attempt to keep control by blasting the United States and appealing to the nationalism of the people.

The United States should not worry unduly about Diefenbaker's statements. The Canadians for the most part are very pro-American. Chances are good that the Canadian people will take care of the current US-Canadian dispute.

Today's News Roundup

Flambeau News Services

MONTREAL -- Canadian Prime Minister John Diefenbaker has lashed out at the United States in the House of Commons while fighting to keep his government in power. The Prime Minister assailed US Secretary of State Dean Rusk for what he called a "further intrusion" in Canadian affairs. Deifenbaker said last week's State Department statement criticizing his wait-and-see nuclear policies cannot be excused by mere words. This was a reference to Rusk's statement before a Senate subcommittee Monday that he regretted the tone of the statement but still felt its facts were accurate.

Diefenbaker was making a last ditch attempt to split the opposition as three opposition parties lined up behind a move to topple the Conservative government by morning. Commons is nearing a decision on the opposition moves to declare no-confidence in his minority government. From all indications, the opposition moves will succeed.

WASHINGTON -- Calls have come up in both Houses of Congress for an investigation of just how much this country knows about what is going on in Cuba. Congressional members are growing increasingly edgy over charges that the Soviet military threat in the island is more dangerous than the Kennedy Administration admits. The White House, meanwhile, is keeping hands off the controversy.

MOSCOW -- The top Soviet Admiral says Russian submarines have successfully fired rockets from under water. Western experts have expressed belief the Soviet Union's new atomic submarine fleet was equipped with underwater launching devices. But Admiral Sergei Gorshkov's announcement was the first direct Moscow statement.

WASHINGTON -- For the first time in history, an American Chief Executive has sent Congress a special message calling for Federal help to the mentally ill and retarded. The sweeping program outlined by President Kennedy calls for unspecified federal spending to help finance a broad network of community health centers. The 24-hour operations would be set up for emergencies and aimed at diagnosis, prevention and treatment.

New Fraternity At FSU Officially Opens Today

Today marks the official opening of a new fraternity, Sigma Gamma Pi, on the FSU campus.

Six students began making plans last trimester for the formation of a fraternity which would provide its members with social activities, while still maintaining the major emphasis on academics. With the establishment of the Alpha Chapter here, the founders are optimistic about the possibilities of a new national, academic-social fraternity.

The basis of Sigma Gamma Pi's philosophy is the synthesis of high scholastic achievement and a balanced social life. Dr. E. L. Chalmers, associate dean of faculties, assisted the six charter members in forming a social organization to fit these ideals. Dr. James F. Carr, director of financial aid, and Chalmers both are members of the faculty incorporating committee.

Standards have been set that must be met by each incoming pledge class. Each pledge should have an overall quality point average of 3.0 or better. A few may have as low as a 2.5--providing an equal number in the same pledge class have a 3.5. Thus the overall point average of any one class will never be allowed to become less than 3.0.

Interested men may attend the Sigma Gamma Pi formal rush, to be held in the Main Lounge of Longmire Bldg., Sunday at 4 p.m. During this meeting, full plans will be revealed concerning the fraternity house, the costs to each member and, in general, the mechanics of the organization.

For additional information, or if attendance at the Sunday formal rush is impossible, the temporary officer of Sigma Gamma Pi may be contacted, at Smith Hall, campus phone 2293, extension 18.

Frosh Downed By Chipola 5

The Florida State freshman basketball team lost a return match with the Chipola Junior College Indians, 66-61, and ran the FSU string of consecutive losses to four Monday night.

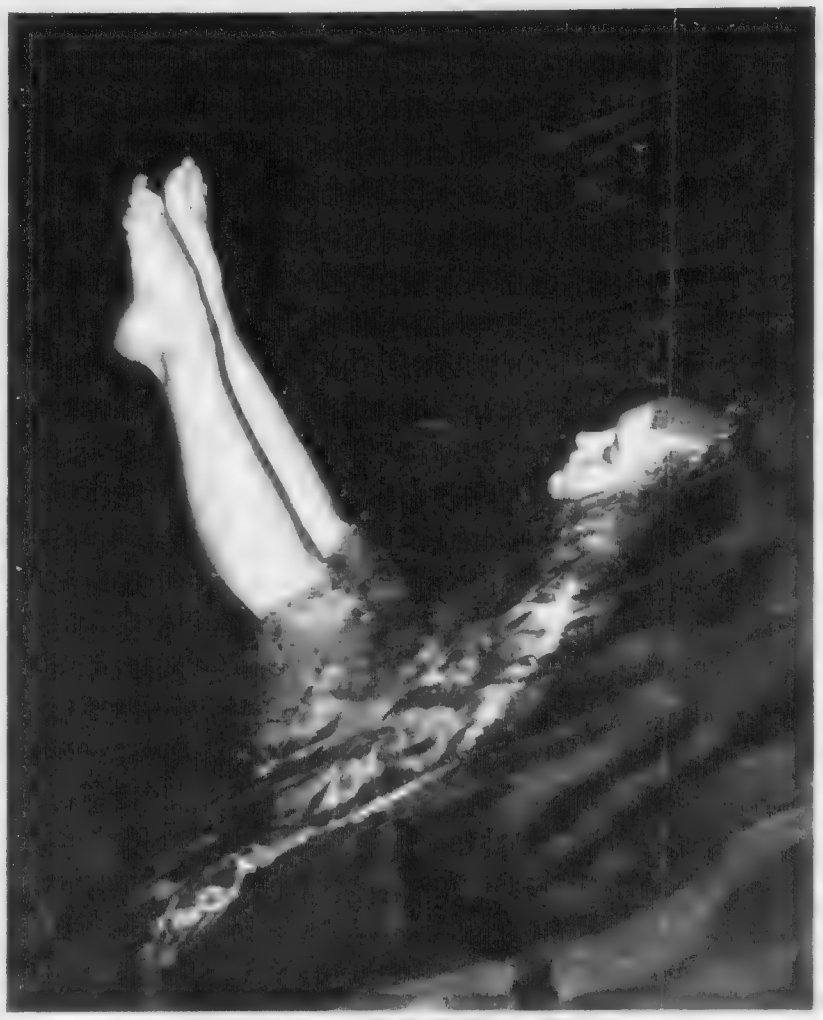
Although the first and second high-scorer of the contests were Baby Tribesmen, the Chipola cagers wrestled the triumph from the Seminoles via five Indians tallyong in double figures.

Guards Ken Leakey and Bill Peacock bucketed 18 and 17 points respectively for Florida State, while Chipola's impetus came from Wayne Purvis (16), Gary Bryan (15), Charles Clark (11), and Lew Halter (10), and Austin Robbins (10).

During most of the first half, the Seminoles were in front, but the host team from Marianna surged ahead with over five minutes left before the half ended with the score, 38-32.

In the second half, the lead changed hands seven times and with 23 seconds Chipola had only a one point lead, but then Robbins and Clark sank a field goal apiece to give the junior college the margin of victory.

Statistically, the Seminoles dominated every department, except the free throws, for Coach Joe Williams' Tribesmen outscored Chipola from the floor, 50-49 percent and outrebounded the Indians, 36-26. But the Mariannians grabbed the free throw title with an average of 82 percent.



After the Baby Seminoles defeated the Jacksonville University frosh, 77-58, in Tully Gymnasium a four-game losing streak started. The Baby Alabamians started the loss skein with a 58-53 triumph, and then tow Pensacola teams administered thrashings.

The freshmen's next game is Saturday at 5:30 p.m. in Tully Gymnasium, when FSU plays Old Southern Foods.

Valdosta Game

The Florida State basketball team battled the Valdosta State cagers last night in Valdosta, Ga., but the results were not available at press time. For complete coverage see tomorrow's Flambeau.

FSU's next home bout will be Saturday in Tully Gymnasium when Coach Bud Kennedy sends the Seminoles against Stetson.

Spring Football Drills To Start

Spring drills for the FSU football team will begin on Feb. 23 and end -- probably -- March 30, announced Coach Bill Peterson.

Peterson said the Seminoles will work on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays -- sticking by NCAA rules which permit a maximum of 20 practice days within a 36 day period. Scrimmages will be held on Tuesdays and Saturdays.

This should be the busiest Spring at FSU since Peterson arrived three years ago. FSU has lost 13 lettermen, and -- like many other teams using the three-team system in the past -- must get in line with recent NCAA rules changes regarding substitution.

"For three years we have geared everything -- recruiting, player development, game plans -- to the three-team system," explained Peterson. "Now they've gone and changed the rules on us and it looks like we're going to have to start from scratch."

FSU utilized three units the past three seasons -- the Chiefs (two ways), Renegades (defense) and Warriors (offense). The way Peterson reads the new rules, three-teaming is out.

"We'll be trying to make two-way players out of the men who have been going only on offense or defense," said Peterson. "There's no doubt about it: that's going to take up most of our time this Spring."

The climactic Spring game has tentatively been set for 2 p.m. March 30 in Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

Panel Of Professors Evaluate Trimester

By PHYLECIA DELAMETER
Flambeau Staff Writer

Appraisal of the trimester system at FSU was the topic of a panel discussion conducted Monday by Dr. William Cramer, before th American Association of University Professors and the public on Monday night at the Library Lecture Hall. Dr. Cramer, vice president of the FSU Chapter of AAUP, askedpanel members to appraise the administrative effect of the trimester on the department or school which each represented.

Dr. Kellogg W. Hunt of the English Dept., said his department has undergone no particular administrative problem. The only change that has been made, limiting the choice of hours that freshman courses could be taken, would have been necessary had the semester system continued.

The next panel member, Dr. Warren Herz of the Chemistry Dept., reported there has been a definite problem of scheduling lab classes in his department. The main problem has been the reduction in the number of available class periods which interfere with labs.

A change in the number of passes and failures seems to have occurred, according to Dr. Herz. He added that work in lab was limited, since 11 minutes per period is lost under the trimester.

The difficulty of covering all of the specified material in a large lecture class was presented by Dr. Calvin Billman of the History Dept. Many professors are concerned that 14 weeks is not long enough for most students to read and study to absorb the required material.

Internship has proven to be the main problem in the School of Education, according to Dr. Robert Martin. Since the student does not return to FSU following internship, he does not get the follow-up courses available under the semester. Martin expressed the hope that this problem would be solved through seminars and workshops held during internship.

Robert Cramer then spoke about the problems in the School of Music. The loss of three weeks under the trimester has made it difficult for music students to maintain the practice required for recitals and other performances. Studio teaching has encountered the same problem of a time shortage, Cramer stated. He added music students are losing under the trimester in this area particulary, in that they are paying the same price for fewer private lessons.

A question and answer period followed, in which it was brought out that too many students are forced to study for exams rather than for knowledge.

Dean of Faculties Werner Baum, from the audience, said that a committee, representing various sections of the university, will study the problems produced by the trimester system. He said he would like to receive any suggestions for improvement that the AAUP might have.

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF NEW PHYSICS BUILDING

This week the Board of Control approved the preliminary drawings of the 1.7 million dollar structure which will fit into the Science Center area between Smith Hall and the School of Education. The building will be among the first to be financed from Governor Bryant's pay-as-you-go bond program. It is hoped that ground will be broken for construction of the building in June.

Honor Court Bill Passed

Senate Addressed By Van Assenderp

Student Body President Ken van Assenderp made a short address before the members of the Senate at yesterday's full Senate session.

"At the time of its inaugeration, I said that the Senate and members of the Executive branch of Student Government were of the finest caliber and showed great promise. That statement is still a fact and cannot be denied. But the Senate is also human, and being human can make mistakes. It is my hope, though, that whenever criticism of any sort -- either constructive or otherwise -- is aimed at either the legislative or executive branches of student government, that this criticism will be delivered through the proper channels and to the participants involved," President van Assenderp went on to say that with this thought in mind, he wished to deliver some remarks which he hoped would be taken in the light in which they were given. He first urged the Senate to move ahead at a rapid, but careful rate. Van Assenderp cited several cases where bills which had been hastily prepared or incomplete in coverage had been vetoed.

The President also commented on the fact that there has been no provision, as yet, for an effective summer student government. His last point concerned the qualifications for elected officials. He called for "more equitable distribution," particularly in the judicial branch. Van Assenderp asserted that those sections in the statutes that were not of benefit should be eliminated.

In a letter to the Senate, President Van Assenderp stated his reasons for vetoing Student Senate bills 20 and 23. He vetoed bill 20 on the grounds that as a Constitutional Amendment, it must make changes which are properly a part of a constitutional document. "Such topics as requirements for declarations of candidacy, for signing of pledges, and for obligation to live up to a signed pledge are not material for a Constitution."

The Senate amended the bills by deleting the offending sections and adding an enactment clause making them effective as of the first day of school in the fall of 1963.

Student Senate's hotly contested bill pertaining to the Honor Cout was passed unanimously. After a short introductory speech concerning the major changes the bill would be affecting, Chairman of Judicial and Rules Bill Grant stated that the bill in its final form was compatible to both the members of the committee and to Chief Justice Ross McVoy.

Senator Arnie Gibbs announced his committee's recommendation of passage for bill 17 with one stipulation: The committee added an amendment to read: "Providing a minimum of five justices are present and voting." This amendment insures that all cases which come before the Honor Court will have the benefit of a trial. Occasionally in the past, cases have been dismissed because there has been no provision for a decision in cases of too few justices voting. The bill passed with a unanimous vote.

Senator Louis Barnett of the Trimester Committee amended Student Senate Bill 21 pertaining to the tenure of office for the Chief Justice, Clerk of Honor Court, and Chairman of the University Court. The newly amended bill calls for these major elected officers to serve during the letter to Van Assenderp, the rector of the National Council, s Joan Clark, said, "We hope through your association with CCUN, members of your college community may gain a greater understanding of the work of the United Nations."

The CCUN is a non-profit organization, with no political affiliations, and is designed to build informed student support for the United Nations. The Council provides its more than 350 affiliated colleges with first-hand information on current issues in the UN, and provides them with an opportunity to have their opinions heard.

Van Assenderp said that no group has yet been established to participate in the CCUN. He asked that students interested in forming such an organization write or see him in his office, 214 Longmire Bldg.; Anthony Skiff, 519 Hart Street; or Debby Snow in Cawthon Hall.

The student body president noted that the stated purposes of the CCUN are to make the Charter and the work of te United Nations known to college students throughout the U.S.; to encourage students to reach conclusions about US policies which both promote our national interest and make American leadership in the UN most effective; and to develop a student public which takes action upon its beliefs.

wo Of Eighteen Candidates isqualified From Running ecretary of Elections Ron Jones announced that two of the 18 candidates nning for major student government offices have been disqualified due lack of experience on the FSU campus.

ete Haddad (unaffiliated), who filed for chairman of Traffic Court, has e year's experience on Honor Court in another college but was disqualified because he has no experience here. Walt Martindale (SP), who ed for Board of Student Publications, is presently working on the staff a student publication at FSU but will not have completed an entire mester until after the scheduled date of installation of officers.

artindale has filed a written protest to Chief Justice of the Honor urt Ross McVoy. In his protest, Martindale said that the wording of e requirements for BOP could not be inerpreted precisely and that e wording was obsolete in that it referred to the old semester system.

an Warren, who was disqualified earlier this week in her application r Clerk of Honor Court, has also appealed to the Chief Justice. She es that her experience on Traffic Court should qualify her for the ice.

hereas, the Student Body Constitution states that the Clerk of Honor urt shall have had over one full semester's experience on either nor Court or University Court.

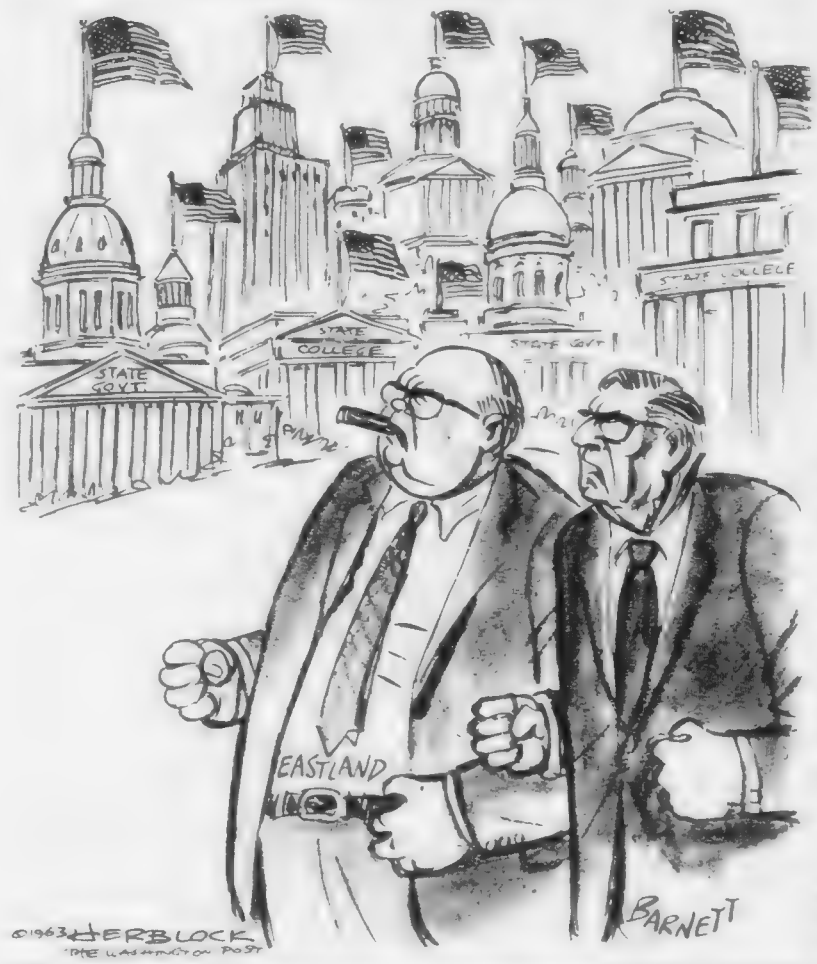
Mortar Board will initiate its 15 new members on Saturday afternoon at 3 p.m. in Longmire Auditorium. The public may attend, President Kay Isley said.



Honor Court Acts

One student was sentenced to immediate suspension from the university, and another was placed on probation, in two cases tried Tuesday by the Honor Court.

The student suspended pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing $47 worth of records from a Jitney Jungle store. The suspension is for one trimester.

Placed on Honor Court probation for two trimesters was a student found guilty of deliberate deception in the selling of a textbook which was not his own.

AROUND THE WORLD

MIAMI -- A three-judge federal court with jurisdiction over Florida's reapportionment will hold a hearing at Miami tomorrow to determine if the legislature's new formula is acceptable.

Several candidates have qualified for new positions created by the reapportionment formula, including a Jacksonville Negro attorney.

TALLAHASSEE -- Governor Farris Bryant and his cabinet agreed yesterday to recommend that the 1963 Legislature authorize a record 882 million dollars to operate the government during the next 2 financial years.

The proposed budget is 22 million dollars more than anticipated income during the same period. But Budget Director Harry G. Smith, who did the spade work on the budget, said indications are that income will offset the spending.

"Florida's economy is rapidly expanding upward. . .and has followed no set pattern," he told the cabinet.

Because of the swiftly rising income, he said, a more accurate estimate of revernue could be made just before the legislature convenes April 2.

The major chunk of state spending would go for public schools. The Department of Education, which was authorized 373 million dollars currently, sought 425 million but was recommended for 415 million.

The Universities' Board of Control, with an 88 million dollar current budget, sought 145 million, but was recommended for 112 million. Most recommendations were higher than current appropriations.

WASHINGTON -- Defense Secretary McNamara said in a radio and television broadcast yesterday that he believes beyond reasonable doubt that the Russians have removed all offensive weapons from Cuba and have not reintroduced them.

He was backed up by a Pentagon Intelligence officer who said that US aerial reconnaissance as late as three days ago showed that former Russian missile bases in Cuba still were inactive and dismantled, and there was no sign of military activity.

The intelligence officer, John Hughes, said an intensive reconnaissance effort is being directed at Russian ships headed for Cuba.

Socialism Suppresses Human Nature

To The Editor:

Mr. Riggins, and others, have written many articles advocating socialism in the United States.

A socialistic type of system is needed in certain sectors of every economy. I could cite our postal system, utility operations, Social Security and even the United States Armed Forces. However, socialism would not be lucrative in the greater sectors of our economy, it would be detrimental.

Socialism suppresses two basic elements of an economy and of human nature; human initiative and the opportunity to express that initiative. This is the floor which supports capitalism, and this is the same floor which will defeat socialism -- or create a group of unhappy socialized animals.

When a businessman gets an "idea" and he wants to invest in it, he should have the opportunity to do so, as he does under capitalism. Under socialism, with democracy, he could follow up on his idea only by voting for a representative who will support his project -- if he could convince a candidate to support his project.

This brings us to initiative. Why should a person want to convince Uncle Sam, why would he even develop his idea, if he is to get no returns for his labor; as would be the case under socialism? Under capitalism, the hope for profits animates one to form new ideas and invest in them.

"But," the socialist will say, "the government can give rewards to those who bring forth good ideas." This is a little bit of capitalism in socialism. What does it mean for the socialist? First, it means Uncle Sam decides how much the idea is worth and second, it means that the people will be paying for the project and assuming the risks of it. What if the whole project is a flunkie? All I can say is that I do not like the idea of paying for someone else's bad ideas.

What if the project is a success? The businessman will get a reward, maybe $100 or $500; maybe a red ribbon or only publicity. If this were the profits of my idea, I would feel that someone took something of mine that did not belong to them -- and I would not get another idea for a long time.

And what of that great mass that we call "the people." We have seen that they pay for bad investments, was it they too that got paid for the initiative of their neighbor i.e. his good idea? Probably not. It is Uncle Sam who decided to make the investment and it is he who holds the profits.

"But," the socialist will argue, "Uncle Sam is 'the people'." True, we could vote for our repres[entatives], but how intelligently? [Can] the politician be able to categ[orize] how much of the year's profits [should] be spent on education, shoela[ces], paper, steel, cars, refrigera[tors], dishwashers, maps, onion r[ings], shoe horns etc? No. And if he c[ould], could we rationally determine [how] much should be spent and wh[ere]. For that matter, should one pe[rson] be able to tell his neighbor [what] he can buy at the local store? [The] answers are obviously no, bu[t that] is socialism.

Let's leave it alone, we will [only] get our fingers burned if we [try]. Let the person who has e[nough] gumption to get an idea invest [in it] and if it is a flunkie let him p[ay the] cost, not the public; and if it [is a] success let him bear the fruits.

Social—Academic Fraternity

Yesterday, I read in the Flambeau that a new fraternity was being organized on the FSU campus. If I understood the article correctly, this group, Sigma Gamma Pi by name, is to be a social-academic fraternity. The founders, charter committee if you please, have stated that the "major emphasis" will be placed on the academic development of the individual while, at the same time, stressing social eliteness.

This is indeed not only what FSU but all schools have needed for many years. With a fraternal brotherhood such as Sigma Gamma Pi working to combine academic and social activities, the life of the student, while here at FSU, will be greatly enriched.

Of the sixty or more honorary and career organizations on cam[pus], Sigma Gamma Pi seems to [be a] promising candidate for the h[ono]rary "with a plus." Many fraterni[ties] have undoubtedly started with s[tan]dards as high as those propose[d for] Sigma Gamma Pi. Yet, how [many] have achieved these standards [and] managed to retain them down thr[ough] the years? If Sigma Gamma Pi w[ill] their proposed pledge class ave[rage] (no less than 3.0) into their co[n]stitution, there is no reason why S[igma] Gamma Pi should not achieve [its] goals.

The merits of having been ass[oci]ated with a highly honored fra[ter]nity such as Sigma Gamma Pi, du[ring] one's college career, should gr[eatly] increase the recognition of suc[h an] individual after his graduation.

Brubeck-Desmond Group Praised

To the Editor:

Paul Desmond (alto sax) alone or teamed with Dave Brubeck, ranks among the great improvisers of musical history. They have also accomplished something -- Brubeck especially -- which has often been talked about and attempted but never successfully demonstrated until the Brubeck Quartet came along. The blending of the so called "serious music" (Western, European, long-hair, classical-- each to his own interpretation) with those of jazz.

The Quartet accomplishes its wonders of improvisations by dividing itself in half. Pianist Brubeck and saxophonist Paul Desmond work against the bass and drums; Brubeck's piano solos are sometimes so far removed from the melody and harmony of the number he is playing that one doubts that any return is ever possible. Desmond, while he usually strays less far than Brubeck, is an equally fearless and gifted improviser.

Where as everyone else has tried this blending in terms of composition, Brubeck has come up with the only answer which can preserve any semblance of jazz. The solution lies in introducing into jazz, wit[hout] destroying jazz, the element[s of] "serious music." Brubeck's [work] at the piano is frequently that [of a] concert pianist and can evoke [the] feeling of an interpreter of S[car]lati, Bach, Chopin or Beethove[n] the occasion demands. Yet al[l of] these elements are introduced i[n the] course of free improvisation a[nd] a purely jazz rhythm.

The Dave Brubeck Quartet [will] hand down to posterity a secure [and] most extrordinary place high [in the] annals of the history of jazz.

Russians Are Masters At Propaganda

To the Editor:

To Mr. Riggins:

Yes...we must cooperate with the Eastern block. We must forget the past and look forward to the glorious future when the United States and the Soviet Union will exist as one big happy family. Sure it will happen. Mr. Khrushchev wants co-existence and peace! peace! peace!

Let me tell you something, Mr. Riggins. You are hearing only what Premier Khrushchev wants y[ou] hear. The communists are mas[ters] at the art of propaganda. As a ser[ious] student of world affairs you [must] know that the aim of commu[nism] is to conquer the world. Your p[al] Mr. Khrushchev, realizes th[at] much as Stalin, Lenin and M[arx]. They believed that communism [and] capitalism cannot peacefully [co-] exist on the same earth at the sa[me] time.

If they really want peace, why [is] there a wall in Berlin? Why [are] there missiles in Cuba? Why [do] they continually break test ba[n]? If Premier Khruschev is the [so] congenial, jolly and fat little [man] you make him out to be then [why] did he pound his shoe in the U[N] few years ago?

You said that we must cooper[ate]. I think we are pretty far out on a limb now. We ought to climb [back] out of this tree of appeasement [and] put our feet firmly on the gro[und]. I think it is about time the "pe[ace] loving" communists started coop[er]ating with us.

Two For See Saw Great

By TIM CARR
Flambeau Broadway Correspondent

This film does not strive for greatness but it achieves it. It is about two very ordinary people with very ordinary emotions. It is a very low budget, very simply filmed, very unobtrusively directed, and very, very good.

Robert Mitchum, an out-of-work lawyer recuperating from a broken marriage, takes up with Shirley MacLaine, a not particularly moral but not particularly immoral working girl with a wonderful Brooklyn accent. She falls in love with him, but he just "can't forget a woman who has been part of my life for twelve years," which seems to be the message of the film.

"Two for the Seesaw" manages to have some very funny scenes without interfering with its wistful mood. One bedroom scene in particular is hilarious and still quite tasteful.

Miss MacLaine and Mitchum are both excellent. The directing is beautifully understated in the style Hollywood is beginning to borrow from Europe. All in all, this movie is well worth seeing.

FSU Gets 12th Win, Awaits Stetson

State Downs State, 61 to 56

The Valdosta State basketball team scared the Florida State Seminoles Tuesday night, but the Tribe exploded on the shooting of senior Charlie Long and won, 61-56.

This was the second time this season that the Rebels have fallen to FSU. Coach Bud Kennedy's cagers, who are now 12-9, will go against the Stetson Hatters Saturday night in Tully Gymnasium.

The Hatters are undefeated in the Florida Intercollegiate Conference and are one of the two Florida teams that have defeated the University of Miami. FSU has defeated Miami twice.

In the Valdosta contest, the Seminoles met a tougher-than-expected set of Georgians, for it was not until the last three minutes that FSU was able to wrap the game up.

Then, it was the job of Long to give FSU the needed margin. Long struck first with 3:10 left for a 53-49 score. For nearly a minute, however, not a bucket was scored, and then Wally Summers added a field goal for the Rebels.

Once again, the court was scoreless this time for a minute and a half. Then Long bucketed a jumper.

The Rebels came within three points of a three-point play by Preston Hodges. The score was and the Seminoles froze t until Long was fouled.

With 15 seconds left, L given a charity toss.

A field goal by Valdosta's Bonovitch brought the Rebs two points, but, when Long in for a layup, he was fou lengthened the margin with and a free throw.

High scorer for the even naturally Charlie Long, who ded nine field goals and eig throws for 26 points.

Letters Presented To 40 Footballers

A total of 40 FSU players -- 13 of them graduating seniors -- have received 1962 varsity football letters announced Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha.

Besides the 13 seniors, there were 12 juniors and 15 sophomores among the FSU letter-winners. That means Coach Bill Peterson will greet 27 returning lettermen when he opens Spring drills here on Feb. 23.

Peterson had special praise for the graduating seniors, who sparked FSU to its finest football season in history -- one which saw the Seminoles finish 4-3-3 and 1-1-3 against rugged Southeastern Conference opposition.

"These seniors," said Peterson, "have played a major part in the rise of Florida State in football during the past three seasons. To say we'll miss them is an understatement."

Among the seniors were captain-guard Gene McDowell, the most-honored football player in Seminole history, and record-setting quarterback Eddie Feely.

The complete list of FSU's 1962 football lettermen:

Seniors: Mike Blazovitch, T, Utica, N.Y.; Bruce Darsey, C, Largo, Fla.; Eddie Feely, QB, Gainesville, Fla.; Tom Hillabrand, HB, Perrysburg, O.; keith Kinderman, HB, Chicago, Ill.; John Levings, G, Ft. Worth, Tex.; John McConnaughhay, E, Ocala, Fla.; Gene McDowell, G, Waycross, Ga.; Y.C. Religion In Life Series Features Dr. Chad Walsh

Dr. Chad Walsh, professor and chairman of the English Dept. at Beloit College in Wisconsin, will be Religion In Life Series speaker, Feb. 17-19.

Walsh is the founder of an international poetry periodical. His books include collections of his poetry and a children's novel.

The series of lectures and meetings during the two days at FSU will be on the general theme of "The Prophetic Voice In Modern Literature."

Two of the lectures will be at night and the public is especially invited to these.

Sunday, Feb. 17, at 7 p.m., Walsh will speak on "The Nightmare and the Mirror." The address will be in the Suwannee Dining Room.

A coffee and informal discussion will be held in Longmire Club Room from 4:15 p.m. to 5:15 p.m. Monday, Feb. 18. That night at 8 p.m. Walsh will discuss "The Mutating Arts" in the Library Lecture Hall. Humanities will co-sponsor the address with the Religion in Life Series.

On Tuesday, Feb. 19, Walsh will address a faculty luncheon in the Suwannee Dining Room. His topic will be "Poetry and Belief."

A graduate of the University of Virginia, Walsh holds the master's and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Michigan. His poems, articles and book reviews have appeared in "The New York Times," "The Saturday Review" and "Poetry: A Magazine of Verse." His latest books include "Doors Into Poetry," "From Utopia to Nightmare," and a new anthology of British and American poetry.

In 1961-62 Walsh completed research in England, then served as Fulbright lecturer in Italy. Prior to that, he was Fulbright lecturer in Finland and visiting professor of English at Wellesley College. He is founder and member of the editorial board of the "Beloit Poetry Journal," international poetry periodical. In 1948, Walsh was ordained to the ministry of the Episcopal Church.

Party Expense Bill Compiled

A bill to regulate party campaign expenses is being compiled for introduction into Senate by Secretary of Elections Ron Jones.

The bill will outline in detail for the first time the procedure to be followed by campus political parties in filing expense statements.

Jones is planning to ask the Senate to create rigid requirements which will stipulate that the parties submit statements showing itemized receipts for all party funds spent on each party candidate.

The purpose of these requested regulations is to insure the continuance of a strong, honestly run party system on the FSU campus.

"If such a bill passed, it would make public a record of party expenses as is the practice in both state and national campaigning. This prevents political parties from improperly allocating funds," said Jones.

Saturday & Monday

"The Four Saints" Give Two Shows

The "Four Saints," male quartet entertainment, will appear Saturday and Monday nights at 8:30 in Westcott Auditorium under the Student Artist Series.

Members of the group -- Doug Evans, John Howell, Bob Erickson, and Jerry Du Cheme -- play a total of 31 instruments and dash their show with subtle humor.

Although the four began 10 years ago in a barber shop quartet, they have just lately become commercialized. Their careers were delayed because of schooling at Puget Sound University and the military service. After all four received scholarships to the University, they began to organize more routines and play at several western colleges.

To name but a few, Georgia Tech, Kansas State, Emory and Denver Universities hall all reported them as "one of the best professional vocal groups to perform at their respective schools." The foursome all belong to Phi Mu Alpha, the national honorary music fraternity.

Warner Brothers has recently released an album entitled "The Four Saints," which includes instrumental and vocal numbers. Among the numbers are "Away on the Wind," "Bugler's Holiday," "Lillette," "Heaven Help a Man," "Jimmy Valentine," and "Till There Was You."

"The Four Saints" are one of two groups that has recorded the theme song of "Wine and Roses" entitled "Windy." This show, now playing at the Music Hall in New York starring Jack Lemon and Hew Relick. This show is up for an Oscar and the result should be announced the week of April 8.

Several FSU student government and staff members, including Jackie Mathis, Hal Smith, Johnny Smith, and Ben Sharp, attended a meeting of the Southern Union of Student Government Associations (SUSGA) and saw the "Four Saints" perform.

Johnny Smith commented that "This group is undoubtedly one of the most musically talented that I've ever heard. This, along with their stage showmanship guarantees and evening of entertainment."

Ben Sharp emphasized their very subtle, sophisticated humor, and said that they were a sheerly talented group. "Of all the show that I have seen," reported Sharp, "the 'Four Saints' were the most outstanding. They received four standing ovations at this time."

Fulton Lewis Speaks Here

Young Americans for Freedom will sponsor a campus appearance of Fulton Lewis, III, a member of the National Executive Board of that organization and a former staff member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Lewis will speak Wednesday evening, Feb. 27 in Opperman Music Hall. Son of radion commentator Fulton Lewis Jr., the speaker is spokesman for conservatism, and "will be willing to debate anyone" student, faculty member or townsmean, on the topics, "The House Committee on Un-American Activities," "Liberalism vs. Conservatism," or "The Failure of Liberal Foreign Policy."

Any student or faculty member who would be interested in debating Lewis on any one of these topics may phone Anne Buxton, 223-0903, between 8:30 and 5, or Dale Brown, 224-9858 evenings.

"The Long Night" Has World Premiere Showing

By CHRISTINE MCGLASSOM
Flambeau Staff Writer

Backstage Wednesday night, the cast of "The Long Night" waited hopefully for their entrance on stage.

They had spent four weeks rehearsing and were now ready to test their efforts before a critical audience.

This play means more to the Speech Dept. than just an ordinary theatre production. If it is done well, the University Theatre will be able to bring in more well-known actors, such as Paul McGrath, to be in later performances.

To author Maurice Valency, the production means a chance to take his play to Broadway. To McGrath, it may indicate a lead in a future New York play. Thus, "The Long Night" is important to the theatre, the writer and many players.

There were many technical obstacles to be resolved. A musical score had to be written expecially for the play. Speech classes joined to record crowd scenes on tape. A picture of McGrath was painted by a member of the FSU Art Dept. to catch the image of his father. The arduous task of scenery and costumes was perfected to give the play more authenticity. A Czechoslovakian woman was brought to rehearsal to give the cast the true pronounciations of names and phrases used in the play.

The outcome of all this work may be observed by attending a performance of "The Long Night," which will run through Sunday.

Dilemma Solutions

Out of all the controversy on legislative reapportionment in legislatures of the various states, has finally come some constructive approaches to the dilemma.

The advisory committee on inter-governmental relations has recommended that apportionment of both houses of state legislatures "be based strictly on population."

This is the first time that a cross section of lawmakers from throughout the nation, on the local and national levels have pooled their resources to solve one of the most critical problems of our time.

A strong minority on the commission took the view that some deviation from a population basis should be permissible, particularly in one house of a legislature and specifically if the people of the state vote affirmatively and specifically for some other basis of apportionment.

The 26 member commission also made these further recommendations in a report distributed for use by state and federal officials and legislatures we feel Florida law makers would do well to consider.

--Apportionment of seats in state legislative bodies should be specified in state constitutions.

--Where a legislative body is to be apportioned on the basis of population a maximum deviation of 10 per cent should be specified in the constitution.

--The constitution should charge the state legislature with initial responsibility for apportionment but should further provide for a non-legislative and non-judicial body to do the apportioning job if the legislature fails to act or acts unconstitutionally.

--The constitution should further specify the frequency of reapportionment and should endow state courts with both jurisdiction and remedies with respect to reapportionment actions.

--The people of the state should be provided the opportunity to react at the polls at any time to the continuance or change of reapportionment formulas.

Radicalism Spirit In America

American Revolution Radical Adventure

By THOMAS RIGGINS

Norman Cousins spoke candidly at his lecture last week of the great tradition of Radicalism that exists in America.He pointed out, to conservative embarrassment no doubt, that the very revolution that gave birth to America was a radical

Much confusion will result from the admittedly liberal use of the word "radical." The Winston Dictionary gives as one definition, "advocating extreme change... a person who wishes to root old customs and institutions rather than to reform them..."

In the light of this formulation of the concept of "radical" I think everyone would be forced to agree that the American Revolution was indeed an experiment in Radicalism. The shackles of English monarchal rule certainly were not retempered by a mere "conservative" appeal to the restoration of past rights that had been unjustly abrogated by the Crown. The revolutionaries in this country had tried to reform basic injustices for decades -- but such conservative maneuvers brought little success. The reason is the same everywhere conservatism claims to speak for the masses of the people; i.e. the ruling classes, content with their privileged positions, are appeased by only half hearted gestures of reform.

No, it was not to reform the old regime that the Revolution was ultimately fought. It was to destroy monarchial fiat and establish a new form of Government entirely. The "Declaraton of Independence" was the clarion call for the end of Imperialism -- the last vestiges of which we see finally dying out in our own century.

But the main point I wish to stress is not just the nature of the American Revolution, but the nature of Radicalism itself. It is, simply stated, the right of any people to overthrow governments not of their own choosing, to revolt against tyranny and suppression and to feel free to change and remake any social institution that is not fitted to the existential reality of the moment.

But lest the conservatives begin to claim Radicalism as an American innovation let us remind them that the Radical Revolution of the United States is not out unique expression of resistance to tyranny. From Sparticus to Marx and beyond, the human spirit has cried out against suppression in any form.

Our Revolution, like the many revolutions before and since, is but another expression of the basic human will to be free of the chains of unwanted authority. In truth the American Revolution is a misnomer -- for the Revolution belongs not to one people but to Mankind.

Colonies' Rebellion Conservative Reacti

By GERRY DOBSON

Self-styled intellectual Norman Cousins, w spoke here did his little bit to perpetuate a which liberals use to justify their wild sch and unproven innovations: that America is always has been a "radical" nation, and th all began with our "radical" Revolution. C implied as much when he denied to quest Soviets that the United States has lost tou its "radical" past.

Stan Evans, editor of the "Indianapolis defines radicalism as "...a settled hostil old and accepted ways...a preference for a novelties over the prescriptive guidelines dition." This is a fair definition, and one then add that a conservative prefers to changes about cautiously, carefully, and the guidelines of our past experience. In these criteria the American Revolution w tinctly conservative in nature; one mig the French or Russian Revolutions as ex of radical revolutions.

The history of the quarrel between the C and Great Britain shows that it was Great B which attempted a "radical" innovation...ta without representation...and that the An colonies took the "reactionary" their rights as Englishmen, which had seen fit to suspend.

That our Declaration of Independence was r ring not to new "radical" ideas but to the r of Englishmen can be seen in the res First Continental Congress: "...The i of the English Colonies in North A immutable laws of nature, the principles English Constitution, and the several charte compacts, have the following rights: ... That are entitled to life, liberty, and property, an have never ceded to any sovereign power wh a right to dispose of either without their co

Furthermore, the revolutionary act itself firm basis in tradition... in the English Co Law itself. Its purpose was to nullify Parliament which were against the Magna and the natural rights of Englishmen. A to Sir Edward Coke, a great ex Common Law, such an act would be null

The American Revolution then, rather a new and radical step in history, was a vative revolution brought about within the guide of the English Common Law, in an effort to re to the Colonists the rights of Englishm conservatives claim the Revolution as ou and strive to preserve for future gener the freedoms our ancestors fought to re Let the liberals brag of their own innova deficit financing, governmental meddling, catory taxation. Let not the story of our Rev be crammed into a liberal memory hole.

Always Chasing Rain Clouds

Once upon a time there lived a hermit. High on a hill he had his cave. Every morning he would come out of the cave, stretch a bit, and watch the sun bathe the eastern sky in beautiful colors. But these beautiful colors did not appeal to the hermit, for he was color-blind; so instead of rejoicing in their beauty, he would stand sullenly before them, shake his fist in defiance, and retire to his cave.

"The poor forest creatures," he would say to himself, "that they should be subjected to such a dismal display; why it's even a bad influence!" Thus grumbling to himself one day, he walked over the hill to talk with another hermit (who by some strange fate was also color-blind). The two agreed that something must be done to protect the poor forest creatures, lest they become corrupted by this evil influence which lurked over the horizon. So being powerful and righteous men, they called upon their gods to envelop the eastern sky in heavy clouds. The gods obliged.

But wouldn't you know it, when the forest creatures saw the clouds gathering they became alarmed, and the wisest among them held council to meet this threat, for they had grown to love the sunrise. They made it known throughout the forest that if they could not enjoy the sunrise, they would go to another forest, where the gods of the hermits could not create clouds. The mockingbirds squaked assent. The hermits, whose existence depended upon the forest creatures, sat by their fire and grunted long into the night.

The next morning the clouds were almost gone, and once more the sun rose brightly over the horizon.

But the hermits still grumbled. "This is no way for powerful and righteous men to live," said one to the other. "Just look at this cave. The stone is crumbling and the floor is cold." So they made plans to move farther up hill, where they would find a more comfortable cave, and command a greater view of the forest. "Since I am a more important hermit than you," siad one, "I shall gather more berries and eat more meat. And since I must look important to other hermits who might be passing through, I shall have the forest creatures build me a traveling-chair so they can carry me to the new cave on top of the hill."

The hermit does indeed [illegible] more berries and eat more [illegible] The forest creatures have built his traveling-chair with [illegible] will some day carry him to the of the hill. The sun still rises morning to color the horizon glisten in the mist to the wonder awe of the forest creatures.

But hermits are hermits.

Coffee Hour Hears Dr. J. Preu Today

Dr. James Preu of the FSU English Dept. will discuss the ideology of the affluent society at the English Coffee Hour today.

The literary-social hour will be at 4 p.m. in Westminster House. It is free and open to the public.

An ideological controversy over luxury, wealth and conspicuous expenditure which make up what we call the affluent society, began in the 18th century according to Dr. Preu. Many writers denounced luxury, he said including Oliver Goldsmith who wrote: "Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey, where wealth accumulates, and men decay." Preu said:

"But there were those who defended luxury. Among these none took a more interesting approach than Bernard Mandeville. Mandeville believed that luxury, instead of weakening a nation, made it strong. Furthermore, he argued that there could be no prosperity without vice.

"By this he did not mean that vice was an unfortunate byproduct of luxury. He meant that vice produces luxury and is essential to it. In short, the vices of individuals promote the welfare of society as a whole.

"As everyone who has studied his Catechism knows, there are Seven Deadly Sins, and the first of these is Pride. But if it were not for Pride, particularly Feminine Pride, the great fashion and dress designing industry would collapse. Thousands of firms would go bankrupt; millions of employees would be thrown out of work.

"The effect would spread far beyond the industry itself: to the producers of raw materials--cotton, wool, flax, furs--to the jewelers, cosmetic manufacturers, hairdressers, and so on.

"In the same way, Mandeville shows that other vices promote the welfare of society.

"Mandeville set forth his unconventional ide s in a work entitled 'The Fable of the Bees,' published in 1714."

Today's News Roundup

Flambeau News Services

WASHINGTON -- President Kennedy says the presence of Soviet military forces in Cuba is a matter of serious concern which is being discussed with the Soviet Government. However, during his news conference, the President stood by the administration's contention that evidence shows all Soviet offensive weapons have been withdrawn from Cuba. The President appealed for the nation to "deal with facts." He said the issues involved in the Cuban situation are issues of war and peace, and he said, "We should keep our heads" in dealing with such gave matters.

Questioned about criticism by some Congressmen of the administration's contention that the Soviet threat in Cuba is waning, the President said he doesn't know what more the administration can do. He said he regretted that it was necessary to ask the Secretary of Defense to go on television for two hours Wednesday and disclose information about intelligence, to set the record straight.

WASHINGTON -- The President reiterated at his news confernce that he thinks Britain would be a useful member of the European Common Market. And he was critical of French President DeGaulle, who kept Britain out. He said DeGaulle has indicated he is not an admirer of the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance.

BONN -- West German Chancellor Adenauer has endeavored in Parliament to allay fears that his new treaty with France will threaten unity of the Western world. Adenauer promised that the treaty could be used to get Britain into the European Common Market. The Chancellor said French President DeGaulle had agreed to take up the question of British entry into the European trading bloc after the treaty goes into effect.

WASHINGTON -- A battle that had tied up the Senate for four weeks ended when efforts to tighten the rule for curbing filibusters were smashed on two quick votes. The key test was on a motion to limit debate on the question of formally taking up a proposed rules change. Supporters failed to muster the two-thirds majority of those voting required for approval.

WASHINGTON -- President Kennedy has asked for broad new federal powers to police drugs, cosmetics, health devices and potentially dangerous chemicals that pour daily into the American scene. But in a special message to Congress, the President reserved until later specific proposals for the controversial health care for the elderly under the Social Security program.

Prelegal Education Conference Planned For Pre-Law Students

A registration table has been set up in the lobby of Dodd Hall for those FSU students interested in attending the conference. The registration fee is $3.50.

Other events will include opening addresses and a general forum on "The Opportunities in the Legal Profession" on Friday evening with a social at 9:45 p.m. On Saturday there will be more group forums on such topics as "Criminal Law," "Business Law" and "Law and Government."

After a pre-law student convention to discuss chartering a state organization and informal tours of the law school facilities, the confernce will culminate with Thornal's speech.

The conference is being sponsored by the University of Florida College of Law and the Junior Bar Section.

All pre-law students are invited to the Florida Conference on Prelegal Education Feb. 15 and 16 at the University of Florida.

Special guest speaker will be Hon. Campbell Thornell, justice of the Supreme Court of Florida, who will speak on "The Promises and Problems of the Legal Profession."

Help Needed

WFSU-TV is looking for dependable part time student assistants who want to learn the different phases of television and who desire employment. Only dependable persons need apply. See Charles Gilmore, WFSU-TV, 202 Dodd Hall (The Graduate Building).

Highlighting the action at the "Shelter" this weekend will be an exchange dinner with the Kappa Alpha Theta's Saturday afternoon right after the first playoff football game. Saturday evening will feature a Bioya party with music by the "Embers."

GAMMA PHI BETA's had as their guests Dr. and Mrs. Paul Minus and son David at the initiation banquet Sunday. Dr. Minus is the Gamma Phi's faculty advisor. At the banquet the new initiates each sang a "goat" song of their own composition. The highlight of the banquet was the presentation of the coveted pledge paddles which went to Diana Brown for outstanding scholastic achievement and to Carole York for her outstanding qualities as a Gamma Phi Beta pledge. Next Wednesday the Gamma Phi's will honor their seniors at the Senior Banquet at which time the seniors read their Last Will and Testament. To vary their group somewhat, the Gamma Phi's will have the "Four Saints" and other special guests at a dinner and dessert party Monday evening preceding the Saints' evening performance at Westcott.

KAPPA ALPHA's were visited by their National Province Commander, Giles J. Patterson, last week. For the 16th straight rag-tag football game. New pledges are Jimmy Stevens, Max Wettstein, and Gary Parker. The Kappa Alpha national administrative office this week presented the local chapter with a National Scholarship Award for making grades higher than last year's overall men's average. This weekend the KA's will have a party in the Rebel Room. Next Wednesday a Valentine's Party will be held with the DZ's.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA's had a bar-b-que chicken dinner at the Kappa Sig House Wednesday night. Tonight is the annual Theta-Pi Phi party at Silver Lake Lodge. Tomorrow there will be an exchange dinner with the Delts. Marti Cheatham and Nancy Lefebvac were tapped for Little Sisters of Phi Delta Theta. Next Wednesday, there will be an exchange dinner with the Lambda Chi's.

KAPPA DELTA participated in Campus Sing Saturday. Linda Duyck was tapped by Garnet Key. New pledges are: Charlotte Fontana, Carol Gibert, Robin McNenin, and Allison Cassey.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA's won second place in Campus Sing. Two new pledges are Marcia Love and Sherrilyn Harper.

KAPPA SIGMA's had the Kappa Alpha Theta's as their guest Wednesday night for a bar-b-que. Some of the brothers will journey to Atlanta this weekend and will visit the Georgia Tech chapter. Thursday a dessert party with th ADPi's was held at the house. This weekend there will be a Mood party at the house.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA's enjoyed an exchange dinner with the Alpha Omicron Pi's Wednesday night. Saturday night the brothers and their dates will have a "Hollywood" theme combo party featuring "The Untouchables." The chapter also selected Miss Sue Swift to represent them in the Smoke Signals Beauty Contest.

PI BETA PHI's new pledge is Bonnie Lou Lair. Sally Dunlap and Libby Gentile were tapped for Mortar Board. Beth Ann Legate and Bunny Worshamp were tapped for Mortified.

PI KAPPA ALPHA's will have a Hillbilly party featuring the Ramblers this weekend. New brothers are: Don Bryan, Jim Cobb, Tex Driver, John Friese, Jim Hort, Steve Huber, Sandy King, John Walker, Bob White, and Mark Wilcox. New pledges are: John Aldrich, Bob Bowles, Larry Barber, Tony Bennett, Dave Cooley, and Barry Drossner.

PHI KAPPA TAU's were honored this week by a visit from their national president, Dr. W.A. Hammond. There was a dinner in his honor at the Phi Kappa Tau House. Following the dinner was a reception.

PHI MU's new initiates are: Carolyn Collier, June Haverkamp, Theresia Helmlinger, Kathy Holt, Elizabeth Johnson, Nedra Johnson Carolyn Jones, Ann Killebrew, Sara Lynn, Chris McGlassom, Merilee Manis, Pat Rabun, Lowell Turner, and Mary Weeks. The winner of the pledge scholarship award is Lowell Turner, and the winner of the most outstanding pledge award is Chris McGlassom. On Wednesday night, we had an exchange dinner with the Sig Ep's. A new pledge is Patty Pierson.

SIGMA KAPPA's actives have planned a picnic for the initiates for this Saturday. The best pledge for last week was Louise Beddingfield; the best pledge this week is Linda Oliver.

Hatters To Invade Tully Tomorrow

Pardon the pun, it's been a long winter at Florida State University. Charlie Long, that is.

And if there's a hotter college basketball player in the state of Florida than FSU's only senior, Coach Bud Kennedy would like to hear it.

Now 12-9 for the season, Florida State plays host to Stetson Saturday night, then Centenary on Monday night. Chances are good that the Seminoles will finish 15-10 in this "rebuilding season"--and much thanks can go to Long, only fellow on the squad not interested in next year.

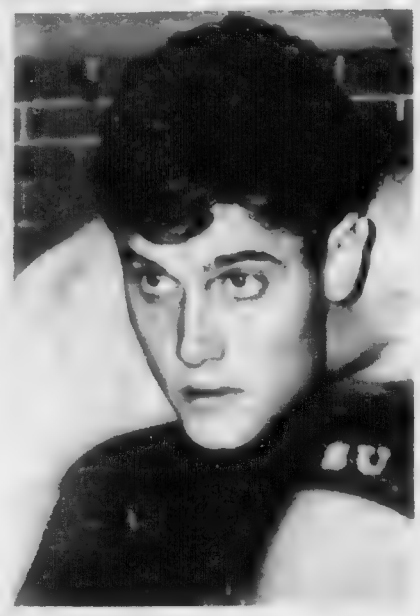
A 6-4 forward from Louisville, Ky., Long is averaging 21.1 points per game over the last ten games, pulling his season's scoring average to a highly respectable 15.6.

But Long's looping one-hander has been at its best in the last four games. Against Florida, Houston, Alabama and Valdosta, Long has hit 37 of 62 field goal attempts (59.7 per cent), 21 or 27 charity throws and has scored 93 points (23.3). In the Alabama game, he sacked a 30-foot jumper as the buzzer sounded to beat 'Bama 63-61 in one overtime.

With Long leading the way, FSU has made a spectacle of itself. The roster consists of the one senior, four juniors and one sophomore. Hardly anybody played on last year's 15-8 squad besides Long, who was a 13.4 -average starter.

Remaining on the Seminole schedule are Stetson, Centenary, Tampa, and Miami (with a non-counting game against Phillips 66 thrown in Saturday week). If Kennedy's troops can win at least three, they'll reach an unthinkable 15-victory mark.

The Saturday-night game with Stetson tips off at 7:45 following a 5:30 scrap between FSU's freshmen (7-7) and a group of ex-college stars calling themselves Old Southern Foods. It's a busy Saturday on the FSU campus, with a Florida-FSU soccer game set for 2:30 in Campbell Stadium and an FSU-Suwannee swim meet at 2:30 in Montgomery Gym.



Saturday night week, Feb. 16, at FSU's Tully Gym will be an interesting evening -- if nothing else.

For one thing, Florida State's basketball team will play its last home game of the 1962-63 season that night at 7:45. And it'll be against perhaps the finest amateur team in the country--the Phillips '66 Oilers.

But Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha has added an extra: a 7 p.m. preliminary game pitting the FSU football coaches against the Seminole football team.

The preliminary may be a better "game" than some people think. The coaches will have former FSU basketball stars Dave Fedor and Hugh Durham on their roster. And the football squad--coached by Head Football Coach Bill Peterson--have several former high school stars such as Fred Biletnikoff, Fred Colvard and Steve Tensi.

Tribal Tankmen

Coach Bim Stults will look to these two swimmers and others to help propel the Seminoles past the Sewanee swim squad tomorrow afternoon in Montgomery Pool. Gene Dayton, left, a 5-9 sophomore from Dekalb, Ill., swims the 200- and 500-yard freestyle, along with junior Allen Roles, a 6-1, 154-pounder from Prospect, Ky. (Photos by Art Campbell Jr.)

Tankers Gear For Sewanee

Florida State's swimming hosts the University of the Saturday afternoon at 2:30 a can't blame FSU Coach Bim S if he has fire in his eyes.

The Seminoles, who had won first three meets of the season fered a 51-44 loss to powerful Carolina last weekend. It was third loss over the past 42 meets.

"We just don't have the ... the potential All-Americans year," moans Stults, who has duced six of them in his 14 at FSU. "It could be a long y

FSU Booters To Battle Gators In Doak S. Campbell Stadium

So that's how it came about that Florida State University has rounded up a soccer team to play the University of Florida this Saturday afternoon at FSU's Campbell Stadium. Tipoff, or kickoff, or whatever it is, will be at 2:30.

Makeshift or not, the Florida State crowd is confident it can come out better this time against its downstate rival. The two schools have met twice before in soccer, with Florida winning handily by scores of 7-0 and 7-1. The latter game was played last November.

FSU has played only that one game this academic year. They have--shall we say--considerably bolstered their ranks since the loss to the Gators.

One-half of the Florida State roster is composed of foreign students who were born, as they say, with a soccer ball in their hands. Much thanks goes to a foreign exchange program which has brought several Brazilian soccer stars to FSU for a five-week course in the English language. Other Seminoles come from Formosa, Germany, Thailand and New Zealand.

FSU players say it's cricket, because U of F is primarily made up of Latins. The Gators have won 39 straight since 1958, lost only three in 10 years.

Socks and jerseys belong to the football team. The shorts came from the basketball squad. They borrowed shin guards from the physical education department, went out and bought their own shoes.

And most of the players were kinda borrowed from Latin America.

Pee Wee Lauds Danny Litwhiler

Pee Wee Reese, quoted in a recent issue of Collegiate Baseball: "The colleges need more men like Danny Litwhiler, who has done such a fine job at Florida State the past few years. These men know what it takes to be a major leaguer and they're the best qualified to give top-grade instruction."

Court Decides On Candidates

The Honor Court ruled yesterday in special session that Jan Warren, candidate for clerk of the Honor Court, who was disqualified by the Elections Bureau, is eligible to run for office in the upcoming elections.

Two other disqualifications were upheld by the Court, as they met to hear cases brough against the Elections Bureau by Pete Haddad and Walt Martindale. Haddad had filed for Chairman of Traffic Court and Martindale for Board of Student Publications.

Miss Warren was disqualified for lack of experience on either the Honor Court or the University Court, as outlined in Article IV, Section 2, Part Bo of the Student Body Constitution. She appealed on the grounds that her experience on traffic court should qualify her for the position and that the wording of the Constitution was inconsistent.

After hearing both arguments, the court ruled unanimously in favor of Warren. The ruling was based on the inconsistency of Section 2B with Sections 3A and 4A.

Since the clerk must take over in the absence of the chief justice, the qualifications for clerk of Honor Court should be equal to and not more stringent than the qualifications for election of Chief Justice as set down in the Constitution.

The Court also stated that the Senate needs to revise Article IV as it is discriminating and inconsistent.

Haddad was disqualified for two reasons. His court experience was not earned on the FSU campus as required by Article IV, Section 4, Part A. He also does not have the required 2.3 grade average as stated in Article X, Section 2, Part A.

In his appeal, Haddad stated that his figures concerning his grades did not coincide with those of the Registrar's office. He said the Constitution did not specifically state that the semester's experience should be at FSU.

The Court declined the appeal on the basis of his below par grade point average. It further ruled that, since the names of the courts were capitalized, the courts must refer specifically to the FSU court system.

Haddad's experience was limited to membership on the Prosecuting Staff rather than acceptable court experience.

Martindale was disqualified, because he could not fulfill the requirements outlined in Article VIII, Section 4, Part B, in addition to the requirements outlined in Article X before the installation date.

Martindale stated in his appeal that the wording of the article was not completely precise and was therefore somewhat interpretive and flexible. He felt that the article should be revised.

The Court felt that Martindale was undoubtedly qualified for the position on BOP, but it must accept the decision of the Elections Bureau.

Mortar Board Initiates

Fifteen coeds were initiated Saturday into Mortar Board, national women's leadership honorary, president Kay Isaly announced.

New initiates are Betsy Boote, Patsy Brill, Charlotte Christopher, Bobbie Darraugh, Sally Dunlap, Evelyn Flatham, Libby Gentile, Bobbie Lou Kaminis, Ann Kendall, Van Miller, Lana Murray, Barbara O'Neill, Pattie Warren, Clyda Stokes and Carolyn Wronske.

Officers elected after the initiation ceremony were Patsy Brill, president; Charlotte Christopher, vice president; Barbara O'Neill, secretary; Lana Murray, treasurer; and Betsy Boote, historian.

Saturday morning a breakfast was given for all the members of Mortar Board by Mrs. Harold Richards, national historian of the organization.

house lights dimmed on less of people, lost in the maze of seats in Westcott auditorium rday night, and the curtain rose proved to be one of the most and versatile entertainment s ever to appear on Westcott -- "The Four Saints."

show starts with an interesting version of the group's theme song, "When the Saints Go Marching In." From this John Howell, a baritone of the group who plays sixteen instruments, goes into a Spanish dialogue with Doug Evans, the other baritone and panominist of the group, serving as interpreter. The dialogue, which brings down the house for the first of many times during the show, serves as an introduction to a version of "Malaguena" which runs the guantlet of the instruments needed to suggest a full orchestra.

After the group introduces themselves, to each other, they swing into a song about a woman who wears a road map as a dress to a la Hearing and Seeing the description of this is believing.

After a song about "Alamode Joe," who likes apple pie; and a rendition of "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jerico," in which they attempt to bring down the walls of Westcott with their golden horns, the group proceeds with a jazz waltz -- "Way on the Wind."

The group now goes on a refreshing trip to a North Carolina community's Fourth of July celebration, complete with its introduction of city officials and barber-shop quartet numbers. Again the house comes down with laughter.

After a swinging trombone ending to a unique version of "Fascinating Rhythm," the group sways gently into that old "Show Boat" favorite "Ole Man River."

After an introduction into folk music, in the "true college spirit," the group goes into a take-off on the old song "Big John," entitled "Big Jane."

The "Saints" then take their audience on a holiday -- a "Bugler's Holiday," with the golden bells of their trumpets shining in the spotlight.

After a brief intermission, during which the students can buy the group's present album, the "Saints" break into two of the songs from the "Music Man" -- "Trouble in River City" and 76 Trombones." They were missing 72 trombones, but what the group lacked in numbers, they more than made up for in originality and ability.

The group then asked the audience for suggestions of foods to be used in their next song about eating, which they ended up with "indigestion."

Their show moves along to a dialogue on smoking, ended with Bob

Trees On Dodd Green To Be Replaced; Parking Lot Going In

By LANA MURRAY
News Editor

"Oh, Woodsman, spare that tree; chop not a single bough."

English majors -- and other students and staff members alike -- have been groaning in protest of what they have felt was a University policy of clearing the campus of its lovely shade trees.

Well, cheer up, gang, the University has no such intention.

All of the trees which have been chopped down, except for one, were camphor trees, regrowths of previously destroyed trees, which were damaged extensively by cold weather. These trees all will be replaced with fairly large, mature trees, perhaps some variety of the holly.

The one exception, a pecan tree in the park to the west of Dodd Hall, was regretfully eliminated because of its position -- smack-dab in the middle of a planned parking lot.

Frank Milwee, who sat in on a Traffic Study committee which reviewed a recommendation for a parking lot for that area, said that blueprints showing the location of all trees in that area had been examined and the only course was to condemn the poor veteran to its unavoidable fate.

Milwee added that he is sure that Henry Martin, the University horticulturist, will preserve as much of the former beauty of the Dodd Hall green as possible by new plantings to replace the cut down trees.

Meanwhile, however, nature lovers are mourning the loss of their former friends.

Moral: if you're a tree, don't be allergic to the cold.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the student body as a whole or the administration of the Florida State University. Editorials represent the opinions of the editorial staff of the Flambeau with the initials of the writer following the editorial. Columns and letters to the Editor reflect only the opinion of the writer.

Campaign Begins

Campaigning for major Student Government offices is but a day away. The race promises to be hot.

Both the Student and the University Parties have fielded candidates for President, Vice President, and Men's Vice President. Only Clyda Stokes, candidate for Women's Vice President, is unopposed in executive branch races.

For the first time ever, voters will be paced with two party tickets. In the upper echelons, they will have at least two choices.

But the two party system has yet to realize its full potential. Candidates for Chief Justice of the Honor Court, clerk of the Honor Court, chairman of the University Court, and chairman of Traffic Court are running unopposed. Though the candidates are split between parties, only three students are running for three posts on the Board of Publications.

This shows up the major weakness in both parties. They are not doing enough preliminary ground work to encourage qualified students to seek public office.

SP has done a little better job of digging up candidates than UP, holding the edge of eight candidates to six. But when twelve major offices are at stake, 24 candidates, not 18 should be seeking offices.

We are pleased to see two candidates seeking each of the top executive posts. But this is not enough. Competition must carry through from the top to bottom. It is the responsibility of the political parties to do this.

Campus Bus Ride Traumatic

By Chris Clarke

It was windy this morning and all wet. Nothing exciting had happened to me since a live grenade blew up near me in basic training so I decided to ride the campus bus. This could be nothing compared to the grenade, I thought.

I got on the bus. Since I was one of the first to arrive I sat in the front on the right hand side. All the seats filled. The aisle filled. There was a line waiting outside the bus. But strangely there was no bus driver. What had happened? Had he ridden with the other driver and had a heart attack? Had his zipper broken?

After ten minutes had gone by someone blew the horn. After a couple of two minute blasts on the horn the bus driver arrived. Like the morning he too, was windy and all wet. To the fellow who had blown the horn he said. "You must be one of them newspaper editors." (Being possessed of an uncommon amount of tolerance--I hate only the U of F and prejudice--I didn't bother to correct his flagrant grammatical errors.)

Then he drove to the Student Center. A girl in the front asked to get off in front of the Women's Gym. By the time the request got past the cigar smoke the bus was two blocks beyond the Women's Gym and almost to the Student Center. However, our intrepid pilot aimed to please so he stopped the bus and let her out. She looked relieved.

We then proceeded to the SC. It was an uneventful block. I was only ten minutes late to class. Having thus gained the enmity of class and professor I plan to go back into the Army provided they will let me go through basic training again.

I need the rest.

United Nations Delivers Only Havoc

One of the most widely applicable phrases in the language is "Let's look at the record." Since a couple of unsavory records have already been surveyed in this column it might be fitting to spotlight a few items out of the record of that sacred cow known as the United Nations.

This organization, like most insidious movements, renders lip service to fine ideals and objectives, but generally delivers only grief and havoc.

The lip service goes like this:

"We the people of the United Nations... to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of internationl law can be maintained."

The record goes like this:

1. Russia dispatched armored divisions to Budapest to slaughter anti-Communist rebels. Many of the slain were women and children. The United Nations sat on its hands.

2. India staged an outlaw raid on the Portuguese territory of Goa, which had been under Portuguese jurisdiction for a matter of centuries. The United Nations sat on its hands.

3. Red China slaughtered multitudes of Tibetans and made others homeless. The U.N. sat on its hands.

4. Communist East Germany built a prison wall in violation of the four-power free access agreement. The U.N. sat on its hands.

5. Katanga, a harried pro-West province in the savage jungle comples asserted its independence. The U.N. converged on Elisabethville, and proceeded to shell hospitals, schools, missions, churches and fleeing civilians.

The United States is saddled with about 47% of the operating costs of the U.N. In view of their dismal record this expense is senseless.

The gentle souls that might be moved to write a soothing rebuttal declaring the positive side of the U.N. should keep in mind that some of the most charlatans in the world are awfully good to their mothers.

Talented Musical Showmanship

The Four Saints Rock Audience

By JOHN SCHAFFNER
Managing Editor

A meager but enthusiastic crowd of less than 100 people attended one of the most unique performances ever staged in Westcott Auditorium Saturday night. The show, filled with talented musical showmanship and producing some of the most gutty belly-laughs ever to come out of an FSU audience, was staged by one of the most versatile groups in show business today -- "The Four Saints."

The sparkling stage presence of this lively group can only be matched by the glittering illumination sent forth by the freshly polished bells of their brass horns. There are groups around which are extremely humorous, many who can sing well, many who play instruments well, and some who have a flair of precision to their act. But there is no other group around that combines all of these qualities to the extent of "The Four Saints."

The humor of this group is not what one would call subtle; but then again, neither is the group as a whole. There is nothing really subtle about the humor produced by the Spanish introduction to "Malaguena," the trip to North Carolina town's Fourth of July celebration, the introduction to "folk music" done in the grand old college spirit, the routine on smoking, and their unmentionable stage scene; but it brings fourth belly laughs that leave one feeling like "Big Bad Jane" must have, after swinging at the mouse with a broom for two hours. If you are not familiar with this illustration now, you will be after you see the show.

Their singing style is in the vein of the modern harmony employed by the "Four Freshmen," and the "Hi-Lo's," and is sort of a cross between the two groups. The difference that in taking some from one of these two groups, they have created a style that is unigque, their own.

There are some groups that play a few instruments well, and there are others that play quite a few instruments not so well.

The "Four Saints" skillfully play more that 25 musical instruments. John Howell, the leader and arranger for the group, plays 16 instruments himself. In the performance, he played the trumpet, trombone, clarinet, piano, string bass, and picallo, with a dexterity that is worthy of years of combined lessons in 16 instuments.

The brilliance of the group's musical abilities truely showed in their rendition of "Mack" and "Bugler's Holiday," with the crisp brilliance of their instruments. Their versatility throughout the songs of the show was highlighted by their rendition of "I Can Do Anything Better Than You." As instumentalists, they again rates a big "A."

Probably the one thing that seems to set this group apart from others in the profession is the precision that is built into their act. All four men seem to move exactly together, if some unifying cord ties them together.

Although most of the people who attended the Saturday night performance had no previous contact with the group, they all were greatly impressed by their performance. It can truly be said that they gave themselves to their audience. It is certainly one show that the student will want to miss. It is one that will be discussed on campus for quite some time.

Flambeau Forum

Court Attack Lacks 'Reason'

To the Editor:

A recent "letter to the editor" by Mr. Frank Coney urges his Flambeau readers to "do some research" on "the ridiculous and indeed illegal rulings of the Supreme Court." In the course of teaching constitutional law for nearly thirty years, I have read a great many of the Court's opinions, majority opinions, concurring opinions, and dissenting opinions and none would I characterize as "ridiculous" or "illegal." Reasonable men many reasonably disagree with any of the Court's opinions; the very fact that each case must come to the Court in the form of legal controversy means that legitimate arguments are presented for sides. It is quite obvious that Mr. Coney is not disagreeing as a reasonable man but is simply parroting a viewpoint without doing his homework. I am quite sure that Mr. Coney does not know what the Justices actually said or decided in the cases he garbles.

I am not too disturbed when intemperate attacks on the American constitutional institutions occur in public forum. I count on the common sense and informed loyalty of the American people to distinguish between constructive criticism and subversive propaganda. I am, however, very concerned about the caliber of student columns and student letters that frequently appear in the Flambeau. I would remind te editors -- and the student contributors -- that the high purpose of free speech and free press is to arrive at truth through resonable discourse. The main business of this campus should be learning -- and teaching. The Flambeau has its share of responsiblity for promoting this educational function. It is a good thing to encourgae the expression of viewpoints in the whole range of the political spectrum -- but the expression should be "in pursuit of truth."

I am not arguing for censorship, but only that we condition our disputation with "right reason." I hold with Thomas Jefferson, "For here we are not afraid to follow truth wherever it may lead, not to tolerate an error, so long as reason is free to combat it."

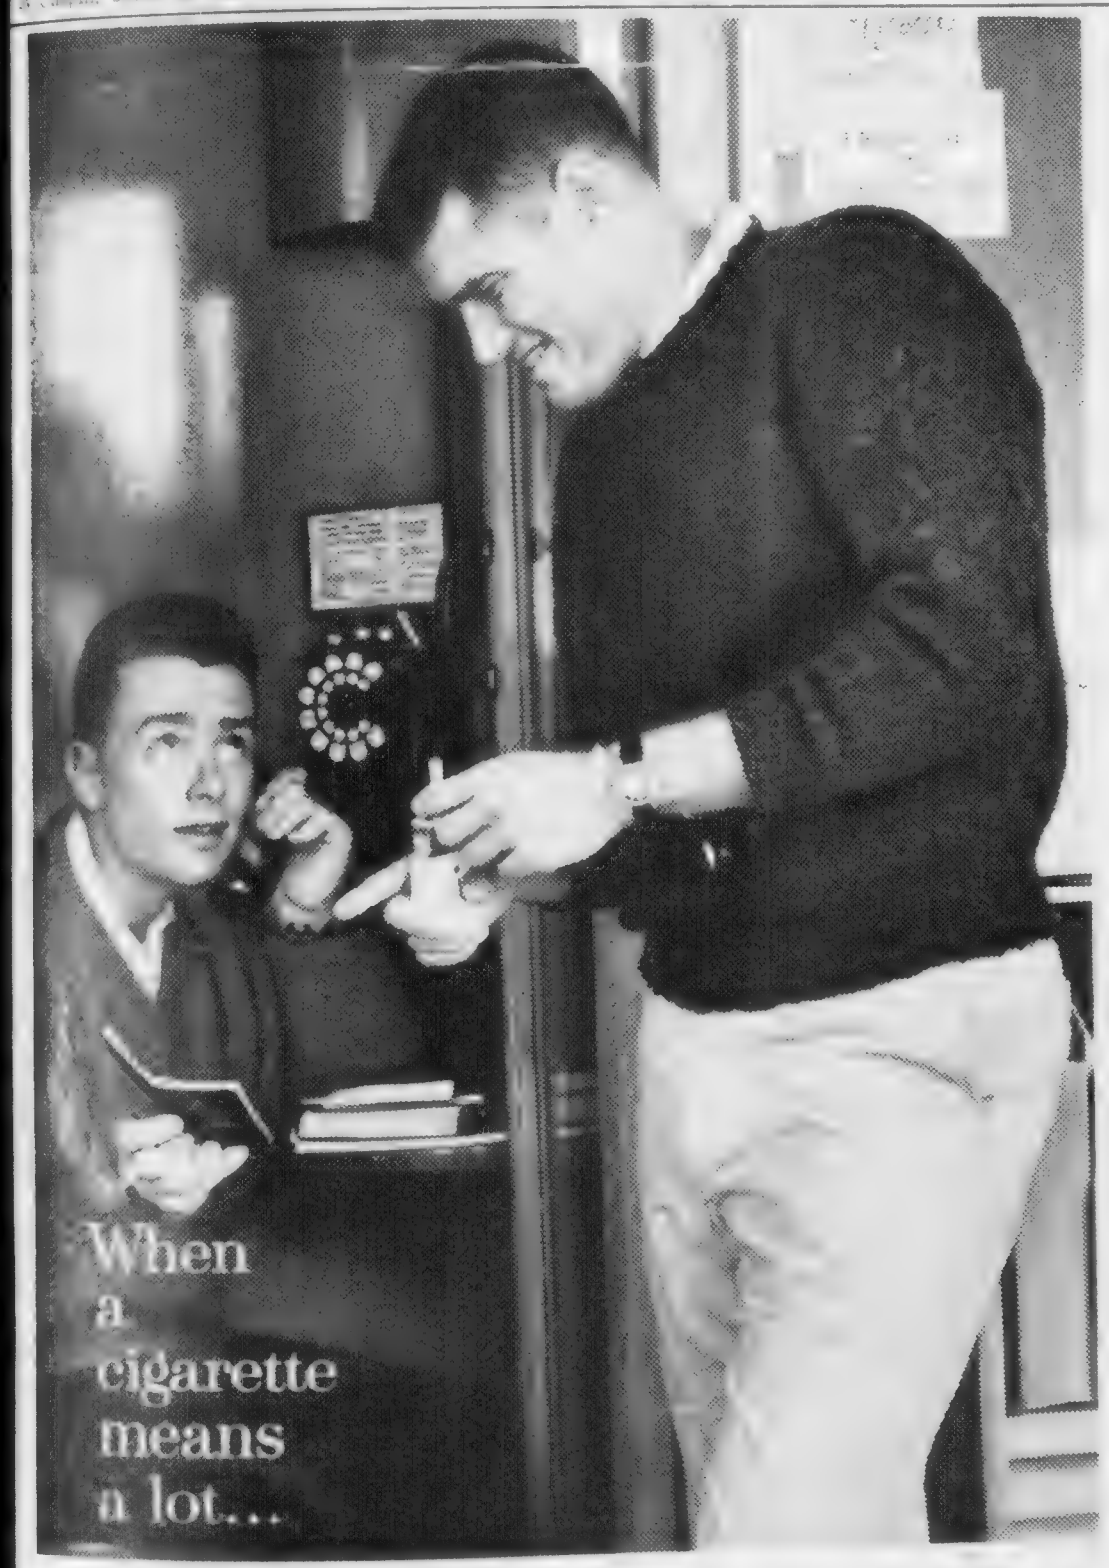
Candidates To Write

Student Political Letters Polic

In an effort to encourage through examination of qualifications and plans of each candidate, the Flambeau will attempt to print as many letters from candidates as space will permit. Due to lack of space, can not be printed, however:

We will print letters of not more than 350 words from candidates for President, Vice President, Men's Vice President, Women's Vice President and Chief Justice. There will be no endorsements.



Letters will be printed for Women's VP and Chief Justice on Wednesday, Men's Vice. President on Thursday, Vice President on Friday, and President on Monday. Letters will be due by 12 p.m. the day before they are to be printed.

Today's News Roundup

Flambeau News Services

WASHINGTON -- President and Mrs. Kennedy appear to be setting a new pace for the nation to emphasize the administration's physical fitness program. Just before winding up a social weekend in New York, the President escorted the first lady on two brisk walks. And on their return to Washington, they stepped from their limousine and hiked the final quarter mile to the White House.

A new interest in walking has been sparked by the White House lately. The President learned last month that President Teddy Roosevelt in 1908 prescribed a 50-mile hike as a fitness test for Marine officers. He suggested an experiment to see if the marines of 1963 are equal to the test of 1908. Several officers at Camp Lejeune, North Carolina, are taking up the challenge next Tuesday.

WASHINGTON -- The French ambassador to this country says France has no intention of becoming a major nuclear power. Ambassador Herve Alphand told a news conference in Atlanta, "We need a certain force so as to deter the possible blackmail of a possible adversary."

BAGDAD -- Undersecretary of State George Ball says the new revolutionary government in Iraq appears to be establishing order, and its chances of survival look good. In a broadcast interview Ball said the new regime is anti-Communist and overthrown Premier Abdel Karim Kassem had been moving from neutralism toward Communism.

JUAREZ -- A bitter argument over politics erupted into a gun fight in a cafe at Juarez, Mexico: Two former mayors of Juarez were killed, and an official of the new administration in the border city was critically wounded.

Erickson, saying "Hot damn I like to smoke," which moves the group into an interesting diddy on smoking.

The "Days of Wine and Roses," which is the title song of the movie by the same name, and which is presently a candidate for an academy award, is the next song the group presented.

After a new version of "Bill Bailey," the group went through the various instruments they play.

After giving credit to the local rhythm group that backed up the "Four Saints" in the show, the group ended with a rendition of "In a Little Spanish Town."

In an interview after the show, the group said that they considered college audiences to be the "best audiences we have performed to."

When asked if having so few people turn out for a performance discourages them, the group said that their main purpose was "to entertain," whether there be 10 or 5,000 people present.

Hustlers Make Hatters Mad, Employ Fast Break To Win

Cal Huge busts past Stetson's Bill Clark and displays the tremendous drive which gave FSU its 73-57 victory. Huge garnered 11 rebounds and 21 points for the Tribe, both game highs.

Looking more like a track team taught to steal the equipment from its opponents, Florida State's hot basketball squad used the fast break to stall the top-ranked Stetson quintet in the Florida Intercollegiate Conference Saturday night in Tully Gym.

Led by the Pete's -- Gonzalez and Rogers, -- the Seminoles swiped the ball from the greed-clad Hatters 13 times and turned a lot of these into points. The two classy guards also managed to ignore a Stetson full court press in the last part of the game in bringing the ball down to their mates.

From the spectators point of view, the most outstanding points of the game was the appearance of the Stetson cheerleaders, the first seen in this place for years; the footballish appearance of the Stetson uniforms; the quite noticeable absence of the band, currently winding up a state tour, which seemed to dull student support; and the star-gazing appearance of the Stetson ballplayers as they stood under the basket during the halftime waiting for their mates to shoot one of the four balls which the team brought with them.

The game itself was fast paced, but marked by surprisingly few fouls. The Seminoles only fouled 18 times during the game and had only one player foul out, Wally Dale.

The most consistent Tribesman during the evening was Wisconsin import Cal Huge, who scored 21 points and pulled down 11 rebounds to lead the squad. Charles Long and Pete Rogers were next in honors with 11 points each. Dale Reeves had a poor night at the backb... pulling down a mere 2 reb... however, he made four of h... attempted shots to improve o... field goal accuracy perce... which was 22nd best in the ... going into the clash.

Gators Blank Tribe Booters In 6-0 Game

After a slow start, FSU's Soccer Club bounced back to hold the highly-touted University of Florida Gators to a 6-0 win, before a crowd of 1,000 in Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

In the first few minutes of the game, the Gators struck on two goals, and then added another on a penalty kick. A few minutes later, another goal slammed into the netting and the Gators led, 4-0.

Apparently, Florida State was headed to a loss with a 12-point margin, but the Seminoles tightened their defenses to finish the first half without another Florida score.

The Seminoles, who fell to the Gators 7-1 last fall, threatened five times during the second half, but the scoring kick was broken up each time. However, the possible 12-point margin failed to materialize as the Alligators managed only two more tallies.

UF ran its undefeated string to 39. Since 1958, UF hasn't lost a match.

Ricketts Coaches; Schull Rebounds; Frosh Win By 21

DALE RICKETTS

Despite having a substitute coach and facing a familiar face, the FSU freshman team triumphed over a so-so Old Southern Foods team, an independent quintet from Jacksonville. FSU won the game, which was played prior to the Varsity clash Saturday evening, by a 83-62 score.

The familiar face was Tony Blauvelt, a varsity redshirt who played with the Southerners. He explained, "They only had five men, and one had a bad ankle so they borrowed me. In the second half, they were all tired out, though." Blauvelt also dressed out in a varsity uniform, taking the injured Bob Ek's place.

With little opposition under the boards, Gary Schull managed to pull down 24 rebounds, the highest number recorded this season. He scored 12 points to finish fourth behind Bill Phillips, Ken Leakey, and Bill Peacock who bucketed 21, 20 and 19 respectively.

When Blauvelt, a smiling sophomore, returned to the Baby Seminole dressing room, he jokingly taunted the others, "I really held you guys out, didn't I?" The others made no comment except: "Why wouldn't they feed you the ball?"

An example of the easiness of this frsoh victory is noticeable in the second half performance, which saw the Baby Seminoles outrebound the Southerners, 36-16. Although both teams fouled ten times, the frosh made 64.3 per cent of their foul shots, while Old Southern Foods made 10-of-17 for a percentage of 58.

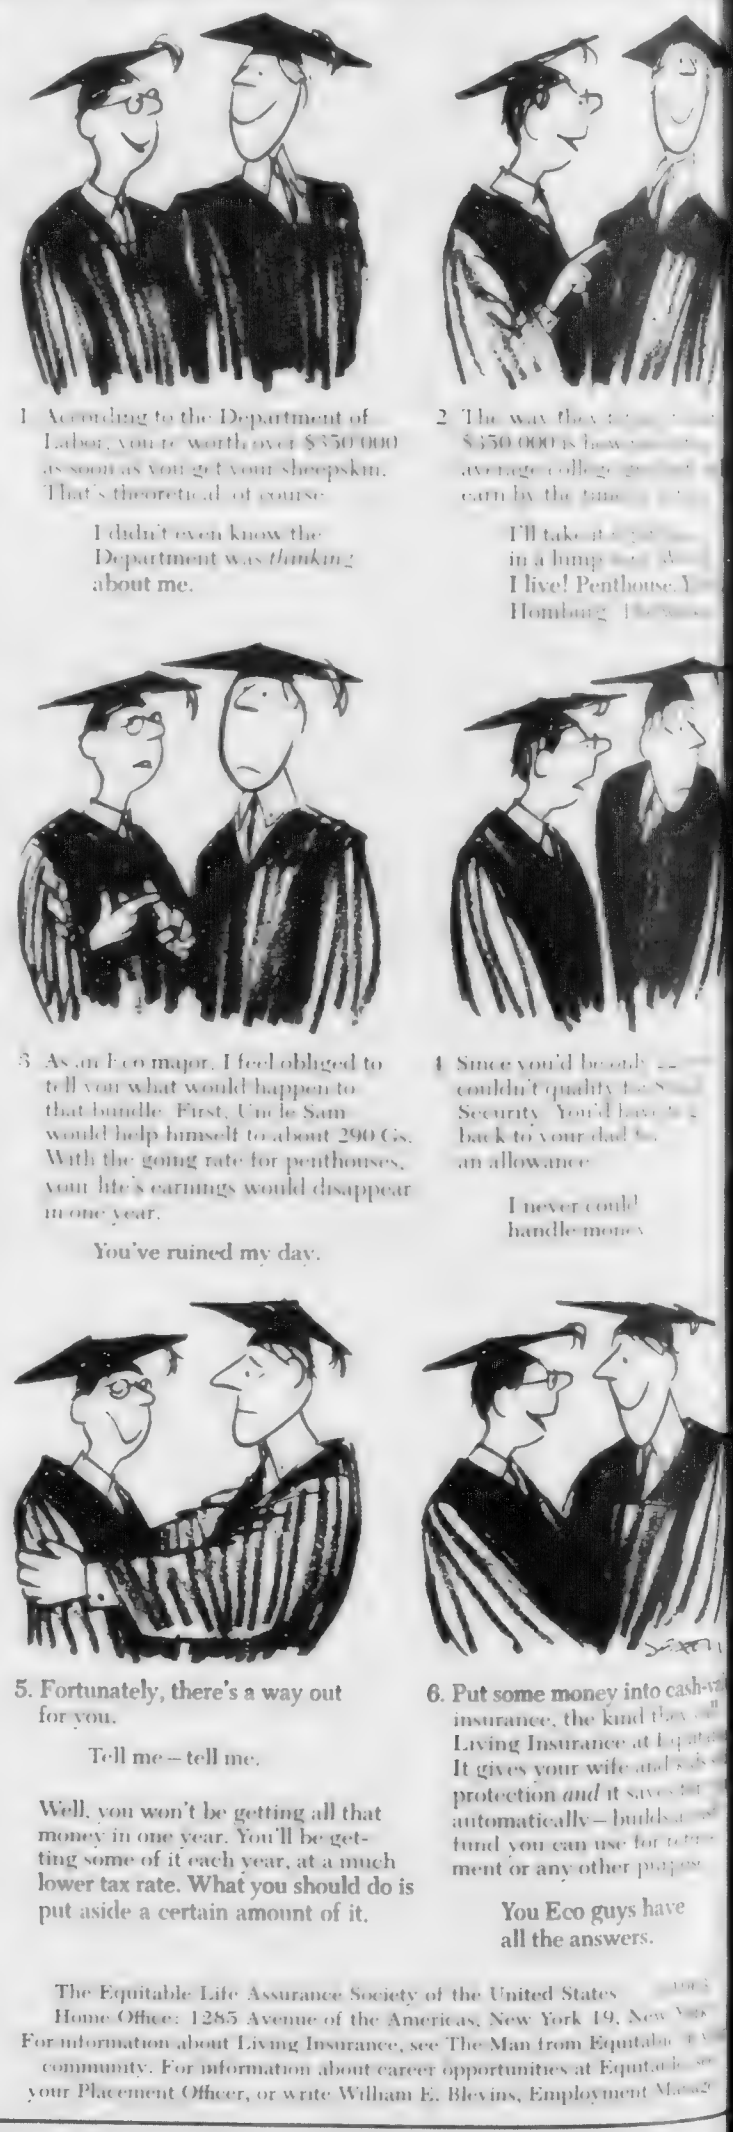
Seminoles Swamp Sewanee Tankers In 62-33 Style

A rebounding group of FSU swimmers easily trounced the University of the South, 62-33, Saturday night in Montgomery Pool.

The victory gave FSU its fourth triumph in five starts, while Sewanee suffered its fourth defeat against two wins.

More than anything, the Seminole victory served to sharpen the FSU tankers, who will meet the powerful University of Florida tankers next Saturday here. The Gators, who swamped North Carolina (the team that edged Florida State last week), will be a devisive favorite in the match.

In the FSU-Sewanee meet, the Florida State swimmers grabbed 8-of-11 events and broke two meet records.



Tony Kowals of FSU captured the 200-yard backstoke title in 2:22.9 by rewriting the 2:26.4 mark set by Bob Abstein in 1960. Ironically, Kowal's new time rewrote the old record set when Abstein attended FSU before transferring to Sewanee.

Sherman Henderson, a red-hot sophomore, swam the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:34.6, erasing the 1960 record time of 2:40.2 set by Bob Newell of FSU.

FSU won the 400 medley relay on the efforts of Pete Davis, Doug Kruger, Pete Combes, and Charles Tandy. Their time was 4:00.8. Alan Roles of Florida State finished the 200 freestyle in 2:07.2 for first place, while the best man in the 50-yard freestyle was Sewanee's John Patton.

Kowal grabbed his first win of the afternoon by swimming the 200-yard individual medley in 2:18.8. Then undefeated Neil Allen of FSU captured the diving laurels; FSU's James Payne was second.

Absentee Ballots

Interns and other students who will not be on campus duringthe Student Body Elections may pick up absentee ballots any afternoon this week in the elections office, 210 Longmire. Student I.D. cards must be presented to pick up the ballots.

Campaign Material

A copy of all campaign materials (posters, memo sheets and pamphlets) must be turned in to the elections office, 210 Longmire, prior to distribution on campus. Failure to comply will subject the candidate to a fine.

17 Candidates Vie To Fill Student Government Offices

Active campaigning begins at 5 p.m. today for 17 candidates running for 13 major Student Government positions.

There will be a meeting of the Elections Bureau at 4:15 this afternoon. Members of the Bureau will be at the off-campus establishments to make sure that all regulations are followed when campaigning begins.

"The Elections Bureau will be working to insure fair campaign opportunities for everyone," said Secretary of Elections Ron jones. "With the slate of candidates that are running in this election, this will probably be the most highly contested race in FSU's history of Student Government."

Any student aware of illegal campaigning should report the same to the Elections office, ext. 2975.

A copy of the Elections plan will be available in 210 Longmire Bldg. at noon today. This outlines completely the procedure to be followed in next Tuesday's elections.

The candidates running in next Tuesday's elections are Jackie Mathis (SP) and Johnny Smith (UP) for President of the Student Body; Julian Proctor (UP) and Miles Williams (SP) for vice president of the student body.

Clyda Stokes (SP) for women's vice president; Ted DeLaVergne (SP) and Frank Ryll (UP) for men's vice president; Pam Cornely (SP) and Phyllis Doud (UP) for secretary of Student Senate; Kelley Reid for chief justice of Honor Court.

Jan Warren and David Wiles for clerk of Honor Court; Betsy Boote (SP) for chairman of university Court; Vicki Voyles (SP) for chairman of Traffic Court; Patti Childs (SP), Bob Foss (UP) and Lana Murray (UP) for Board of Student Publications.

THEY CAME, THEY PLAYED, AND THEY WENT

This was the case of the "Four Saints," who played a two-night stand here this past weekend. They performed, under the auspices of the Student Artist Series, on Saturday and last night.

Dr. Livingston Talks Tonight

A political scientist from the University of Texas will be the speaker in the Government Lecture at 8 p.m. tonight in the Strozier Library Lecture Hall.

"British Politics and American Policy" will be the subject of the address by Dr. William S. Livingston, associate professor of government at Texas, according to Dr. Marian Irish, head of the FSU Dept. of Government. The lecture is free and open to the public.

The visiting speaker is the author of a book, "Federalism and Constitutional Change," published in 1956, and has contributed to the "Harvard Law Review," "American Political Science Review," "Parliamentary Affairs," "Midwest Journal of Political Science" and "Journal of Politics."

His fields of specialization include comparative government, Britain and the Commonwealth and comparative federalism.

He received his BA and MA degrees from Ohio State University and his Ph.D. from Yale, the last in 1950. He was a Ford Foundation Fellow in 1952-53 and a Guggenheim Fellow in 1959-60.

University Art Gallery

Exhibit Represents Leading Designers

By PAT FREEMAN
Assistant News Editor

Nine of America's leading crafts-designers are represented in the University Art Gallery exhibit which will be open through Feb. 19.

All the designers represented are on the faculty of the School for American Craftsmen, located at the Rochester Institute of Technology. The School was established by the American Craftsmen's Council as a center for advanced study and research in crafts design, with members of the faculty coming from Denmark and Sweden as well as the United States.

The exhibition design announcing the display, constructed by Constructive Design students, sets the mood for the unusual exhibit.

Although FSU has had opportunities to observe ceramics and weaving exhibitions before, the Crafts-Designer Show is the first in which custom made silver holloware has been shown.

Forming in silver is particulary difficult since the metal must be made malleable, then gently manipulated to form a highly polished surface when finished.

Flambeau Feature

A good example of the silver holloware craftsmanship may be found in the displays by Hans Christianson, centered around a silver teapot. Christianson has won many top awards for his silver design since coming to this country in 1957.

Frans Wildenhain, trained at the Bauhaus in Germany, has also won several awards. Wildenhain has recently completed commissions for mosaics and large ceramic basreliefs for new buildings in New York and Washington. Among his works in the exhibit are sculptured jars, wall mosaics and other ceramic containers.

New techniques in weaving and furniture construction may be observed in the works on display. An unusual piece in the exhibition is Wendell Castle's ladies vanity. Its roller top and swivel mirror are ingenious in the way they may be manipulated.

Donald Bujnowski and a woodcarver combine talents to form a screen weaved in muted oranges, browns and beige.

Many new innovations in techniques and materials found in the field of design have come from the faculty of the School for American Craftsmen.

Change Of Major

Dr. G. Harold Massey, director of the Counseling Center, has announced that any Basic Division student wishing to change his intended major or area of interest should do so between Feb. 15 and March 15 in the Counseling Center, 302 Westcott.

Senate Unjust

Paradox, irony and hypocrisy exist in every legislative assembly. We accept in our democracy that we must live with the bad as well as the good. Although in determining who shall represent us we strive to choose those who will always act with reason, fairness and with justice, we expect this situation not always to prevail. We cringe with displeasure but attempt to grin-and-bear-it when our representatives act with complete contempt for those principles which are basic in our society.

Sometimes irresponsible actions are committed unwittingly and without malice aforethought. Lawmakers may have been victims of sweeping emotionalism, or jammed into brash action by the pressure of time, or prejudice, or ignorance.

It is with regret that we find instances of such situations in a legislative body on the campus of Florida State University.

Although accepting the bad with the good, we become a bit idealistic about "model conditions of the learning process." Student legislators are in a position to be more free from bias, prejudice, ignorance and brash and irrational action than any of the "folks downtown" because, if for no other reason, we have a superior sampling of "the people" within the confines of their districts (the university).

Many decisions of student senate deal with specific campus problems and projects, without involving basic principles of democracy directly.

The occasion of recognition of campus student organizations however, involves much that has made and kept our nation free through responsibility with legislative power.

Having the power to "allow" student groups to meet on campus places a heavy responsibility on the student lawmakers. Here such things as principles, justice and plain old fashioned fair play are significant ingredients.

In one instance the Senate allowed their emotional bias, feelings of prejudice and power to dictate life or death over groups with which they disagreed, get the better part of their judgment.

When the Young Americans For Freedom, part of a national political action organization oriented in the extreme right and the Young Socialist Young Peoples Socialist League, youth group of the Socialist Party, USA, were brought before the Senate, the YAF group was allowed to exist, YPSL denied the opportunity to meet on campus.

At the committee hearings on this question and when brought before the Senate proper persons with more conservative political leanings spoke against admitting YPSL, mainly because they disagreed with them politically rather than supporting any valid damage to the University their existence might cause.

Our legislators have been unjust, and have violated principles we elected them to uphold. We hope it doesn't happen again.

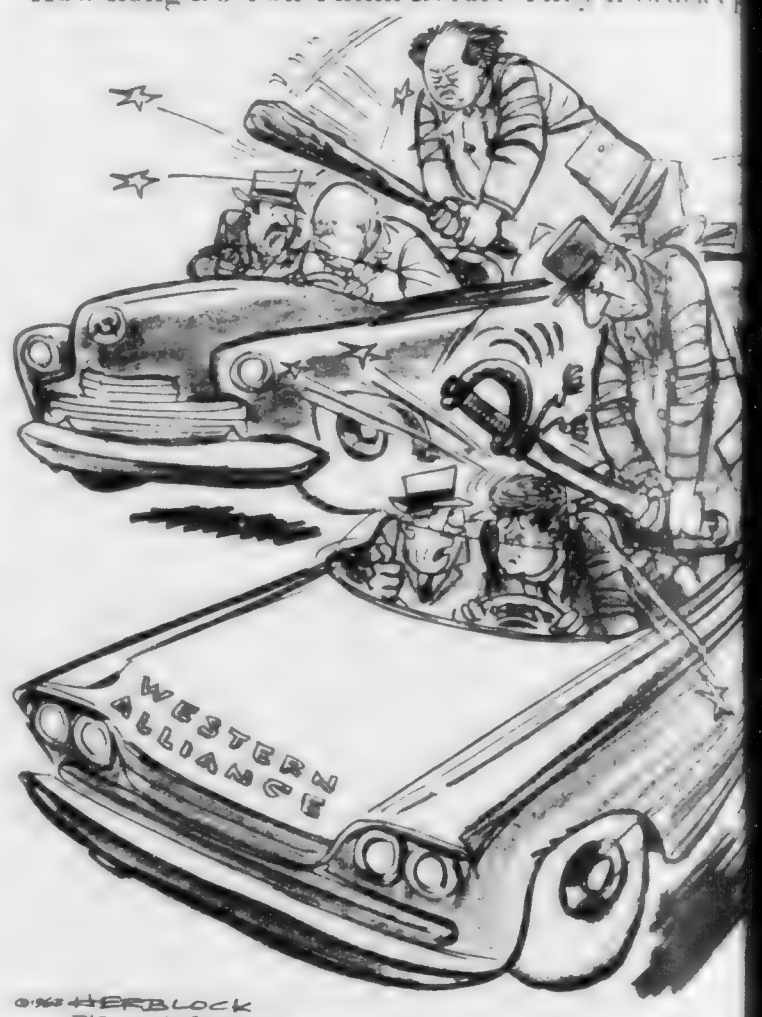
Law Specialist Answers Irish

In yesterday's Flambeau, Dr. Marian D. Irish, Head of the Government Department, unleashed an ad hominem attack on Frank Coney, who had written a letter to the Flambeau urging readers to investigate what he termed "ridiculous and indeed illegal" rulings of the Supreme Court. Among other things, Dr. Irish said that it was obvious that "Mr. Coney is not disagreeing as a reasonable man, but is simply parroting a viewpoint without doing his homework," and "does not know what the Justices actually said or decided in the cases he garbles." Dr. Irish wrote that she was "very concerned" about the caliber of student letters appearing in the Flambeau, and implied that Mr. Coney's letter was "subversive propaganda," and that he was not "in pursuit of truth" when he wrote it.

These are very strong indictments of a student, especially since Dr. Irish in no case refuted, or even mentioned any of the points made by Mr. Coney. I therefore obtained an opinion of Mr. Coney's letter from an expert in the field of constitutional law, Dr. Edward R. Dobson, A.B., Cornell, LL. B. New York Law School and J.S.D., cum laude, Brooklyn Law School of St. Lawrence University. Dr. Dobson's remarks follow.

"Many decisions of the present Supreme Court are a complete departure from and a destruction of the fundamental principles upon which our legal system is based, e.g., stare decisis, which is a recognition that courts are to be bound by decisions of all previous courts of equal or higher jurisdiction. The entire common law is based upon this principle.

"Our own Constitution explicitly provides the mechanism for its amendment. Laws, under this fundamental doctrine of liberty, may be repealed or amended, and new laws enacted only by the duly elected legislative branch of the government, subject to the veto by the executive.



"In recent years the Supreme Court of the United States has arrogated to itself the power in effect, to repeal statutes of the United States and to amend the Constitution. This is possible because of the two-party system; for under the system impeachment of Supreme Court Justices is impossible when they are supported by either party.

"The circumvention of the legislative branch of government by the executive and judicial branches can lead only to the destruction of the very individual rights which our Constitution was so carefully drawn to protect. Many of our most fundamental rights have already been destroyed, and we are faced with the imminent prospect of totalitarian bureaucratic government.

"My congratulations to Mr. Coney who, while apparently not a specialist in Constitutional la been able to perceive the tru ition of the Supreme Court United States."

Dr. Irish in her letter writ would remind the editors a student contributors -- that t purpose of free speech and press is to arrive at truth th reasonable discourse." With t mind, Dr. Dobson has indica willingness to debate Dr. Iri the topic under dispute, "I Supreme Court protecting our stitutional rights?" I shall be happy to hear from Dr. Irish debate may be arranged.

Conservatives Lack Understandin

"Socialism suppresses human nature," is one of the most trite and inane arguments yet concocted by the conservative theorists. The conservative concept of "human nature" itself belies an attitude far too naive for a college student and indicates a singular lack of education in some very fundamental areas of human understanding.

What is meant by "human nature" anyway? I suppose that while no one will give a very precise definition of what he or she means by the term some general sort of meaning will be given to the effect that human nature equals those "natural" characteristics of mankind that are instinctual in nature and manifest themselves universally throughout the species -- as for instance racial dislike, profit motive, greed, need to compete in a capitalist society, dislike of social security and income

This may be a very fine definition and I have no wish to attack it as such. They key word however is "instinctual," and it is how this term functions in the conservative argument with which I wish to take issue. What might we properly take as an instinctual attitude in man? Several come to mind such as sex drive, drives to procure food and eliminate it, perhaps a drive for pleasure, and the like. I would be hard pressed to draw up a list of many more "instinctual" motivations in mankind, and certainly few people would agree with me if I did.

In fact it is safe to say that at least some specialists in these affairs will not agree that the ones listed are really instinctual. Most other human actions are conditioned by what we call "culture" and its interactions. Anthropologists tell us tures that have been scientifi studied lead us to believe that s sort of relativism is justified cataloging values and mores o than ours.

A people's economic and so institutions are determined by t cultural outlooks -- certainly no any tenuous and ambiguous conce such as "human nature," w varies from people to people from continent to continent.

This leaves us then with the pr lem of "cultural nature." Is s italism against our "cultu nature?" Again the answer is " is not.' Socialism has a firm t dition in many European nations, has made some headway in the n ional and state governments her well. What can be against our " tural nature" anyway? Anything think of must come from pre-est lished cultural patterns, or by fusion. The problem of Socialism not one of "nature" but of educa notion that massive federal in-ction is the only solution to the ems confronting American ction was called "bunk" by Ladd ley, president of the U. S. ber of Commerce.

pinned the same label on ideas Russia is turning out super-ists "while our own school-ers fumble along with inade-e schools and inept students," grade schools and colleges and ersities are hopelessly over-ded, and "that everything will rse tomorrow."

mley traced what he called "the ive side of the education re."

is a real American success ," he said. "It is a story of recedented expansion and impro-ent in our educational system gn the exercise of state and responsibility."

e speaker cited this evidence:

er 47,000,000 persons, more ne-fourth of the entire nation, participate in full-time formal tion.

urrent school expenditures per have increased more than 3 1/2 s as much as enrollments have eased.

e are spending six per cent r national income today on ed-tion as compared with only 2.2 ent in 1913.

Since the 1955-56 school year, ms have been supporting local issues to build an average of 0 new classrooms a year--0 more a year than the average rate required to provide a ed 800,000 new classrooms be-1960 and 1970.

College overcrowding has been erated and the National Edu-n Association, no foe of federal education, reports "there are 25,000 to 50,000 more places leges around the country than ctually being filled."

merous and varied" problems ain, Plumley said, which are complicated by a tremendous population explosion, and the fact that the body of human knowledge is growing geometrically. "Consequently we are trustees of more essential knowledge that must somehow be passed on to future generations."

"Because the problems are so vast and the solutions so difficult," he said, "it might seem easier for us to shrug away the responsibility for our own communities, our own children, and turn the whole job over to the eager experts in Washington, particularly if this federal aid comes, as it usually does, in sugar-coated doses tastefully disguised as something-for-nothing pills."

Plumley said the federal government is "force-feeding" the educational system at the rate of $3 1/2 billion a year and "even bigger injections are planned for the future, because the federal aiders have hypnotized themselves and a segment of the public into believing that the treatment is necessary."

"I think the record is against them. The American people are doing the job for themselves in the way they have always done it--in their own local communities, on their own initiative, out of their own resources. I don't believe they can be brainwashed or propagandized into any other course," the speaker concluded.

Kellum Hall Loses Fund Raising Right

Kellum Hall's fund raising privileges have been suspended by the Student Government Funds Committee for a period of one year which began yesterday.

Kellum Hall held a dance as a fund raising project that was not approved in accordance with the Student Body Statutes, chapter 800.01:A.

A member of Kellum Hall Executive Council was informed by Secretary of Finance Frank Milwee that the statutes required approval of such projects by the Funds Committee. The warning was not heeded and the dance was held.

Allan Dermott, president of the Executive Council claimed that Kellum was not under the jurisdiction of the Student Body Statutes. However, the Funds Committee ruled that Kellum was a part of the Student Body and suspended their fund raising privileges.

Milwee said that the statutes are made to benefit the student body, but they are not beneficial when they are not enforced. He informed the various organizations through Flambeau notices and articles last trimester than the fund raising statutes were going to be enforced.

Summer Work Roundup Set

The Fourth annual Summer Work Roundup will be held tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott under the sponsorship of the Office of Financial Aid and Student Government.

Speakers from fields such as industry, resorts, summer camps, etc., will discuss summer work possibilities.

Bill Sheppard, Secretary of Student Welfare, has reported that approximately 450 students participated in this program last year. Many received jobs because of information received at the meeting.

Faculty String Quartet +2 Present Chamber Music

An evening of chamber music will be presented by FSU's Faculty String Quartet and two guest artists, Friday evening in Opperman Music Hall.

Guest artists Elena Nikolaidi, mezzo soprano, and Harry Schmidt, clarinetist will each join the quartet for a selection on the four-number program. Part of the School of Music faculty recital series, the program at 8:15 is free and open to the public.

Members of the Faculty String Quartet are Bela Urban, violin; Donald Michel, violin; Robert Sedore, viola; and Owen Sellers, cello. All the performing artists are members of the music faculty.

The program will open with Haydn's "Quartet No. 29, Op. 24, No. 2." The string quartet will then play "Late Swallows" by Delius, which has the composer's home in Florida as its setting.

Miss Nikolaidi will join the string quartet for the presentation of "Il Tramonto," a lyric poem by Respighi, with words from P.B. Shelley's "The Sunset."

The final number will be Brahms' "Clarinet Quintet" for which Harry Schmidt, clarinetist, will join the quartet. A four movement work, it was Brahms' last great instrumental work, Op. 115.

In their fourth year of performing together, the Faculty String Quartet performs a program at FSU each year and several guest appearances in surrounding states.

AROUND THE WORLD

WASHINGTON--A group of eleven Republican leaders in Congress have put out a statement blasting what they call inept conduct of foreign affairs by the Kennedy Administration. They claim anti-American sentiment is sweeping Britain, France and Canana because of U.S. actions. The Republicans call on the President to re-assess policies toward allies of the U.S.

WASHINGTON--Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana has blasted Republican critics of Administration policies on Cuba. Mansfield called for more restraint on irresponsible public utterances. And he reminded Republicans the problembs arising from Castro's takeover in Cuba began under the Eisenhower Administration.

LONDON--British Prime Minister MacMillan says French President de Gaulle's policies could threaten the Western alliance and force the U.S. to into isolationism. MacMillan told the House of Commons all of Allied Europe would have deep reason to fear a re-appraisal of the American position.

Labor Party Spokesman Harold Wilson challenged MacMilan's position that Britain had reached a satisfactory agreement on entry into the Common Market when de Gaulle sabotaged it. Wilson said, "The terms already negotiated and settled and the Commonwealth interests already surrendered by the government constitute a national humiliation."

BONN--West Germany is trying to end a new controversy about its Common Market policy. It reaffirms support for membership in the market of Denmark, Norway, and Ireland.

MONTREAL--Three striking Loggers have been shot to death, nine others wounded by gunfire in a forest near Kapuskasing, Ontario. The 500 striking Loggers marched on independent wood cutters when the gunfire broke out. Police arrested 19 of the independents and seized weapons.

BAGHDAD--Iraq'a new revolutionary leaders are said to be directing a campaign of wiping out Communists throughout the Arab nation. But the Soviet Union nevertheless has extended recognition to the new regime, as did the United States.

Parole Board Chairman Talks To Correctionists

Fashion Day Program Planned For Thursday

A New York fashion consultant who has an art background and a New York fashion designer of sports clothes will be among the speakers at the Ninth Annual Fashion Day which will be held here Thursday.

The day-long program held annually under auspices of the interdivisional Fashion Institute begins at 9 a.m. Lectures and student fashion show are in the auditorium of Longmire Bldg. and the public is invited to all the events on the program.

Jean Olds, consultant to leading fashion houses in New York and developer of color trends in the fashion industry, will be one of the speakers. One of the few top fashion women with a fine arts background, Miss Olds has had three one-woman art shows at the Pen and Brush Club in New York. She holds a bachelor of music degree from the Chicago Musical College and the University of Chicago and has studied at the Art Students League and the National Academy.

Miss Olds will talk on "Color in the Fashion Industry" bringing in the creative person's contribution to American industry. Her address will be at 10:25 a.m.

Margaret Newman, fashion designer for Nicole sportswear in New York, will speak on "The Exciting World of Design." A native of Budapest, Miss Newman learned to sew in secret because her mother, who ran a fashionable dress salon, didn't want her to have anything to do with the fashion business. After winning her first prize at the age of eight in a contest for doll's clothes, she went to New York at the age of 15 and took a job with a designer. She attended high school at night and later went to Traphagen in New York. Then she went to Bergdorf-Goodman as custom designer.

Miss Newman, was, for some time, a resident of Miami where she designed slacks and evening clothes and operated her own shop in Miami Beach. Her shop soon developed into a large wholesale business. After a short period of retirement she returned to the business of fashion designing accepting a post with a New York sportswear company, as their designer.

Mrs. Eleanore Adam, associate professor of clothing and textiles and chairman of the Fashion Institute, said that other speakers will be Miss Lucille Rea, educational director of Simplicity Pattern Company, and Miss Betty Barclay, art director of Rich's. Miss Rea, who was the featured demonstrator in the television series "Sew Easy" by Homecraft Films, will speak at 9:30 a.m. on "Careers in the Fashion Field." Miss Barclay who has worked extensively with children's fashions will discuss job careers in fashion art. She will speak at 2:30.p.m.

At 4:30 p.m. a fashion show in which students will model clothes they have made or designed will be held. Clothes to be modeled range from suits, sports outfits, to semi-formal dresses.

WFSU-TV Airs New Programs

WFSU-TV will begin a new series of programs tonight at 9 o'clock, "Great Decisions -- 1963," based upon the important and intricate international issues that will face the United States and the world during the coming year.

Each 60 minute program is based upon a single topic of high importance. The eight programs will be shown on the following topics:

"The Common Market-- Blueprint for a New Europe?" "Red China and the USSR-- How Firm an Alliance?" "Algeria-- What Future?" "Spain-- End of the Franco Era?" "India -- Is Democracy Working?" "Laos and Vietnam--Southeast Asia in Danger?" "Alliance for Progress -- New Deal for the Americas?" "Peace-- What Problems and Prospects?"

Program number one, "The Common Market," will show how it relates to the economy of the United States and the World.

Long-Led Tribesmen Whallop Centenary In 82-68 Contest

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Sports Editor

Charlie Long, hitting a season high of 28 points, led the Florida State Seminoles to an 82-68 basketball victory over the Centenary College cagers Monday night in Tully Gymnasium.

The 6-4 senior, who came near to fouling out, racked up 19 points the first half and then added nine more in the second session.

Teammate Jerry Shirley approached his game high by bucketing 21 markers, as did Centenary's Jimmy Williams.

Although the Seminoles never trailed in the game, the Centenary cagers constantly threatened to overtake them. Three times in the first four minutes of the game, the Gents tied the contest, but a field goal by Shirley with 6:41 left put the Tribesmen ahead to stay.

Utilizing the shooting of Long and Shirley, the Seminoles built up a 14-point margin, their biggest in the first half, but then saw Centenary slowly carve the difference to seven at the half.

When the second period began, the Seminoles had a 46-39 lead. The margin was tightened even more with 15:58 left when the Gents' Williams sank two free throws for a 54-48 score.

However, the Tribesmen built the margin to 14 points for the second time of the game when Shirley made two charity tosses for a 68-54 score.

Long came into action once again with 5:47 left when he dropped in a free throw to build FSU's lead to 16 points (the largest of the game). The score was 72-56.

After two free throws by Centenary guard Don Ensley cut two points off FSU's lead, the Seminoles' 6-1 guard Pete Gonzalez sliced the nets from 15 feet out with 5:04 left to raise the margin back to 16.

With 43 seconds left, Centenary's Jerry Butcher sank a jumper to move the Gents within 12 points, but 18 seconds later Long reached his season zenith to give the Tr... extra insurance. After Shirl... jumper, Butcher followed it ... a jumper as the final buzze... off.

Florida Agrees To Resume Freshman Football Games

The freshman football series between the University of Florida and Florida State will be resumed Oct. 5, 1963, in Tallahassee's Doak S. Campbell Stadium, announced Athletlic Director Vaughn Mancha.

The series apparently will be on a home-and-away basis, being in Tallahassee one year and Gainesville the next.

An earlier plan to have such a series was halted when the Southeastern Conference reduced the number of games SEC frosh squads can play. The "series" started in 1960 when the Baby Gators were scrambled, 26-11, in Tallahassee, but the SEC reduction stymied a 1961 game.

Florida complained it could not work in FSU and the SEC schools into its reduced schedule, but, when the SEC recently approved an increase to four games a season, UF reconsidered.

In addition to battling the Gators, the Seminoles will be playing Mississippi Southern, Miami, and either Georgia or Furman. The FSU administration is trying to schedule te Georgia game at Tallahassee.

One-Man Team Puts Gymnasts Third In Meet

Who's the one-man "team" from FSU?

He's Rick Miller, FSU gymnast, who was Florida State's lone representative in the Pelican State Development meet in Baton Rouge, La., this weekend. And it took only Miller to give the Seminoles a third place.

The FSU gymnast tied for first place in all around and had first places in free exercise and tumbling. He was third in three events -- still rings, parallel bars and the long horse.

First place went to the University of Southeastern Louisiana, which tallied 57 1/2 markers. Second was Jesuit with 40 points, and third was FSU (Miller) with 28 points.

Foul Balls Head Bowling League

Four FSU students, known as the Foul Balls, are ahead by three games in the Florida State Bowling League at the finish of last week's play. Team-members are Georgianna Swan, Jim Chatman, Phil Martin, and Connie Zois.

Miss Zois is the week's leading scorer with 212 markers, while Jim McEachern of the Beer Kings is second with 209 points.

Second place honors goes to the Spastics, with bowlers Pinky Scott, J. T. Berryman, Dale Light, and Larry Stallings. The Beer Kings are backed by Bob Underhill, Chip Magree, and McEachern. Underhill finished third (205) in scoring last week, while Miss Swan was fourth with 200 points.

Billy Declines 'Halfbuck' Role

He went thataway, say FSU athletic officials, who report the Seminoles have lost their first full-blooded Seminole Indian. It was hoped that freshman Harry Billy of Naples would make the Seminoles a hot Seminole halfback, but he has left and reportedly signed a baseball contract.

LIEUTENANT BOB AKAM, B.S. IN AVIATION ADMINISTRATION

"If I had it to do over again, would I take Army R.O.T.C.?

Look at it this way. I like the idea of doing challenging work. That's why I volunteered for Special Forces. So you can see why I felt pretty good when the Army assigned me to Europe! Here I really feel I'm doing something for the cause of my country in these important times. How many jobs can you think of that start you off with this kind of responsibility? My wife's here, too, and she loves it. We get a chance to travel. We meet the people, learn new languages, customs. And there's a pretty active social life on post, too. But above all, I'm an officer with a job to do and with responsibilities to shoulder. I like it that way, and I have a hunch that my leadership training and experience will help me out whatever I do. Take it from me, if you're already half-way towards your commission, see it through. It's a good deal. I know."

Frosh Honoraries Induct Members

Twenty-eight students were inducted into Phi Eta Sigma, men's freshman honorary, and 58 into Alpha Lambda Delta, women's freshman honorary, last night at Florida State University.

The students comprised the top-ranking students in the freshman class during the fall trimester, all having a grade point average of 3.5 (B plus or A minus) or higher while carrying a program load of 12 or more trimester hours during their first term at FSU.

The 86 students, along with 240 other freshmen who made a 3.0 or higher average, heard an address by Dr. Laurence E. Chalmers, assistant dean of faculties, at a dinner in Longmire.

In addition to Chalmers, the presidents of the campus honoraries spoke to the students. The two presidents of the leadership honoraries at the same time recognized the scholastically outstanding upperclass students.

Mortar Board President Kay Islay said senior Martha L. Reaves had the highest cumulative average of any senior coed (3.95), while junior Linda Rae Diz (3.93) and sophomore Martha E. Binzel (3.87), were leaders in their classes.

Johnny Smith, president of Omicron Delta Kappa, said these were the men with the best cumulative averages in their classes: senior, Patrick T. Demarco (3.92), junior, Mickey D. Parker (3.9) and sophomore Wendell R. Houston (3.93).

A third group that was honored were the junior counselors of the women's dormitories. Dean of Women Katherine Warren said 54 of 133 junior counselors made a 3.0 or better average.

Five freshmen out of 1,256 enrolled the first trimester recorded a perfect mark, a 4.0. The A students are Carolyn Ann Haynes, Tommie Sue Rabby, Lawrence M.M. Lavine, Judith Rae James and Thomas C. Jernigan.

The freshmen scoring 3.5 or better are: James Knowles Oliver (3.8), Ruth C. Border (3.78), Donna Maria Garner (3.54), William A. Wells (3.56), Katherine D. Young (3.8), Barbara J. Alexander (3.6), John Jockim Laskey (3.55), Beverly C. Sever (3.64), June E. Johnston (3.7), Francis A. Deture (3.8), Bessie Alice Meetze (3.88), Barbara M.A. Tormala (3.6), Gail E. Archibald (3.8), Diana L. Brown (3.78), Florence A. Reaves (3.57).

Diane L. Middleton (3.53), Sandra C. Masse (3.78), Christopher Rice (3.55), Billy J. Bullock (3.55), Barbara E. Bell (3.77), Robert A. Huber (3.69), Donna R. British Politics And American Policy"

r. Livingston Gives Government Lecture

[illegible] PHYLLIS DELAMATER
Flambeau Staff Writer

[illegible] and American [illegible]" was the topic of a lecture [illegible] by Dr. William Livingston of the University of Texas, [illegible] the Department of Government and the public Monday night [illegible] Library Lecture Hall.

Dr. Livingston, who received his [illegible] at Yale University, was [illegible] Dr. Marion D. Irish, head of the FSU Government Dept.

Dr. Livingston opened the lecture by explaining that American policy has been shaped by forces beyond her control. From the beginning of her national life her policies have been closely bound and her conduct of affairs has been regularly shaped by those policies of Great Britain.

The latter part of the nineteenth century saw the two countries come to acknowledge their interdependence and their pursuance of common goals. This was due mainly to Britain's slow decline as a world power, while American power steadily increased.

During the course of historical events America replaced Britain as the leader of world affairs. She had inherited the power of a country that she had previously depended upon for existence.

Today Britain is almost indefensable in a nuclear age. She must import to maintain her existence, and export to pay for import expenses. These factors result in the main objectives of British policy, that of trade and defense.

For reasons of gratitude for past security to the US, and for present services performed by Britain for US defense, it is necessary that America conduct her policies so as not to jeopardize those of Great Britain. In this manner, American policies today are influenced by forces beyond her control.

Whatever course the small island-nation chooses to take to maintain and increase her power remains a decision that will be of primary importance to American policy.

Skepticism about American government and fear of another war have caused Britain to doubt American leadership. It is necessary, however, that the factors that unite the two countries exceed in importance over those that might cause friction.

Dr. Livingston commented that friction is often caused by such issues as the recent decision concerning Skybolt, a definite injury to British pride.

The lecture was one of a series sponsored by the Government Dept. concerning politics abroad and foreign policy.

Debate Team Wins Trophies Certificates At West Georgia

The FSU Debate Team walked away with the Sweepstakes Championship [illegible] past weekend at the 13th annual West Georgia College Invita[illegible].

[illegible] two trophies and 12 individual certificates.

[illegible] which scored 26 wins and nine losses, won two first place [illegible] and one second place award in the novice divisions, and second [illegible] in each of the three varsity divisions.

The FSU team of Nancy Dale and Barbara Jackson place first in Affirmative (novice), and Peyton Wynns and Susan Harrell were second in the Negative (novice). The four novice debaters received a trophy in the over-[illegible] category.

In the [illegible] division, Joan Corey and Dick Root came in second in Affirmative, Tom Valarius and Gary Canner were second in Affirmative, and the four were second also in over-all performance.

In individual awards, Peyton Wynns was in second place, and Barbara Jackson and Nancy Dale were in a three-way tie for fourth place, in the Novice Division; and Joan Corey tied for fourth place in Debate, Varsity Division.

Marilyn Young placed second and Joan Corey won third place in Persuasive Speaking, and Dick Root received third place in Impromptu Speaking.

Eleven schools participated in the tournament, representing seven states.

This weekend a debate tournament will be held on the FSU campus with approximately 30 colleges and universities participating. Timekeepers and student helpers for the tournament are needed, and students who can help may contact Richard Hahn or Dr. Gregg Phifer, in the Speech Dept.

Work Roundup

Work possibilities for the summer will be discussed tonight at 7:30 in Westcott Auditorium, as the fourth annual Summer Work Roundup is held.

Speakers from industries, resorts and summer camps will participate in the program, which is open to the public, Secretary of Student Welfare Bill Sheppard said.

Advertising Day Program Held At FSU Tomorrow

Advertising men with a combined experience of more than 100 years will be on the program of Advertising Day at FSU tomorrow to help guide students looking to careers in this field.

The program opens at 9:30 a.m. in the Starry Conference Room of the Business Building.

Among the speakers or panelists will be: Joseph L. Brechner, president and general manager of WLOF-TV, Orlando, who began his career as a script writer in 1938; R. Loring Blackstone, publicity business manager of Rich's, Atlanta, and a member of this firm for 15 years; G.L. (Bud) Watts, a veteran advertising man who currently is vice president of Neal Battle and Lindsey, Tampa.

Virgil S. Price, manager of advertising and publicity for Tampa Electric Company and Tampa's "Advertising Man of the Year" for 1961; Duane Brady, branch manager and vice president of the Garland Agency in Tampa; Louis Benito, president of Louis Benito Advertising, Tampa; and William K. Beard, president of Associated Business Publications, New York.

MIAMI -- A Northwest Orient Airlines plane with 43 persons aboard disappeared over the desolate Florida Everglades yesterday. It disappeared after taking off for a nonstop trip to Chicago in squally weather and low visibility.

An intensive search by planes and helicopters was under way on a wide line between Miami and Tampa, concentrating on the swampy area west of Miami. The chief of the Miami control tower, Martin Hansen said: "It looks as though the plane is down in the Everglades." The Coast Guard said it had had several reports from people who said they had seen an explosion near the 40 mile bend on Tamiami Trail (US 41) west of Miami about 1:40 p.m. (EST). The plane took off from Miami at 1:35 p.m.

Chief Ranger Robert Branges of the Everglades National Park Service said he was checking reports two fishermen had seen a ball of fire in the sky. There was no confirmation of these reports, but the Coast Guard diverted some of its search craft to the south to check them.

The Boeing four-jet 720-B left Miami 15 minutes late and radio contact was lost seven minutes later.

The plane was due at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport at 4:20 p.m. (EST), but failed to arrive. It was scheduled to pass over or near to St. Petersburg and Tallahassee, Atlanta, and Cincinnati en route.

MIAMI -- BULLETIN -- A Coast Guard search helicopter has reported sighting airplane wreckage with no apparent signs of life. The helicopter was part of the search effort for a missing Northwest Airlines jet which disappeared on a flight from Miami to Chicago with 43 persons aboard.

GENEVA -- The 17-nation disarmament conference has re-opened at Geneva. Russia's stand, provides the main stumbling block.

The conference opened with reading of a message of cautious optimism from President Kennedy. But the Russians then took over the floor and quickly submerged whatever hopeful note there was.

Kennedy, in his message, called on the conference to seek a safeguard nuclear test ban treaty as a start toward disarmament. The President said complete agreement still is not in easy reach. But he added: "The prospects seemed more encouraging than before because of the acceptance of the Soviet Union of the principle of on-site inspections."

The Russians refused to modify their position of agreeing to only two or three inspections on Soviet soil a year. And they implied the inspections could only be carried out if the experts are officially invited by Russia.

The West wants eight to ten inspections each year.

Britain's negotiator said before the session that the West might be willing to reduce the number of inspections....if the Russians agree to increase the number and size of automatic detection devices they would allow on their territory.

The Russians gave a new twist to an old proposal at the re-opening of the 17-nation disarmament conference in Geneva today. The Russians have long been demanding that the United States give up its military bases overseas. Yesterday, Russian delegate Vasily Kuznetsov said that all overseas capability for launching nuclear weapons should be liquidated. The proposal was immediately denounced by the United States and Britain as a political maneuver to try to put the West on the defensive.

LONDON -- Prime Minister Macmillan and his Conservative Party have defeated a Laborite motion of no-confidence in the House of Commons in London. The vote was 333 to 227.

No One To Debate Lewis?

Campus Liberals, both professional and secular are being challenged. For years believers in this unexplainable philosophy of Liberalism have held forth, often to captive audiences, their own virtues and the dangers of the "right." If we reactionary conservatives are really pathological personalities and a danger to Democracy one would think in a truly critical situation like this, the Liberal spokesman would step forward to protect the collective virtue of the student body. But such is not the case.

Fulton Lewis the Third, a leading spokesman for the extreme "right," is speaking on the campus and has challenged all to debate on his choice of subjects. So far no one has stepped forward.

Perhaps the Liberals have missed the true significance of the situation. For years they condemned all that disagreed with them as a danger to the community, but when a member of this opposing camp speaks, they shy from contact. It appears, they would be only too glad for a chance to bring their shining intellects to bear and forever protect the community from deviation through the destruction of Mr. Lewis' arguments.

Since none have appeared to the challenged, there is still time to inquire as to who should accept the gauntlet. The first and most obvious group would be the Debate Team, but on examination it seems that college debating is sterile.

The faculty then, as one supposes they have a professional commitment to the truth. Here's the rub of a debating professor: being joined to the pursuit of truth they are ill-equipped to oppose an ideology that claims all the truth.

That leaves us with students, men who must live and die in a world made by these two opposing forces, they should be most concerned over scurrilous doctrine, they have been most outspoken on politics, but they have refused the challenge.

Maybe, the Devil's Dictionary was right when it defined a conservative as a man who "is enamored of existing evils, as distinguished from the liberal, who wishes to replace them with others."

Chat About ROTC Dept.

To the Editor:

"What say we take a little time out and chat about the ROTC department." Thus begins another four o'clock class. Hands under posterior, we find that there are new methods of eliminating the oppositions to the manifested destinies of the GOVERNMENT.

Elimination is as simple as ABC; atomic, biological, and chemical warfare. "Now, gentlemen, we shall see a small movie. Much of the information you will hear here is classified. Chuckle! Chuckle!"

BOOM and the majestic power of the A bomb opens the scene. Houses collapse, the skin sears, and the lungs are coughed out to demonstrate the omnipotence of modern technological warfare.

"Will the following please stay...."

"Although you have indicated no interest in advanced ROTC we are interested in you...."

Intellectual Climate Stimulate

To the Editor:

The intellectual climate of FSU has been stimulated by Mr. Thomas Riggins. One does not have to concur with Mr. Riggins to appreciate the effects of his articles.

America has become great and will become greater not by mediocrity or constant propaganda, but by critical thought, by discussion and by active participation in the government we cherish.

Where would America stand if it were not for individuals who have faith in their convictions be they right or left? Is the kind of nation we want a neutral one? A passive one? I hope not.

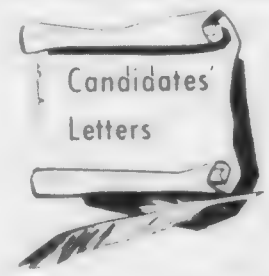
Vote Consideration Asked



Dear Students,

Even the hope of running for Women's Vice President of Florida State University has entailed responsibilities in the past years. These responsibilities are to me the preparation and diversified work involved to evoke cognizance of student government working, awareness of need for alterations, and at the same time bring ability for observance of the value and reasoning behind policies, systems, and traditions already established.

It would be superfluous to go through a list of qualifications and present individual values of relevance to the job of Women's Vice President. They are listed below only because of the invariable need of illustration of service and with the hope that you will find them in your evaluation a capable criterion on which to place support for discerning endeavor in carrying out the responsibilities and tasks of this office.

"It's not who does the job that matters, but if it is done well."

With one promise, to concentrate my efforts on achieving what really matters, I sincerely ask for consideration of your vote.

Yours very truly,
Clyda Stokes

Fans Anger FSU Coach

Hugh Durham was a puzzled man. His team had just got through giving Centenary College a 82-66 drubbing, but had been rebuked in the process by the small crowd which witnessed the Monday evening clash. He was puzzled why the fans would boo a team that was winning.

He complained, "Here we are with a 12-point lead; Centenary is playing a zone defense; and we have three starters of the bench, Shirley, Long and Huge. There is very little time left in the first half, and we have the boys playing a delay game. Why were they booed? You're supposed to play a delay game under those circumstances, to preserve the lead and hold the ball, with the starters on the bench. We did this so we bring the ball out in the second half with our starters."

He paused to scowl, and concluded, "We appreciate the support of the fans, but the boos and hisses which they greeted this tactic with confused the boys and actually made them play worse ball. They shouldn't have become confused and shot like that, but if the fans had had sense enough to recognize our strategy and kept their mouths shut it wouldn't have happened. That was what we were supposed to do."

In other lockerroom chatter, the team manager stopped to pat Ball 27 on the rump and remark respectfully, "She did it again. This is the fifth one in a row."

Scenes In Passing: Cale Huge casting a puzzled glance at one of the sandwiches which were distributed to the players after the game. "What is this half ham and half beef jazz" he asks no one in particular. Assistant Coach Hugh Durham, who is hurrying through passing out congratulations takes time to observe, "If you don't want it, give it to me."

Spring Sports Debute Is Feb. 15, Says A.D.

There'll never be a dull moment on the Florida State campus this Spring. Not for a sports fan, anyway.

FSU's complete Spring sports calendar -- released Saturday by Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha -- shows no less than 88 sports events involving four Spring sports between Feb. 15 and June 8. Forty-one of these events will be held in Tallahassee.

First Spring sport to open will be golf, when Coach Bill Odeneal's golfers host Jacksonville Navy next Friday, Feb. 15. FSU's track team will enter the Coliseum Relays in Montgomery, Ala., the next day.

Tennis opens on March 6, followed by baseball on March 16.

And to make things complete, Spring football drills will begin Feb. 23 and conclude March 30.

After Much Controversy

Summer Council Bill Passed By Senate

A highly controversial bill pertaining to the provisions for summer student government was the subject of extended debate in yesterday's session of Student Senate.

The bill amended the Statutes by deleting the Article providing for a Summer Council. Senator Bill Grant was opposed to this bill on the grounds that he did not feel he could intelligently vote for or against passage of the bill, as the Senate had not been presented with a full picture of the three branches of summer government.

Senator Texas Wiltshire pointed out taht the committee, in preparing the bill, had not planned on a legislative branch for the summer trimester. By passing the bill, the committee would then be free to work out suitable legislation providing for a working summer government.

During discussion of this bill, Student Body President Ken van Assenderp admonished the Senate to establish some concrete basis on which to plan future legislation. He pointed out that the committee could not plan any specific action unless something definite was decided about the bill under consideration. A motion to send the bill back to committee was defeated. The bill was passed by a unanimous show of hands.

Student Senate Bill 29 was introduced jointly by several members of the Senate. Senator John Merting, chief spokesman for the group, urged passage of the bill which provided for the establishment of the Executive Branch of summer student government. The bill was amended by deleting the specific dates for the summer trimester. Including such dates would limit and restrict the Statutes, making them awkward to work with.

The bill was further amended by adding the Secretary of the University Union to the list of Cabinet officers to be represented during the summer trimester. The bill passed unanimously.

Senator Linda Luna introduced a bill pertaining to the qualifications for candidates seeking election to the Honor Court. The bill was referred to the Judicial and Rules Committee.

Women's Senate Views Hall Offices

In presenting this bill, Senator Dale emphasized the fact that the provision as stated presently in the "Knowledge for College" booklet is not enforceable a great deal of the time. She cited instances when freshmen living in temporary housing or in upper class dorms were not required to abide by the rule. The bill was referred to the Organizations Committee for further deliberations.

Women's Vice President Jeanne Ferlita announced to the Senate the problem of electing dorm officers under the new trimester system. In the past, it has been the policy to have freshman women take part in the election of the officers of the upperclass dorms to which they have been assigned. But under the trimester system, freshman women do not yet have these upperclass dorm assignments. The problem was referred to the LAWS Committee for further recommendations.

Women's Senate received a letter from Dean Katherine Warren listing several points in "Knowledge for College" to be amended. These suggestions were the result of a committee Dean Warren appointed to study the application of the present rules in "Knowledge for College" to the new trimester system. The recommendations were referred to the Social Regulations and Codifying Committee for further action.

Senator Sandra Brooks was appointed to serve as chairman of the Organizations Committee of Women's Senate.

SCUBA Diving Course To Offer 'Instructor' Rating

instructor rating program will be offered for the time this year to participants in the SCUBA diving which will have its first practical lesson Sun-dent Alan Schwartz said. He encouraged all those are interested in the course to be at this lecture who miss the meeting should bring whatever diving equipment they have--masks, fins and snor--to the first practical, Sunday at 1:30 p.m. in the men's Gym. After the first few practical lessons in the gym, the group will take to water, and will dive in a sinkhole or river area

Schwartz explained that each year the SCUBA instruc- must choose a diving area with water clear enough permit them to see their students at all times.

Schwartz placed emphasis on the fact that experienced divers are welcome to participate in the course, especially with the new instructor's rating being offered. Lasting approximately seven weeks, the course will offer both lectures and practical application at each meeting. The lectures are designed not only for beginners, but also for advanced divers, and cover a variety of topics, the SCUBA instructor said.

Lecture subjects will include types of equipment, medical aspects of SCUBA diving; care and maintenance, and safety procedures.

There will be a nominal fee for the instruction, which will be applied toward purchase of equipment used by the SCUBA divers. Equipment also can be rented by those who do not own diving apparatus.

The course is set up under the Underwater Safety Council, which is a committee made up of the instructors and representatives from Student Government and the faculty.

All who complete the course will be awarded a certificate, according to diving rank: the basic rank is the SCUBA Diver; more advanced students receive the Assistant Instructor certificate; and the highest rank is the new program of Instructor rating.

The course was established in 1961 after a diving accident in Crystal Cave claimed the lives of two FSU students. Schwartz, who helped in the recovery of the bodies, obtained permission from the administration to create a course designed to eliminate such accidents through supervised experience and a greater knowledge of safety rules.

Be Clean, Parties

The University of Miami gives Florida State University some timely warning during elections: Be clean.

A debate on the UM campus was ended this week with President Henry K. Stanford refusing to reinstate political parties for the Spring Elections.

"I do not like some of the reports on past campus and off campus events which controlled the political situation." President Stanford told the "Miami Hurricane." "They certainly did not benefit the Student Government."

UM originally ousted political parties in 1958 when an investigation of Spring elections revealed that someone had been manipulating the ballot boxes.

Dr. Thurston Adams, in writing the Con side of a Pro-Con debate, elaborated: "During this time there was more flagrant politics, dirty tactics and immature procedures used here than in any metropolitan elections.

"Each party wanted only one thing--to get their men in office. Rules were flagrantly disregarded, insinuations and accusations were flung back and forth with real bitterness and when the election was over, nothing was left but hard feelings."

These are dangers which can be graphically real. But they need not be. Strong regulations and temperance on the part of both parties can avoid a situation where hate and mud rule campus elections.

The Elections Committee is hard at work. They are enforcing the laws tenaciously and keeping the race clean. But the worst is yet to come as the home stretch is reached.

The need for tighter regulation of the parties is apparent. A bill devised by Secretary of Elections Ron Jones has been advanced to put tighter restrictions on the parties. Senators Lewis Barnett and George Miller, who are also chairmen of the two parties, will work out their own regulatory plan and co-introduce it.

But regulations will not necessarily insure clean races. Both parties must recognize that while victory is important, political cleanliness is paramount if the parties desire to retain their influence. The voters will judge the parties as well as the candidates in the coming election. We do not want the University of Miami duplicated.

Assumptions Need Understanding

I think it is time some simple-minded thinking and some unsensible assumptions are given more mature understanding. I am referring to two recent articles in the "Florida Flambeau" concerning uneducation view points on the Supreme Court and the role of the United Nations in the World today.

These controversies are webbed with the confusion of "liberalism versus conservatism," with thoughts such as, "You believe in the United Nations; therefore you are a liberal; therefore you champion foreign influence in our government policy; therefore you are in favor of abetting the Communists, etc." These extreme categories denote little systematic thinking, one viewpoint not necessarily leading to the other.

I personally am a liberal on some points and a conservative on others. So I need not be categorized, as need not be anybody. I prefer to think for myself, rather than to latch on to certain causes or political leanings. It is easier for a person to identify himself with a political trend; since then the person can quote others and recapitulate ideas, because this takes less independent thinking.

Concerning the article on the Supreme Court rulings:

1. To argue that "the Warren Court aided and abetted the Communist conspiracy by ruling twenty cases in their favor" needs more justification. The court might simply be giving certain groups of individuals their rights under the constitution, no matter what their political leanings. If the Supreme Court rules in my favor because of my constitutional rights, they are not necessarily aiding any causes, which I may have. Rights and equal protection under the law cannot be denied to those who may be "conspiring against us." If this tactic is permanent, our country is in for more trouble in the future than if these rights are given to all.

2. The Warren Court has hampered state and local governments from firing what they, the governments, believe to be Communists. There may be justification in firing the Communists; but I do not take point with this idea. But it is up to some power, presumably Federal, to prevent government agencies from indiscriminately firing employees at will on the basis they are Communists, with... evidence or proper reason. And believe m... could become a popular trend with muc... mon... Coney's Basis Challenged

To the Editor:

Reference Coney v. U.S. Supreme Court in Flambeau last week and Dobson's "Law Specialist Answers Irish," Feb. 12th.

I, too, was somewhat disturbed by Mr. Coney's letter indicting the constituted organ of our nation's government which we call the Supreme Court. I was disturbed not because Mr. Coney criticized the Court, but because he advanced no rational basis in support of his view.

If Coney's letter was designed to provoke discussion, then perhaps he will be successful. However, at this point, the discussion called for as a consequence is not some debate among specialists (whom we may assume probably would advance reasoned arguments); it is rather a discussion advanced by the offering by Mr. Coney of the basis--the reasoned basis--of his contentions.

He chose to advance a view in the public forum. This was, happily, his privilege. He has been challenged to advance a rational basis for his contentions. In an institution of higher learning what could be more appropriate? Is he to be simply ignored? He has provoked a reply and a challenge. Has he no responsibility toward the many who may have taken the time to read his letter? What is his answer?

It is not the same thing for Mr. Dobson, or his friend, the law specialist, to try to answer for Mr. Coney. The real issue here is this: Is Mr. Coney prepared to exercise the responsibility which attends the exercise of the privilege of expressing himself in the Flambeau or not? Only Mr. Coney can answer that. What is his answer?

Gelders Takes Lewis Debate

To the Editor:

Just to keep the record straight, let me state that it is simply not true that no one has stepped forward to debate with Fulton Lewis III. The fact of the matter is, last Friday night I telephoned Dale Brown and informed him of my willingness to cross verbal swords with Mr. Lewis. Dale took my name and address and informed me that he would let me know this week whether or not Mr. Lewis would debate with me. I still have not heard, although apparently I have been the only person on campus to voluntarily offer to debate with Mr. Lewis.

Why do I, a graduating senior, feel qualified to argue before an audience on the topic of "Liberalism vs. Conservatism"? It is because of my five years of debating and public speaking experience, and because since 1952 I have been involved in a continuing observation of the contemporary American political scene, because of my substantial knowledge of American history, and because of my background in political theory.

There is a move underway to get a faculty member to debate with Fulton Lewis III. However, why should not a university student be given this unique opportunity to articulate the meaning of Liberalism and to defend his opinions? It may be that there is no other university student, or no member of the faculty, willing to participate in a debate with Mr. Lewis on Feb. 27. If such is the case, Mr. Lewis would get off too easily if no one were to accept his challenge. I do accept his challenge.

Max Gelders

Sigma Xi Lecture

Rouse To Speak

Dr. Hunter Rouse, an Iowan with many years of experience in the study of eddies, will deliver a Sigma Xi lecture here Friday, on "The Role of Eddies in Fluid Motion."

The lecture is at 8 p.m. in 101 Mathematics-Meteorology Bldg., and the public is invited, according to Dr. Delos F. DeTar of FSU's Institute of Molecular Biophysics, the program chairman.

Rouse, director of the Institute of Hydraulic Research at State University of Iowa, will speak about a natural phenomenon which includes hurricanes, tornadoes and waterspouts, spiral galaxies and many other natural occurences.

In past talks on the subject he has said: "They occur in countless numbers in every river, pipe and ventilating duct. Were it not for their diffusive and dissipative action in various phenomena of everyday life, human existence would not be possible in its present form."

The lecture will be illustrated by slides of drawings and photographs from the speaker's research laboratories. He will show a specially prepared film showing the process of formation, interaction and decay of eddies.

A native of Ohio, Rouse received his doctor of science degree from the University of Paris and since 1939 has been professor at Iowa, teaching and doing research in hydraulics and fluid mechanics.

He is author or co-author of six books and numerous technical articles. He has held the MIT Traveling Fellowship in Hydraulics, a Fulbright research scholarship; and the NSF Senior Post-Doctoral Fellowship and in the course of these and other grants has lived, traveled, studied and lectured in various parts of the world.

Today's News Roundup

FLAMBEAU NEWS SERVICES

NEW YORK--The U.N. reports it is going ahead with an agricultural aid project for Cuba despite strong U.S. objections. It's said further that the three million dollar project will not require the use of one single American dollar.

WASHINGTON--Secretary of State Rusk says Soviet troops remaining in Cuba do not insure the peace of Cuba but poison the atmosphere and increase the dangers. Rusk says the sooner this source of potential trouble is eliminated the better for everyone concerned. However, in a speech prepared for delivery in Los Angeles, Rusk, warns that any action to free Cuba from Communism must consider dangers and responsibilities involved in a nuclear age.

BAGDAD--In the Middle East, Iraq's Rebel Government claims it has crushed all active resistance. The revolutionary regime reportedly is at work on a government considered friendly but not subservient to President Nasser of the United Arab Republic. It's said active resistance--presumably from Iraq's Communist Party--has ceased.

SOFIA--It's reported African students disillusioned with life under Communism clashed with Communist police in Sofia, Bulgaria Tuesday. It's said 200 African students were involved and scores of them were injured.

Spring Athletic Events To Create Traffic Jams

Harbinger of Spring: traffic's becoming crowded on the Florida State sports scene.

Two Spring sports open their seasons this weekend -- overlapping swimming and basketball-- and it means that FSU teams in four sports will be involved in no less than seven events Friday and Saturday. The weekend slate includes everything from a red-hot Florida-Florida State swimming meet to a basketball game between FSU football coaches and players.

Golf leads it off, with Coach Bill Odeneal's Seminoles opening their 1963 season by hosting Jacksonville Navy Friday at 1 p.m. The FSU golf team, 14-3 last Spring, will play their second match Monday against Florida in Gainesville.

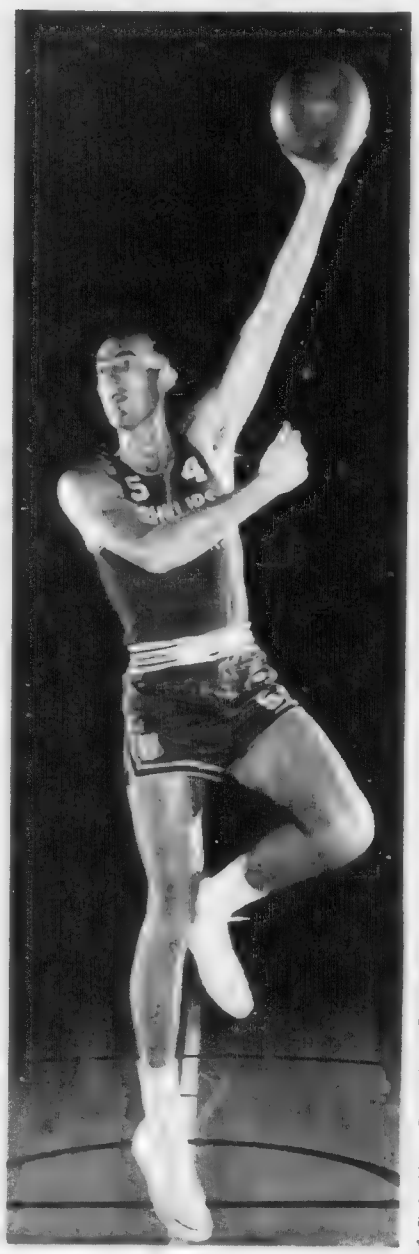
Perhaps the hottest event from a spectator's standpoint will be the swim meet between Florida and FSU Saturday night in Montgomery Gym on the FSU campus. This promises to be a head on collision of two of the Deep South's strongest swim teams, and there won't even be standing room in 400-capacity Montgomery.

Florida has won the Southeastern Conference championship nine times in the past ten years, and lost only two lettermen from last year. The Gators are 4-0 so far. FSU, on the other hand, has won 40 of its last 43 meets (4-1 this year). The Seminoles are the only team in history to hold an appreciable margin over Florida (won 10, lost 3, one tie).

Freshmen swim events begin at 7, followed by varsity competition around 8 p.m.

Coach Mike Long's track team will open its '63 campaign all day Saturday by competing in the Coliseum Relays at Montgomery, Ala. -- an indoor meet in which FSU has twice won the non-conference division. Top college and high school teams from all over the South will be entered.

While the swim meet is going on Saturday night, an attractive basketball doubleheader will be in progress at FSU's Tully Gym. A preliminary will pit the FSU football coaches (bolstered by ex-FSU cage stars Dave Fedor and Hugh Durham) against the football players. At 7:45 the FSU varsity will play a non-counting game against the famed Phillips 66 Oilers of Bartlesville, Okla.



FSU's baseball and tennis teams will be working out for their forthcoming openers, and the football squad is priming for the Feb. 23 opening of Spring drills. Anybody else?

Charlie Long, FSU' senior, will play his l Tully Gymnasium when the Florida State team battles the FSU's other seniors, and Faurest Coogle, were finish the 1962 season be injuries.

NO GREENHORN

Definitely not a "rookie" although he is playing his first season with the Phillips 66ers, 6-9 center Mike Moran has one of the finest hook shots in basketball. He was twice named AAU All-American with the Truckers and was a member of the U.S. All-Stars who victoriously toured Russia in 1961.

Tribe Tankmen To Face Gators

If comparative scores mean anything, Coach Bim Stults of the FSU swimming team is going to have a rough time Saturday afternoon in Montgomery Pool. That's when the Gators from Gainesville, perennial champs of the Southeastern Conference, invade Seminole waters.

And the Alligators have their best chance yet to carve on Stults' 10-3-1 series record. The FSU tankers' ranks were depleted by the loss of seven starters and the Gators are about as strong as they were last year when FSU and UF each won one.

Before the North Carolina Tarheels loused up a streak of home victories for FSU, the Alligators defeated the Carolinians in Gainesville.

The Gators gained their wins in the first two years of play and last year. When the series began in 1956, FSU won the first, 66-18, while the Gators grabbed the second, 43-41. The next year, the pattern was the same FSU by 46-40 and UF by 51-35.

But in 1955, the match was tied, 43-43, before FSU edged the Gators 45-41 in the rematch. The Seminoles won both matches for the first time in 1959, by scores of 55 1/2-30 1/2 and 52-34. This was the trend for the next two years, as the Gators fell, 65-30 and 50-45, in 1960 and, 64-31 and 48-40, in 1961.

Last year, the Seminoles prevailed, 51-34, in Montgomery Pool, but were swamped, 63-32, in enemy waters.

Stults' current record in 4-1, with wins over Georgia, Alabama, Tulane and Sewanee (the University of the South).

Thirty-Five Schools Represented

FSU Hosts Debate Tourney

The Florida State University Speech Dept. will hold its 14th annual Invitational Debate Tournament today and tomorrow, with 15 colleges and universities entered in the senior tournament and 20 in the junior division.

The debate topic will be: "Resolved, that the non-Communist nations of the world should establish an economic community." The day-long round of debates today will be held in the First Baptist Church and the public is invited, according to Dr. Gregg Phifer of the FSU Speech Dept., director. On Saturday debates will be in the History Bldg. on the FSU campus.

Beginning debaters and junior colleges will compete in the junior division and any regularly enrolled undergraduate student with no more than three years of previous intercollegiate competition may enter the senior tournament.

In addition to debate, there will be competition in impromptu speaking, after-dinner speaking and persuasive speaking (oratory). Impromptu speaking will be on the subject of "Education"; after-dinner speaking on "The American Demagogue: Past, Present, and Future"; and oratory on "Our Friends and Enemies Around the World: Who Are They?"

Registration opened yesterday for the competing schools and debaters in 206 History Bldg., and will be continued today at 8 a.m. in the Recreation Room of the First Baptist Church. Tournament banquet will be at 7 p.m. in the Suwannee Room on the FSU campus. Awards will be presented at a luncheon at 12:30 p.m. tomorrow, in the Suwannee Room. The principal award in the senior and junior tournaments will be sweepstakes trophies.

Schools entered in the Florida State Invitational Debate Tournament include (Senior division):

University of Alabama, Appalachian State College, Davidson College, East Tennessee State College, Emory University, Florida State University no. 1, Florida State University no. 2, University of Florida, University of Georgia, Howard College, University of Illinois, Louisiana College, McNeese State College, Mississippi College, University of South Florida, Spring Hill College.

Junior division: University of Alabama, Alabama College, Appalachian State College, Armstrong College no. 1, Armstrong College no. 2, Birmingham - Southern College, Davidson College, Florida State University no. 1, Gardner-Webb College, University of Georgia, Gulf Coast Junior College no. 1, Gulf Coast Junior College no. 2, Indian River Junior College.

Students will "Head for Hades" tomorrow night, as the Sophomore Class sponsors a dance from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in the Suwannee Room.

The Untouchables will play for the event, which will be $1 per couple. All students may attend.

Walsh To Speak In Religion Series

Dr. Chad Walsh, head of the English Dept. of Beloit College in Wisconsin, will be the lecturer for the second "Religion in Life" series.

The "Religion in Life" series takes the place of the former "Religious Emphasis Week." There is to be one lecturer each trimester for a three-day period. Last trimester Dr. Will Herberg of Drew University was the speaker of the first series.

Dr. Walsh, an Episcopalian, will preach Sunday morning at Ruge Hall. Sunday evening at 6 o'clock for all denominational groups, entitled "The Nightmare and the Mirror." The lecture will include recurrent themes such as "1984" and "Brave New World," and their religious demensions. The annual Blanche Kingerly Carroll Memorial Award will be given by Dean Oglesby just prior to Dr. Walsh's talk.

Monday at 4:15 p.m. there will be no prepared lecture, but a "Coffee and Conversation" will be held in the Club room of Longmire. Walsh will have an opportunity to talk with students informally at this time.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the student body as a whole or the administration of the Florida State University. Editorials represent the opinions of the editorial staff of the Flambeau with the initials of the writer following the editorial. Columns and letters to the Editor reflect only the opinion of the writer.

'Dirty' Gossip

Gossip in our society is like candy to a diabetic and whiskey to an alcoholic. They crave to participate, overindulge when partaking and in most cases live to regret it.

Petty gossip is not so frightful and we all indulge. Over-the-back-fence and in-the-soda-shop-over-coffee talk about people are a natural part of conversation. When a person's had a fight with wife or girlfriend, not done well on his grades, or insulted the professor in class. . . it becomes the spark of a dull conversation.

Our only fault is that too often we find ourselves passing along these tales to someone else. And so the yarn spins longer and wilder and with much more intrigue and "spectacular" than it began.

And because gossip is so commonplace and usually deals with trivialities, when the nasty ones arrive we latch on to them like an extra special goodie. When the story is wild, smutty, and involves someone we know, the tale spins like wildfire.

And what happens is just as commonplace. Someone gets hurt. In some cases an innocent tale, born of a dull conversation, destroys the reputation and wrecks the family of a person completely innocent, but unable to exonnerate himself.

This has happened on our campus in such a macabre and ugly fashion we cringe to think the story could be perpetrated without malice aforethought.

As the rumors go. one of our professors brutally slayed a child's pony. Local police have been under public scrutiny in this case and are under pressure to find the person who committed this act. It seems hardly likely that law enforcement officials are overlooking anyone and if the rumors on campus had any basis in fact the person would have been locked up many days ago.

While the campus runs rampant with vile rumors the career, reputation and very life of a member of our community hangs in balance. That person is at the very mercy of the mob this campus has become--enjoying the "big scandal" but thinking not once if there were truth to what had been said.

This much is fact and is known. The FSU faculty member has taken a lie detector test about the incident and other areas which would indicate any emotional trouble. The test was passed with flying colors. No doubt remains in the mind of the law enforcement officials. He has been falsely and viciously accused.

The name of the person is not important. Those of us who have heard and passed on the story know. And those of you who hear any continuation of this vileness will, we hope, put a stop to further damage to the innocent victim of our own folly.

Liberals Chance To Defend Ideology

There is a misconception about the great "debate" furor which needs clarification, regarding Max Gelders' offer to debate Buddy Lewis. This is true... and it is a fact which has not been hidden by Young Americans for Freedom, but through an error in copy selection by the editors of the Flambeau.

I submitted a column last Monday in which it was pointed our that since this individual has branded himself a "Burkean conservative," YAF felt that perhaps a liberal would be a better choice for the debate. What is the sense of having conservatives debate each other? YAF is challenging the liberals of this campus and desires a confrontation with them. This they have to a man refused.

What would be the result of a debate between conservative Lewis and "Burkean conservative" Gelders? Merely a dissection of the conservative philosophy with the liberal dogma remaining unchallenged. This would also have been the result had YAF followed the counsel of a Government professor whom we contacted in regard to the debate. No, he wouldn't debate Lewis, but I might try asking a conservative member of the Department.

Let's face it. The liberals on this campus have refused to accept the challenge offered by Mr. Lewis why should they? They have it knocked at FSU. The Flambeau is liberal. So, by and large, are most members of the Faculty. This is the reason YAF does not sponsor talks as does Liberal Forum -- who on the faculty could we find to give them?

Mr. Gelders the "Burkean conservative" is therefore unacceptable. Had Mr. Gelders been a liberal, so there might have bee a confrontation between liberalism and conservatism, rather than a battle between conservative factions, his challenge would have been seriously considered. Congratulations to "Burkean conservative" Gelders for being the only volunteer.

Liberals...this is your last chance to defend your ideology. Mrs. Lewis' debate topics are "Liberalism vs. Conservatism," "Has the Liberal Foreign Policy Failed?" "The House Committee on Un-American Activities," and "Should the United Nations be Abolished?" Interested liberals may phone Anne Burt [illegible] five at 223-0903, or Dale [illegible] at 224-9858 after five and Sat[illegible]. The deadline for this challenge [illegible] be noon Saturday and enab[illegible] necessary arrangements to be [illegible]. If liberals still refuse, the [illegible] is invited to hear Mr. Lewis [illegible] and learn why.

Brazilians Depart Soon

By RONALDO OLIVE
Brazilian Student

Today, we have completed the last day of our intensive five weeks English course at Florida State University. Tomorrow, we will travel north, where we will visit Washington, D.C., and New York City before flying back to Brazil.

During the time we were on campus we had more exciting experiences than we could even have expected. Most of all, we had the opportunity of knowing the American daily life and the popular customs of the United States.

One of our best experiences was the chance we had spending the last weekend in American homes. We could live as members of many families of Tallahassee and thus, as members of typical American families. The warm hospitality and friendship were standards to each one of the Brazilian students. We became, for three days, citizens of the United States.

On campus, where we spent most of our time during the five weeks, we tried our best to be regular American students. In the cafeterias, library, campus movies and concerts, parties, etc., our main goal was to mix with the Americans and make as many friends as possible. And we made so many good friends on campus that it is really hard to say "goodbye" to each of them.

We are sad in leaving. But, also, we are happy because we could increase the friendship between Brazil and the United States. Any day you have an opportunity to visit our country you will be most welcome and we will do our best to retribute every good thing we had here.

In the name of Professor Ruy Azeredo, the leader of our group, and of all Brazilian students..."Thanks FSU!"

Paradox In YAF Assault On High Court

The last few days have seen the Supreme Court of the United States violently attacked by certain members of the student body, both on the editorial page of the Flambeau and in letters published in Flambeau Forum. This I suppose is to be expected -- the Courts have many enemies these days. One of the most enlightening discoveries I have in regard to this matter is that certain members of the Young Americans for Freedom have been leaders in this assault.

This would not be upsetting normally, except that the attacks on the Court, voiced by these YAF members, have been of a particular virulent nature. This is a bit inconsistent coming from a group that claims that the American way of life is the best in the world by virtue of the freedoms that we have been granted under the Constitution, a group that claims that by its system of checks and balances this very constitution has produced the most nearly perfect form of government that has yet been devised for the benefit of its people.

Indeed this is an admirable position. The United States is the greatest nation in the world. Its form of government is the most nearly perfect yet drawn up -- very patriotic indeed. Why then do the members of this group continuously attack the Federal Government? Not only is the Supreme Court unjust, the President power mad, Congress in the hands of fiendish liberals, foreign powers betraying our way of life, and [illegible] membership in the UN detrimental to our sovereignty; but now the whole liberal movement is invested with socialist elements.

If the nation were in this much of a mess, I wonder how members of YAF could still go around claiming we have such a "most nearly" perfect government? Of course their standard of perfection may be very low. It seems to me that such an attitude towards the government is hardly consistent with their theoretical position.

This ambivalence towards the government probably comes from a complete misunderstanding of two very important words: "American" and "freedom." In this article I do not have time to further specify -- I shall do that in my next one -- but now I would only like to raise an interesting question that may serve as an introduction to that article -- which is "How can the Constitution be a practically foolproof document against tyranny if it has led to so many terrible abuses of power? where is this system of checks and balances anyhow?"

Ignorance Can Destroy America

To the Editor:
Re: Ltr. by James Thompson -"UN to Destroy America."

As a teacher of international relations and comparative government of this campus, I can only conclude that if anything will destroy this country it will be the total ignorance regarding international affairs which is found among the youth of America. I suggest that Mr. Thompson take: (a) a course in international organization, (b) a course in international relations, (c) a course in political theory and (d) a course in basic English spelling (don't use such difficult words as "cannibalism" unless you know how to spell them.)

Current Leadership Needed For MVP

dent Government is a rapidly changing, fluid organization faced with ging problems. The needs of the Student Body demand a leader who miliar with current problems, well versed in current procedures, presently ready to move into a high position of leadership.
a Senator this year, I have that current knowledge.

ring the past year, I have seen many changes made in our Student ernment operation. The Greater FSU Committee has been revamped reorganized, while I was chairman of the Pinellas County area. The Promotional Committee was expanded while I served on the policy rd.

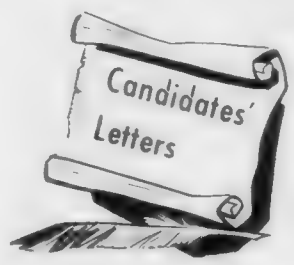
s a Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Elections and Appointments mmittee, I have witnessed the vast revisions made in the Elections e this year. We have tackled the complex problems involved with ving into Trimester operation and its effects on elections. Major isions had to be made.

eaker's Bureau, which I served on, shifted from Student Government per to Gold Key. Long range plans for expansion have been laid and se will be followed through next year.
mecoming events too are in the process of being revamped. Pow Wow, th organized as vice chairman, was strengthened. But more changes be needed to make Homecoming an even bigger success.
n's Vice President is an important job with significant responsi- ties. There will be many important challanges to tackle during coming year.

estions like more rules for men may be advanced from some rters. These I oppose.
e changes involving more freedom with more personal responsi- s for women students will be again raised. These I strongly favor.

e Legislature will be in session during the early months of the term. I have met and talked with many of these men and feel that dent Government must take positive action to stress the needs of the versity to these men.

mmunity in leadership change is vital for successful administration. ave worked closely with Men's Vice President Gene Brown during past year and understand the problems that he has faced. Current blems demand current, informed leadership.



Frank Ryll

Candidate Has Inner Spark Of Enthusiasm

To the Editor:

To be sure, the office of Men's Vice President is one in which we place a great deal of responsibility. Along with the Vice President, the Women's Vice President and the Student Senate, they work together for the betterment of our University. Our Student Government affects all segments of campus life. For these reasons we must not underestimate our priviledge to elect those whom we think will do the most pain-stacking and determinate job. Evaluation of the candidates is our way of insuring capable leadership.

Having served FSU and its students in the past gives one the necessary training and insight to go higher in responsibility. I have served you as a Freshman Class Senator, a member of the Speaker's Bureau, a member of the Dean of Men's Staff (student staff), a member of the Finance, Honor Code, and University Promotion committies, a member of the Summer Council, vice chairman of one of the four standing committies of the Student Senate, member Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity, and the charter president of the Inter-Fraternity Pledge Council.

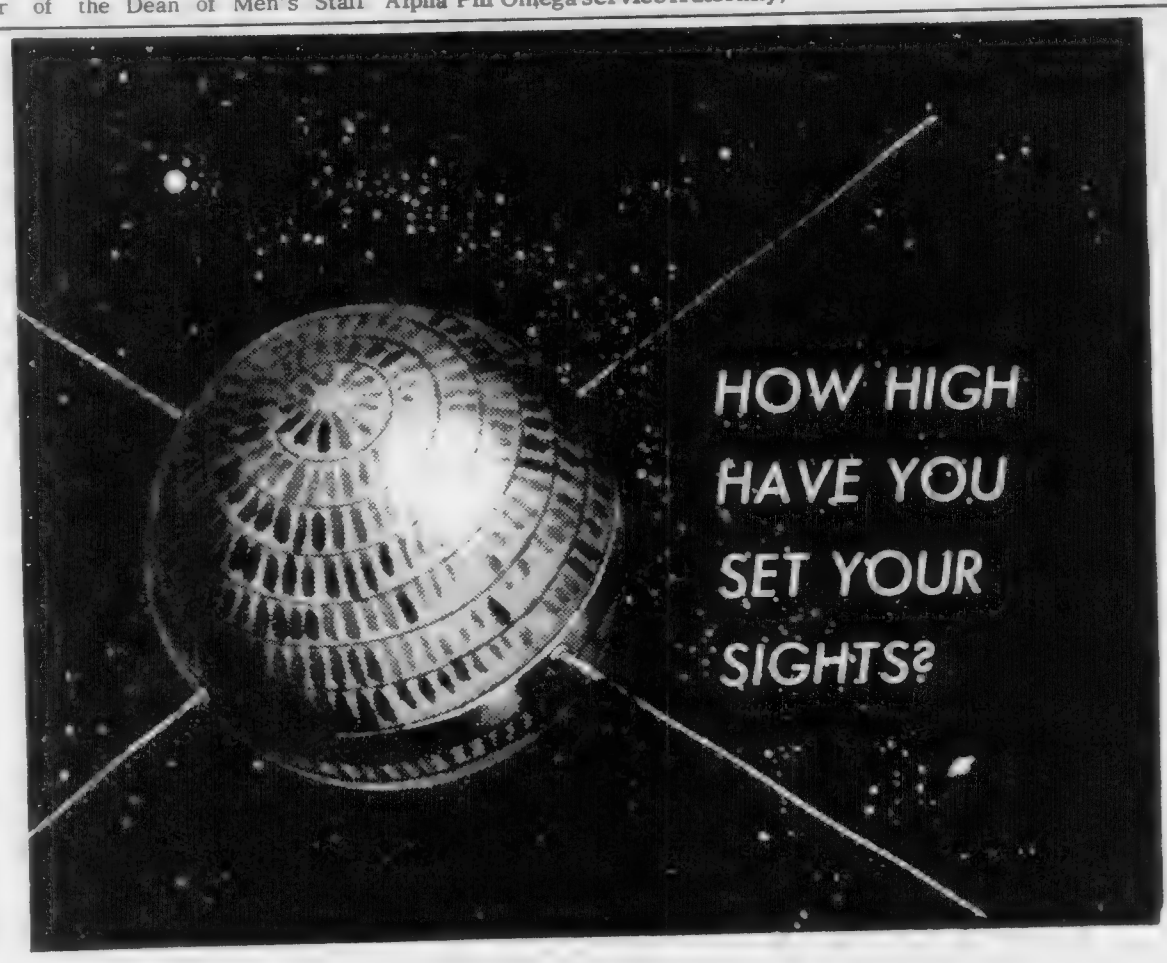
These activities and qualifications are by no means an end in themselves -- "A record is to build on, not to stand on." Sometimes qualifications are not enough to really use to judge between two candidates. The one special quality taken into consideration with the qualifications of a candidate is that small spark of enthusiasm found deep in the roots of some people. I feel that I possess this quality and hope that you are able to recognize it. I shall make no promises of tri-color persuasion, but I do assure you that my part in our Student Government will always be "a strong pull, a long pull, and a pull together," for the building of a greater Florida State University.



Sincerely,
Ted DeLaVergne

Panel Highlights Annual Ad Day

A panel of professionals in the advertising business told students of advertising yesterday there's one thing always in great demand in the business--"creativity."

Four panelists, discussing "How to Prepare a Career in Advertising" at the annual Advertising Day program at FSU, were: Loring Blackstone, publicity business manager of Rich's, Atlanta; Joseph Brechner, president of WFTV, Orlando; William K. Beard, president of Associated Business Publications, New York; and Miss Harriet Raymond, advertising and sales promotion specialist for Celanese Plastics Co., Newark.

The day was sponsored by FSU's School of Business and the Fourth District, Advertising Federation of America. Richard Ashe of Lakeland, governor of the district and Dr. Royal Ray, head of the Advertising, Communications and Public Relations Dept. at FSU, welcomed the audience attending sessions in the Starry Room.

Beard, introduced to the group by Richard Joel, professor of advertising, as the head of an organization of 175 leading business publications, said he did not know whether creativity could be taught, but he knew an environment could be provided where it would flourish and he advised people in advertising to leave any company not recognizing creativity.

Blackstone said that perhaps only one in 12 copy-writers are creative, too many are what he called "research copy writers". His definition of the creative person, so far as advertising is concerned, was "one who can identify and effectively communicate the product's pesonality.'

Miss Raymond said the first job of a person in advertising is "understanding what you have to sell" and that "an inordinate curiosity" helps.

"There are a few things our advertising generation let happen because we were so busy with tomorrow's ad we didn't notice that we might be forbidden an advertisement the next day, or that the cost would rise prohibitively.

. . .Religion

"The Mutating Arts," co-sponsored by the Humanities Dept., will be held at 8 p.m. Monday in Opperman Music Hall. It is a discussion of what is happening in the various arts, including literature, and the religious significance of these happenings.

Tuesday at noon the last event of the series will be a luncheon co-sponsored by the Faculty Christian Fellowship for faculty members. The topic is "Poetry and Belief." Poetry will be read as a springboard for a discussion of "What difference does a poets' belief make in the kind of poetry he writes?"

Today's News Roundup

Flambeau News Services

WASHINGTON--President Kennedy said at his news conference yesterday that failure by Congress to put through his program of tax reductions and reform would increase the chances of another recession substantially.

The President pointed to 1958, when the surplus expected by President Eisenhower turned instead into a whopping deficit. Kennedy said that was caused by a recession--and said he does not want another. He said current tax laws restrain economic growth and will eventually cause a recession unless corrected. But he conceded his tax program faces a hard fight because, he said, "Reform cuts across dearly held rights of many citizens."

WASHINGTON--The President re-emphasized at his news conference the unemployment combatting angles of his special youth message to Congress yesterday. He said young people no longer in school comprise 18 per cent of the nation's unemployment. He said his youth employment opportunities act will give thousands of young people a chance to find jobs.

WASHINGTON--The President said the government is giving greatest attention to Communist subversion stemming from Cuba to other Latin-American nations. He said the danger is pointed up by a new report from the Organization of American States. He said the U.S. is anxious to halt the flow of persons into Cuba to be trained by the Communists but indicated no course of action.

WASHINGTON--Congressmen reacted sharply yesterday to the United Nations plan to spend over one million dollars on research to aid Cuban agriculture. A Senate investigation was ordered immediately. The rub, is that the U.S. contributes 40 percent to the U.N. Special Fund to be used for the project.

The administrator of the Special Fund, Paul Hoffman, said Wednesday that no American money will go into the Cuban project--indicating it will be financed with non-dollar funds. President Kennedy dismissed questions about it at his news conference yesterday noting this point about no U.S. money.

WASHINGTON--President Kennedy told his news conference he is not considering any reprisals against President de Gaulle of France for bucking U.S. policy on a NATO nuclear force. He said he hopes additional assurances now being drafted will give Europe a greater voice in control of nuclear weapons.

Dr. Pugh Gives English Lecture

Dr. Griffith T. Pugh, professor of English, will review Katherine Anne Porter's novel, "Ship of Fools," at the English Coffee Hour today.

The public is invited to this social literary hour at 4 p.m. in Westminster House. It is sponsored by the FSU English Dept. with Dr. Hudson Rogers as program chairman for the event.

Dr. Pugh will discuss the action of the novel, that takes place largely on the ship "Vera" which makes a 27-day cruise from Veracruz to Bremerhaven, Germany, in the summer of 1931. He will also assess its critical reception and the author's style of writing as she maintains the importance of 20 characters, with none the hero, representing different nationalities; and the social relationships between persons in the enforced association of the ship's company.

'Tiffany's' At Campus Flick

Audrey Hepburn, George Peppard, Buddy Ebsen, and Mickey Rooney star in "Breakfast at Tiffany's," the campus movie to be shown tonight and tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

This gay, sophisticated comedy revolves around the unusual activities of Holly Golightly. Her wits and charm aid her in her adventures with a young writer, a Brazilian billionaire, an ex-mobster, and a Texas horse doctor.

Admission price is 25 cents. Any profit made on the showing will be applied toward the purchase of new projectors.

Fashion Day At FSU

Importance Of Color Stressed

Color television is bringing in a new rainbow-hued world with which the fashion world will have to cope, a speaker said at Fashion Day yesterday.

Miss Jean Olds, who has been responsible for many color trends in the fashion world as fashion consultant in New York, said:

"Our problem in the industry today is to learn how to handle the multicolored world and to teach the customers how to play with color and coordinate colors."

Sponsored by Fashion Institute, Fashion Day was held for the ninth year at FSU. Among the speakers were Miss Lucille Rea, educational director of Simplicity Pattern Co. in New York; Miss Betty Barclay, art director of Rich's in Atlanta, and Mrs. Margaret Newman, fashion designer of New York.

In predicting changes in the next 10 years, Miss Olds said: "In the past, color would sell merchandise. It is my belief however that in the future, color alonewill not sell any more unless the item is well designed.

"In the next 10 years the fashion designer will come more and more into the front. Every company that sells to women will have to have a fashion designer on the staff. This will mean more and more opportunities for women with a fashion background." Another factor leading back to design, the speaker said, is that "many houses are going 'public'; that is, they are going on the stock exchange and must answer to the stockholders."

Miss Olds, also an artist, said the people trained in any of the arts are taught the key to success in any business -- experimentation. She said:

"In our culture today jet-propelled toward perfection, the arts alone allow for mistakes. Art allows individuality: allows the person to experiment, fail and try again and learn from his mistakes." Good sense is one of the most important aspects of the arts, according to Miss Olds, although she said, "often it is thrown out the window."

Thinclads Enter Meet; Duffers Host Jax To Open '63 Season

Twice a winner in the past, Florida State's track team will carry a 16-man squad to Montgomery, Ala., this weekend for the eight annual indoor Coliseum Relays. It's the open-meet for Coach Mike Long's Seminoles, who won the Relays in 1958 and 1959.

Entered in the meet, scheduled for Saturday in the spacious Montgomery Coliseum, will be all 12 Southeastern Conference schools, eight independent colleges and 47 high schools. For the first time, competition will be held on four levels: SEC, independents, high school and college freshmen.

Northeast Louisiana College will be back to defend its title in the college division. Competing with Northeast will be FSU, Georgia State, Troy State, Pensacola Junior College, Chattanooga, Clemson and Mars Hill.

Florida State finished fifth in the meet last Winter, but Long feels his team has an outside chance of winning--despite losing five school record holders and eight other lettermen from 1962, when FSU swept all five of its dual meets.

The Seminoles have six lettermen back--seven, actually, if you want to count ace hurdler Terry Long, eligible only for the indoor season.

Terry is the son of Coach Long, and is FSU's No. 1 hope. A slight (5-7, 155) senior about to run out of eligibility, he holds school records in both hurdles.

Other Seminoles expected to earn points include shot putter Al Williams and broad jumper Herb Kraft, both of Atlanta, Ga., and St. Petersburg's Dick Roberts in the mile and 880.

It'll be a homecoming of sorts for one Seminole. Only Alabaman on the traveling squad is Franklin Ford, a senior pole vaulter from Montgomery.

Jax Here Today

Florida State's golf team opens its 1963 season here Friday afternoon, meeting Jacksonville Navy on the Capital City Country Club course at one o'clock (EST).

The Seminoles, coached by Bill Odeneal, will play a second match Monday when the meet Florida at Gainesville. FSU's record last Spring was 14-3. In the five years Odeneal has been golf coach, FSU has established a 56-23-3 record.

Only two lettermen return for the Seminoles this year, and Odeneal isn't quite sure how good his team will be. "For sure, we'll have less depth than we've had in a long time," he says.

The two lettermen are good ones, however. One is junior Dave Philo of Tallahassee, who averaged 74.3 last year, best on the squad. The other is Doug Davis of Valdosta, Ga., who averaged 76.8 in 1962.

Others expected to be winners this season are Mark Blair of Chicopee Falls, Mass.; Roger Kennedy of Pompano Beach, and Richard Ross of Springfield, Ohio.

Sigma Kappa Slates Annual Variety Show

BY PAT FREEMAN
Asst. News Editor

"Five foot two, eyes of blue. . .but oh what those five feet can do. . . has anybody seen the variety show numbers slated for Saturday's Sigma Kappa Variety Show?"

Answer? Not yet, but the annual affair sponsored by the Sigma Kappa Sorority for Campus Chest will offer an entertaining evening of entries submitted for competition by almost every fraternity and sorority on campus.

Opperman Music Hall discards opera hat and gloves for a bevy of "Gay 20's" Vaudeville ushers in keeping with the theme of this year's show, "Vaudeville's Ville," which will be held Saturday at 8 p.m. in Opperman.

Trophies will be awarded for first and second place in two divisions, one for sororities and the other for fraternities. Where there's a trophy, the judges can't be far behind. . .and the impartial crew for this year's benefit cruise will be: Miss Betty Jane Grimm, School of Music; Dr. Steven Winters, Geology; Dr. William W. Rogers, History Dept.; Miss Frances Cannon, Recreation; and Dean Mode L. Stone, School of Education.

The acts are to be judged on the following points (for students who wish to keep strict accounts of which point went where. . .): (1) audience participation, (2) originality, (3) appropriateness of costume and props and (4) group participation.

If the alluring price of 50 cents for students and 75 cents for non-students isn't enough to create a mad dash for the door Saturday night, then perhaps the thrill of seeing the winners of APO's "Ugly Man on Campus" announced will induce all loathers of beauty to turn out en masse.

This year's production of the Sigma Kappa Variety show is under the direction of Odette Marshall and Charlotte Young, who have indicated that Delta Zeta and Phi Kappa Psi, first place winners in both divisions last year, will be hard pressed to stage a similar "coup de trophie" again!

Cagers Play Last Home Game Tomorrow In Tu

The FSU basketball team will wind up its 1962-63 home schedule Saturday night, when the powerful Phillips 66 Oilers, defending Amateur Athletic Union champions, invade Tully Gymnasium in an attempt to halt the hot streaking Seminoles' victory skein at five games.

The Oilers are comprised of former outstanding college cagers who are hired by the Phillips Petroleum Co. of Bartlesville, Oklahoma. They combine their basketball with executive grooming within the company.

The game is definitely not strange to the Oilers, for they were first organized in 1928. Since their formation, they have established a proud record of 1303 wins against 235 losses, and their competition has come from some of the nation's top amateur and college quintets.

The Oilers are well known for their travels. They have visited 20 foreign countries and practically every state in the union. They are currently on a southern tour that has or will carry them into seven states with 11 days.

The veteran coach of the 66'ers, Bud Browning, carries a roster of 13 men, including eight who made at least one All-American team while they were playing collegiate ball.

Probably the pair who will draw the most attention, however, will be 6-5 forward Don Kojis and 6-9 pivot man Mike Moran. Both are former All-Americans from Marquette University, and lead the team in scoring with a 14.14 and 10.9 average respectively.

Another important figure for the Oilers is 6-5 forward Jerry Shippe. Although Shippe failed to gain any national recognition at tiny Southeastern College, (Okla.), he is the third leading scorer for the 66'ers with his 10.2 clip.

Still another man to watch will be 6-4 guard Larry Pursiful, a rookie, who collegiately played under Adolph Rupp, at the University of Kentucky. Last winter Pursiful was named to several All-American teams, as well as being selected to a coveted first string berth on the SEC all-conference squad. He was tabbed by Rupp last season as "the most underated guard in the nation." Currently, Pursiful is hitting at an 8.9 pace.

According to Browining, the reason for the lack of a prolific scorer is because the Oilers dote on balanced scoring and precise team work.

FSU Coach Bud Kennedy will counter against the taller and more experienced Oilers with his leading scorer, Charlie Long, who will be making his final appearance before the home crowd. Also lending aid will be Jerry Shirley, a hustling 6-5 sophomore who will be out to improve on his 14-point game average.

Kennedy is also counting [illegible] action under the boards [illegible] Huge, while Wally Dale [illegible] Rogers will handle [illegible] chores.

Tankers Meet Gators In Montgomery Pool

Swim teams from Florida and Florida State clash here Saturday night in a lively match starting at 8 p.m. Freshmen teams from both schools will meet at 7 p.m.

Florida State has a 10-3-1 edge in the series -- only team anywhere with an appreciable margin over Florida -- but this is being called the Gator's strongest ever.

Florida Coach Bill Harlan lost only two lettermen from last year, when the Gators finished 13-1 (the loss was to FSU) and took their seventh straight Southeastern Conference championship. Latest SEC statistics showed Florida swimmers topping the league in nine or ten events so far this year. Florida is 4-0.

FSU was crippled when five stars dropped out one week before the season began, but the Seminoles have

The teams split two meets last year, FSU taking a 61-34 decision here and Florida winning by 63-32 in Gainesville. Until that season-ending loss, FSU had topped the Gators eight straight times.

Top individuals so far have been Florida's Terry Green and FSU's Neal Allen. Green, a senior freestyle events. Allen is a sophomore diver from West Palm Beach who has copped his specialty in all five tries as a varsity diver.

Racquettes Battle Jax

The Racquettes, the women's tennis club, will play Jacksonville Saturday, at one p.m. on the Boone Park Tennis Courts.

Seven doubles matches and a singles demonstration set will be played, according to Miss Ann Lankford, assistant professor of physical education and recreation and club adviser. Miss Anne F. Hedgecoth, Boone Park tennis pro, is coach of the Jacksonville group.

Other matches scheduled for the Racquettes include Seabreeze High School on City Island courts in Daytona Beach, Mar. 1; a return match with Rollings College in Winter Park on Mar. 2; Valdosta High School, Mar. 16 at FSU; and University of Florida at Gainesville Mar. 30.

The FSU club will go to Columbus, Miss., Apr. 25-27 for a United States Lawn Tennis Association and Southern Lawn Tennis Association sanctioned tournament to be held on the Mississippi State College for Women campus. Other college entries will be from Arkansas, Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

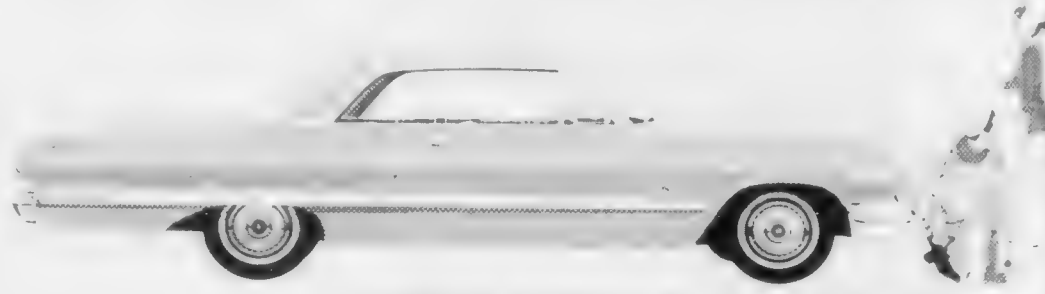
Gymnasts Face Tech Tonight

Expecting a fired-up crew of Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets, the Florida State Gymnastic Team will have a return match with the Techmen tonight at 7:30 in Tully Gymnasium.

In the previous battle, the Jackets were edged by one point, said Coach Joe Gusic of FSU. Gusic said the Seminoles have improved with every workout since the first meeting and the FSU gymnasts should put in a better showing.

Potential 1963 NCAA floor exercise champion Rick Miller will lead the way for the Seminoles, along with Mitch Weinstock and John Kimbrough. Guy (3.5) Atkinson will perform floor exercises, while John Cory will work out on the parallel bars and side horse. George Adcock will climb the rope for the Tribesmen against Tech's highly-touted rope climbing team.

Gusic said a new system of judging will be tried in an effort to solve a controversial problem of scoring.



In addition to the match, an exhibition by Mrs. Ellanor Miller will be given in women's floor exercise.

All Students Urged To Vote Tomorrow

Student Body President Ken Van Assenderp has declared himself out of the current political races. But he urges other students to take an active part.

"I am endorsing no candidate for any office." Van Assenderp said in pulling away from partisan politics.

Van Assenderp, however, strongly urges other students to take part by voting in the coming election.

"Students should take an active part in Student Government politics and to realize the significance to their own welfare of such participation," Van Assenderp said.

He pointed to the tremendous growth of FSU and Student Government as reasons for participating in the coming election.

"Student Government is growing, growing, growing. It is always expanding and improving. Its extremely tangible benefits for the students and the entire university."

"It is of grave importance that all students know this fact and knowing this actively perpetuate this progress, Van Assenderp pointed out. He has no toleration for those who do not vote.

ALL MAY VOTE

All students, including graduate students, may vote in the Student Government Elections to be held tomorrow. Write-in ballots will be made available at the polls.

"I have no patience with individuals who criticize their Government and speak in ignorance of its policies when they continually deprive themselves of access to the true story," Van Assenderp continued.

"Student Government needs your support. I dare you to support it with a vote."

Alabama Debaters Win In 14th Annual Tourney

The University of Alabama won sweepstakes honors in both the senior and junior divisions of FSU's 14th annual invitational debate tournament Saturday.

FSU won second place in both divisions, but the host school was ineligible for a trophy, and second place was assigned to others.

In the senior tournament, second place went to Spring Hill College. The University of Georgia placed third and McNeese State College and the University of Florida tied for fourth.

In the junior division, in which novice debaters and junior college debaters participated, second place went to St. Johns River Junior College, St. Petersburg Junior College copped third place, and Appalachian State College came in fourth.

The tournament featured contests in debate, after-dinner speaking, persuasive speaking and impromptu speaking.

Alabama and FSU tied for first place in the senior debate tourney and St. Johns College was first in the junior debate tourney. Fifteen teams were entered in the senior tournament and 19 in the junior.

Individual first place awards went as follows: Impromptu Speaking, Shelp of Georgia, senior, and Wynns of FSU, junior; After-Dinner, Goodman of McNeese, senior, and Moroney of St. Petersburg, junior; persuasive, Swanson of Alabama, senior, and Benefield of St. Petersburg, junior.

Senior Black Books

Members of Garnet Key will sell Senior Black Books tomorrow at the Student Center voting polls.

Gymkana Tryouts

Tryouts for Gymkana Dancers will be held tomorrow at 4 p.m. in Dr. Hartley Price's office, 123 Tully Gym.

No experience is necessary, Dr. Price said. Those interested should be dressed for dancing at the tryouts. He urged that all interested students attend the tryouts.

'Religion In Life' Series

Walsh Talks Tonight

Dr. Chad Walsh, poet, author, and minister, will discuss "The Mutating Arts," tonight at 8 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

Walsh is visiting speaker in the Religion in Life series. He spoke last night on "The Nightmare and the Mirror."

Tonight's lecture will concern the religious significance of modern developments in the various arts, including literature. It is sponsored jointly with the Humanities Dept.

An informal discussion, "Coffee and Conversation," open to all students and faculty members, will be held in Longmire Club Room this afternoon from 4:15 to 5:15 p.m.

Walsh will speak again tomorrow at a faculty luncheon, in the Suwannee Dining Room from 12 noon to 1 p.m. His topic at that time will be "Poetry and Belief."

One of Walsh's recent books, "From Utopia to Nightmare," is a commentary on Utopian and Anti-Utopian visions of the world and it brings up the q stion of whenter or not man gets tired of happiness. He has written several books of poetry and is founder and member of the editorial board of the "Beloit Poetry Journal."

A minister of the Episcopal Church since 1948, Walsh has lectured in many colleges and universities all over the country. He is professor and chairman of the English Dept. at Beloit College in Wisconsin.

His poems, articles and book reviews have appeared in "The New York Times," "The Saturday Review," "Poetry: A Magazine of Verse" and others. His books include collections of his poetry, a book of literary criticism, a children's novel and books on various aspects of religion.

One of his books, "Stop Looking and Listen," gives an examination of religion in its 20th century setting and is sometimes referred to as a "little primer of the Christian belief."

On May 6 and 7 the Religion in Life Series and the University Lecture Series will sponsor Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, Stated Clerk of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States. His topic will be "The Future of the Church."

Mace To Talk On Soviet Life

Dr. David Mace, a sociologist who founded the British system of marriage counseling, will speak on "The Family in the Soviet Union" tomorrow night.

The public is invited to hear this lecture, which will be at 8:30 p.m. in Room 120, Geology Bldg.

The author of 12 books on the family, Mace and his wife spent a summer in Russia, where they camped in public camp-grounds, talked with Russian families, and observed the divorce courts in action. Their observations will appear soon in a book entitled "Family Life in the Soviet Union."

Besides being authors of such books as "Marriage East and West," "Marriage Counseling," and "Successful Marriage," he also has written many articles for professional journals and popular magazines. His studies include research on Jewish, Caribbean, and Scandinavian families.

The past president of the National Council on Family Relations, he is presently the executive secretary of the American Association of Marriage Counselors, vice president of the International Union of Family Organizations, and a member of the editorial board of "Marriage and Family Living."

Since coming to the United States several years ago, he has been a faculty member of Drew University and the University of Pennsylvania.

Candidates Letters

Smith

To the Editor:

Florida State University has come a long way since its birth thirteen years ago. We have now attained a rightful place among other major universities of the South and nation. We now have the respect of our contemporaries.

We must not only retain this respect, but seek to enlarge it in our efforts to strive for quality education. Students play an important part in winning this respect and securing a place among the nation's best for FSU. Students have a major role in interpreting the meaning of this great educational drive to the citizens of Florida.

We must have a strong, dynamic administration do this.

The time has come for us to decide whether we want complacency or action; movement or stagnation.

In seeking the Presidency of this great Student Body, my objective is to insure a dynamic and productive Student Government, one capable of meriting respect from students, administration, and the outside world. We must be concerned with challenges faced both on campus and off. And we must be willing to labor both day and night to meet and solve problems confronting the Student Body.

It is hopeless to advance projects of benefit to students without the confidence and respect of those being served. The strength and responsibility of our student governing body has been ably demonstrated in the past. But Student Government must continue to be productive and dynamic.

If I have the opportunity to serve you as President, it shall be.

Johnny Smith

Mathis

Fellow Students'

We are now in the midst of an extremely important campaign-- that of electing our Student Government leaders. Our Student Government has established itself as the finest in the Southeast, but only by continuing to elect qualified candidates with a sincere desire to serve can we be assured that Florida State will remain on the top.

I have served you in Student Government in many capacities. I am now serving as Secretary of Senate which has enabled me to become familiar with the legislative branch. During my Freshman and Sophomore years, I worked closely with the Exectuive Branch in the offices of an advisor to the Student Body President and as his Secretary, as well as playing important roles in many other Student Government activities. I am well acquainted with the Executive Branch, I know what the job of Student Body President entails, and I would like very much to serve FSU in this capacity.

I worked too hard and respect FSU and Student Government too much to do anything which would hinder our progress as a Student Government or as a great university. The fact that I am a woman should not influence the way you vote. We worry about trite remarks which the University of Florida makes. If we would stop to think, we would realize that they are acting through immaturity and jealousy. Don't sacrifice Student Government for a few petty comments.

I have worked for you for three years, may I work for the fourth?

Very truly yours,
Jackie Mathis,
Candidate for Student Body President

Proctor

Fellow Students,

I am grateful for this opportunity to let you know why I am a candidate for student body vice president. A primary reason for seeking this office is my deep interest in the progress and and development of this university and its student government and in seeing that both meet the obligations they hold to the student body. Further, I feel that our student body needs and deserves an active, effective, and purpseful student government.

I am well aware of the untold amount of work expected of the vice president of the student body and the many obligations that he himself must meet. I am willing to accept the work and the challenge, and would undertake this job with industry, initiative, and tact.

In my two years at FSU I have served both my class and this university in the following capacities: sophomore class president, presidential student advisory council, public forum committee, university promotions committee, alpha council, family week-end committee, and the student vestry of Ruge Hall.

I feel, however, that my chief qualification is my strong desire to serve you. If this desire were lacking, the other qualifications would be useless. I pledge to you an active and continuing interest in the student government of our university. I pledge to you an open mind, open ears, and a willingness to do a lot of hard work.

Sincerely,
Julian Proctor

Williams

To the Editor:

Based upon my observations during the past three years, I would say that the two most important functions of the Vice President are: Presiding officer of the Senate, and Advisor and assistant to the Student Body President. Accordingly, the person who is to be the Vice President should be one capable of understanding and performing the duties of the office.

At the risk of seeming too preoccupied with my past experiences, I would nevertheless like to mention a few things on my behalf.

This year as a Senator and Presidnet Pro Tem of the Men's Senate, I have had the opportunity to get very well acquainted with the involved operations of the Senate. I have also been in a position to keep a day by day account of the important current events such as Trimester and Honor Court revision.

Through such activities as an Under-Secretary of Welfare, Chairman of Homecoming, President of University Singers, Chairman's assistant of the Speakers' Bureau, and as a District Chairman of the Lobby Committee, I have been able to keep in touch with the activities going on in the Executive branch and about the University (as well as in Student Government.

Because I honestly feel that I have the experience and ability to do the job, but more important, because I want very much the chance to do the job, I would really appreciate your serious consideration of me as a candidate for the office of Student Body Vice President.

The Unemployed Are Lonely

Being only twenty-one years old, I have no personal recollection of the great depression. What knowledge I have of those anguished years has been gleaned from history books, my parents, and an occasional late, late show on television. My appreciation of the despair--the mass degradation--was therefore superficial. Little did I realize, however, that my recently interrupted college education would be supplemented by a glimpse into the past.

Following the advice of one Horace Greeley, who, by the way, is dea now, I headed westward toward the golden lure of Southern California, only to find myself in one of the worst areas of unemployment in the country. I would like to briefly describe to you, the sensation of changing from apple-cheeked college student to wizened old man-of-the-world in six weeks' time. Seriously, before you pick up your scriptos in anger, I would like to hastily assure you that I am far from being an embittered prophet. It's just that I feel the transition from the FSU cloud, where all things are beautiful and all reason esthetic to a world where most things are not beautiful and no reason seems to exist warrants description, and so I shall attempt to re-enter the cloud, dragging my string of smelly fish behind. Pardon the stench.

The awful thing about unemployment is the loss of self respect. It seeps away little by little, with the passing of every jobless day. If the person involved has a wife and children, the loss is greater, and the frsutration of being unable to provide your family with the best evidences itself is real pain. The only solvent for this constant anguish is hope--hope that comes with every new edition of the evening newspaper. Each day is mapped out according to the want-ads.

Morning in the city witnesses an invasion by the surging army of the unemployed. With their newspapers tucked under their arms, they come by the hundreds in wel!-worn business suits and re-shined shoes. One-by-one the possibilities are explored. Some of the ads, such as those that leave only a phone number as reference, turn out to be glorified "come-ons" for such no-money positions as a door-to-door salesman or a used-car shark. But when an honest opportunity is clearly portrayed in the classified section, the response is overwhelming. I once found myself competing for a dish-washing job with thirty other men ranging in age from 18-50 years. These clusters of waiting, wishing men are enough to tear your heart out. They tend to be silent, suspicious, and regard each other stiffly with flickering, sidewise glances. Real panic drives them to maintain an air of dog-eat-dog determination. In many cases, they have seen each other before, answering previous opportunities in stong silence.

To the unemployed, certain aspects of their daily life boom completely out of all perspective. Potential employers, for example, seem like giants, quaking the earth with their booming, trained voices. A few of these men attempt to affect the image of a football coach or a top sergeant. Persons that are new to pavement-pounding find these tactics of shock and veiled insult very distressing, but to the veteran job-hunter, the "I'm-a-man-are-you" appraoch usually means that the interviewer is trying to cover up soemthing about the position in question. Personnel interviewers from well-established concerns such as IBM, for example, tend to be courteous and relaxing, and therefore find out more about the applicant as he really is.

Then there are the angels of mercy--the haggard but undaunted workers at the California State Employment Agency. Despite the fact that they are swamped by an overwhelming tide of persons in various stages of desperation, they somehow age to be sympathetic towa new case. They seem to pull obs out of thin air.

And so the day is spent am giants--seeking, hoping At the end of the day one rid in the grey dusk, staring wi at the throngs that rush home f full day's work.

The unemployed feel the s loneliness that only they can Some return home to kindly tives who are helping them this crisis. Others return boardinghouse rooms. But where they go, all spend the night in the hoping, fearing, worrying--but er sleeping.

None Have Volunteered

To the Editor:

Paul Steel writes in his column, "No One to Debate Lewis?" that the faculty then (should debate him) as one supposes they have a professional commitment to the truth. Here's the rub of a debation professor: being ideologically joined to the pursuit of truth they are ill-equipped to oppose an ideology that claims all the truth. "Why is the faculty 'ill-equipped'", Mr. Steel? If, in their search for the truth, members of the faculty have discovered that there are fallacies in Mr. Lewis' conservative position, who would better be able to expose these fallacies in debate? On the contrary, a faculty member would best be equipped to debate Fulton Lewis III. Unfortunately, none have volunteered.

AROUND THE WORLD

WEST BERLIN--Mayor Willy Brandt has led his Social Democratic Party to a landslide victory in city elections. The Socialists took 85 seats in the city parliament, while the Christian Democrats--the party of West German Chancellor Adenauer--got 39 seats, and the free democrats won ten. The Communists were shut out.

TRINIDAD--Two U.S. destroyers have left Trinidad to join pursuit of the hijacked Venezuelan freigher "Anzoategui." The leftist hijackers continue on course toward Brazil, ignoring planes tracking them from the sky. American ships reportedly have no orders to stop and board the pirated ship. Venezuelan destroyers also are in the chase. The hijackers apparently hope to reach port in Brazil and gain political asylum before they are intercepted at sea.

NEW YORK--U.N. delegate Adlai Stevenson said the 17,000 Soviet troops in Cuba are not a military threat to the U.S. nor the rest of the hemisphere. But he adds "if we could remove these troops, however, it would reduce the anxiety that exists in this continent about Communism."

WASHINGTON--Democratic Senator William Fulbright of Arkansas, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Republican critics are partisan and ridiculous when they say Soviet troops in Cuba endanger U.S. security. He mentions Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York and Senators Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Barry Goldwater of Arizona. Fulbright said it is ridiculous to stir up the country as if it were about to be over-run.

TRENTON--Six Negro partents have ended a sit-in demonstration in Trenton, N.J., outside the office of Governor Richard Hughes. They were demonstrating against what they call racial imbalance in public schools of Englewood, a suburb of New York City. They criticize the New Jersey governor for what they all "inaction."

Oilers Lubricate Tribe 82 - 73

By JOHNNY DAVIS
Flambeau Sports Writer

The talent-laden Phillips 66 Oilers jumped to a quick 3-0 lead Saturday night, and then remained in the drivers seat the rest of the way to down FSU's determined but luckless Seminoles, 82-73, before 3,000 fans in Tully Gymnasium.

The 66er's with this contest, completed a successful tour of the sunshine state that included victories over Stetson and Jacksonville University besides the thumping administered to the Tribesmen. The victory over Jacksonville Friday night was by the whooping margin of 115-57.

The NCAA officials ruled the game an exhibition because of the Oilers non-collegiate status, so Seminoles victory string of 5 games and their 14-9 record will remain intact. However, the Oilers, who do consider the clash valid, hiked their season won-lost mark to 24-2.

Game scoring honors went to Phillips' 6-5 forward Don Kojis who ripped the cords for 22 points. Kojis, a former All-American at Marquette University also was the top rebounder for both teams with nine.

Mike Moran, another Marquette alumni, was close behind his former collegiate teammate with 19 markers. Jerry Shipp, a 6-5 jump shot artist found the range for 15 points to round out the top scorers for the victors.

Connecting on 9 of 13 tries from the floor, FSU's 6-5 sophomore pivot-man Jerry Shirley led the way with 18 points. However, he had 3 teammates in double digits besides himself.

Charlie Long bade the home crowd farewell with a fine 17 point effort, and juniors Dale Reeves and Pete Rogers contributed 13 markers each.

Reeves made his usual Saturday night substitution appearance midway through the first half, and quickly slipped in 9 points to help bring the Seminoles within 2 at halftime, 40-38.

Besides scoring 13 points and copping rebound honors for his team with 7, Rogers proved to be an excellent floor general, leading the tribesmen with real authority.

Although FSU never had the lead they stayed with striking distance throughout the entire first half, and twice cut the lead to a scant 2 points. Both times, however, the Oilers would get out of danger, capitalizing on Seminole bucket's by their veteran performers.

The longest lead the visitors could ever muster during the initial stanza was only 5 points, which was achieved twice.

Roaring back strong after the halftime break, the Oilers quickly stretched their 2 point lead to 9, 57-48, before Charlie Long found the bullseye on a looping jump shot to narrow the lead to 57-50. Ten seconds later, with the clock showing 12:01 left to be played, Long duplicapted the feat, and the score stood 57-52.

After Moran sank a charity toss for the Oilers, Jerry Shirley drilled a 20 footer to give the tribesmen their slimmest deficit of the second half, 58-54.

Then the Oilers began to pull away on successive buckets by Kojis and Denny Price, and with 6:51 remaining in the contest, the Oklahomians owned their biggest bulge of the evening, 73-58.

A late surge by the host quintet pulled them within 5 points, 78-73, with 2:13 to go, but Moran and Shipp each fired in 2 buckets and a free throw apiece, and the victory was intact.

Statistic-wise, the Oilers came out on top in everything but free throw percentage. From the charity stripe, the Seminoles sank 76 percent while the 66er's could connect on only 69.2 per cent of their attempts.

The visitors out rebounded and out shot the hosts, though. While the Oilers were grabbing 49 rebounds, the tribesmen were closse behind with 15. The same situation also holds true for fiedld goal accuracy. the Oilers popped the nets on 45.7 per cent of their tries, and the Seminoles hit on 43.3 percent of their shots.

The presence of the Phillips 66er's enabled the local fans to view a rugged man to man defense and also gave them a chance to watch smooth, well-coordinated offensive patterns that are similiar to those used by the pro-cubs of the NBL.

The Seminoles have two more games remaining on their schedule, and both are next week on the road against NIT bound Miami, and the University of Tampa. In previous meetings this winter, the tribe smashed Tampa in their season and slipped by opener, Miami 77-74 in an exciting overtime victory in January.

In a prelude to the main tilt, the FSU coaching staff (plus Dave Fedor) edged the top cage talent of the Seminole football team, 44-43, on Dave Fedor's short jumper with 3 seconds left in the contest.

The mentors, who were in command 23-20 at intermission, were paced by Fedor and Hugh Durham, two former FSU hardwood greats. Fedor came through with 20 points to capture game scoring laurels, and Durham pushed in 7 markers to rank second on the tutors tally chart.

Fred Biletnikoff, a 6-1 end turned torward, was on the top of the footballers scoring 11 points. Steve Tensi's 9 markers were good enough to earn him runnersup spot in that department for his squad.

Gators Dunk Seminoles By 56-39, Setting 6 Records In The Process

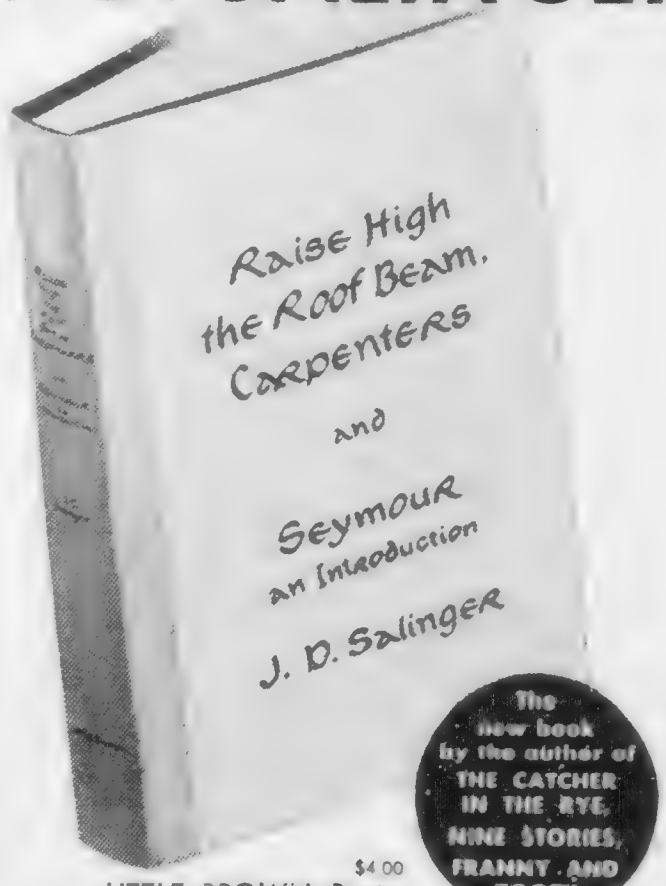
Florida State fought the University of Florida down to the wire Saturday evening, but the amphibians from Gainesville proved themselves too much for the Seminole mermen. The Gators broke six records in winning the meet held in Montgomery Gym, 56-39.

Leading 44-35 with 2 events left, the Florida splashed the meet wide open by outscoring the waterlogged Seminoles 12-4 in the last two events. The Gators won a total of nine events in defeating FSU for only the fourth time in 15 dual meets.

The Seminoles now stand 4-2 for the season while the undefeated gators are at 5-0.

Jerry Livingston of Florida set a new NCAA record in the 200 yard butterfly with a clocking of 2:03.6 breaking the old mark by two-tenths of a second. Florida State's lone record was set in the 500 yard freestyle by Gene Dayton with a time of 5:51.9. Dayton broke his own record which he had written in the school recordbooks earlier this year at 5:46.7.

The FSU frosh won the preliminary 51-44 to jack their record to 3-0 while handing the Gator yearlings the first defeat in three dual meets.



The top individual in the varsity meet was Neal Allen of FSU who won the diving honors for the sixth straight time this year.

ecord Voter Turnout Expected

All Election stories by Lynn Bissland
Flambeau Staff Writer

"A record turnout is anticipated at the polls today for the annual Student Body Elections," Ron Jones, Secretary of Elections, said. This interest has been aroused by the intensified competition created as a result of the two-party system.

"We are now in a period of change because this is the first time we have had a two-party system in effect. It is causing some difficulty because of lack of precedent in handling the situation," said Jones.

"However the parties have been doing an excellent job in promoting an interest in the elections and in student government. As the two-party system continues to function, the competition will be greater and the slate of candidates will be even more select."

The polls will be open today from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. They will be located in Westcott across from the Ticket Office, at the Seminole Club, in front of the Library, at the Student Center, and at Smith Hall.

Sophomore Council members will act as poll workers at all polls. Each student must present his I.D. card in order to vote.

For the first time the election returns will be broadcast by radio station WTNT. Their coverage is scheduled to begin at 4:55 p.m. and will continue until the final results are announced.

TAKE YOUR PICK

Kelley Reid is running for Chief Justice of Honor Court. Reid is a member of Honor Court, Gold Key, Omicron Delta Kappa, and vice president and colonizer of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

Miss Jan Warren and David Wiles will vie for the office of Clerk of the Honor Court. Miss Warren has served one semester on Traffic Court and is a member of Sophomore Council. She is presently Activities Chairman of Delta Zeta sorority and a "Flambeau" staff reporter.

Wiles is a member of Sophomore Judiciary Council, Scabbard and Blade, officer in Delta Tau Delta.

Student Body President Ken van Assenderp changed his tune yesterday.

"Yesterday's article in the "Flambeau" was not accurate representation of my feelings. Although I am endorsing no candidate for any office in today's elections, I am definitely campaigning for one candidate for the office of Student Body President," said van Assenderp.

Phyllis Doud is the UP candidate for Secretary of the Senate. Miss Doud is presently secretary of Alpha Chi Omega sorority, vice president of Tarpon Club, and a junior counselor. She is former clerk typist for the state of Pennsylvania Agriculture Dept. and has served on several Student Government committees.

Board of Publications positions will be sought by Lana Murray and Bob Foss. Miss Murray is News Editor of the Flambeau, Mortar Board treasurer, News Assistant for a commercial newspaper, president of her scholarship house and vice president of the Foundation Scholarship Organization. Foss has had two years of experience on the Tennessee Tech newspaper and year-book. He is presently Greek Editor of the "Tally-Ho" and a columnist for the Flambeau.

FSU Concert Band Performs Tonight

The Concert Band, conducted by Robert T. Braunagel, will present a concert at Florida State University's Opperman Music Hall tonight.

The program by the 90-musician band will be at 8:15 p.m. The concert is open to the public.

The program will open with Entrance and March of the Peers from "Iolanthe" by Arthur Sulivan. It will be followed by a number by Bach, "Raymond" (The Queen's Secret) Overture by Ambrose Thomas, and "Emperor Valse" by Strauss.

Six clarinetists will perform "Etude Caprice Solo for B Clarinet with Band" by M. Moszkowski, arranged by George Waln. They are John Ballard, Barney Ingram, Jim McDaniel, Steve Ogilvie, Jim St. Clair and Karen Simmons.

After intermission the band will play "Brass Aflame" by John Cacavas; "Windjammer" by Morton Gould; two preludes by Shostakovitch; "Tango for Band" by Glenn Osser and the first movement of "American Symphonette No. 2" by Morton Gould.

A double cornet quartet will perform "Cornet Carillon" by Ronald Binge. They are David Burnett, Bill Flowers, Bob Harvey, Larry Lake, Anita Luscomb, Tom Rhea, Harry Wells and Richard Yost.

FSU Receives Safety Award

Florida State University has received a special recognition award as a part of the 1962 Fire Prevention Contest.

Percy Bugbee, general manager of the National Fire Protection Association, said Oklahoma State University was the only other university in the United States to receive such an award.

The judges of the contest lauded FSU and Safety Officer William H. Watson for programs emphasizing life as well as property safety.

Champion Gives Last Lecture

Dr. John E. Champion, vice president of FSU, will be the speaker in Mortar Board's Last Lecture series in Opperman Music Hall at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

A professor of accounting, Champion took over his duties as vice-president for administration last September. He has been a member of the faculty since 1956 and was assistant dean of the School of Business before assuming his present duties.

A native of Chipley, Ga., Champion received his B.B.A. degree in accounting from the University of Georgia in 1942. He received the M.B.A. degree in economics from Georgia in 1949 and in 1960 received the Ph.D. degree in business administration from the University of Michigan.

He is the author with Dr. Homer A. Black of a widely used college textbook, "Accounting in Business Decisions."

The Mortar Board Last Lecture Series features talks by distinguished professors of the kind they would give if the lectures were their last to a class of students.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Any senior who ordered a 1963 "Tally Ho" and has changed his home address since September should notify the "Tally Ho," Room 18 Longmire.

An Unlamented End

(reprinted from "McGILL DAILY", McGill University, Montral, Canada)

Five years seven months and twenty-six days after it was voted into office by the Canadian people, the government of John Diefenbaker, torn by internal dissension, condemned before the whole world for its fatuous blundering over the defence issue and despised, according to every available indication, by the overwhelming majority of the nation, has lost the confidence of the House of Commons. Defeat came almost as an anticlimax after a week of crises that saw the resignation of one cabinet minister, the apparent defection of several more, and the hourly expectation of an end to the most dismally ineffectual parliament since Confederation. It was obvious towards the end that the Prime Minister, faced with certain disaster in the inevitable election, was holding grimly to the remnants of his office as the reality of power collapsed around his ears. He hoped, as he always has hoped, that "tomorrow" would bring some unforeseen improvement in the situation, but the inevitable caught up with him. The Prime Minister who procrastinated with regard to every major decision required of him in nearly six years of office, denied himself even the possibility of securing a dissolution of the House before defeat overtook him.

The story of John Diefenbaker was not tragedy in the classic sense, for the dimensions of the protagonist were lacking. It varied rather from melodrama to farce. The end was a sordid one for a Prime Minister who had aspired to emulate Macdonald. He had seemed, for a time, to capture the imagination of the Canadian people as only one statesman does in a generation. He failed to grapple with the problems which they expected him to solve. He survived the 1962 election, which his party ran second in the popular vote, owing to the unforeseen rise of Social Credit in Quebec which denied the Liberals their expected support from that province. He can hardly survive the next one.

History will judge John Diefenbaker, and it will not judge him kindly. He campaigned on his claim to have restored the health of the economy a week before he was forced to reveal the most serious monetary crisis of our generation. He muttered impressively about the need for national unity, and dismissed on inquiry into English-French relations as a waste of time. He made procrastination a way of life. He thundered denunciation of Communism, which he combatted by sowing discord in the Western alliance and evolving a defence policy so esoteric that his own Minister of National Defence proved unable to understand it. Though the skies darkened his excuse was the same, yesterday, and today, and forever. It was not he, the Prime Minister, who was responsible for the country's problems. It was the "old gang", the bureaucrats, the "socialists in disguise", and of course the Americans, who frustrated his plans to bring light to the universe. History will dismiss these as the excuses of a charlatan. We are content to let the Canadian people judge them in the approaching election.

YAF Lacks Perspective

Last Friday I pointed out what I thought was a paradoxical position for certain members of YAF to be taking. The question I asked at the end of that article was, in effect, how do YAF members rationalize their acceptance of the Constitution as a theoretical document approaching perfection, and their intensd, and in some cases fanatical, attacks on almost every branch of Federal government that the Constitution sets up?

Why do many of these students feel that America has somehow abandoned her heritage and is now sinking into the "bog" on "liberal-socialist" governmental control? The answer lies, I feel, in the misunderstanding that members of the Young Americans for Freedom have in reference to both the concepts of "freedom and American."

I get the impression from their literature that an American is more than just a citizen of the United States. An American is someone who also holds certain common ideals and values that are ibly--with those of the Founding Fathers (as interpreted by YAF?).

And freedom is that which is defined by the "Sharon Statement." Both these concepts are, I fear, quite sick. Freedom is not to be contained within the confines of te ideology of any group, nor is the term "American" (which functions as real American) even capable of a precise formulation-- outside of the legal definition.

YAF, I am forced to conclude, is suffering from a [illegible] with student gro[illegible] spective. The members of [illegible] ganization with [illegible] any contact rarely see the [illegible] ility that anything [illegible] from their opposition. A [illegible] defined political philosophy practically bases itself on "[illegible] revelation dominates the thi[illegible] the group.

Of [illegible] then many people would [illegible] YCASS was confused about the [illegible] ing of the term "conservative" suppose that the only term that could ever use without someo[illegible] jecting would be "young."

Britain's Common Market Bid Not Vetoed

To The Editor:

In the past few weeks Charles De Gaulle has been the presses "whipping boy" for reasons that are unfounded and biased. The recent rejection of Britain's bid to enter the Common Market has stirred the public's wrath to a unique height of petty hate.

The newspapers of the U. S. have reported the facts, but as is true so much of the time, they have printed them only in part. The true story is that De Gaulle did not reject British entry into the Common Market, he vetoed their "full membership" and approved their "associate membership", which would lead to full membership in the near future.

It is common belief that De Gaulle acted on purely political motives which is again untrue. Political motives played a large part, but Britain had given De Gaulle more than enough reasons for rejection: (1) Britain had not fulfilled membership requirements, (2)MacMillan betrayed De Gaulle at Nassau by telling him that France and Britain should pool nuclear knowledge one week and then letting the U. S. ram the Polaris submarine deal down their throats the next week at Nassau, thus casting doubt on their political sincerity, (3) Britain's refusal to join the European Coal and Steel Community in 1950 which was the embryonic stage of the Common Market, (4) the haughty British rejection of the invitation to sign the Tr[illegible] of Rome in 1957 which formed Common Market, (5) Britain's tempt to cripple or kill the Com[illegible] Market by instigating the forma[illegible] of the European Free Trade Ass[illegible] iation (Outer Seven).

The aforementioned facts have [illegible] lost in the deluge of news items w[illegible] the U. S. public has eaten, diges[illegible] and regurgitated in the form of [illegible] right disdain toward one of the [illegible] statesmen of our times. It is [illegible] time that the U.S. realized tha[illegible] can no longer push Europe aro[illegible] and put each country into its pr[illegible] niche as part of our "grand desig[illegible] Europe is not ungrateful but it [illegible] have its pride and rightly so.

Charles De Gaulle has done no[illegible] illegal or unjust; he has finally st[illegible] ped the U. S. and Britain right sm[illegible] on their nuclear noses as sugge[illegible] that both retire and reassess the s[illegible] uation. U.N. Has Both Good And Bad

To The Editor:

Glory be for those like Mr. Dennis Anson who see things as eight black or white for without them think of the world-wide boredom of rational thinking that would now prevail.

Regarding the United Nations, it has both its good and its bad points as we have all seen and anyone looking at only one side of this: or any other situation is of the same apparent age as is Mr. Anson. ("There is a man. Look, Look, Look. . .") ...gressional ... dealing with ...ational measures are currently ...ving the trimester system of ...ege attendance to see if federal ...g could spur greater ac- ... the ... system.

...trimester, ... solution to the ...ical classroom shortage brought ... the recent ... population ... has been getting more and ... ... Washington, as a ... means of meeting the prob- ... spending millions for con- ... struction of new facilities. The trimester system allows colleges and universitities to make the most efficient use of their sprawling physicla plants -- and makes it possible for the hurried student to graduate in three years instead of the normal four.

Getting special study is an experiment at the University of Pittsburgh, where the system was pioneered. In 1959, university officials there divided an 11-month academic year into three 15 week periods. Students there had the choice of being graduated after eight consecutive trimesters (two and two thirds years) with only one month in vacations, or in eight non-consecutive trimesters with a trimester vaction each year, requiring the traditional four years.

It was also discovered that many of the faculty liked the new system. They could work 11 months of the year, save their money (which they got more of), and take their accumulated normal time off for one long vacation trip or research project. Or, they could teach only two trimesters a year if they so desired, keeping the normal schedule of university teaching.

The results of the Pittsburgh experiment and its pros and cons are being studied by Earl J. McGrath, former US Commissioner of Education. McGrath, now head of the Institute for Higher Education, and Thad Hungate, former business manager of Columbia Teacher's College, have researched the idea in their new book, "Proposal for a New Trimester-Three year Degree Program," soon to be published.

The biggest "con" expressed toward the trimester system has come from educators who are already worried about the hectic, modern "educational rat race," with the student tending to become a number in a gigantic educational machine. But many students, expecially those from lower income families, welcome the possibility of getting through college as quickly and cheaply as possible. Older persons wanting to obtain or finish a degree also think highly of the system.

Officials concerned with federal aid to higher education think the trimester system enables the professor to divide his time more equally between teaching and research or writing, thus helping to correct what they assert is an imbalance of research over lecturing in many science departments.

They also point to the soundness of making full use of an expensive educational plant. It is estimated that the trimester system will allow most colleges to cut the per capita cost of education by at least six per cent.

Hardest hit by the trimester system is the old "Rah-Rah" type of college life. Some backers say that the trimester actually increases student participation in extra-curricular activities, since there is no long summer vacation to destroy the consistency of programming in and among student organizations.

Students Attend Law Conclave

FSU had the largest delegation of Pre-Law students at a Pre-Law Convention held in Gainesville at the University of Florida this past weekend, when 18 FSU students attended the convention.

The convention had a statewide representation of all the major educational institutions in Florida, and the purpose was for the organization and promotion of a statewide educational pre-law society in the state.

Radford Bishop, president of the chapter, and Roger McDonald, who serves as vice president of the FSU chapter, is the organizer and coordinator of pre-law societies for northwest Florida.

Chad Walsh Speaks

'Nightmare And The Mirror'

By JANE FRANZINO
Flambeau Staff Writer

Man has a desire to return home; we are all exiles and displaced persons living in a world of thistles, Dr. Chad Walsh said Sunday night in the Religion-in-Life Series lecture.

Dr. Walsh, editor, writer, speaker and professor and chairman of the English Dept. of Beloit College, Wis., delivered a lecture entitled "The Nightmare and the Mirror" dealing with the utopian and "distopian" novels of our time.

The "distopian" novels, explained Dr. Walsh, tell of the utterly imperfect worlds of mens' minds. They express the effects of a socialistic or totalitarian society in which man's goodness and rationalism is not counted on.

He stated that utopian novels are dwindling and the "distopian" novels are taking their place. The latter is exemplified by "1984," "Brave New World," "Love Among the Ruins," and "We."

Some recurring themes of distopian novels cited by Dr. Walsh are hostility towards nature and the human body; idolatry, as in the worship of Big Brother; law of reverse effect: when man tries too hard for someting, he gets the opposite; and the saving remnant, the creative minority.

Dr. Walsh concluded his lecture by quoting Thoreau, "One man with God is a majority of one."

Pyles Talks On Folklore

"Linguistic Folklore" will be discussed by Dr. Thomas Pyles, professor of English at the University of Florida, who will be American Studies Lecture Series speaker Wednesday.

The lecture, at 7:30 p.m. in the Library Lecture Hall, is open to the public. Dr. William Randel, professor of English at FSU, is program director.

Pyles, a faculty member of UF since 1948, has written many articles on American speech and the book "Words and Ways of American English."

He attended the University of Maryland, University of Chicago and Cambridge University, and received the Ph.D. degree from Johns Hopkins University. He has served on the faculties of the University of Maryland and the University of Oklahoma and in 1956-57 was on a Fulbright in Germany at Gottingen. From 1960-62 he served as president of the American Dialect Society.

Reservation Prepares For Spring

As Winter reluctantly lifts his soggy feet from the wet clay of Tallahassee to make room for Miss Spring, what can students of FSU do as a token of their appreciation for the arrival of warmer weather?

Why not try the Reservation? So what if you can't swim... there are other activities in the way of sports, with equipment maintained for student's use.

The Reservation is located at Lake Bradford, and is open while school is in session. The hours are: Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m. until sunset; Tuesday through Friday, 2 p.m. until sunset and the area is closed on Mondays.

The waterfront is usually open from April through October, but the hours will vary with the seasons, so check the bulletin boards located at the camp for schedules. Watercraft are available for use at the boat house and may be used upon passing a safety and skill test to the satisfaction of the lifeguards on duty.

If you skin your shin while executing a difficult nose-dive upon the swimming boards, first aid stations are located at the boathouse.

Now, if you forget your date (a more serious problem), then pay telephones are found on the back porch of the Resident Director's cottage.

For a picnic, there are tables provided, and there is even a sheltered picnic area in case of rain. Groups larger than 15 should reserve space for their baskets in advance to avoid conflicts.

Miss Jane Adams, director of Longmire Bldg. , issues permits for the use of cabins at the Reservation. Cabins? Yes, and they are rented at the following fees per night: Cabin 2, $4; Cabin 4, $5; Cabins 6 and 7, $2. For individuals, such as members of visiting athletic teams, the charge is $1.50 per night per person. These cabins are for the use of student groups who are properly chaperoned (and who have paid the charges in advance).

Mrs. Ruth DeKalb, resident director for the Reservation, has said that many students don't use the cabins because there is a lack of information concerning the rules and regulations.

The procedure for obtaining a cabin are as follows: All groups, for social affairs , for overnight groups, or for individual housing, must have chaperones. Next, the plans for use must have the approval of the Director of Social Activities, Room 19, Longmire before a permit can be issued. Names of the chaperones must be on the permit.

The gate to the Reservation closes at sunset, except when the camp or its cabins are reserved for groups. Arrangements should be made in advance with the Resident Director for the gatekeeper to admit late arrivees or those who wish to leave before 7 a.m.

Overnight groups should arrive at 7 p.m. and remain until 6 a.m. Check-out time is 10 a.m.

Approved social affairs may last until 9 p.m. during the week, and until midnight on Saturday and Sunday.

For students remaining overnight in the cabins, a few rules for leaving the cabins in order are: (a) the kitchens must be clean, with no food left in refrigerators or elsewhere, (b) garbage and refuse must be placed in covered cans outside the kitchens, and (c) fires must be extinguished and covered over.

Along with these specific rules comes the old familiar rule saying: NO SMOKING in the dormitory areas of cabins and please check to be sure all equipment borrowed from the camp facilities is returned.

If a group leaves any personal belongings behind, they will be kept by Mrs. DeKalb for 30 days, and then turned over to the Lost Found Dept. in Longmire.

So, as spring and sum approach, with the inevitable sp fever felling students by the h reds, why not pay homage to coming fair weather by using Reservation's facilities, paid and maintained for your use by

WASHINGTON--President Kennedy suddenly called Congressional leaders of both parties to a White House meeting last night. The White House says various matters are to be discussed, but the emphasis will be on international affairs. No details are given. And White House News Secretary Salinger declined to say whether emphasis will be primarily on Cuba.

WASHINGTON--A group of investigating Senators demands the U.S. do everything possible to halt a planned U.N. agricultural grant to Cuba. Word then came through that the project could still be cancelled. Paul Hoffman, the American who manages the U.N. Special Projects Fund, says a team of U.N. specialists will determine whether the project is feasible in view of Cuba's Communist methods.

NEW YORK--The Venezuelan frieghter hijacked by Venezuelan Leftists has anchored in Brazilian waters. Captors of the ship have asked for political asylum in Brazil. And Brazilian vessels have been sent out to escort the ship to port at Belem.

ATLANTA--A Federal Appeals Court in Atlanta has denied a motion by Negro Dewey Greene for an order admitting him to the University of Mississippi for the spring semester. The Court ordered a halt to further proceedings until Greene uses up administrative remedies by appealing to the Committee on Admissions of the University.

LONDON--Britain and five of its six partners in the European Free Trade Association have decided to put off efforts to join the European Common Market. Only Australia decided to pursue efforts to enter the Market, with the okay of the others. The other nations at the Geneva meeting with Britain were Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, and Portugal.

Self Receives Religious Award

Bob Self, a senior, received the 1963 Blanche Kingery Carroll award for outstanding leadership in religious affairs at FSU.

The award was set up in 1960 by Judge K. Carroll in memory of his mother, the late Blanche Kingery Carroll of Jacksonville.

Self, past vice president of the University Religious Council, was selected by a committee to receive the $100 award. It was presented by Dean of Students R.R. Oglesby at the opening Religion-in-Life Series lecture this week.

His name, along with that of three previous recipients, will be inscribed on the Blanche Kingery Carroll Memorial Award plaque which remains on permanent display in Longmire Building.

A leader on the FSU campus in many activities, Self was recently tapped for Omicron Delta Kappa, an organization for junior and senior men recognized for outstanding leadership, and he is in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. He is a member of a French honorary and in the University Honors Program in English.

Garnet Key Elects Officers

Beth Ann LeGate was elected president of Garnet Key, as 15 coeds were initiated into the campus women's honorary.

Other officers elected were Pat Doomar, vice president; Betty Ann Eastridge, secretary; Texas Wiltshire, treasurer; Pat Melton, social chairman; Joyce Killian, historian; Jackie Mathis, ritual chairman, and Ruthie Williams, publicity chairman.

Initiated were Barbara Hornbeck, Bobbi Darraugh, Jackie Mathis, Alice Marshall, Betsy Boote, Jean Fountain, Bobbsie Carlton, Linda Duyck, Ruth Jane Williams, Van Miller, Bobbie Lou Kaminis, Texas Wiltshire, Marsha Orth, Joyce Killian and Barbara Boerma.

Dr. Janet Wells, head of the Women's Physical Education Dept., was initiated as an honorary member.

Pre-Natal Study Underway

Forty-five expectant mothers report to a laboratory weekly for two hours to have the kicks, squirms, wriggles and even hiccups of their unborn offspring recorded.

The mothers are all co-operating in a research study of the relationship between the activity of the unborn baby and its neuromuscular development after birth.

Dr. C. Etta Walters of FSU's Institute of Human Development who is conducting the study said that although there is much scientific information available about the child after it is born, "there is a lack of pre-natal information." Recent Thalidomide incidents pointed out the need for the accumulation of more scientific information on pre-natal influences, according to the researchers.

"Much of today's thinking in regard to prenatal and postnatal development is based on a study done some 24 years ago at the Felds Institute at Antioch, Ohio," Dr. Walters said. This used 12 mothers and one test of the babies.

The Tallahassee expectant mothers are reporting to the neuro-physiolovelopment Institute in a repetition of this experiment using a larger number of mothers and more tests on the babies.

Babies will be brought to the laboratory for testing at the age of three, six and nine months. The findings will then be correlated with the fetal activity reported by the mothers before birth.

"The research opens up possibilities of predicting post-natal development," Dr. Walters said, "and it could establish the groundwork for future research on the factors that affect fetal movements."

Working under a grant of $4,025 from the National Institutes of Health, Dr. Walters will be assisted in the research by Doris Stein and Carol Y. Smith. Filiz Balkir of Istanbul, Turkey, graduate assistant in the Institute of Human Development, will do the Gesell Developmental Tests on the babies.

IS THIS YOUR SHIRT?

If so, Miss Afflerbach will send you your [EAGLE SHIRTMAKERS SINCE 1881] label

THIS is a two-color striped button-down shirt designed and tailored by Eagle Shirtmakers and sold everywhere by fine men's stores. Many of them admire our shirts so much they sell them under their own names. High praise indeed, and we should like to reciprocate by advertising their (our) shirts. But it's hard to know just where to start. Obviously we can't say things like "None Genuine Without This Label" when they are all quite genuine, you know. And it would be silly to say "Try An Eagle Shirt Today!" when it is likely you already have a drawerful; even though you didn't know it until just this minute. So all we can suggest is that you send in for your Eagle label. Write Eagle Shirtmakers, Quakertown, Pennsylvania; Attention Miss Afflerbach.

Best Independent

Tracker- Finish 1st

Although painfully not a member of the Southeastern Conference, Florida State opened its 1963 track schedule Saturday afternoon by finishing with the best score in the SEC indoor track meet in the Montgomery (Ala.) Coliseum.

Coach Mike Long's Seminoles' record 35 points to far outdistance the highest Southeastern Conference competitor, The Tribesmen easily led the independents.

Louisiana State University captured the SEC laurels Saturday afternoon, but it took a last minute effort to edge hard-pressing Alabama out of the way.

LSU's score was 29 points, which was six markers less than the Seminoles. Alabama was second in the SEC with 27 points, followed by Mississippi State with 25; Auburn University with 24; the University of Georgia with seven; the University of Florida with seven; Kentucky and Tennessee with four each; and Georgia Tech with one. Two schools, the University of Mississippi and Tulane University, failed to score.

Southwest Louisiana was the second place independent, as it nearly tied Auburn's Tigers with 23-1/2 points.

Track Coach Mike Long poses with his two co-captains for 1963: seniors Craig Johnson, right, of Houston, Tex., and Herb Kraft of Atlanta, Ga. Johnson is a sprinter-hurdler who did the 100 in 9.7 last Spring, while Kraft is the school record-holder in the broad jump (23-7 3/4) and had never lost in that event as a collegian before the 1963 season.

Most Promising Gridiron Group To Start Spring Practice Apr. 23

With several problems to solve, but "our most promising group" to solve them with, a 76-man Florida State football squad opens Spring drills here next Saturday (Feb. 23).

Head Coach Bill Peterson said the Seminoles will work on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Scrimmages are set for each Tuesday and Saturday, with the annual Spring game tentatively slated for March 30. NCAA rules permit a maximum of 20 practice sessions within a maximum 36-day period.

FSU's Spring roster is composed of eight seniors, 18 juniors and 50 sophomores. Fifteen earned their first varsity letter last year, eight their second letter. 20 were held out (or "red-shirted") and 30 were freshmen. These totals do not include two seniors, a junior and a soph who will not participate for various reasons in Spring training.

Peterson said he will be looking for three major items during Spring: (1) players who can play both offense and defense, (2) a top-flight running back, and (3) a leader to replace graduated Capt. - Guard Gene McDowell, FSU's third-team All-American of 1962.

The Seminoles finished with a 4-3-3 record in '62, their best year ever when you consider the opposition. Thirteen seniors graduated from the squad.

There will be a bit of a "new look" on the coaching staff, too. Bobby Dowden recently joined the staff from Birmingham's Howard College when Ken Meyer took a job with Paul (Bear) Bryant at Alabama. Former Graduate Asst. Bill Proctor has been elevated to the full-time staff as freshman coach.

"We have our problems to solve," noted Peterson, "but we are all excited about this team. I think, without much doubt, that it is the most promising group of young men we have ever had at FSU."

Peterson is worried about the recent NCAA rule which virtually kills the three-team substitution system, so effective for FSU in Peterson's three years as head coach.

"We have geared everything on the three-team system," said Peterson, "but now it looks like we'll have to junk it and start all over from scratch."

The Seminoles lost eight of 11 starters from the two-way Chiefs unit, only players required to play both offense and defense. Plenty of time, then, will be spent grooming former defensive specialists on offense, and vice versa.

Linkers Cop Pro-Am Title, Whallop Jacksonville Navy

BY JOHN WOOD
Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State golf pro Bill Odeneal headed a team that won the eighth annual Southeastern Pro-Amateur Tournament in Moultrie, Ga., by recording a low ball score of 129.

The match, the second of the season for FSU, was worth $500 to the FSU mentor, who had the low amateur player on his team in the person of Dave Philo. The FSU student and golf team member shot 70-73--143.

All of Odeneal's team members are also on the FSU golf team. Odeneal, who shot a 75-81--156, saw his club finish thusly:

Philo--143; John Danielson 76-72--148; and Denny Lyons 76-76--152.

The winning pro-game team shot a 65 and 64 in the two days' rounds. Jim Stamps of Dalton, Ga., captured honors for the low individual professional, while Dick Clark of Albany finished with 144. They both picked up $200.

Tied for second place team honors were the Valdosta group led by pro Richard Beckman and the Selma aggregation headed by Bud Burns. The two teams recorded 130s.

In the first match of the season, the Seminole duffers defeated Jacksonville Navy, 24 1/2-2 1/2.

Medalist was Philo with a two under par 70, while second place honors went to Johnny Parsons and Roger Kennedy with 73s. Mark Blair finished with a 74, while Roy Beall and Doug Davis had 77s.

Low man for Jax Navy was Lou Gifford with 74, while second was Don Frances with 75.

Odeneal only has two lettermen, Philo and Douglas, returning from last year's squad, which won 14 and lost three in dual competition. And, on top of that, scholastic trouble felled several promising newcomers. Odeneal had said earlier, "We'll have less depth that we've had in a long time." The FSU coach has a 56-22-3 record over the last five years.

Odeneal says Philo is "one of the nation's best" collegiate golfers. The Tallahassee junior averaged 74.3 last spring for the best score on the squad. Davis, the other letterman, had a 76.8 average.

Foul Balls Pace Bowling League

BY GEORGIANNA SWAN

The Foul Balls still are leading in the FSU Bowling League at the Seminole Lanes. Sponsored by the Talem Lounge, the Four Balls have won all three games this past week, giving them a four-game lead.

In second place are the Spastics, and two games behind are the Beer Kings, who are sponsored by the Tempo.

Bob Underhill of the Beer Kings led the scoring this week with 222 points, while Jim McEachern, also of the Beer Kings, was second with 211. Connie Zois built up a 588 series with games of 203, 183, and 202 tallies.

Gymnast Nip Tech

The Georgia Tech gymnast was stung for the second t year by the FSU Gymnasts the Seminoles triumphed, 7 54 1/2, in Tully Gymnasium.

Record 3817 Ballots Cast

Smith Leads UP Victory

By LYNN BISSLAND
Flambeau Staff Writer

University Party took the top three Student Government offices with Johnny Smith, President of the Student Body, Julian Proctor, Vice President, and Frank Ryll, Men's Vice President in a record turnout of 3,817 voters yesterday.

Smith, present Vice President, won the race for the Presidency over Jackie Mathis, 2,358 to 1,323 votes.

Julian Proctor, Sophomore Class President, defeated Senator Miles Williams, 2042 to 1640 for the office of Vice President of the Student Body. Ted DeLaVergne lost the position of Men's Vice President to Senator Frank Ryll 2041 to 1445.

Clyda Stokes, unopposed Student Party nominee for Women's Vice President, received more votes than any other candidate with 3226.

Pam Cornely, Student Party nominee for Secretary of the Senate, topped Phyllis Doud with 1904 to 1493.

Kelly Reid, running unopposed for Chief Justice of the Honor Court, received 3138 votes.

Jan Warren defeated David Wiles for Clerk of the Honor Court with 2081 votes to Wiles' 1098.

Betsy Boote (SP) and Vickie Voyles (SP) gathered 2830 and 2881 votes in unopposed races for the Chairman of University Court and Chairman of Traffic Court, respectively.

Bob Foss (UP), Patti Childs (SP), and Lana Murray (UP) polled 2346, 2240, and 2009 votes in winning places on the Board of Publications.

President-Elect Johnny Smith stated last night, "It has been a hard and vigorous campaign for everyone concerned, but I think that the work is just beginning. I only hope that we can work as hard in office as we did campaigning for it."

Ron Jones, Secretary of Elections, said, "I was delighted by the turnout and the interest that was apparent in that turnout. We had very little difficulty in the entire campaign and electon. Our student body should be grateful for the work put in by the members of the Elections Bureau, Sophomore Council, Freshman Flunkies, University Testing Service and the many other persons who helped with the elections."

Four ammendments to adapt the Student Body Constitution to the trimester system were ratified by 90% of those voting.

FSO Awards Given At 3rd Convocation

Five students received certificates of merit and $10 checks Monday night, as the Foundation Scholarship Organization held its third Awards Convocation.

Dr. Doak Campbell, president emeritus of the University, spoke to the group. Dean of the School of Education Mode Stone acted as moderator of the ceremony, and Dr. Ralph Eyman, dean emeritus of the School of Education, presented 4.0 certificates to Maureen O'Neill, Patricia Griffith, Judy Longsworth, Dan Barwick and Dorothy Eaddy.

Dr. Sam Lastinger, director of the counseling and personnel service, presented a trophy for the third consecutive time to the FEA Scholarship House, the house with the highest average, a 3.14. Receiving honorable mention for the second time was the 609 West Pensacola House, with a 3.12. Selby House for Women had the third highest average a 2.94.

Receiving certificates for the highest grade in their respective houses were Maureen O'Neill and Dorothy Eaddy (tied), FEA; Patricia Griffith, 609 West Pensacola; Judy Longsworth, Selby House for Women; Dan Barwick, Rotary House; Ron McFarland, 402 South Copeland; Mike Bell, Selby for Men No. 1; and Robert Darling, Selby for Men No. 2.

Officers for the FSO Council were initiated. Outgoing president Luther Kramer spoke briefly to the group.

Thirty six works by Irving Penn, photographer who has been a pioneer in color photography, will go on exhibit in the FSU Art Gallery today.

Organized by the Circulating Exhibitions Dept of the Museum of Modern Art, New York, the exhibition is being circulated throughout the United States with the aid of a grant from Columbia Broadcasting System Foundation Inc. The exhibit at FSU will remain up until March 6.

After studying advertising design at the Philadelphia Museum of Art, Penn began his career in photography in New York with "Vogue." For the past 18 years his photographs have appeared in the American, English, and French editions of that magazine.

Penn's ability to penetrate the depth of his subject is illustrated in the exhibition by his still life photographs, landscapes and portraits. Using unusual angles that point up the telling feature or attitude, he reveals the character of such well known personalities as Picasso, Stravinsky, Sophia Loren, and George Jean Nathan. The innocence of childhood is epitomized in the photograph of Juliet Auchincloss, age four.

Penn brought color photography to a high key and was especially adept at the elimination of shadow. In color particularly he shows the beauty of textures and surfaces of objects, as in "Two Liquors" or of strong sunlight as in "Rowboat on the Seine." Typical of his innovation is the photograph, "Summer Sleep" in which a sleeping figure is seen hazily, as if in a dream, through a pattern of metal screening.

Included in the exhibit will be examples of Penn's commercial photography, showing present day tastes and trends in that area.

Penn's photographs are in permanent collections of The Museum of Modern Art and the Metropolitan Museum. His photography has been published by Simon and Schuster under the title "Moments Preserved."

Beauty Contest Slated Tonight

Nineteen contestants will appear in the third annual Sigma Phi Epsilon Calendar Girl Contest to be held tonight at 7 o'clock in Westcott Auditorium.

Twelve of the contestants will be chosen as finalists, to appear on the Sig Ep calendar which will be sold next fall. Contestants will be judged in the swimsuit and cocktail dress events, on the basis of beauty, poise and photogenic qualities.

Moderating the ceremonies will be host Don Whiddon and hostess Carolyn Bridges, the Sig Eps' favorite calendar girl of 1962.

Variety Show Yields Talent

Chi Omega sorority and Delta Tau Delta fraternity took top honors in the annual Sigma Kappa variety show last Saturday night in Opperman Music Hall.

The Chi Omegas did a skit entitled "You are There," and the Delta Tau Deltas did a ballet to "Swan Lake."

Taking second place in the sorority division was the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority with a number called "Coed Hits Campus." The Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, with a reading on Death, was second place winner in the men's division.

Kelly Reid, alias "JFK," was Master of Ceremonies for the evening. Approximately $240 was collected which will be donated to Campus Chest.

Directors of the show were Odette Marshall and Charlotte Young.

U.N. Position Defended

To the Editor:

I wish to register considerable disagreement with W. Hastings' recent column on the United Nations. Mr. Hastings article consisted of an irresponsible parroting of a partisan position. His "Let's look at the record" was either a grossly incompetent or an intentionally misrepresentative interpretation of contemporary events.

I shan't attempt to answer with and document a full rebuttal of Hastings position. Space does not allow a thorough development of an argument, I should ask reasonable people to remember, research upon, and answer for themselves the questions Mr. Hastings raised (or dogmatically stated), and the UN actions in Kashmir, Korea, the Indonesian-Dutch conflicts of 1848 and1962, Greece (47), Palestine, Suez, Syria (1946) and Lebanon (1946).

I do, however, wish to briefly deal with two important questions which are often raised over the UN position in the Congo and Katanga.

1) Q. Is the UN's action in the Congo an interference with purely internal affairs?

A. No. As to "interference," the UN was specifically asked to come in by the Congolese government. The telegram of July 12, stated: "The Government of the Republic of the Congo requests urgent dispatch by the United Nations military assistance...", and signed by Joseph Kasavubu and Patrice Lumumba.

As to "internal" character: the internal chaos and threat of civil war threatened international peace because they involved Belgians, Russians, Frenchmen, Englishmen, Americans, and some of the Congo's close neighbors.

2.) Q. Does the Katango action vilolate the right of self-determination?

A. No. The right of self-determination was exercised by all the people of the Congo including the people of Katanga, when the political parties of the Cong, including the Conakat party of Tshombe, agreed in February 1960 the "Congo within its actual frontiers shall constitute an independent state, the inhabitants of which...possess one and the same nationality."

There is no evidence that the majority of the people of Katanga Provice favor secession. Tshombe's Conakat party won 25 seats out of 60 in the 1960 Katanga provincial election. The Balubakat Cartel, the major opposition, which is unrepresented in the Katanga government won 23. The Balubakat and allies got 134,916 votes to 91,116 for the Conakat and allies. The Balubakat opposes secession.

The United Nations has not brought Utopia to the world, nor will it in the near future. The UN is a nascent, evolutionary organization which has accomplished much good through its many social, economic and political organs. However, it has (presently) only very limited physical power at its command. It is futher saddled with numerous problems which must be solved. But for all of its admitted inadequacies, the UN has the very real possibility of being the instrument for the peoples and nations of the world to rise above national and ideological parochialism to build the minimum institutions of world order to implement and protect global justice and peace through world law.

Letters Policy

Letters to the editor and student comment are welcomed by the "Flambeau." We firmly believe that students should have an organ through which their opinions and views can be aired.

We will attempt to print all letters received that meet standards of good taste, conciseness of thought and quality of presentation. In addition, letters must be held to a maximum of 250 words.

At no time will letters containing material which is libelous or in bad taste be printed.

Apologists From Government Department

Why Not Refute Arguments?

Why do the apologists from the Department of Government merely condemn the students whose viewpoints differ from their own? Why don't they actually refute and disprove the claims these students make against the Supreme Court and the United Nations?

Why are they wont to defend these organizations by attacking personalities rather than premises? Why are they defending the "nine" and the "swine" if these groups can honestly stand on their own merits before the examining board of thinking people?

The Supreme Court may mean to effect justice in every case, and the United Nations may mean to foster peace in the world, but the record shows some frightening miscarriages which shock the institution of common sense. The United States of America may be destroyed from within by a nine-headed cancer, while she frantically casts her pearls before swine which turn again to rend her and to demand still more.

While the patient is in distress on the inside, from without she is bled and badgered by an outrageous host of witch doctors and diplomatic double-cr... ers.

The pathetic irony of it is that it's all done in the name of justice, freedom, and world brotherho... We are indeed a foolish people, as those of oth... nations (including our "allies"), will frankly tell ... U.N. Secures Sovereignty

To the Editor:

Annually, a group of men gather in New York city. These men are representatives of most of the nations of the world. Most of these men can, and do, proudly refer to the sovereignty of their country. They express concern for its future sovereignty; and thus they meet at the United Nations to secure it.

Give them one problem, one crisis, and you would think -- to hear the different interpretations of that one crisis -- that there were as many crises as nations. Why? Because each sees the situation in terms of his own country's interests -- and if you can show me two countries with identical interests I will show you one satellite country.

But they try. Sometimes the action -- or lack of it -- taken by these men is compatible to the interests of the United States. Inevitably, sometimes, it is not -- So let's abolish it!

Oh, come on fellow students ... know better. One Flambeau ... says: "This organization,..rend... lip service to fine ideals...but g... erally delivers only grief ... havoc." Well, how does this so... The United States Constitution s... "The right of citizens to vote ... not be denied or abridged,... ... count of race, color, or previ... condition of servitude." -- but ... South delivers only grief and ha... -- let's abolish the South. Isn't t... good logic? It took us over 100 ye... to satisfy this ideal to the ... that we have; at least give the ... 20 years of trying.

FLAMBEAU FORUM

Word Wonderland Revisited

To the Editor:

These remarks are directed to the reader as a "knower of his world." For some they are conservative truisms; for others they are the most radical heresies. Let the reader beware.

Human beings, in interacting with events, continuously observe, describe, reason, theorize, and predict. They do so most systematically when utilizing scientific methodology. There are alternatives to this, e.g., propaganda, pseudo-science, dogma, word magic, and authority. These involve much use of persuasive techniques (fallacies) that produce true statements only by accident. There are no "good" or "little" fallacies. Their use implies that words and behaviors are to be adopted because of the "authority" of someone's words rather than their dmonstrable relationships to reality. But the final authority is oneself and it is always legitimate to require others to explain how they "know," etc.

The Flambeau might take the radical step of introducing the standards of legitimate argumentation to the editorial page, perhaps by subjecting occasional articles to logical analysis. This will not be done since rigorous thinking and research would be required rather than simple "Good Word-bad word" conditioning procedures.

Will the reader always remain mesmerized, surrendering his consciousness, thinking, values, and choices to others? When will those trained in thinking and research challenge the domination of public discussion of the most important matters by fallacious thinking and propaganda.

Dobson Challenged To Debate Gelders

An Open Letter to Gerry Dobson:

What a subterfuge! Trying to get Dr. Irish embroiled in a debate with an outsider. Perhaps you are afraid to debate a member of the faculty. If so, you may have the opportunity to debate a fellow student, namely, myself.

I challenge you, Mr. Dobson, to debate on whether the U.S. Supreme Court since the accession of Earl Warren to the Chief Justiceship has usurped authority to rule on the constitutionality of laws passed by Congress or by the several states, whether the Court is in fact trampling upon the rights of free American citizens, whether accusations that the Federal Government is destroying our freedoms are any more justified now than they were when Patrick Henry made them, and finally what was the intention of the Founding Fathers when they authorized the Supreme Court in Article III of the Constitution, a document which both of us admire.

The actual wording of the topic to be debated may be decided later, although the above points ought to be argued, since they seem to be the main points at issue in this controversy. The time and place of this debate may also be decided later. The debate should be free and open to the public. Perhaps it may even be sponsored by an impartial campus organization, such as the Political Union.

If you accept this challenge to debate me, and this opportunity to air your views about the Supreme Court, which you have not hesitated to do when no one could challenge you, then I shall be prepared to debate in three weeks from the time you publicly accept this challenge.

I am willing to defend my opinions and to support my opinions with fact. The only question remaining is, are you willing to defend your views publicly before an audience and answer pertinent questions posed by that audience? Well, Mr. Dobson, what is your answer?

Mabry Heights Irreplacable

Mabry Heights was Florida State's oldest living family housing area when it died last trimester. For many years it has housed 100 families including over 200 children, in which for college housing is considerable luxury. Indeed, to one who had seen other college housing, FSU's Mabry Heights would remain in memory as one of the best in the country. The cause was paradoxical: a land grant college had run out of land and was destroying Tallahassee's only low cost family housing development to build dormitories.

Mabry Height's chief fault was taking valuable land space that was desperately needed for dormitories to crowd more students onto a campus where no one has bothered to build corresponding classrooms. Mabry's grass playing areas, its safety for children and its economy for parents must give way to progress while parking lots, playing fields and vacant lots remain whole.

Does no one lament what is being done to these "homes"? Can no one come up with a plan that will save what remains, or must we all settle in bricked anonymity, expensive and distant. Suggestions are appreciated, for it does seem strange, that the university can contemplate buying land for the pampered fraternities while turning a deaf ear to the needs of many married students.

Its low cost, superior location and relative privacy, coupled with a friendly atmosphere for adults and children cannot be replaced by distant slum clearance housing.

Red Tide Coming Here

...s of the red tide organism ... the Florida Gulf Coast 10 ... and maintained since then ...ston, Tex., ...re coming home ... where they will be studied ... Oceanographic Institute. ...mer and William B. Wil... ...t the time with the U.S. ...f Commercial Fisheries, ...first successful culture of ... Gymnodinium breve, ...cause of the microscopic ...ms that during a "bloom" ...ed out off the lower west ...f Florida in Sept., 1953. ...ltures were held for study first at the marine laboratory of the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries at Galveston, and after Collier and Wilson moved to the Texas A & M College Marine Laboratory, at this laboratory, also at Galveston.

Last November Collier became director of FSU's Oceanographic Institute and Wilson, who is one of the nation's foremost authorities on red red tide, now has joined him as a research associate at FSU.

As soon as a small frame building which formerly served as a house in Mabry Heights Village has been converted to an appropriate laboratory the red tide cultures, now in about 100 test tubes, will be carefully transported to Tallahassee for continued research.

Before Collier and Wilson made a culture of red tide the micro-organism could be studied only during its somewhat rare occurrences through the Gulf waters. It has occasionally broken out off the Florida coast and more rarely off the Mexican coast.

By isolating the organism and holding it a captive, the tiny dinoflagellate, which is sometimes called a plant (it is photosynthetic, for instance) and sometimes called an animal (it propels itself through the water in a corkscrew motion) biologists can manipulate the environment and have under constant observation the conditions necessary for its occurrence, survival and increase.

Red tide first was traced to the micro-organism, Collier said, in 1946. Red tide occurs when the conditions are just right for it and spreads in rapid-fire manner, covering sometimes an area of several thousand square miles. Fish swimming into red tide are poisoned by the millions, turning up in acres of floating carcasses and washing ashore in smelly piles.

At first, efforts were made to capture a portion of the actual environment, using in the culture medium seawater, an extract from the muck of Gulf coastal river beds and even extracts from the decayed fish killed by red tide--a substance which in the natural setting seemed to perpetuate the red tide bloom.

Today, the cultures are started with the use of water which has been purified to the maximum, usually having gone through three distillings. To this are added in appropriate portions salts of the sea, metallic trace elements, vitamins and other components to duplicate an appropriate marine setting favorable to it.

Many of the cultures are held bacteria free in order to take out of consideration the possible nutritional role of bacteria. Great care must be exercised to cleanse the vessels in which the organism is stored, using first a detergent, then a bath in a solution of nitric acid, then rinses in tap and distilled water and finally a bath in the steam of an autoclave.

So delicate is the constitution of the red tide organism living in the Collier-Wilson cultures that the cultures can rarely be transported with success. Several laboratories have ordered some of the cultures but so far as Collier knows only the Scripps Institute of Oceanography in California still possesses a culture derived from the Galveston one. When the cultures are brought here in a few weeks they will be brought personally and not entrusted to a carrier.

Meanwhile a considerable effort will be necessary to convert the old Mabry Heights house, designed for a family of three or four, into the home of a few hundred thousand members of the Gymnodinium breve family. Provision will have to be made, for instance, for a constant temperature and also for a constant light, since the red tide organisms like light.

Library Becomes Depository

The Strozier Library at FSU has become a selective depository for publications of the Canadian government, and the library is getting volumes ranging from statistical reports to debates in the Senate and House of Commons.

Among new periodicals which will be received from the Canadian government are "Canadian Metallurgical Quarterly," "Canada Law Reports," "The Labour Gazette" and "Medical Services Journal Canada." Books on such diverse subjects as tornadoes, mushrooms, military history, natural resources and ways of cooking fish will be received.

The Canadian publications will go into the Documents Division, which also receives more than 11,000 federal documents annually as a depository for these.

CHATTANOOGA IS WELL REPRESENTED

...on Sewanee's wrestling team. The four Chattanoogans, left to right, Bill Schultz, Jay Paty, Doug Seiters, and Paul Tessman, will compete Saturday in Tully Gym. Three of them are undefeated.

Sewanee Wrestlers To Face Tribesmen

A dual wrestling meet between Florida State and Sewanee will be held Saturday night in Tully Gymnasium, announced Coach Budd Berringer. The preliminary bouts will start at 7, and the main dual meet will begin at 7:30.

Berringer said several youngsters from the Saturday morning Junior Olympic Wrestling program will be featured in the preliminaries. Ranging from the third to the ninth grades, he said they would provide entertaining fare.

FSU's wrestling opponents will be well-represented from two areas, Chattanooga, Tenn. and Florida, said Berringer.

Four Chattanoogans and two Floridians are on the University of the South squad. Bill Schultz, an undefeated freshman, will wrestle in the 167-pound class, while fellow Chattanoogan Jay Paty, an undefeated junior, will compete in the 157-pound class. Sophomore Doug Seiters, a 147-pound wrestler, and undefeated freshman Paul Tessman, a 177-pound class wrestler, are the other chattanoogans.

Hank Haynes and Bill Hamilton are Sewanee wrestlers from Jacksonville. Haynes is the defending 123-pound Southeastern Conference champion, while Hamilton finished third in the 130-pound division in SEC competition last year.

Gators Trounce Duffers, 18—9

Undefeated by FSU in any sport this season, the University of Florida walloped the Seminole golf team, 18-9, in a Monday afternoon match in Gainesville.

Florida's Richard Leckey and Harry Root downed FSU's Dave Philo and John Parson's, 6-3, while Florida State's Mark Blair and Roy Beall dropped Florida's Chip Anderson and Lloyd Hammer, 5 1/2-3 1/2. UF's Marlin Vogt, who shot a low individual score of 72, teamed with Bob Murphy to defeat FSU's Roger Kennedy and Doug Davis, 8 1/2-11/2.

Fauls To Speak Tonight

Don Fauls, the FSU trainer, will be the guest speaker at tonight's Men's Physical Education Majors Club. The meeting will start at 8 in 208 Tully Gymnasium.

Refreshments will be served.

Long Moans Loss Of 13

The Seminoles, during Coach Mike Long's eight-year tenure in Tallahassee, have established themselves as one of the South's top track powers. They've lost only two of the last 22 dual meets; won 36 of 41 dual meets in the Long era. But matching lost year's 5-0 record (including championships in the Piedmont Relay and Memphis Indoor Carnival) presents perhaps Long's most formidable challenge.

The '63 team will be built around the six returning lettermen and a quartet of good-looking sophomores. Returnees are co-captains Craig Johnson and Gerb Kraft, Al Williams, Dick Roberts, Jim Lankford and Hutch Johnson. Craig Johnson is a sprinter-hurdler who did the 100 in 9.7 last spring.

Kraft is the school record-holder in the broad jump (23-7 3/4) and has never lost in that event as a collegian. Williams, Long says, is "potentially one of the best weight men in the South," and put the shot 52 feet as a soph last year.

Roberts and Lankford are the two best distance men from last year, and Hutch Johnson is a promising sprint prospect.

Among the sophomores, most promising are Floyd Lorenz (high jump and hurdles), Al Cato (9.8 sprinter and relay man), Jerry McDaniel (220, 440 and relays) and hurdler-sprinter Ross Winter, who could be slowed due to basketball knee injuries.

Long came to FSU in 1953 after coaching high school sports in Sarasota and Tampa. He won an Olympic regional pole vault title in 1936 while participating at the University of Minnesota.

Net Tryouts Set

Racquette tryouts will be held at 4:30 p.m. Thursday on the tennis courts next to Montgomery Gymnasium. All interested coeds are encouraged to come.

MEN'S TENNIS COACH, EDDIE CUBBON, . . . is named the first honorary member of the F State Racquettes, the women's tennis club. Jan Q Daytona Beach looks on as Cubbon is pinned by quettes president Gail DeLozier of Ft. Thomas

Executive Bill Follow-up Tried

A motion to waive the rules of procedure and consider Bill 31 in its second reading was defeated yesterday in Student Senate.

Senator Bill Grant, author of the bill, pointed out to the Senate that Bill 31 was a sort of follow-up to last week's controversial Bill 29 providing for the Executive Branch of Student Government during the third trimester.

Senator Grant's bill invests the legislative power of the summer student government in a committee "which shall be composed of the President of the Student Body (one vote), the Student Body President's Cabinet, and the Chief Justice of the Honor Court (one vote), and the Student Body Vice President (one vote)."

The bill was referred to the Labor, Student Services and Education Committee for further action.

Senator Arnie Gibbs introduced a bill to amend Article IX of the Student Body Constitution which deals with the Finance Code. The bill was introduced upon the recommendations of several of the University's administrative officials and members of the student branch of the Finance Bureau. The bill was referred to the Organizations and Finance Committee.

Student Senate Bill 33 which amends the Student Body Statutes regarding the Judicial Branch of Student Government was introduced jointly by several members of the Senate. The three-page bill was sent to the Judicial and Rules Committee for further study.

A bill to amedn the duties of the Secretary of Student Events was passed unanimously.

Several members of the Elections and Appointments Committee introduced Bill 26 in its amended form to amend Article X of the Student Body Constitution. The bill states precisely the dates for the Student Body Elections, the bill was passed unanimously.

Bill 27, also dealing with the dates of Student Body Elections was defeated unanimously because the change had already been affected by the passage of Senate Bill 26 in its amended form.

The Elections and Appointments Committee was instructed to examine Senate Bill 28, introduced by Senator Joanne Driffin, which establishes a procedure to regulate Political Party Expenses on the campus. The bill was introduced upon the recommendations of Secretary of Elections Ron Jones.

Upon the Senate's adjournment, there was an attempt to throw Student Body President-elect Johnny Smith into Westcott Pool, which ended in defeat when he escaped.

Tickets for the public are $3.50 each.

"Jest of Cards," to which Life Magazine devoted a two-page color feature last February, terming it "one of the two major ballet events of 1962," will be the featured ballet on the Feb. 26 program. It was choreographed by Lew Christensen, director of the San Francisco Ballet. Other ballets on that night's program will be "Variations de Ballet" and "Caprice."

Music for "Jest of Cards" is by Ernst Krenek, with sets and costumes by Tony Duquette. It is based on playing cards. Towering figures ten and eighteen feet tall represent the kings and queens and the dancers whirl through wild patterns and pantomimes that represent their being shuffled about by life.

In "Original Sin" the San Francisco Ballet, America's oldest performing ballet company, tell the story of Adam and Eve. The music score is by John Lewis, director of the Modern Jazz Quartet. Choreography is by the company's director, Lew Christensen.

One of the most travelled classical ballet companies in the world, they have made three international tours as cultural representatives of the United States. Many special performances have included performances before the King and Queen of Greece, King of Thailand, Madame Chiang Kai Shek in Formosa and the Prime Minister of Burma.

A panel of judges including Jerry Bock and Sheldown Harnick, the Pulitzer Prize-winning team which wrote the words and music for "Fiorello!" Lehman Engel, composer and musical director for many Broadway productions; and Robert B. Sour, BMI vice president in charge of writer relations, will judge the entries. They will be joined by other leading figures from the musical theater world.

Rules for the competition, which closes June 15, 1963, are available from Robert B. Sour, Broadcast Music, Inc., 589 Fifth Avenue, New York 17, New York. Announcement of winners will be made no later tan October 15, 1963.

Robert Riedell Speaks Tonight

Robert Riedell, commissioner of the Florida Hotel and Restaurant Management Association, and manager of Tallahassee's Duval Hotel, will speak tonight at a joint meeting of all FSU business clubs.

The meeting, to be held at 7:30 o'clock in the Starry Conference Room of the School of Business Bldg., is being sponsored by the Society of Hosts of the Hotel and Restaurant Management Dept.

Dress for the meeting will be coats and ties for men.

Matchmaker Tryouts Set

Tryouts for "The Matchmaker," by Thornton Wilder, author of "Our Town" and "Skin of Our Teeth," will be held Feb. 26 and 27 at 7 p.m. in Conradi Theatre.

The University Theatre will present the play, but all FSU students are eligible to try for parts. To be performed April 6-10, "The Matchmaker" cast includes 10 men and seven women.

Dr. Arthur H. Dorlag, who directed last trimester's musical "Kismet," will be director for the Wilder play.

'Flying High' Performers Prepare For Circus Show

Nothing beats the smell of sawdust under the bigtop, or the sight of flouncy sticks of cotton candy which melts with the first bite... but what's really exciting is the colorful wonderland of the circus performers in action... this is FSU's "Flying High" Circus.

Coach Gilbert, FSU's "Mr. Ringling," announced that tickets for the big event are now on sale at Tully Gymnasium and Brown's Men's Wear, and will be available at Westcott beginning Monday.

The first performance will be Tuesday evening, March 5, and Circus Weekend will end the week's entertainment under FSU's own tent with thrills for the families of all students invited up for the weekend performances. Circus Weekend has become a veritable family weekend, with college coeds sporting Mom, Dad, lil' brother and a candied apple at the show.

For those students with sawdust under their skin, circus has a special offer. Tickets for a show to be seen on the CBS television network may be obtained, after purchasing a ticket for one of the regular performances. The reason for this, Coach Gilbert stressed, was so students wouldn't be deluded into thinking that the special performance with the tv audience was representative of the regular shows.

The special, to be held at 8 p.m. Sunday, March 10, under the tent, will have time delays necessary for the relocation of television cameras and crews, and would probably prove a disappointment to students anticipating a real performance.

The CBS network will present the FSU circus before a nationwide audience of television viewers on March

A Record Election

Yesterday saw a record breaking election processed in record breaking time. Sec. of Elections Ron Jones and the Elections bureau deserve hearty commendation for a fine job.

Jones had 3817 ballots to process--mire than any previous secretary has ever had to contend with. Yet, final election returns were up before 9 p.m. Earlier election returns came in regular rapid-fire order and Jones and his election machine processed stack after stack.

"Ron Jones receives and deserves the gratitude of the entire student body for his masterful performance as Secretary of Elections," Ken van Assenderp said in commending his diligent worker.

Jones cannot reap all the glory. Members of his bureau were kept running as fast as campaigners as they collected ballots and prepared them for the IBM machines.

This type of effective operation requires teamwork of the highest order. The speed of the returns is a testimony to Jones and his election machine.

Let's See Report

Luther Kramer, assistant to the Secretary of Internal Affairs, has prepared a thorough report on the controversial future of class officers.

Kramer has spent hours interviewing various interested parties concerned with class officers. He has compiled a list of facts that is staggering to behold. He has gathered data on every facet of class officer function and has compared it with systems at other universities. Undoubtedly, the Kramer report is one of the most complete authorities on class officers ever assembled.

The report should be made open to the public as soon as technically possible. The students need to examine its background and recommendations in a fair and impartial light in order to draw valid conclusions.

Kramer deserves praise for his effort. Interested students are waiting expectantly to see its contents.

Kellum Hall Position Clarified

In the February 12, 1963 issue of the "Flambeau," it was stated that Kellum Hall has lost its fund-raising rights. However, the Executive Council of Kellum Hall feels that the stand taken by Mr. Frank Milwee, secretary of finance, is unjust and thus is in the process of filing its case with the Honor Court.

Being president of the Executive Council, I wish to make public the position being taken by Kellum's Council. We base our case on the following:

1. Our dance, featuring the "Untouchables," was not a fund-raising project. Traditionally it has been the practice of the Dean of Men's office to allot us $75.00 from our annual budget for the purpose of sponsoring our dance band per year. Sin the "Untouchables," and other bands desirable to the students, charge about $150.00 per night, we sold tickets merely for paying the difference between the allotted $75.00 and the cost of the band. There was an agreement between the Executive Council and the Dean of Men that if we sold more tickets ($1.00 per couple) than was necessary to pay the band, we would put the difference back into the Kellum Hall budget. However, we came out $11.00 short. As can be seen, our dance was not, nor was intended to be, a fund-raising project.

2. The Executive Council of Kellum Hall is not a part of the Student Government or the Student Body Statutes. Therefore, Mr. Milwee cannot legally prosecute the Council. Most recent decisions upholding this interpretation have been as follows:

a. During the discussions last year held between representatives fr[om] the Men's Senate and the executi[ve] councils of both Kellum Hall [and] Smith Hall, it was agreed that Me[n's] Senate would not try to bring [the] men's dormitories under the Stu[dent] Government and hat these [dor]mitories would remain only under Uni[ver]sity regulations and the Dean [of] Men's decisions on [the] maximu[m] funds that can be [spent] on any [one] project.

b. At the beginning of the [fall] school year there were irregu[lar]ities in the election procedures [in] Smith Hall. When [some] of the can[di]dates filed a complaint with [the] Honor Cout, the court said [that] it could not make a judgement [on] the case because the governing [law]ies in the men's dormitories [are] not under the Student [Body] Statutes.

Also, according to the definit[ion] of student organizat[ions] in the "Pow-Wows," the executive co[un]cils of Kellum and [others] are in this category.

3. It has been the custom in [the] past for any group [or] organizat[ion] to charge admission [(]tickets or not) in order to [help] some event such as a dance [in] dormitory or a picnic or [a] party at the Reservation. The [pur]pose of these activities [is] to raise funds for a profit. [The] Government arbitrarily [cancels] this without first notifying [the] dents on campus? It [seems] areas will be affected also [such] as the assessments in wo[men's] residence halls. Should the [host]esses and housemothers have to [ob]tain permission from the secret[ary] of finance rather than the respe[ctive] deans of whom they are empl[oyed]

4. The Executive [Council] Hall wishes to cooperate as [much] as possible with the Student G[overn]ment. If the raising [of] money to hire a band is not justifiable [in] Mr. Milwee told me, why does [not] the Student Government [give] $75.00 more so tickets [would] to be sold? Instead [of] the [Univer]sity assessing all the men on cam[pus] so that the men's dormitories [will] have a larger general fund [from] which to draw, we [feel] it [would] be much more fair if [only] the dance should pay [for] the [band].

In closing may I [state] Kellum's Council is [willing] operate with the Student Government. However, the charges against the Council are false, in the Council's opinion, for the [reasons] viously stated.

Good Old Everyday FSU Women

There once was a time when, in my adolescent conceit, I would fiercely berate the dressing habits of female students at this university. I would laugh derisively at those huge gold safety pins, and at the terrible conformity of the "Jackie" look. In my ignorance I would dance fanatically on sorority house lawns, screaming "Nyaah! Sheep! Sheep!" at the top of my lungs. I would publicly spit at each circular collar pin I saw. But now I find myself crawling, yea, groveling in apology, for I have been, I have seen, I now know.

There is an unwritten code of life in Southern California which states that all things must be big, sensational, and modern. One sees it in the sprawling shopping centers, the sprawling suburbs, and the sprawling hair-dos. Anything that is not spectacular is immediately sent to Arizona. The young women there vie constantly against one another to achieve the ridiculous -- the worldly.

The most tragic sight I have ever seen is a sixth-grade girl with her hair teased to the texture of fine brillo and died the color of straw. Her face was unusually white, as if she had plunged her head into an open flour barrel, and her pouting lips were of a luminous purple hue. Her eyebrows were plucked and repenciled in two sweeping arches that were nearly lost above her hairline.

And so I present myself -- a [trem]bling hulk of humility [in] repentance for my mistaken ways. [Back] to the good old, everyday [girls] of FSU, with color in their [hair] and pink on their [lips] and [nails] that grows down instead [of up]. [Long] "Bridget" fall and "Jackie" [rise] forever, amen.

Correction

Mike Dixon Letter Not Identified

Editing errors in yesterday's Flambeau Forum resulted in the name of the author of a letter to the editor being omitted from publication.

In the upper right hand corner of the editorial page of yesterday's edition the article headed "Apologists From Government Department --Why Not Refute the Arguments?" should have been prefaced by "To the Editor" and ended with the name of the author -- Mike Dixon.

The editors regret this error and assure readers it was unintentional.

Letters Policy

Letters to the editor and student comment are welcomed by the "Flambeau." We firmly believe that students should have an area through which their opinions and views can be aired.

We will attempt to print all letters received that meet standards of good taste, conciseness of thought and quality of presentation. In addition, letters must be held to a maximum of 250 words.

At no time will letters containing material which is libelous or in bad taste be printed.

GLAD RAGS

[illegible] of spring are on winter's traces. Soon lads the [illegible] trills the giant condor, soon come the new spring [illegible] for our lissome limbs.

[illegible] will the American college student wear this spring? [illegible], you rascals, and light a Marlboro Cigarette and [illegible] the mellow tobacco, that pure white filter, and [illegible] recline in sweet content, and listen.

[illegible] knows, campus fashions have always been custom-[illegible]. However, they have gone beyond being merely [illegible] to becoming outré.

[illegible] to look really unconvent, gaze upon these!

For example, why don't you girls try wearing a [illegible] with a dinner jacket? Or galoshes with [illegible]? Or Bermuda shorts with bronze crucifixes? Be [illegible]! Be devil-take-the-hindmost!

[illegible] be the same. Try an opera cape with swim[illegible]. Or a tuxedo with kids. Or a [illegible] with [illegible]. Be bold! Be daring! Be a tourist attraction!

Be rakish! Be impromptu!

[illegible] innovation in college fashions this spring. By [illegible] highlights of the season, turns backward in its flight. I refer, of course, to the comeback of the powdered [illegible].

[illegible] discouragement, too long neglected, is already [illegible] undergrads everywhere. On hundreds of [illegible] the bossa nova is giving way to the minuet, and [illegible] undergraduates are dumping Brut or tea into the [illegible]. This, as you may imagine, does not sit well with [illegible] III who, according to reliable reports, has been [illegible] and uttering curses not fit to reproduce in [illegible] newspaper. For that matter, a lot of our own people [illegible] too, and there has even been some talk about the [illegible] colonies declaring their independence of England. But I hardly think it will come to that. I mean, how can we [illegible] the mother country when we are dependent on her [illegible] Twings, linsey-woolsey, Mme. Defarge, tater snuffers, and like that? She, on the other hand, relies on us for turkeys, [illegible] cigarettes, and Route 66. So I say, if Molly Pitcher and those other Radcliffe hotheads will calm down, and if [illegible] will cry "Peace! Peace!" we may yet find an [illegible] solution to our differences. But let not our British [illegible] mistake this willingness to negotiate for weakness. If fight we must, then fight we will! Paul Revere is saddled up, [illegible] bridge arches the flood, and the ROTC is armed! [illegible] Congress. We were smoking Marlboro Cigarettes. O, [illegible] cigarette! O, good golden tobaccos! O, pristine pure [illegible]! O, fresh! O, tasty! O, soft pack! O, flip-top box! O, get some!—we were, I say, smoking Marlboros and talking [illegible] fashions.

[illegible] turn now to the season's most striking new feature [illegible] underdrawers. These inflatable garments make every chair an easy chair. Think how welcome they will be when you [illegible] through a long lecture! They are not, however, without [illegible] dangers. Last week, for example, Rimbaud Sigafoos, a [illegible] at the University of Pittsburgh, fell out of a 96th [illegible] window in the Tower of Learning. Thanks to his pneumatic underdrawers, he suffered no injury when he struck the [illegible]. But the poor fellow is still bouncing—his seventh consecutive day—and it is feared that he will starve to death.

Florida High's Players Present 'Curious Savage'

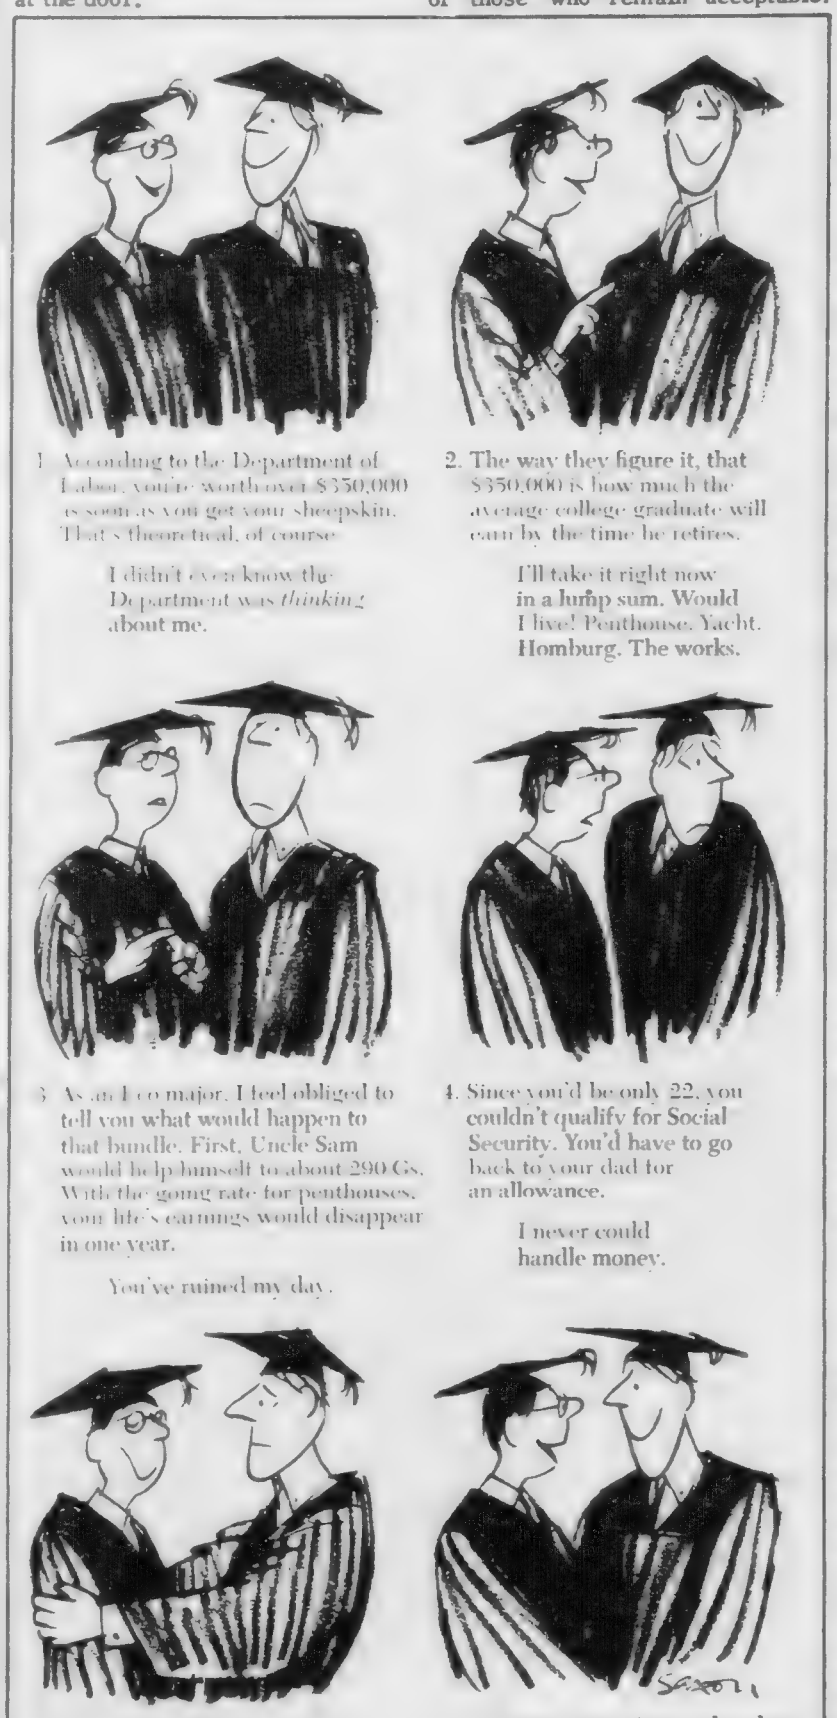
Florida High School's Drama Club will present the three-act play, "The Curious Savage" by John Patrick, with the opening performance scheduled for 8:15 p.m. tonight and with Saturday afternoon and night performances.

Tickets are 70 cents for adults and 40 cents for all students for today's and Saturday night's performances in Florida High School Auditorium, and for the Saturday matinee performance at 2:15 p.m. are 60 cents for adults and 25 cents for children. Tickets may be bought at the door.

Stan DeHart, director who is well-known for his many roles on the Conradi stage, says of his group of high school actors: "They have shaped up a production that is as good as any college production that I have ever directed."

"The Curious Savage" tells the story of a vivacious little old lady who is committed to a home for the socially maladjusted by relatives who want to get control of her money.

DeHart's interpretation contrasts the "niceness" of people rejected by society with the "viciousness" of those who remain acceptable.



Much of the gentle humor in the play arises from what he calls the "Auntie Mame" personality of Mrs. Savage, lead role played by Florida High senior, Mary Paisley.

DeHart said that author Patrick's moral for the story is from Byron's "And if I laugh at any mortal thing, 'tis that I may not weep."

Mrs. Savage's much married, ultra-sophisticated daughter Lilly Belle, is played by Diane Janes and her pompous egotistical son, Senator Titus Savage, by Tom Alston. Her oldest son, Judge Samuel Savage who holds a record for the number of cases he has had reversed, is played by John Hogenson. Two students will perform the role of Fairy May with Carol Hopke taking the role tonight and Saturday night and Betsy Caldwell acting the part in the matinee performance. Hannibal, typical of other people in the home, displays a distinctive characteristic that is a mark of his isolation from society. He is played by David Kahler, a sophomore.

Others in the play include Leila McCraw as Mrs. Paddy; Ned Witherspoon as Jeff; Winky Sanders as Florence and Ray Conn as Dr. Emmett.

Assisting DeHart with the direction is stage manager, Bob Parrish, high school junior, and John Hoffman, FSU freshman has helped with the sets. Charles Reimer of the FSU Speech Dept. has given technical assistance.

1. According to the Department of Labor, you're worth over $350,000 as soon as you get your sheepskin. That's theoretical, of course.

I didn't even know the Department was thinking about me.

2. The way they figure it, that $350,000 is how much the average college graduate will earn by the time he retires.

I'll take it right now in a lump sum. Would I live! Penthouse. Yacht. Homburg. The works.

3. As an Eco major, I feel obliged to tell you what would happen to that bundle. First, Uncle Sam would help himself to about 290 Gs. With the going rate for penthouses, your life's earnings would disappear in one year.

You've ruined my day.

4. Since you'd be only 22, you couldn't qualify for Social Security. You'd have to go back to your dad for an allowance.

I never could handle money.

5. Fortunately, there's a way out for you.

Tell me—tell me.

Well, you won't be getting all that money in one year. You'll be getting some of it each year, at a much lower tax rate. What you should do is put aside a certain amount of it.

6. Put some money into cash-value insurance, the kind they call Living Insurance at Equitable. It gives your wife and kids solid protection and it saves for you automatically—builds a cash fund you can use for retirement or any other purpose.

You Eco guys have all the answers.

Univ. Symphony To Give Concert

The University Symphony under the direction of Robert Sedore will present a concert Friday, Feb. 22, with pianists Pravda Sikorski of Emory, Va., and Ruth Anne Rich of Macon, Ga., as soloists.

The program, third of the year for the 70-member orchestra, will be at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Opening number on the concert program will be the overture from "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg" by Richard Wagner. Miss Sikorski, pianist from the studio of Howard Wilson, will be soloist for the second selection, "Piano Concerto No. 2 in A Major" by Franz Liszt.

Miss Sikorski, a 19-year-old senior at FSU, began her concert career at the age of nine, performing the first movement of the Beethoven First Concerto with the Virginia Symphony Orchestra. She performed the Grieg Concerto with the Tallahassee Youth Symphony in 1959, and this past year has been orchestral pianist with the FSU orchestra. She is in the honors program in the School of Music.

In another Liszt selection, "Piano Concerto No. 1, in E-Flat Major," Miss Rich will be featured as soloist. A student of Edward Kilenyi, Miss Rich has won first place in three national music competitions. She was 1960 winner of the Marie Morrisey Keith competition and 1961-62 winner of the Biennial Student Competition in piano, both sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs; and 1961 winner of the Young Artists Contest to be soloist with the Transylvania Symphony in Brevard, N.C.

AROUND THE WORLD

WASHINGTON--Democratic Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York defended his activities in and out of Congress yesterday and said attacks on him by Republican Senator John Williams of Delaware were motivated by racial prejudice. The Negro Congressman said Williams has vpted consistently against civil rights legislation and has purchased property with a written agreement to sell only to "Aryans."

WASHINGTON--President Kennedy will send Congress a special message on his program of medical care for elderly persons tomorrow. Congressional sponsors of the necessary legislation hope to have a bill ready for introduction right after the message is read (at noon, EST). However, the bill's journey through the Congressional mill is expected to be slow and uncertain.

WASHINGTON--A Cuban exile leader, Dr. Manuel Devarona, told the House Subcommittee on Inter-American Affairs yesterday that there are more than 17,000 Soviet troops in Cuba and perhaps as many as 30,000. He also quoted what he described as "well-informed sources in Vienna" as saying the Soviets had established two secret military bases in South America--one in the jungles of Northwest Brazil and one in the mountains of Paraguay. He called for a U.S.-led invasion to restore peace to the hemisphere.

ENGLAND--The British government says it has a new airborne nuclear weapon to preserve Britain's independent deterrent pending arrival of Polaris missiles from the United States. A government white paper issued today said the new weapon is under development, but gave no specific performance details, other than to say the weapon will remain operational even after British Polaris submarines join the fleet.

ACROSS THE NATION

CINCINNATI--A twin-engine plane with four live alligators and a number of turtles as passengers crash-landed safely at Lunken Airport yesterday after the co-pilot bailed out. The pilot, co-pilot and the reptiles all apparently escaped injury. The reptiles were being flown to Cincinnati from Picayune, Mississippi for a wild animal show scheduled to open Saturday.

FSU Hosts Eighth Prison Parole Personnel Meeting

Florida State University will be host for the eighth year at a south-wide meeting of prison and parole personnel, social workers, social scientists and others discussing opening at FSU today.

One of the speakers at the Eighth Annual Southern Conference on Corrections will be Richard Chappell, chairman of the U. S. Board of Parole, Washington. Discussions will be held principally at the Strozier Library Lecture Hall under auspices of FSU's Department of Corrections and Criminology.

The opening session at 9 a.m. will hear a welcome by FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell and will go into a discussion of "The Local Jail and Stockade in the Correctional Process." Tom Heaney, chief warden of the Duval County Jail and the "Jailer of the Year" selected by the National Jail Association, will be speaker.

R. D. Carpenter, senior correctional inspector of jails, Southeastern States, for the U. S. Bureau of Prisons, Atlanta, will chair the discussion. Panelists will be Lt. Guy Hines of the Kansas City Police Department; the Rev. C. Douglas Burt, chaplain of the Pinellas County Jail, Clearwater; Carl Mills, warden of the Fulton County Public Works Camp, Atlanta; and C. F. Smith, warden of the Marion County Stockade, Ocala.

"Preparing Offenders to Earn A Living" will be the subject of discussions at 10:30 a.m. Dr. Edward K. Hankin, professor of industrial arts and vocational education at FSU will be speaker. Robert B. Gramling, deputy director for inmate treatment, Florida Division of Corrections, will be chairman for the discussion and panelists will be E. A. Emmelhainz, area supervisor for the State Department of Education; James D. Seymour, job placement officer for the Florida State Prison, Raiford; Jerry Head, job placement officer for the U.S. Penitentiary, Atlanta; and R. E. Upton Jr., education director for the Florida State Prison, Raiford.

Following an 11:45 a.m. discussion of "The Development and Control of Delinquency" with Judge G. Bowdon Hunt of Bartow, Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court of Polk County, as speaker, Francis Bridges of the Florida Parole Commission will speak at a luncheon in Suwannee Room. Bartlett's Book Judged One Of Top Two

A newly published book by Dr. Richard A. Bartlett of the History Dept. has been adjudged one of the two best books of their kind in 1962 by "Desert Magazine of the Southwest," published at Palm Desert, Calif.

"Great Surveys of the American West," dealing with several great engineering and scientific expeditions through the West following 1867, was published by University of Oklahoma Press during the fall. It was adjudged the best book in the history category among books reviewed by the magazine in 1962.

The California magazine described the book, product of several years of research by the FSU historian, as one which "every western historian planned to write sometime." The book also has received favorable reviews in the "New York Times," Washington Post" and other publications.

The other book selected as best of its kind also was published by University of Oklahoma Press, according to an announcement from the Norman, Okla., publishers. By Frank McNitt, a newspaper publisher of Southbridge, Mass., it is called "The Indian Traders." It was adjudged the best Indian book among those reviewed.

"Chemistry for the Applied Sciences," a new textbook by Mrs. Katherine B. Hoffman, associate professor of of chemistry at FSU, has been published by Prentice-Hall.

The book examines the composition, structure and properties of matter and their relationship to the behavior of living cells.

Mrs. Hoffman, who is also the associate chairman of the Chemistry Dept., has been a member of the FSU faculty since 1940.

She received her BS degree from the Florida State College for Women in 1936 and her MA from Columbia University in 1938. She attended the University of Florida as a special student from 1939-40.

Dr. Dexter M. Easton, associate professor of biological sciences at FSU, has written an anatomy and physiology textbook.

The book, entitled "Mechanism of Body Functions," is an introduction to human functional anatomy and physiology, covering a general orientation in the field.

Dr. Easton, who has written many papers in biological journals, especially in the field of neurophysiology, graduated from Clark University in 1943. He received his M.A. degree from Harvard in 1944 and his Ph.D. from Harvard in 1947. He became a member of the FSU faculty in 1955.

Dr. Earl Frieden, chairman of the FSU Chemistry Dept., has been appointed to the editorial board of "Biochemical Preparations." The appointment is for a five-year tem.

"Biochemical Preparations" is a 10-year-old series presenting the most reliable and checked procedures for preparation of important biological substances. More than 6000 copies have been sold annually.

Among other current editors of the series are Dr. H. E. Carter, head of the Chemistry Dept. at University of Illinois; Dr. L. C. Craig of the Rockefeller Institute; and Dr. H. A. Lardy, co-director of the Institute for Enzyme Research at the University of Wisconsin.

Dr. Sidney Kobre, professor of communications and public relations at FSU, has been named a member of the Educational Advisory Council of the Public Relations Society of America.

The FSU professor and other educators on the council will advise the nationwide Education and Research Committee.

Dr. Kobre, the author of "Practical, Profitable Public Relations" and "Dynamic Fource of Public Relations Today," is the chairman of the public relations committee of the Leon County Mental Health Association.

Dr. Manley R. Whitcomb, professor and director of bands, has been elected vice president of College Band Directors National Association.

The election took place at the organization's convention in Chicago, Ill. As part of his duties in the office, he will serve as chairman of the membership committee.

* * * * *

Dr. Ralph A. Bradley, head of the FSU Statistics Dept., has been elected a director of the American Statistical Association.

The Board of Directors of the 9000 member association consists of six directors and the officers.

* * * * *

Dr. John K. Folger, dean of the FSU Graduate School, has been elected to a three-year term on the executive committee of the Council of Graduate Schools in the United States.

The two-year-old organization, formed to promote graduate education, is working under a $50,000 grant from the Carnegie Foundation.

Folger joined the FSU faculty as dean in 1961 after serving for several years with the Southern Regional Education Board, of which he was director for research and programs.

* * * * *

James C. Hardy, FSU director of placement, has been named vice president of the Southern College Placement Association.

He was elected at the annual meeting of the organization in Atlanta, Ga. As vice president, he will be chairman of the program committee for next year's meeting, to be held in Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

The SCPA is made up of placement representatives from four-year accredited colleges and universities. Associate members are representatives from industry and government who are engaged in the selection and placement of graduates from these institutions.

Reprints of a series of articles by Dr. Margaret V. Campbell of the Modern Languages Dept. at FSU are being published in "La Nacion," a leading newspaper of Santiago, Chile.

Dr. Campbell spent three months in Chile this past summer, where she worked on the translation of an unpublished play by Marta Brunet, winner of the Chilean National Prize of Literature. While there she met many literary figures.

This week she received a letter from Leonardo Espinoza, editor of "La Nacion," with a copy of the Sunday issue containing her article "The Vaporous World of Maris Luisa Bombal."

LONG IS 'PLEASANTLY SURPRISED'

Thinclads Gear For Tournament

A winner of its division in last week's Montgomery (Ala.) Coliseum Relays, the Florida State track team will enter the Chattanooga Federation Championships Saturday at Chattanooga, Tenn.

The meet will be an open event, promising to bring together many unattached track and field stars from over Dixie. It will run all day Saturday, beginning that morning and running into the night.

FSU Coach Mike Long was "pleasantly surprised" with several Seminoles in FSU's opening competition at Montgomery, The Seminoles captured five first places to out-score 10 other teams entered in the independent college division. FSU had 35 points to runnerup defending champion Southwest Louisiana's 23 1/2.

Seminoles copping their events were Dick Roberts of St. Petersburg in the half-mile; Al Williams, Atlanta, shot put; Herb Kraft, Atlanta, broad jump; Terry Long, Tallahassee, low hurdles, and Hutch Johnson, Atlanta, 60-yard dash.

Others placing for FSU: Roberts, third in the mile run; Franklin Ford of Montgomery, Ala., fourth in the pole vault and high hurdles; Al Cato, Sumner, Ga., third in the 60-yard dash; Dennis Barton, Ft. Lauderdale, fourth in the two-mile; Hank Raehn, Orlando, fourth in the mile run. FSU's mile relay team finished third.

"Overall," said Long, "the meet went about like I expected. But a few of the boys gave me pleasant surprises."

Among them was shot-putter Williams, who threw the shot 54 feet and six inches, the best he has ever done. It was FSU's "most outstanding performance", Long thought.

Change Due For Freshmen

By HOWARD DENSON
Sports Editor

The freshman football team perhaps suffered some unjust criticism this past season, through no fault of its own; and apparently the flaws will be corrected before the 1963 season begins.

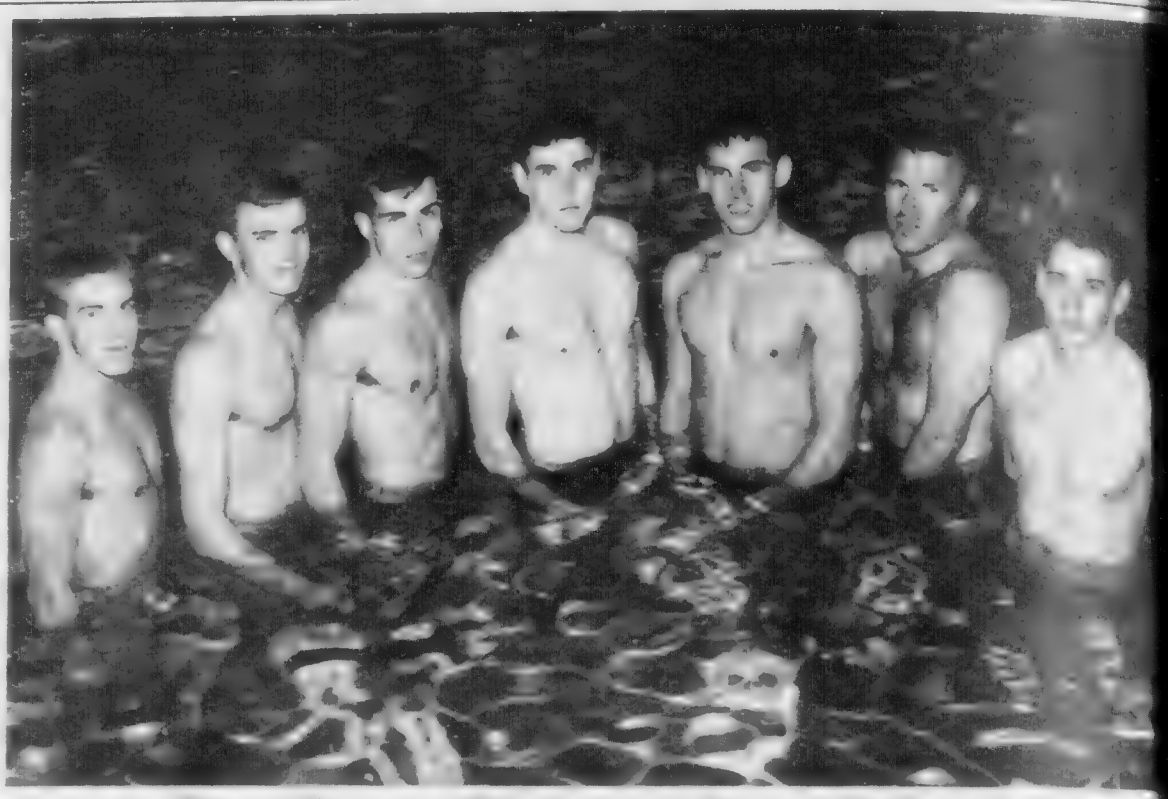
For instance, many have complained that the team didn't have a winning season, nor did it even win a game. This is true; there were two losses and a 14-14 tie with the Miami fledglings.

But there are reasons for the losses and no excuses need to be offerred for the tie. The week before the kickoffs of the losing matches, the frosh were busily occupied helping the varsity prepare for that "impossible" winning season.

The varsity did get the winning season, and one of the reasons was the freshman team that acted as the "opponents."

Furthermore, the team lacked a full time coach through most of the season, for Jim Proctor was finally handed the job only three days before the second game. It's grossly unfair to hold a rudderless team responsible for the direction which its season takes.

This crucial loss of leadership can create, and may have created, a feeling of "nobody cares about the freshmen." And a frosh team, which had seen three previous seasons with one coach, could naturally be expected to feel like 50 or 60 unwanted step-children.

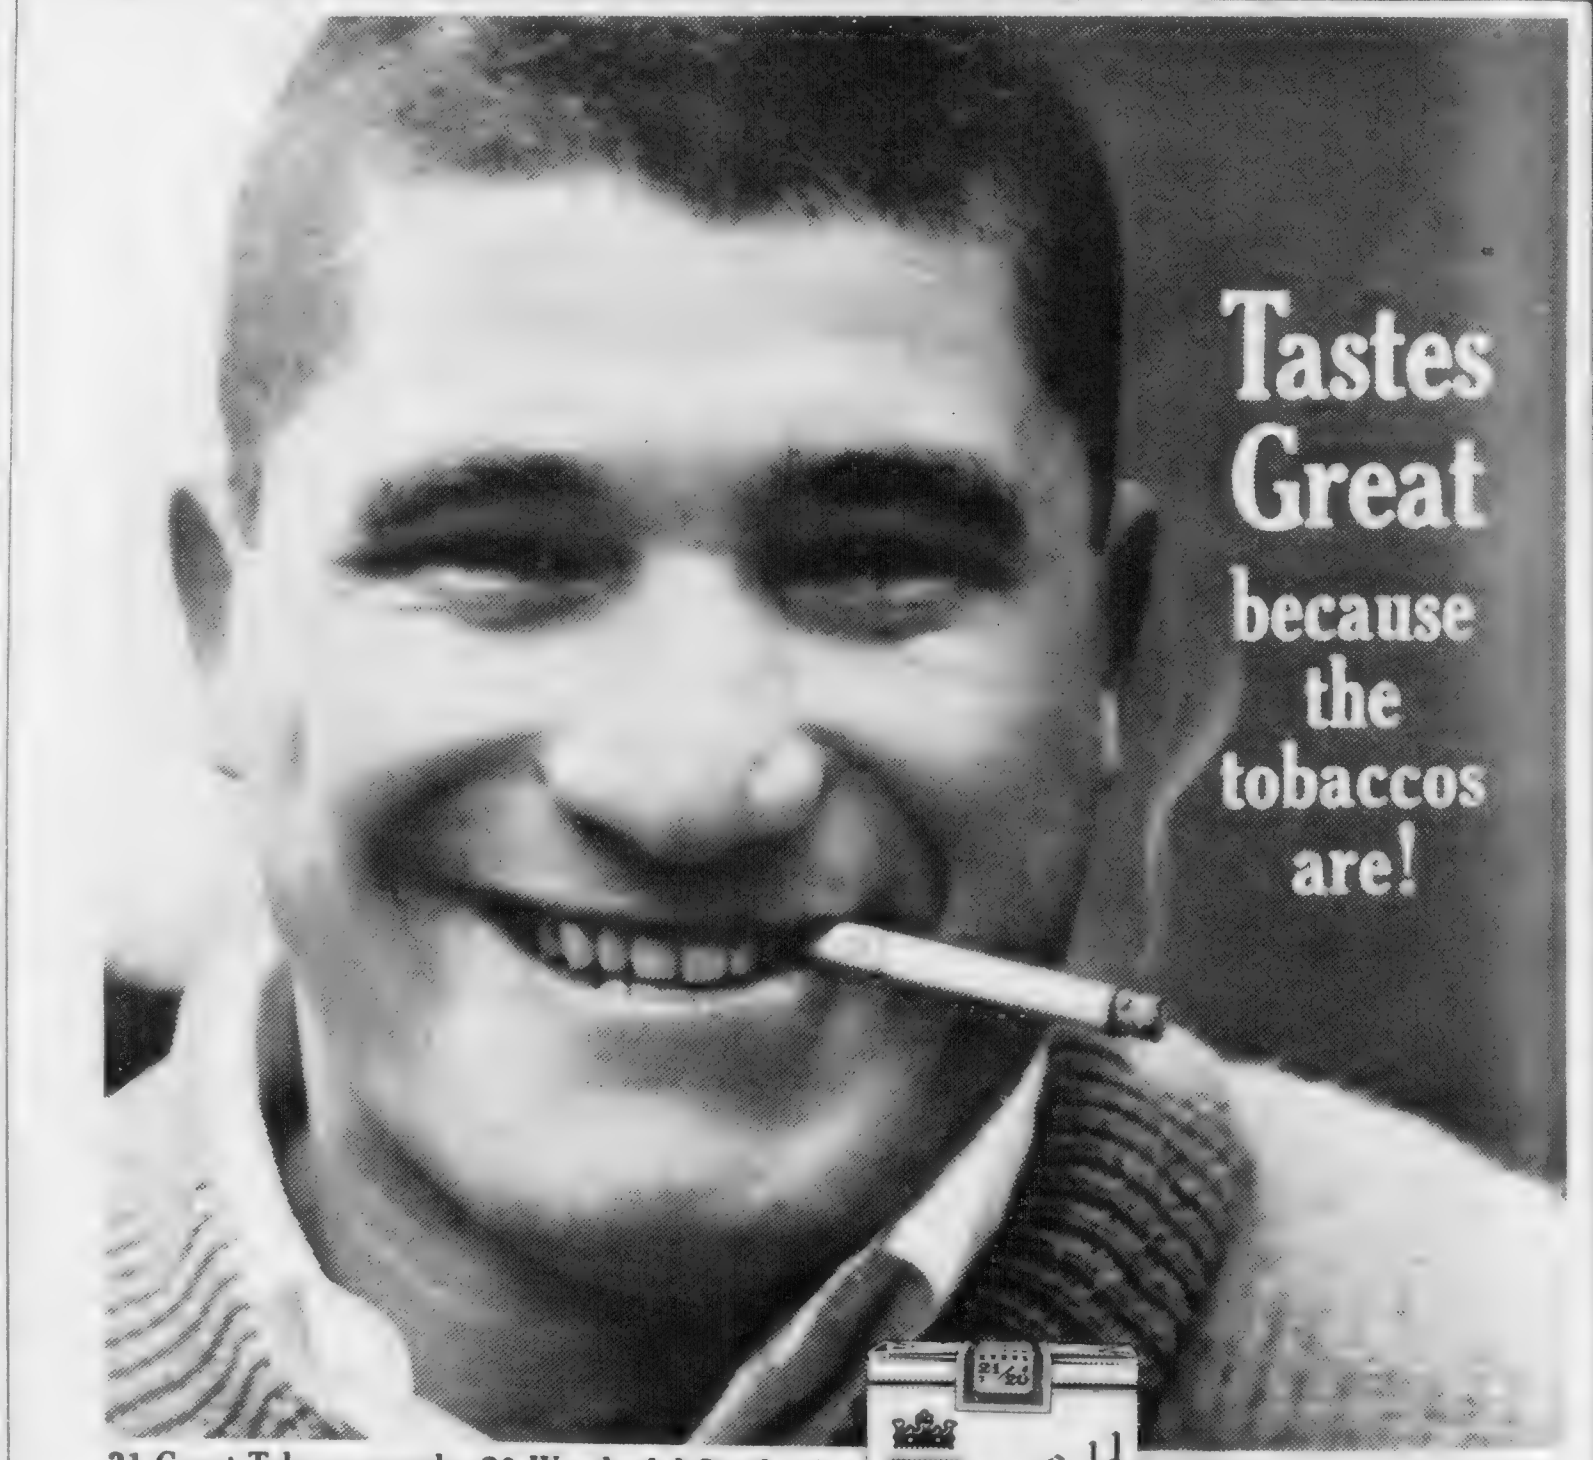


But things have changed.

First of all, Coach Proctor has been hired as a fulltime freshman coach. There will be someone from the start of practice to the final buzzer in the last game to oversee the freshmen's efforts.

Secondly, an important game has returned to the frosh's schedule--the FSU-UF freshman contest. Year in and year out, FSU has boasted a fine freshman team -- and so has Gainesville -- but except for 1960 there has been no answer to the question: "Who is better?"

In 1960, after the FSU varsity lost to the Gators, 3-0, the freshman extracted ample revenge in Doak S. Campbell Stadium to the tune of 26-11. Since then, UF has liked the idea of playing FSU's freshmen, although the Gators claim they have to play their quota of SEC teams first.



No doubt, this is partly true, but there is no doubt at all that the FSU-UF frosh game provides an invaluabe incentive to both schools and teams. Attendance, for instance, reached 7,000 at the first game. Last year's count wasn't even near the number of a normal basketball crowd.

Champion Talks On Economic Freedom

By JANE FRANZINO
Flambeau Staff Writer

In order to continue our free society it is essential to maintain our economic freedom, stated Dr. Champion at Mortar Board's Last Lecture Series.

We must continue to possess the right to work in the economic field of our choice and be able to work where ever we desire and spend the profits as we see fit, Champion, FSU vice president, said. This theory of economic freedom was stated from the beginning of our United States in the Declaration of Independence.

Champion went on to state that in the U.S. the individual is encouraged to pursue his own thoughts and actions. Yet, there is no economic freedom without individual freedom and no individual freedom without economic freedom.

Our greatest concern should be that we are not careless with our freedoms, the speaker said. We should fear the loss of them and be sure to preserve them. The more complex our society becomes, the more important the individual becomes.

Champion then cited ways to increase and utilize our material goods through modern science, savings, competition, individual sense of improvement, and through the greater population creating the need for more goods to maintain our standard of living.

Our aim is to use our resources for the maximum output, he asserted. The role of the free market is that it prevents one person from interfering with another in most activities. The market is impersonal and not centralized government. It permits wide diversity and proportional representation.

Our economic freedom guarantees the consumer the product of their choice where and from whomever he chooses to purchas it. The consumer has the vital role and prescribes what is to be produced and how much. The people should be and are the constant guardians of competition.

Champion concluded by telling his audience that economic freedom is ever alert to strength its principles.

Hunt Discusses Grammar Form

Dr. Kellogg W. Hunt, professor of English, will discuss a recent development in the field of grammar called "transformational grammar" at this week's English Coffee Hour today.

Dr. Hunt's address entitled "Newest of the New Grammars" will be at 4 p.m. in Westminster House.

According to Dr. Hunt, the newest grammar of ten years ago, "structural linguistics" have been replaced by "transformational grammar."

Its aim is to describe the rules that a native speaker appears to learn as he learns to produce and receive his native tongue.

Write-In Vote

All the votes in the past election of Student Body President and Vice President weren't split between the University and Student Parties.

A pair of independents were named as a ticket on one official write-in ballot, according to Sec. of Elections Ron Jones. One FSU voter cast his ballot for Thomas Riggins for President and Gerry Dobson for Vice

Nuclear War v. Human Values

Davidson Lectures At FSU Tomorrow

"Nuclear War vs Human Values" is the topic for the lecture to be given by William C. Davidson, chairman of the Physics Dept. at Haverford College in Haverford, Pa.

Sponsored by the Tallahassee chapter of the American Association for the United Nations, the lecture will be in i20 Geology Bldg. tomorrow at 8 p.m. Following the lecture will be a discussion period. All interested persons may attend.

Davidson received his Ph. D. from the University of Chicago in 1954. From 1948-54 he served as research director of Nuclear-Chicago. He was research associate of the Fermi Institute, University of Chicago from 1954-61 and an associate of the Argonne National Laboratory in Argonne, Ill. from 1956-61.

In 1958, Davidson was visiting associate professor at the University of Washington in Seattle. He has had articles published in the "Bulletin of Atomic Scientists" and is the co-author of the books "Nth Country Problem" and "1970 Without Arms Control."

Davidson participated in the Pugwash Conferences of Scientists on World Affairs in Kitzbuhel, Austria (1958) and in London, England (1962).

Among the various committees Davidson has served on are the Committee for Non-Violent Action, National Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy, the Advisory Board of Student Peace and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He has been vice-president of the Society for Social Responsibility in Science and vice-chairman of the Federation of American Scientists.

CCUN Holds Meet Sunday

The Collegiate Council for the United Nations will have a meeting for all interested students in Longmire Sunday.

This meeting is to inform the students of FSU about the purpose and the structure of the CCUN.

The Collegiate Council for the United Nations is a national organization devoted to building student support for the United Nations. The CCUN was organized in 1946 at the same time as the American Association for the United Nations and is affiliated with this association. The Council is organized in more than 350 colleges from Maine to Hawaii.

This is recognized as a non-government organization. CCUN's program includes campus forums on world affairs, student conferences on UN issues and the UNESCO fund drive for educational institutions in emerging nations.

March 10 there will be a meeting for formal election of officers and the organization and ratification of the Constitution. Details of this meeting will be published at a later date.

Expenditure Forms

All candidates who sought office in the past election may pick up their expenditure statements this week at the main desk in Longmire.

These statements, including itemized receipts for all expenditures, must be turned in by 5 p.m. Tuesday.

New Coed Dormitory Bidding Takes Place

Bids are now being accepted for the new coed dormitories to be finished either for the first or second trimester of '64.

Plans for the dormitories are now complete. Facing Call Stree the two eight-story dormitories will be connected by a comman recreation center. Each building, one for men and one for women, will house approximately 340 undergraduate students.

A new innovation will be the division of each floor into five suites, with eight students to a suite. The suites will consist of four bedrooms, a bath, and two study rooms. In addition, there will be a lounge with television on each floor. Both buildings will be completely air conditioned.

The idea of having coed dormitories is not new. Until last June, DeGraff Hall housed both men and women graduate students. However, with increased enrollment of the college, it was necessary to turn the dorm over to undergraduate women students only. Dean of Students R.R. Oglesby has expressed the hope that with the addition of the two new dormitories, DeGraff will revert to housing graduate students.

Architects for the propsed dormitories are Forrest Kelley and McElvy and Jennewein. A painting of the new buildings is now on display in Dean Oglesby's office in Westcott.

Apathy, Lethargy- Both Are Normal

Standing around waiting for the election returns the other night, I heard something that really hit home. "You mean only 3,800 people voted?" To the, by this time, not-so-green freshman, this might seem a little unreasonable, if not unconceivable. To somebody that has had some chance to sample student opinion and participation in other areas, it is nothing more than the norm.

The Soda Shop has its types. The Flambeau has its divergencies of opinion and occasionally there is some instructor around campus that dares be different, but these things are accepted. Just let the rest of the campus go its merry way, it'll make it fine without my having to get mixed up in any part of it.

"Hey, you know, this place sure is messed up, the girls have ludicrous rules and what about that radical that writes articles in the Flambeau, he should be told a thing or two."

Blame what you can on the trimonster, but just how far can that go? No, better yet, we're supposed to be grown up or at least we are sometimes treated like it. Let's really put the blame where it belongs. But where does it belong? That's hard to say, hard until you really look at it minus rose colored glasses.

Apathy, lethargy, need I go further? That's it in a capsule small, compact and very conceivable however, not very digestible. So many students just don't give a damn, especially the guy across the hall, and the one next door. Boy are they bad. Bad, well chances are that they may even be worse. Worse than you perhaps? Worse than me? Where do I come into the picture? You know, that's what I'm wondering. Where do you come into the picture? Do you know?

Thomas Riggins

Flexibility Protects 'Unalianable' Rights

What are "inalienable right"? This question, raised in my mind after Dobson's latest sally into the field of political verities, is one that, if answered, will allow us all to enjoy more those conservative apologists who insist in using the term without defining it. Mr. Dobson uses the term "inalienable" in a context that implies "eternal."

He attacks the concept of "flexibility" used by many liberals but he does so in an entirely misleading manner. Constitutional "flexibility" has nothing to do with his notions that liberals are trying to preach the relativity and changeableness of what are often referred to as "inalienable" human rights.

The flexibility that is used in rendering Constitutional opinions is used to defend those very rights that Mr. Dobson seems to think we are losing. When the Constitution was first written, slaves were included in the category of private property. Slavery, I think we would all agree, is a violation of human rights--yet it was one of the "inalienable" rights granted to certain Americans. What we consider to be human rights today may not be so considered in the future -- despite Constitutional "purists." The best we can hope for is a continuing liberal position as regards many of the old traditions which have assumed a sanctified position in the minds of many Americans--i.e., segregation, anti-unionism, Americans first, etc.

Whether we wish to admit it or not, a strict, literal interpretation of the Constitution is not feasible in the midst of the 20th C. Mr. Dobson seemingly loves to impute motives of the liberal position--I would like to ask him where he finds liberals advocating "the end justifies the means," or where he finds them forgetting "due process" and ignoring any Constitutional restraints.

The Congress has had ample opportunity to censure the Court if it was over stepping its bounds. It seems to me that the whole attack on the High Court is motivated by some nostalgic feeling that the ways of our ancestors (who produced our present unstable position) are best. Since I have yet to see any specific charge against the Court, and all the conservative positions thus far advanced are motivated by personal value judgments--which no amount of argument can change, I trust that the great storm of indignation directed against the court will soon subside and the Flambeau will settle into a calm eye while the conservatives blow away--all sound and fury.

Constitution Twisted, Warpe

By GERRY DOBSON

I should like to answer a question posed by a fellow Flambeau columnist. "How," he writes, "can the Constitution be a practically foolproof document against tyranny if it has led to so many abuses of power; where is the system of checks and balances anyhow?" Mr. Riggins, the Constitution has not led to abuses of power; exactly the reverse: it is the flaunting of our Constitution which has led to the abuses. "Where," you ask, "are the checks and balances?" That's what I'd like to know. How can there be checks and balances when the document is being continually twisted, bent and warped?

Who is doing it? Why those who say... and stop me if you've heard this in one of your classes... that the Constitution is not the rigid protector of our unalianable rights but is a "flexible" document, which was all right for its time, when we had an eighteenth-century agrarian economy, but which is now outmoded, and so must be remoulded to meet the modern times in which we live.

It is the phony "flexibility" which has led to the abuses of which I have spoken. Are we to believe that man's unalianable rights are "flexible?" Have they really changed since the Constitution was framed? If one of our rights can be destroyed because it is old-fashioned, how can we be sure that the "experts" will not regard others, more precious, in the same way?

The error of the liberal p is that they are willing t due process to effect the they desire. The ends, the justify the means. So they ha cided that it is all right to "reinterpret" the Cons rather than amend it, for the tution can be reinterpreted easily than it can be amende is why Dr. Dobson spoke principle of stare decisis, fo decisis makes it impossibel t terpret the Constitution. O interpretation has been made Supreme Court... under decisis... it can be reversed constitutional amendment.

It is reasonable to pose a q for Mr. Riggins. If the S Court can reinterpret the C ution, and thereby reverse the ing of a provision, what is to any of our freedoms from interpreted away? What if " thinkers" decided that free for example, is bad becaus be used to hurt people's Could the Court not reinter first amendment to den speech? Ridiculous, you say who framed the income ta ment would have thought it lous to imagine that incomes might be taxed at 9 it has come to pass. Who is to be able to predict that what "ridiculous" now will foreve main so?

Which brings us to Mr. C letter. He writes, "I am not interested in what the Justic ...I am interested in wh did." That, Mr. Coney, wa a precise statement of the position...forget the form law... forget legal princip let's be interested only in w we like the decision or no Coney feels, and with reaso Communists are a menace institutions. He therefore them dealt with severly but ently is not concerned with that if he ignores legal pre and principle for the Commu someone can ignore them fo

I am not concerned about th isions of the Supreme Court, the lack of legal justificat those decisions. Those case Coney mentioned in his first are absurd not because they re in decisions favorable to the munists, but because they we rived at through faulty lega soning, perhaps out of intentioned desire to "reinte the Constitution for our age. I shall demonstrate in other columns.

Overlook Foibles For Peace ?

Some campus collectivists react in interesting ways whenever the machinations of the Communist Party U.S.A. are exposed. At a recent campus showing of "Operation Abolition" several individuals with slight lists to port thought the film was "obviously biased." If the narrator showed certain aversion to 20th century citizens running around like denizens of some past geologic period, then perhaps the film was biased.

The Socialist camp seems to be in accord with the proposition that inveterate practitioners of murder, rape, and thievery leave something to be desired in the way of personality, but they seem very reluctant to oppose their activities in this country. Evidently their position is that we all have our faults and in the interest of world peace such foibles should be overlooked.

This stand is bad enough, but when certain groups militate directly in Communist behalf then it is time for an unfurling of company colors--which is exactly the function of The House Committee on Un-American activities.

When some of many prominent Communists and assorted sympathisers were called upon the carpet before the Committee in San Francisco in May of 1961 they acted like the cornered rats they were and on signal riots ensued.

After the muck of leftist rantings was sifted certain unadulterated facts came out in the wash:

1. Most leftist critics of the hearings and riots were not present at the scene.

2. The severest critics of the hearings were known communists.

3. Many people categorically settled for the communist version of the affair.

No evidence is more damning than recorded fact, and the backgrounds of some of those arrested supplied more than ample evidence that the whole thing was communist inspired.

Judith Collins, one of those arrested, had attended the 6th World Communist Youth Festival in Moscow in 1957 and shortly after had taken a trip to Red China against State Department advice.

Examples of this kind are legion and the sooner they are weeded out and fumigated the better our chances will become of remaining free Americans.

Students Learn Movie Manners

Last Friday night marked the first time in two years that I have ever watched the campus movie from the audience. It seemed odd that I was not up in the projection booth sweating over those pitiful old machines, and I found myself unconsciously twisting imaginary knobs to adjust the light. I realized what I was doing when the girl in the seat next to me slapped my face and hissed something about acting like a gentleman.

A lot has been written about the rude behavior at campus movies, and I am sorry to say that it is mostly true. But from my new perch among the multitude, sobbing and laughing their way through "Breakfast at Tiffany's," I thought I detected a few signs of change. When the inevitable interruptions came, there were a few scattered cat-calls, but the audience reaction, on a whole, was characterized by remarkable forebearance. This new-found ability to accept an uncontrollable, inevitable annoyance without losing their collective heads is a credit to the student body.

The greatest victory in this sudden change lies in the fact that the campus movie audience has still retained its spontaneity.

There is no livelier, more receptive group of moviegoers in the world. Have you ever tried watching a good comedy in an empty theatre? Half of the fun is taken out of it. But at the campus movie, you don't just share the fun; you drown in it. And during a deeply emotional scene you can almost hear a pin drop--except for an occasional muffled sob. A prime example occurred at the very performance I mentioned: when George Peppard (with misty eyes) kissed Audrey Hepburn (with misty eyes), the misty silence that followed was broken by a sound of inexpressible tenderness--a single, basso profundo voice moaning in ecstatic empathy.

'Us Theism'- A Dangerous Tendency

To the Editor:

It would appear to me as though the majority of American thought today is pervaded by a dangerous tendency to categorize individuals and institutions as belonging to one of two distinct groups: the Communist camp or the American camp. A former professor mine has chosen to label this tendency "us-theism."

On an exaggerated sense, our youth receive the idea that we in America are good, kind, religious, peace-loving peoples, while the Russians are evil, cruel, atheistic, war-mongering barbarians. This line of reasoning stimulates the concept that we in America are right, precisely because we are situated on this soil.

An extreme degree of categorization is of course present during a hot w r. There is the "right" side and the "wrong" side. Classifying everything as eigher American or Communist will eventaully lead to a complete inability to incorporate into our social order the ideas and innovations produced by persons foreign to our soil. I think we have succeeded in producing quite a large measure of intoler nce because of our categorizing.

I could remain in my room today, for fear of being bitten by a rattlesnake while crossing the campus. May not this analogy also be applied to the present situation? Had we the true desire for intellectual, c l, religious, and s l de ment, rather than worry a bite of Communism we would e tering ourselves rather than c suring the lines of others.

Why Pick On S. California

What business has John McCotter criticizing Southern California the he has been in the past few issues of the Flambeau? First it w miserable, lonely unemployed, then came the young girl with r hair and purple lips.

When was the last time you were in Miami, Mr. McCotter? The no unemployment there? You didn't see any young "lovelies" with hair dyed and teased and their faces plastered with makeup? If think you had best visit your optometrist as soon as possible. What any other sections of the country, Mr. McCotter? New York, Philade Chicago? In case you don't know, It's all the same all over the States. It's not a bed of roses for anyone anyplace.

I also think it was quite unfair to compare a sixth grade girl with co women. Naturally by the time people get to college they have ma enough to get away from excessiveness in any sort. If you had lo at girls your own age out there, I think you would have seen the types of girls as there are here at FSU. But of course s me p reflect their maturity by the company they keep. Baby Food Classed Effective Prison Diet

Baby food is more effective than bread and water as a menu for recalcitrant prisoners, in the opinion of the warden of Duval County's Jail at Jacksonville.

Chief Warden Tom Heaney, who has been named "Outstanding Jailer of 1962" by the National Jail Association, was the opening speaker as the two-day Eighth Annual Southern Conference on Corrections opened at FSU.

Speaking on "The Local Jail and Stockade in the Correctional Process," Heaney told the assembled prison wardens, parole and probation personnel, delinquency specialists, educators, and social workers attending the southwide meeting sponsored by FSU's Corrections and Criminology Dept.

"You should try to give inmates all the privileges you can while keeping in mind custody, control, and contraband items."

Three wholesome meals should be served a day, he said, adding that "a good wholesome meal service is the backbone of every jail. Your menu should vary and no. be the same each day of every week."

Heaney, a 46-year-old native of Jacksonville who has been with the Duval County Sheriff's Office since 1947 and has been chief warden of the jail since 1958, told his listeners that privileges should be removed when prisoners make trouble.

"Should an inmate violate any rules or regulations you can control him best by taking away privileges such as radios and TV and mail," he said.

"We found serving baby food to unruly prisoners was much more effective than bread and water. Isolation of inmates by themselves is always an effective control. Most inmates can't stand this after enjoying good meals, radio and TV and other inmates with them."

Yesterday's discussions, held principally in the Strozier Library Lecture Hall, ended with a night session at 8 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall. The chairman of the National Parole Board of Canada, T. George Street, and the chairman of the U.S. Board of Parole, Richard Chappell, were on a panel discussing what protects society most--confinement or probation and parole.

Some of yesterday morning's discussions concerned controlling delinquency. Judge G. Bowdon Hunt of the Polk County Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court said juvenile delinquency has been a problem for a long time but in the past might have been referred to as "wild boys of the road" and "flaming youth."

"We can go back far enough and find that at one time half the children were delinquents of the most serious type--when Cain slew his brother because of jealousy," said Hunt.

"In 1899 at the insistence of the Chicago Women's Club came a new court, the juvenile court, our country's primary contribution to our court system," he said. "About this court Dean Roscoe Pound has said: 'This new form of justice is the greatest step forward since the Magna Carta.' "

FALCON IS "NEW KING OF THE MOUNTAINS"* IN TOUGHEST 2,500-MILE MONTE CARLO RALLYE

Special edition Falcon V-8 "Sprint" defeats the world's best in final 490-mile test section on icy Alpine cliff roads . . . then outperforms every sedan on famous Monaco circuit!

[illegible] the world's roughest winter ordeal [illegible] an astonishing new brand of total performance. Four days and three nights through an inferno of ice, snow, freezing fog, endless curves [illegible] 2,500 miles against an implacable time schedule, designed to try a car's reliability, road-holding [illegible] performance to the ultimate. Experts said a [illegible] couldn't hope to finish—and two [illegible] of the 296 competitors did drop out. But [illegible] only placed first and second in its class, it defeated every car, regardless of class, on the brutal Chambery-Monte Carlo final leg, set [illegible] among all finishers in all of the six special test sections—and showed its heels to every sedan in the dramatic three-lap elimination on Monaco's famous round-the-houses course. Campus Chest Contributions Clim

By CHRIS McGLASSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

The "Campus Chest Fever" of giving has been a very noticeable disease on the FSU campus these past few months.

With the drive ending January 29, $1,066 had been counted and still more money is being donated.

However, the goal was set at $1,600 and all indications say this goal will be reached.

To eliminate the various individual drives, the Campus Chest has consolidated all their efforts into one fund. Out of this money comes FSU's donations to Helen Keller's World Crusade for the Blind, the Foster Parent Plan and the World University Service. These worthwhile organizations have been picked by a student government committee delegated to supervise the drive, set the goal for the year and decide where the money should be contributed.

Helen Keller's World Crusade for the Blind has become a symbol of hope for all the many blind people throughout the world. Mrs. Keller's dream is "that every blind child have an opportunity to receive an education and every blind adult, a chance for training and job placement. Since its founding in 1959, the crusade has helped thousands of blind men and women to obtain both an education and a job. The crusade is under the sponsorship of the American Foundation for Overseas Blind.

The FSU student body recently adopted a young Colombian boy, Teofilo, under the Foster Parent Plan. The contributions from the Campus Chest enable his family of five to eat regularly and send the four children to school. Without these donations, Teofilo's family would be living on 31 cents a day with a dole of 7-1/2 cents a day in addition.

His father died, leaving an uneducated and tradeless widow to care for four children. To provide money for them, she takes in washing from various families in Bogota, Colombia. The Campus Chest "adoption" brings Teofilo closer to America. He and his family can now be assured of a monthly grant of $8, food, cloting and special medical care.

The World University Service helps to build schools in small farm villages and war-torn countries. It also aids in sending foreign students to school. Through the Campus Chest's contributions, many hundreds of brilliant overseas students are being education to take a leading role in their country's growth.

Libby Gentile is chairman of the Campus Chest committee. Other members are Fred Harper, Molly Darrah, Louise Carter, Patty Childs, Bucky Fry, Ginger Strobeck, Jay Geisenhof, Bob Hays, Judy Loucks, Marsha Lynn, Susan Mauger, Bill Mercer, Suzie Miller, Jane Turnage, Mike Henninger and Lisa Bagley.

Most of the sororities and fraternities, dormitories and off-campus houses have reached their assigned goals. The students are to be commended for support of this student government project.

Some groups have even sponsored events to raise money over a[bove] their announced contributio[n]. Kappa Delta-Pi Kappa Phi [A]uction and the Sigma Kappa [V]ety Show, are two of the re[cent] forts. Campus organizations [hav]ing their set goals will be [no]as soon as all the results a[re] lated.

WFSU - FM Plans Weekend's Programs

WFSU-FM will begin broadcasting at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow to present a complete performance of Richard Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde," from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

Singing principal roles will be soprano Birgit Nilsson as "Isolde," princess of Ireland; tenor Kal Liebl as "Tristan," a Cornish knight; bass Jerome Hines as "King Marke," Tristan's uncle; baritone Walter Cassel in the role of "Kurvenal," Tristan's servant; and mezzo soprano Irene Dalis as "Brangaene," Isolde's friend and attendant. Gerog Solti will conduct.

"Tristan und Isolde," first performed in Munich is 1865, had its Metropolitan Opera premiere in 1886.

Wagner was in the midst of composing his famous "Ring" cycle of operas when he put these aside in favor of the "Tristan" legend. This latter work has little of the complexity or violent action of the "Ring," yet after 50 rehearsals of "Tristan unde Isolde" at the Vienna Opera House some time after its Munich premiere, it was abandoned as virtually impossible.

The first intermission "Opera News on the Air" will bring together Fritz Reiner, dean of the world's orchestra conductors, and Edward Downes, noted music critic and author and also quizmaster on the opera broadcasts. They will analyze Wagner's opera, and Reiner will recount briefly several highlights of his career.

Downes' panelists during the second intermission Opera Quiz will be Albert Goldberg, music critic of the Los Angeles "Times;" author and conductor Robert Lawrence; John Rosenfield of the Dallas "Morning News;" and actor-author Walter Slezak.

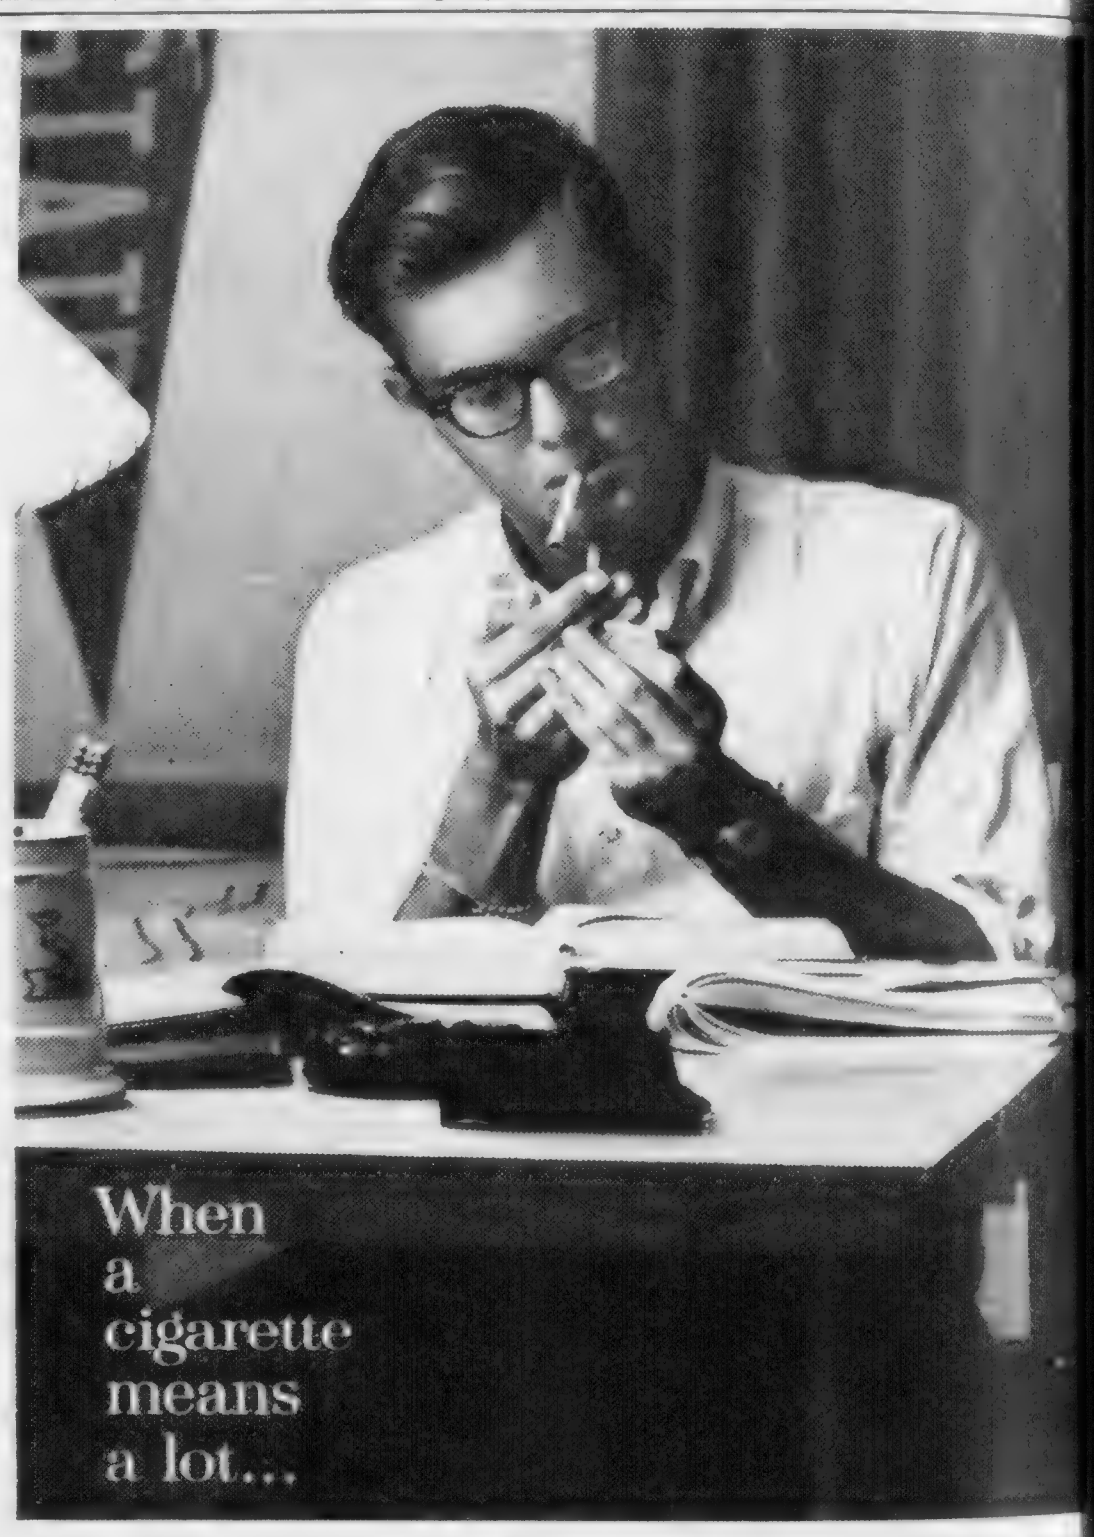
Army Officer Life Depicted

An opportunity for college juniors to preview life as an officer in the Women's Army Corps is offered by the US Army this summer.

This program, providing the potential officer with first-hand knowledge of the diversity of military fields open to young ladies, has grown rapidly since 1957. The course consists of a four-week summer program for women 18-29 years of age in their junior year or are first semester seniors in an accredited college or university.

While in training at Fort McClellan, Alabama, these young ladies receive approximately $120 and benefits such as modern housing, meals, round-trip transportation, and access to numerous recreational facilities keyed to the young college set.

There is no obligation after graduation for those who enroll in the plan. Detailed information can be obtained by contacting the WAC Career Guidance Officer, USARMS, 2137 Liberty Street, Jacksonville, Flori-



Cotillion

Bonnie Bell and Richard White were presented with the first annual award for outstanding Cavalier and Cotillion of the Year at the annual Valentine's Dance sponsored jointly by the dance honoraries.

The two members received the award for "outstanding contributions to the organization," Carol Rusina, club spokesman stated.

Christine Harrison and Ann Alppey were tapped by honorary Sigma Delta Pi. Diana Brown and Linda Jo Wahl were tapped by Alpha Lambda Delta.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA's Mary Lois Stone was selected as Lambda Chi Alpha Sweetheart. Connie Gowen was a runnerup in the "Smoke Signanls" feature girl. Mary McCarty is a new pledge.

KAPPA DELTA's guest this week was Mrs. Paul T. Arnold, Gamma province president.

KAPPA SIGMA's awards banquet is Monday. Dr. Gordon Blackwell will be the guest speaker. The Kappa Sigs and the DG's will have a fish fry this afternoon. Tomorrow night there will be a "Stereo" party at the house. The Kappa Sigma "Merrymen" played at the Talem last night.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA will have a party tonight with music by the "Chaotics." The theme is "West Side Story." Tomorrow all the brothers and their dates will have a picnic at Lake Talquin.

PHI KAPPA TAU won the intramural football championship. Guests for a formal dinner Sunday are Dean Loucks and his wife and Dr. Murphy. The pledge class officers this trimester are: Fred Lamb, president; Jim Gambill, secretary; Barry Caswell, treasurer. Two new pledges are Bill Davis and John Witherspoon.

PHI MU's gave an award to Barbara Norman for highest scholarship and to Anne Kennedy for most improved scholarship. Two new pledges are Joann Zercle and Sue Huffer. Carol Reid was initiated into the National Spanish Honorary, Sigma Delta Pi.

PI KAPPA PHI's new pledge is Bill Whidden. Tomorrow night there will be a "Ship Wreck Party" featuring the "Ramblers."

SIGMA KAPPAs extend their congratulations to the winners of the Variety Show: First place fraternity, Delta Tau Delta; first place sorority, Chi Omega; second place fraternity, Pi Kappa Phi; second place sorority, Kappa Alpha Theta. The Sigma Kappas wish to thank their emcee, Kelly Reid, the judges, and the student body for their cooperation and support. Best pledge this week is Julie Fuller.

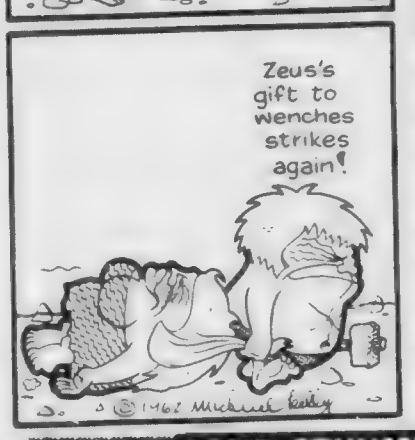
SIGMA NU's pledge class honored Brother Jim Fisher as "Active of the Week." There was a jukebox party at the house last Friday night. The Alpha Xi Deltas and the Sigma Nus are looking forward to competing in this year's Soapbox Derby.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON will be the host to delegates from Sig Ep chapters who will be attending the State IFC Conference at FSU this weekend. The delegates will come from the University of Florida, Florida Southern, Stetson, University of Miami, and University of Tampa. The pledge class chose Steve Shepherd as "Brother of the Week." Wednesday a scholarship dinner was held to encourage improved grades in the chapter. Brothers and pledges who made a 3.0 or better enjoyed a steak dinner, while the others were served beans and franks. Tomorrow the Sig Eps will join the Gamma Phi's in competing in the Soapbox Derby. Friday and Saturday nights record parties will be held at the house for brothers and their guests.

THETA CHI's three new pledges are Chuck Robinson, Larry Radford, and Dick Herman. Ray Whitehead is the newly elected president of the pledge class. Last Weekend J.C. Byrd, traveling field secretary of the Grand Chapter of the Theta Chi, visited Gamma Rho Chapter. He aided in the planning of the forth coming Florida Conclave of Theta Chi chapters in the state.

Cheerleader Tryouts Set

Cheerleading tryouts will be held Feb. 25-27 from 3 to 5 p.m. on Landis Green, newly-elected head cheerleader Sherry Harris announced today.



Miss Harris emphasized that the tryouts are open to the public and both men and women, upperclass or freshman students, are eligible.

Finals will be March 1 at the Opperman Amphitheatre, from 4 to 6 p.m.

Miami Cagers To Be Hosts For Seminoles

Florida State's basketball team, a devious surprise all season, goes where even angels fear to tread this weekend.

The Seminoles, 14-9 on the year with two games to play, will tangle with towering Miami tomorrow night in Miami Beach Convention Hall--where the Hurricanes, 20-4 and headed for the National Invitational Tournament, have lost only one of 12 games this season.

Still, Coach Bud Kennedy's Seminoles have a binge of five straight victories going. And Kennedy would like just one more -- either Miami or Tampa, which FSU will meet the following Monday in Tampa.

"It's no secret you've got your work cut out for you when you play in Miami," says Kennedy. "They're tough anywhere; tougher at home. But we've beaten 'em there before, and maybe we've got a chance to do it again."

The Hurricanes have made a national splash this winter With five players scoring in double figures, they're ranked second nationally in scoring and seventh in rebound percentage. Early this week, Miami was selected to play in the National Invitational Tournament.

Leading Hurricanes have been 7-1 center Mike McCoy and 6-7 forward Rick Barry. McCoy is averaging better than 20 points and 12 rebounds per game. Barry is doing better than 19 points per game, and his 15.6 rebound average is eleventh in the nation.

FSU nudged Miami, 77-74, in an overtime game played in Tallahassee Jan. 12. The 'Canes have scored more than 100 points in six games this year.

The Seminoles have been a definite surprise this year, when it is considered that only one starter returned from last season. Their victims have included Houston, Alabama (three times), Georgia (twice), and of course, Miami. Following Saturday night's exhibition win over the Seminoles, Phillips 66 Coach Bud Browning said FSU "has the best defense of any college team we've played this year."

The team s only senior -- forward Charlie Long of Louisville, Ky. -- has been red-hot of late. He has hit 101 of 186 field goal tries in the last dozen games and is averaging 20.8 points per game over that span. Other FSU starters will be forward Cal Huge (6.4), center Jerry Shirley (11.2) and guards Pete Rogers (10.6) and Wally Dale (5.5).

The Miami game will be a homecoming for two Seminoles. Dale played high school basketball at Coral Gables. Reserve guard Pete Gonzalez prepped at Miami Senior High. Both were All-City selections.

With Florida State and Stetson yet to be played in regular season competition, Miami can break its own one-season scoring mark, but must do it against two clubs which are tough defensively. Florida State, for instance, has limited all foes to a mere 66.2 points per game. Stetson gave up only 64 points to Miami when they humbled Miami in DeLand and this is Miami's lowest score for the year.

Miami, owning wins over Providence (also in the NIT), over Duke which is a cinch for the NCAA tournament; Pittsburgh, Boston College, Cornell, St. Johns, and Houston has played its best games against its more proficient foes.

The Bruce Hale coached quintet has four seniors and a sensational sophomore, Barry, for its starters.

Barry and the 7-1 McCoy each have captured 307 rebounds but McCoy has played four more games. The latter is Miami's top point marker with a 20.1 average.

All five Miami starters are scoring 11.2 or better and the Hurricanes enjoy a 56.5 bulge in rebounding.

Miami's basketball team has had at least one player who has made 20 points or more in every game this season, a school record. Barry and McCoy each have hit the 20 point mark 12 times. Every other starter and Wayne Beckner of the reserves has at least one 20 point game.

McCoy is nearing a school record in field goal shooting.

FOUR NEW YORKERS WILL BOOST FSU'S TANKERS

...as they compete in the Georgia Invitational today and tomorrow. They are, left to right, senior Risto Pyykko of Brooklyn; sophomores Jim Mullally of Queens Village, Bob Durocher of Ozone Park, and Roy Davis of Flushing. The results of yesterday's match with Georgia Tech were not available at press time.

SPRING GAME IS MAR. 30

Football Shifts Have Begun Before Spring Drills Start

Florida State's 1963 football team doesn't open Spring practice until tomorrow, but already the inevitable shifting of personnel and experimentation has begun.

Afraid FSU would have to junk its popular three-team system due to recent NCAA rules changes, Coach Bill Peterson said he was "looking for more two-way men."

Then the juggling began. Peterson emphasizes that all changes come under the heading of "experiments," subject to rapid change.

Probably the most significant experiment involves junior Fred Biletnikoff of Erie, Pa., a 6-1, 183-pounder who lettered at end last season on the offensive (Warriors) unit. Biletnikoff came to FSU being hailed as "potentially the finest pass receiver we've ever had," but he'll be given a strong look at right halfback.

In the pre-practice depth chart, Biletnikoff has been placed on the first or second unit.

"In our offense," explained Peterson, "the right halfback has to have good hands, speed and explosiveness. He doesn't necessarily have to be a strong runner, more of a flanker back. We feel Fred fits the bill offensively, though he has some work to do on defense."

Other noteworthy position switches --again, experimental ones--involve a pair of highly-promising junior linemen and a former defensive back. Tackle Dale MacKenzie of Clearwater and guard Steve Slay of Atlanta will be tried at center, a potential problem position. And ex-defensive fullback Dave [illegible] Jacksonville right [illegible] left halfback.

Sewanee To Meet FSU Tomorrow

The Sewanee Gymnastic team will battle the FSU gymnasts Saturday night in Tully Gymnasium. Preliminary bouts, featuring several youngsters from the Junior Olympic Wrestling program, will start at 7, and the main dual meet will begin at 7:30. The Tennesseans are, left to right, co-captain Hank Haynes (defending SEC champ), Jacksonville's Bill Hamilton (third in SEC), and co-captain Frank Pinney (177-pound champion of the Chattanooga Invitational).

Ballet Troupe Performs Two Highly Popular Productions

The San Francisco Ballet will perform two highly popular productions, "Jest of Cards" and "Original Sin" in FSU's Westcott Auditorium Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Tickets for the Artist Series productions, both at 8:30 p.m., are $3.50 apiece for the public. Students may obtain tickets by presenting their ID cards. They are on sale in Westcott Ticket Office. "Jest of Cards" will be presented on Tuesday night and "Original Sin" on Wednesday night.

"Jest of cards" was a sellout for two weeks at the Seattle World's Fair and "Original Sin" created an equal amount of interest when performed by th California troupe.

When "Jest of Cards" was given a world premiere in San Francisco last spring, critics hailed it as "A grand slam." One reviewer wrote, "It marks a new leap forward in the company's ever advancing creative maturity. It has appeal to the imagination and to the sense of humor."

Another critic called it "an authentic masterpiece... a remarkable feat of imagination." Life Magazine devoted two full pages to it and termed it "one of the two major ballet events of 1962."

When Christensen decided to tackle the problem of creating a completely American ballet, he turned to one style of music unmistakably American; jazz. He called on the musical director of the Modern Jazz Quartet, John Lewis. Lewis compiled with an original score in six parts which he terms, "jazz inflected" and "Original Sin" resulted.

The choreography follows the intense patterns of music with touches of humor emerging unrestrained. The libretto, written by nationally known writer and literary critic Kenneth Rexroth, tells of the creation of Adam and Eve and their eventual banishment from the Garden of Eden.

The highly imaginative sets and costumes were designed by John Furness, noted TV designer.

When the ballet was premiered in San Francisco, local critics acclaimed it a "resounding hit." So did "Time" and "Newsweek." They called it highly successful, highly entertaining, highly exciting. It has become one of the biggest box office hits in the company's repertoire.

BOP Reprimands 'Flambeau' Editor

Flambeau editor Ben Sharp was reprimanded by the Board of Student Publications by a 4-3 vote in a special session called Thursday. Chairman Toni DiCarlo broke a 3-3 deadlock to cast the deciding vote.

The reprimand came as a result of charges brought by Student Body President Ken van Assenderp for misrepresenting his sentiments in news stories appearing in the Flambeau last week.

Van Assenderp contended that news stories appearing in Feb. 18 and 19 editions of the Flambeau misrepresented his views on the office of Student Body President.

An article appearing in Feb. 18 issue of the Flambeau quoted van Assenderp as being "out of the current political races." Van Assenderp stated that he had not endorsed any candidate but that "at no time have I ever declared myself completely out of the current political races."

On the following day, an article appeared stating that "Student Body President Ken van Assenderp changed his tune." Van Assenderp stated that, "Once I had made up my mind, I never wavered."

Van Assenderp formally charged that the two stories were a direct misrepresentation of his feelings and and thereby resulted in the defamation of the character and the loss of respect for the office of Student Body President.

Both Van Assenderp and Sharp admitted a misunderstanding had resulted over conversations occuring Thursday and Friday nights prior to the publication of the stories in question. Each took part of the blame for these misunderstandings.

In another part of Board action, a committee was selected to study a policy to correct such happenings in the future.

The committee drew up a rough draft of a recommendation which would limit present and future Flambeau editors' participation in student politics.

Committee Chairman John Schaffner said the committee intends to take its time and draw up a very carefully worded recommendation.

"It appears imperative that we limit political participation of present and future editors, however, we should not attempt limitation on the personal level," he stated.

The committee will meet again to formalize the recommendation prior to the next reularly scheduled meeting of the BOP. Committee recommendations will be considered at that time for inclusion in the Board's policy.

Cheerleader Tryouts

Cheerleader tryouts for upperclassmen and freshman men and women will begin this afternoon at 3 on Landis Green.

Practice sessions for the final tryouts will be today through Wednesday.

Final tryouts will be held at 4 p.m. Friday in the Opperman Outdoor Theater.

Dr. Hunt Discusses New Transformational Grammar

The newest of the new grammars recently developed by the "transformationalists" was discussed by Dr. Kellogg W. Hunt at the English Coffee Hour Friday.

"Recently the basic rules of the English Language have been going through a counter revolution; not a fast moving one, yet still moving ahead."

The basic techniques of learning the English language was taught by the structural linguists. By their methods we learn the language by speaking rather than by their writings. They use voice tones for emphasis to denote parts of speech, commas, and the ends of sentences.

The structuralists define a noun as a name of a person, place or thing. "What is the part of speech for man? Why it's a noun," a structuralist would say with hesitating. "Yet," continues Hunt, "what would you conclude from these two examples of 'man.' Man the rope, or rope the man. A person would only know their uses by the differences learned by the patterns of speech. It is common to all of us, but what about the people who don't take these for granted?"

Noel Chansky is considered the father of traditionalism. He combines varied fields such as psychology, symbolic logic, math, and linguistics to define the English language.

A typical transformationalist was Paul Roberts. He gave readible exact rules to generate all sentences of language with a minimum of complexity.

The irregular verb "to go" points out the complexities of the English language. For instance, he went; he had gone; he was going; he had been going; he will have been going--how possibly can people make full use of these forms without having a formula?

"Even though English is not as complicated as the traditional makes it appear, there should be some definite rules," says Hunt.

As a result of this "counter-revolution" the traditionalists developed a formula for each type of sentence that could be written in English.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the student body as a whole or the administration of the Florida State University. Editorials represent the opinions of the editorial staff of the Flambeau with the initials of the writer following the editorial. Columns and letters to the Editor reflect only the opinion of the writer.

An Unbiased Report

The Class Officers Bill submitted to Senate by the Trimester Committee will be discussed at a meeting of the Senate Finance and Organizations Committee this afternoon. This bill has been in committee for two weeks now and will probably be back on the floor of the Senate for final discussion and voting shortly.

Luther Kramer, author of the Report for the Student Body on Class Officers, will be attending this meeting as a guest to answer any questions which the committee might have with regards to the information in his report.

The Kramer report, which is presently being prepared for general distribution, is probably the most authoritative and unbiased compilation of information on duties, functions and purposes of class officers ever written. Quite possibly it will prove to be the most exptensive and most encompassing analysis of the Class Officers of FSU ever attempted.

Kramer got most of the information for his report from extensive talks with members of the administration, student government officers and class officers themselves.

In order to gain a national perspective he corresponded with the administrators of other schools in the South and with the University of Pittsburgh -- which adopted the Trimester before FSU -- to find how their class officers function and how they have adapted to the accelerated pace of higher education.

Mr. Kramer's background at FSU supports the veracity of his report. He has served as President of the Foundation Scholarship Organization for two years and is currently a vice president of APO.

He has never been associated in any way with class officers, and was consequently able to compile this report with unbiased judgement and assimilate the results of his investigation into recommendations which can be looked upon as being fair and equitable by persons of both sides of the rising class officers controversy.

Among other things in the report Kramer has investigated all of the possibilities of Senate action concerning the problems of Class Officers. One of the proposals considered in the report is that which is before the Finance and Organizations Committee.

This committee and other members of the Senate can learn a great deal from Mr. Kramer and his report.

Bakunin Contra Marx

In this and later columns I shall outline some of the decisions of the Supreme Court which are, in my opinion, and in that of many other Americans, indeed "ridiculous." But ridiculous not so much as tragic for the freedoms we hold so dear, and the great Nation which has given so much to us all.

Among the most patent examples of such decision is one which was mentioned by Mr. Coney, the Slochower Case (Slochower vs. Board of Higher Education, 350 US 551). Harry Slochower was an Associate Professor at Brooklyn College, a branch of the Public School System of the City of New York. Slochower refused to answer questions about Communists before a Senate subcommittee and, in accordance with a provision of New York's City Charter, was fired.

Slochower appealed, and the Supreme Court held that since he might not have realized that his refusal to testify would cost him his job, he was entitled to reinstatement with $40,000 in back pay. In this decision the Court held that which even grade schoolers realize is in error...that ignorance of the law relieves one of the responsibility for violating it. But this is not all of the story.

The Board of Higher Education of the City of New York then petitioned for a rehearing, pointing out that there was irrefutible evidence that Harry Slochower had realized that his failure to answer would cost him his job. Even though the Supreme Court acknowledged that the facts had been misstated in its decision, the Court nonetheless refused to rehear the case, allowing its decision, based on error to stand. As a result, it is today virtually impossible for a State or local government to fire Reds from positions in tax-supported institutions. All the individual would have to do if he were accused is to refuse to answer under the Fifth Amendment. And lest someone say that a person has a "right" to such a job, it should be pointed out that, as extensive as our rights under the Constitution are, the "right" to employment is not one of them. Conversely, though, it would seem that the taxpayers should definitely have a right to dismiss a person who refuses to say if he is a member of an international conspiracy dedicated to the destruction of our way of life. Justice Harlan, in his dissent, makes this point.

Another disturbing decision one might mention is the Steve Nelson Case (Pennsylvania vs Nelson, 350 US 497), which I shall discuss in another column. This case destroyed

Ridiculous Decisions Named

This article is based on that of Donald Clark Hodges in the April 1960 issue of the Am. Jour. of Economics and Sociology.

I would like to devote this column to an analysis of the historical basis of the current split in the Communist World between Russia and China. The split was not caused by a soft line as regards Marx by Chairman Khrushchev, but by the Bakuninist doctrines of Mao. Marxism does not expound the equalization of labor and salary (wages), nor in the potential revolutionary actions of the backward nations, nor the revolutionary potential of the peasantry (contra Lenin.) Lenin deviated from Marx to Bakunin when he destroyed the bureaucratic divisions of the State.

It is during the revolutionary period that Bakunist ideals find wide exceptance -- stable regimes tend to a revised, liberal Marxism. China is still in its embryonic stages and thus attacks K. for his position within a more mature liberal Marxian society.

Bakunin attacked Marx's conception of the proletariat, and correctly foretold of its coalescing into two rival classes. This invalidated Marx's claim to represent the wage earners and his opinions regarding the classless society. He saw in Marxism the seeds of a new type of exploitation: "Possessing neither intellectual nor institutional command over the means of production, the manual workers...are as much at the mercy of salaried employees under socialism as they once were dependent upon the accumulated power of capital."

Smith Gov. Backs Kellum

To the Editor:

As Governor of Smith Hall, I would like to express approval of the stand that Kellum Hall has taken in regards to its dispute with the Secretary of Finance. Whether men's dormitories are not under Student Government regualtions is a question that has not yet been clearly answered, but at the present time Student Government policy, Honor Court precedent, and University Publications support Kellum's belief that Secretary Milwee's revocation of their fund-raising "Rights" under a Student Government regulation is not justified.

However, in light of the past policy of Men's Senate towards men's residence halls and in light of the several disputes in recent years, the problem of to what extent -- if any -- men's doms are subject to Student Body Statutes is one that Senate and men's Dormitory Governments should clarify once and for all.

Flambeau Interviews New President

By LYNN BISSLAND
Flambeau Staff Reporter

"...ective administrator is one ...s found that respect must be ...al thing," said Johnny Smith, ...ent-elect, as he leaned thoughtfully over his desk with his hands folded in front of him.

"He realizes that being a good leader depends on his respect for others as well as their respect for him," continued Smith. "Decisions, whether right or wrong, if honestly made, are the mark of a good administrator."

Smith was born and raised in Melbourne, Florida, where he spent the first 10 years of his life in a ranch type place not far from Indian River.

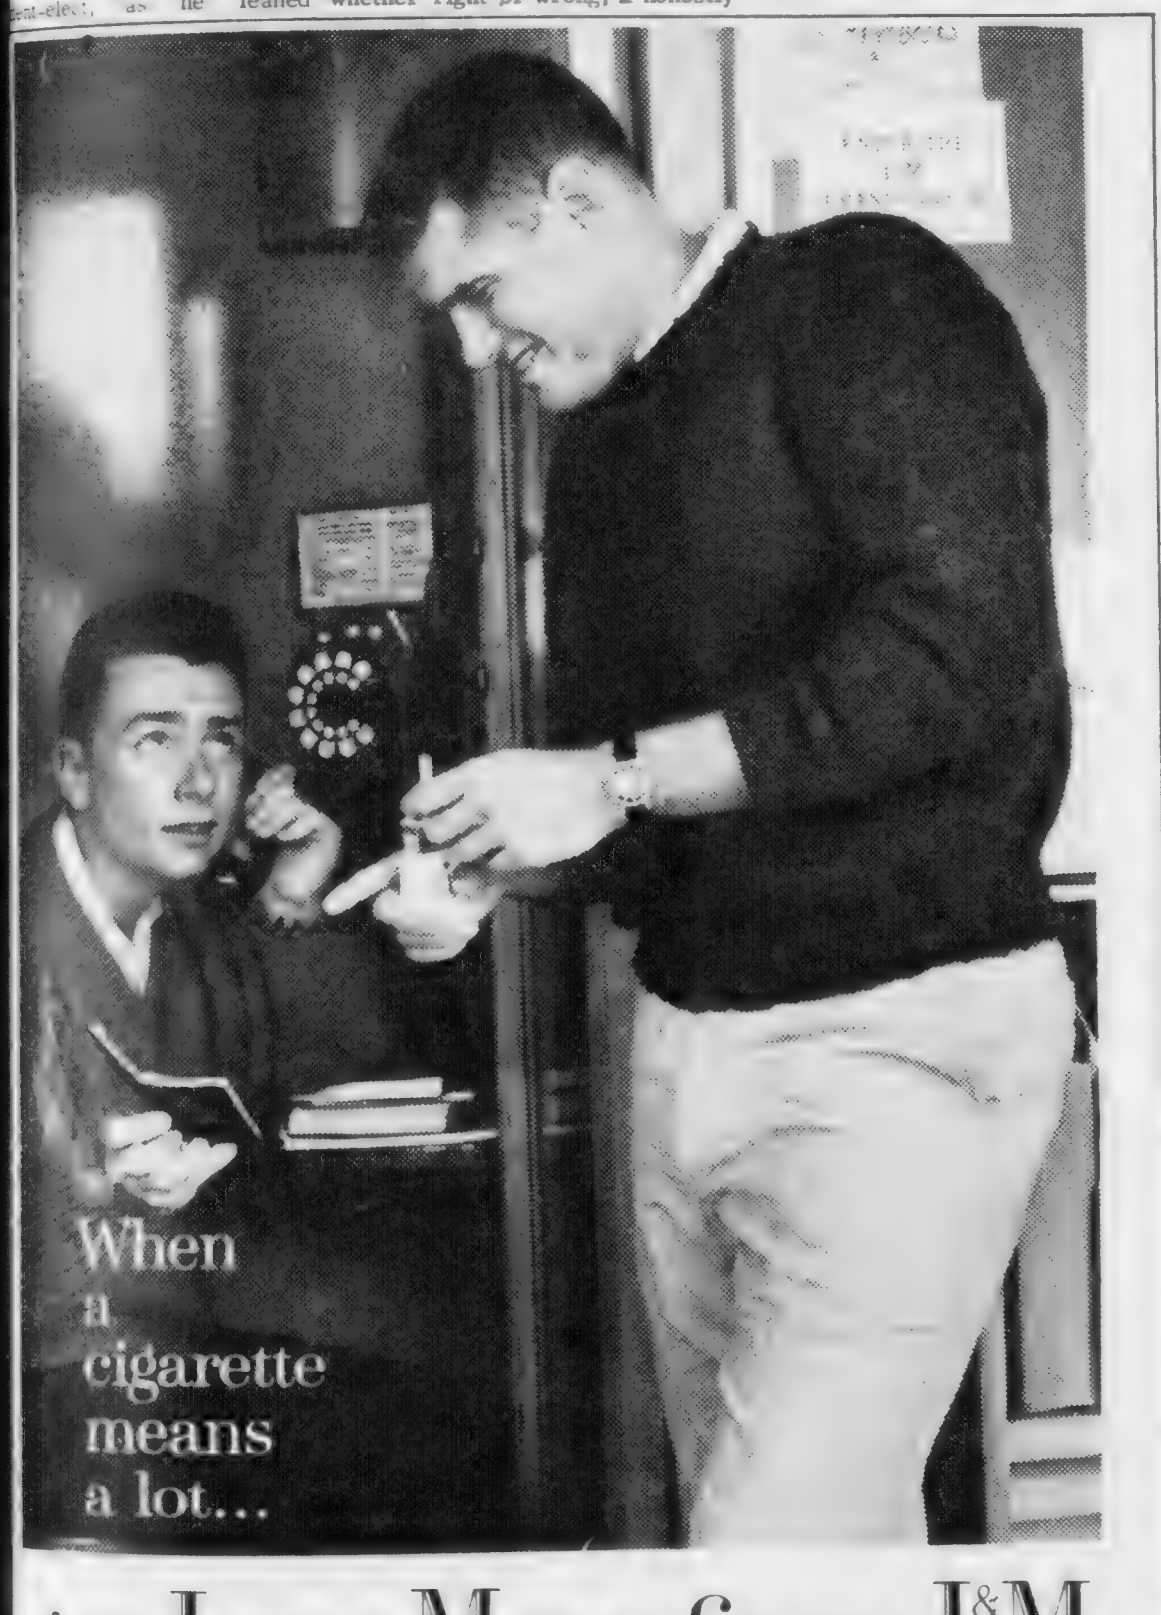
His primary hobbies are hunting and fishing.

From here he moved to a suburban area of town. His primary interest in high school was in athletics such as football, baseball, and tennis. This interest continued into his freshman year at FSU when he joined the tennis team. This proved to be short lived as his weak knee, which had been injured in high school, again kept him out of sports. It was then that he developed his keen interest in politics and student government.

His first position in student government was Undersecretary of Student Welfare his sophomore year. In the same year he became president of APO and president of Smith Hall.

Smith considers his greatest honor throughout his college career, the position of president of Omicron Delta Kappa, the highest national men's leadership honorary. It places emphasis on the development of the whole man and stresses scholarship, athletics, character, service and consecration to democratic ideals.

Smith is presently working his way through college with a job as a student assistant in the Central Ticket Office. He also holds a National Defense Education Loan.



He has held quite a few interesting and varied jobs. In high school he worked as a shoe salesman and then as a grove worker in order to get in shape for the coming season of football. It was as a grove worker that he developed the desire for a college education at all costs.

His summer jobs during his college years have been centered in New York where he worked as Head Librarian for a Medical Publications Firm in New York City and in the resort area of Lake Placid.

His future at the present is undecided. After graduation next April, he plans to either enter an Executive Training Program or go into Public Relations. Smith stresses that he does not intend to enter politics as a profession.

When asked about his plans for next year as President of the Student Body, Smith replied, "Students need not be told something is being done for them, they need only to see the results. Neither do I want to set my sights high on a few details and thus shut my mind to all else."

"I want the administration to have the flexibility whereby we may take advantage of opportune situations as they arise. You cannot be dogmatic in purpose or else you close your mind to opportunity," Smith concluded.

NEW YORK -- The AFL-CIO Executive Council has called for an end to what it terms "partisan political criticism" of President Kennedy's policies in dealing with the Communist threat in Cuba. The Council issued a statement in Miami Beach, Florida, during a weekend recess of Labor Union meetings. AFL-CIO President George Meany told reporters that some members of Congress, whom he did not name, have been leveling what he termed "wild criticism" that tends to confuse and divide the public.

WASHINGTON -- Democratic Senator Joseph Clark of Pennsylvania says the Republicans are rapidly building themselves up into the war party. Clark blasted two Republican Senators -- Kenneth Keating of New York and Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania. He says they seem to be careless as to whether their public statements will force us into a war or not. Republican Senator Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania says Cuba has been lost to the free world. He calls for the US and Latin American countries to join in a total blockade, predicting this would get Russians out of Cuba without a war.

NEW YORK -- The US and Britain plan to recommend to the NATO Council this week that a special policy control board be formed to handle major issues of allied nuclear strategy. And they also will say they are prepared to assign powerful nuclear forces promptly to the NATO military command.

WASHINGTON -- US Disarmament Chief William Foster is back in Geneva for 17-nation disarmament talks. He says the US will accept seven annual inspections in Russian to police any nuclear test ban agreement -- if Russia is willing to meet condition the US considers essential to make inspections workable.

The University of Florida swimming team set four pool records Saturday in the Southern Collegiate Invitational championships to score 118 points and grab first place over the FSU swimming team.

The Seminoles were second with 104 points. Other runners up: Florida frosh with 76, Georgia with 22, Miami with 15, Georgia Tech with 13, Emory with seven and Georgia frosh with six.

Florida's records came in the 100-yard backstroke, won by Dick Farwell in 57.5; the 100-yard freestyle, won by Terry Green in 49.7; the 100-yard butterfly, won by Jerry Livingston in 53.0; and the 200-yard individual medley, won by Eddie Reese in 2:07.6 (2:06.6 set in the trials).

Two swimmers broke the old mark (1:57.4) in the 200-yard freestyle, but FSU graduate Paul Thompson's 1:52.5 clocking was fast enough to cancel the timing of UF's Green (1:52.7).

In the first day of competition, Florida State trailed by only 58-53, as the Gators captured four of eight first-night events.

FSU's John Rangely swam unattached and defeated Miami's Rick Chrise in the 50-yard freestyle with a clocking of 22.9, while Neil Allen copped first place in the one-meter diving, with Jim Mayne of FSU finishing third.

Mark Cohen was first in the 400-yard individual, while teammate Pete Davis was third. The [illegible] ed Thompson was second in the 200-yard butterfly, ahead of Rick Fry[illegible]ko. Thompson also won the 500-yard freestyle in 5:11.5.

Long Shoots 28; But Seminoles Tumble, 99-70, To Hurricanes

Two double-figure scorers [illegible] cessful on 9-of-10 free throws to six double-figure scorers as a low score score is to a high score.

This might well have been the [illegible] ematical formula which determined that the University of Miami basketball team would beat FSU, 99-70, Saturday night in a return match.

Senior cager Charlie Long of FSU bucketed 28 points to tie his game-high mark of the season set against Centenary, and Cal Huge sank another 19 markers for the Seminoles, but....

Miami had Rick Barry and Mike McCoy each hitting 19 points, while the rest of the starters edged into double figures. Kenny Allen and Carl Stavreti each scored 12 points, while Jack Spisak and Sam Bechner tallied 10 apiece.

Several people put on net-slicing shows. Long sank 12 field goals to lead all comers from the floor, while Huge and McCoy were second with eight field goals. And Barry was successful on 9-of-10 free throws to easily grab the game-high honors at the line.

Before 4,527 fans, the Seminoles were still in the contest until midway through the first half, when the Hurricanes began lengthening the gap. When the half came, the 'Canes led, 49-32. In the second session, Coach Bruce Hale's team built up to as much as an 84-48 margin with six minutes left. Eventually, however, the UM reserves came in and FSU shaved off seven points of the difference.

NIT-bound Miami ran its record to 21-4, while Coach Bud Kennedy suffered his 10th loss in 24 starts.

The Seminoles close thier 1963 season tonight in Tampa, when they meet the University of Tampa basketballers.

Cover boy [illegible] this year's issue [illegible] the NCAA Baseball Guide is Florida State catcher Buddy Teagle, a .334-hitting All-America last year who's scheduled for mound duty this season.

Florida State Gets Gator Bowl Bid Along With Florida, AF, Manhattan

For the fifth time, Florida State will be playing in the annual Gator Bowl tournament, which will be held next December in Jacksonville's Coliseum.

The Seminoles, who have yet to win the title, will be competing against the University of Florida and newcomers Manhattan and the Air Force Academy.

Coach Bud Kennedy's crew in the bowl will essentially be the same as this year's, with the exception of the loss of graduating senior Charlie Long, the top Tribe scorer.

Missing from the ranks of Gator Bowl contenders is title-holder Georgia Tech. The nationally-ranked squad was unable to return because of a previous commitment.

Future Grid Schedule Is More Practical

By VICTOR COMOLLI

After FSU's latest bid for admission to the Southeastern Conference was crushed in a most convincing manner, some observers have begun to wonder if a change in the school's athletic policy would follow.

It is a well-known fact that for some time now FSU has made numerous unsuccessful attempts to join the conference. With this goal in mind, the Seminoles have paid the price of playing "little sister" to most conference football teams, and abiding by all conference rules--sometimes [illegible]'s disadvantage.

All the arguments which have been used to support Florida State's "next-year-we-will-get-in" attitude were proven fantasies fallacies by the cold disposal o FSU's latest bid to join the SEC.

The impression that the Atlanta meeting of the conference representatives gave most observers was one of solidarity--thus killing rumors of weakness, withdrawals, enlargements, and splits.

It appears at this time that FSU can follow one of three different courses of action.

It can continue to abide by SEC rules and schedule predominately SEC schools in the hope that in some distant future it will be asked in. This policy would require great perseverance and patience, but could lead to a practical result.

Another possible course of action is to become an independent power as Miami did after being turned down by the SEC. This policy would require an inter-sectional schedule--a thing that FSU might have trouble obtaining at this time.

The last choice would be for FSU to begin to flirt with other conferences. This last policy has been the subject of recent speculation due to the announcement that the Seminoles will play only three SEC football teams next year, as compared with five in 1962.

It has also been observed that FSU will review two old rivalries from the Atlantic Coast Conference in 1963, North Carolina State and Wake Forest. And a Pensacola newspaper recently reported the Seminoles have signed home-and-home contracts with two other ACC teams, Maryland and South Carolina, beginning in 1966.

To predict that there is a definite athletic policy change in the making would be sheer speculation, but it can be said that during the coming football season FSU will be playing less SEC teams and more ACC schools.

It can also be said that Florida State's relations with ACC teams are on a home-and-home basis, an equal status which few SEC teams have ever given FSU.

What the future will bring only time will tell.

Dr. William Dodd, Former Dean, Dies

Dr. William George Dodd, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences from 1913 until his retirement in 1944, died yesterday morning Tallahassee Memorial Hospital after an entended illness.

Dr. Dodd was 88 years old and was Dean Emeritus of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. Dodd had a long and distinguished career. Born in Waynesville, Ohio, April 19, 1874, he received his A.B. from Bethany College, West Virginia, in 1893. He later received his A.M. and Ph.D. from Harvard in 1908 and 1913.

Beginning his career as a high school math teacher in Lancaster, Kentucky from 1893 till 1894, Dodd then served as a principal of a Cadiz, Kentucky, high school from 1894 till 1897. From 1897 till 1898, he was a student and private teacher of music. Dodd also served as a music teacher at Tri-State College in Angola, Indiana from 1898 to 1900. From 1905 till 1907, he taught at Boscobel College in Nashville.

Dr. Dodd was a member of Delta Tau Delta social fraternity and Phi Beta Kappa honorary. His two major publications were "Courtly Love in Chaucer and Gover" (1913) and "History of West Florida Seminary" (1952). His book on Chaucer is still a standard reference. It was reprinted in 1959 by Peter Smith.

Dr. Dodd taught Shakespeare, Chaucer and modern poetry. His colleagues say that he taught with great vigor and if emphasizing a point which called for lifting a chair a few inches from the floor and bringing it down abruptly, down came the chair.

Among other things, Dr. Dodd was responsible for the Christmastime readings of "The Christmas Carol" in the browsing room of the old library. Many of his colleagues said that he and the late Dr. Edward Conradi were primarily responsible for the pattern of organization which FSCW took, in organizing the College of Arts and Sciences and the Schools of Music, Home Economics and Education.

On October 19, 1961, the building which houses the Graduate School and Offices of Arts and Sciences were dedicated to him. On the plaque was written "Like an architect with majestic vision he helped shape the building of a great institution."

In 1956, Dr. Dodd delivered the homecoming tribute to Edward Conradi at the Biological Science Building dedication. He was long known as one of the state's most effective speakers.

Dr. William Dodd

Funeral arrangements are incomplete. Dr. Dodd is survived by two daughers, Dr. Dorothy Dodd of Tallahassee, state librarian; and Mrs. Wilson (Mary) Trammell of Coconut Grove; two sons, W. G. Dodd, Jr., of Fort Lauderdale and Col. Francis T. Dodd of San Antonio; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Collegians To Leave On Spring Concert Tour

The Collegians FSU men's glee club will leave this week on a Spring tour.

They will present concerts in Ft. Meade, Tampa and St. Petersburg tomorrow, through Friday, Dr. Ramon E. Meyer, director, announced today.

Dr. Meyer said the 33-member choral group will present several daytime programs and a night concert in Ft. Meade tomorrow.

On Feb. 28 they will give a concert in Tampa and then will go to St. Petersburg Friday. The program at St. Petersburg will be at Florida Presbyterian College.

Opening with a series of sacred numbers, the tour program will include Rhapsody for Contralto solo and men's chorus by Johann Brahms with Rose Wildes as soloist.

Miss Wildes, a sophomore student of voice studying with Betty Jane Grimm of the School of Music, will also sing a group of solo numbers including an aria from the opera "Samson and Delilah" by Saint-Saens and two German Lieder by Shubert.

Following intermission the Collegians under the direction of Richard Powell of Tampa, will premier "Vocalise," a number composed for men's voices by Powell.

The program will close with a group of light numbers including "Without a Song," "Moon River," and "Someone to Watch Over Me," arranged by Powell, a candidate for a master's degree at FSU. Harold Gray, freshman piano student of Edward Kilenyi, will be accompanist for the group.

Expense Statements Deadline

All candidates in last week's Student Body elections must submit their expense statements by 5 p.m. today or will be subject to a $1 fine, Secretary of Elections Ron Jones said today.

Forms may be picked up at the main desk, Longmire Bldg., and must include all itemized receipts.

HAVANA --Cuba has officially denied that its warplanes fired on a U.S. shrimp boat last week in the straits between Florida and Cuba. The reply from the Castro regime to a U.S. protest note was delivered to the State Department by the Czechslovak Ambassador. The Cubans say mig fighters were searching for two small boats stolen from a Cuban fishing cooperative when they saw the shrimp boat February 20th. They claim the planes approached the shrimp boat but flew away and did not fire at it.

LONDON--The British government is investigating a Cuban protest that an anti-Castro base has been set up on a little British-owned island--Elbow Cay--by Cuban refugees. Cuba's Foreign Minister had made the charge last Friday to Britain's Ambassador in Havana.

WASHINGTON--President Kennedy has made it plain he'll go all out to get a three-year tax cut of at least ten billion dollars. Speaking to a symposium sponsored by the American Bankers Association, the President indicated that he might even give up his proposals for changes in tax laws to offset part of the cut. Kennedy said: "... The important thing is to get the bill this year. What ever is necessary to get that bill, I would support."

WASHINGTON--The House Armed Services Committee has approved a big military authorization bill-including 335 million dollars more to develop the R-S-70 reconnaissance strike plane program. This money would play for construction of two more of these planes which the Kennedy administration does not want to build.

WASHINGTON--The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled 187 Negroes were convicted unjustly on breach of peace charges after a demonstration on South Carolina's capitol grounds. Reversal of the conviction means the Negroes cannot be tried again in the 1961 case. All have been free on bail.

OXFORD--Mississippi Governor Ross Barnett has asked President Kennedy order Army troops to vacate the National Guard armory in Oxford. They've occupied the armory since October tenth during the University of Mississippi integration crisis.

WASHINGTON--In New Delhi, U.S. Ambassador John Galbraith has signed a 240 million dollar loan to India. He says it is the largest dollar loan without interest ever made by the U.S.

FSU's 'Flying High' Circus To Be Televised Again

Florida State University's Student Circus, Flying High, will be filmed by CBS March 10, following the Home Show, and will occupy an hour-long part of the nationwide "Sports Spectacular" program, March 24.

Ad Gilbert is director of the student troupe of 110 aerialists and other performers who will put on their annual Home Show two months early this year, nightly between March 5 and 9.

Persons who want to watch the troupe during the filming may pick up free tickets for this event when they get their regular tickets for the Home Show. These are available at Brown's Men's Wear, Westcott Ticket Office and Tully Gym at $1.50 for the public and 75 cents for students and children.

The show will have some 25 acts in 19 different settings and will run for two hours, Gilbert said. The performances will be given in the circus tent nightly at 8 p.m. except the final night, when performances will be given at 5:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m.

The show, which will be filmed the night following the home stand, will not run like the others but will be broken up into specific acts to be filmed.

Gilbert said 51-1/2 minutes of [illegible] will run on the "Sports Spectacular" program at 2:30 p.m., March [illegible]. The program will also have [illegible] minuted period devoted to the Monte Carlo Sports Car Rally.

On Class Officers

The Kramer Report

Editor's Note: This is the first of a four part series reproducing the Kramer Report on class officers. The first deals with the general structure of class offices.

This study and evaluation of the Class Officer Program at Florida State University is being carried out under the direction of the Office of the Secretary of Internal Affairs in accord with the directive of the Student Body President.

The study was begun 1 January 1963 and was completed on 20 February 1963.

PRIMARY PURPOSES

I. To determine what steps, if any, need to be taken in regard to the Class Officer Program as a result of instituting the Trimester Program at FSU.

2. To terminate, as finally as possible, the dispute concerning the Class Officer program by summarizing all the information and issues involved in the dispute.

ASPECTS OF THE PROBLEM

1. To determine the Aims and Goals of our university in general and the Aims and Goals of our student government and class officers in particular.

2. To determine what part the Class officer Program should play in attaining these goals.

3. To describe, as completely as possible, the present structure and functions of the Class Officer Program.

4. To determine whether or not the present COP is constructively fulfilling its purposes and attaining the goals set forth.

5. If the present COP is constructively fulfilling its purposes and attaining its goals then the conclusion must be to retain the COP essentially as it now is.

6. If the present COP is NOT constructively fulfilling its purposes and attaining its goals then we must decide whether the COP can be modified either in structure, function or a combination of both in order to attain its goals and if so... How.

7. If the present COP cannot feasibly and efficently be modified to attain its goals then we must consider terminating the entire COP and transfering all its functions to other organizations.

The principle organization that comes to mind is the Central Student Government.

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

1. Letters of Inquiry to selected schools concerning their Class Officer Program.

2. Conversation with administrative personnel and class faculty sponsors. A. Director of Social Activities... M. Williams; B. Director of Student Activities... R. Montgomery; C. Asst. Dean of Faculties... E. Chalmers; D. Vice President of the University... J. Champion; E. Class Sponsor... D. Parker.

3. Conversations with Class Presidents and other class officers.

4. Conversations with the Flambeau editor.

5. Conversations with various cabinet officers.

6. Questionaires from the class officers.

7. Financial report of the 1962 Audit committee on class budgets, from 1958 to 1965.

8. Conversation with past class officers.

OPERATIONS OF CLASS OFFICERS

The Freshman, Sophomore, Junior and Senior classes each elect a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, and social chairman. In addition each has two faculty advisors. Also each class has available the services of the Director of Social Activities. In fact the Director works closely with the Class officers. The two faculty advisors serve mainly a chaperone capacity.

In operation the five class officers function as an elected committee, with the President as Chairman. From conversation with class officers and the reports of class projects we can see that the projects usually take the efforts of all the five class officers. In addition to each officer carrying out the traditional functions as president, secretary and so on each officer has a part in carrying out the class projects. If the class officer program is kept it would make little sense to contract the number of officers from each class. So I think there is a definite need and place for each officer on carrying out the projects.

But this is not quite the real issue. The real and basic question is whether the projects themselves are meaningful. That is whether the Class Officer Program in its entirety is necessary or significant and serves its purpose.

This is the issue and we must see if the Program measures up.

Workshop Held Here

Some 50 meteorologists, engineers and other specialists from over the United States began at FSU today a four-day workshop concerned with the use of satellite data in tropical meteorology.

The Workshop, on "The Uses of Satellite Data in Tropical Meteorology," co-sponsored by the National Weather Satellite Center of the U.S. Weather Bureau and FSU's Meteorology Dept., will [illegible] Meteorology Bldg. at 9 a.m. with a description of Project TIROS by Dr. Rados of Goddard Space Flight Center, TIROS project manager for National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Dr. Noel E. LaSeur, professor of meteorology at FSU and conference planner, said the discussions, which will end on Friday, will also cover such future planned satellites as NIMBUS, which will have a polar pole orbit, and DREWS (Direct Readout Equatorial Weather Satellite) which will have an equatorial orbit 23,000 miles high and will have a fixed location of the earth.

Nominations Now Being Accepted

Nominations are now being received for the second Civic Education Award for Outstanding Excellence in Teaching to be made at Commencement Exercises in April.

The award was instituted last year and the first citation was received by Professor James P. Jones of the Department of History.

Any Instructor or Assistant Professor who has been a member of the FSU faculty for a period of five years or longer is eligible for nomination.

All such nominations should be sent to the office of the Dean of Faculties, 203 Westcott. The deadline for receiving nominations is March 8.

Undaunted, however, Marti, as head of the Cuban Revolutionary Party, united dissident elements of Cuban exiles scattered throughout the Caribbean area and the United States.

In May of 1895, he led a small invasion party that landed in Cuba and contacted Cuban resistance forces. He met death shortly afterwards in a battle encounter with Spanish forces. The rebellion continued for three more years and was brought to a successful conclusion by the entrance of the United States in the Spanish-American War of 1898.

Marti's contribution to the revolution, his tragic death in battle, and his reputation as a writer made him the ideal figure for the national hero of Cuba. He symbolizes Cuban aspirations for justice, freedom, progress, and indenpendence. His name is constantly invoked in political and social groups in Cuba as an ideal figure to emulate. Fidel Castro has stated in his famous speech, "History will vindicate me," that Jose Marti was the intellectual author of Castros 26th of July Movement.

Prof. Gray, who has been at FSU since 1958, spent two years in Cuba, from 1955-57, in research on Marti under a Buenos Aires Convention Grant. During that time he also taught at Villanova University in Havana, and studied at the University of Havana. He is a graduate of the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, and the University of Wisconsin, where he obtained his Ph.D. in 1957.

Westcott Auditorium

Ballet Performs Tonight

"Jest of Cards" will be performed tonight at 8:30 in Westcott Auditorium by the San Francisco Ballet. The ballet is based on a deck of playing cards. It depicts kings and queens and lesser cards as they are shuffled about by life, only to discover that death holds the trump card. The dancers twirl and leap suddenly into what appears to be nothingness.

"Caprice" which will also be performed is an abstract ballet. In a brilliant burst of color and movement it tells of a young coquette's flirtations in the park.

She starts with a private and goes through the ranks. Who finally gets the girl?

Another ballet to be performed on Tuesday night's program is "Variations de Ballet."

Lew Christensen, the choreographer for the San Francisco Ballet, has earned a title as one of the nation's great choreographers. When asked how to write a ballet, he answer was simply: "Let the music tell you."

Tony Duquette, the costume and set designer for the company, has created everything from a diamond necklace for the Duchess of Windsor to costumes and sets for the movies "Can Can" and "Kismet," and for the Broadway show "Camelot."

Gerhard Samuel, who is also the conductor and musical director of the Oakland Symphony, will conduct the orchestra for the San Francisco Ballet.

Tomorrow night's featured ballet will be "Original Sin." The music for this ballet is American Jazz.

Tickets for this Artist Series production will be sold at the door if any are left. They are $3.50 for the public and students must present their I.D. cards.

Acting Aids Delinquint Children

Letting a delinquent boy "act out" the role of a prospective employer in a job interview helps teach him how to make his way in the world again after confinement, the Corrections Conference at FSU was told by one speaker Friday.

The two-day Corrections Conference, a series of discussions of crime, delinquency and correctional methods, ended Friday afternoon. The eighth annual meeting, was held under auspices of the Department of Corrections and Criminology.

Dr. Martin R. Haskell, an assistant professor in City College of New York who teaches sociology and criminology to policemen studying at the Baruch School, has written extensively on juvenile delinquency and on role training in preparation for release from prison.

"Frequently a major objective of group counseling is to prepare delinquent boys to function adequately in occupational roles," he said.

"Role playing and role training have been used effectively to accomplish this objective. Boys learn to perform in various roles in action. The counselor and the group observe each boy in action and have an opportunity to help correction definciencies.

The clinical psychologist for the Youth Center, Lorton, Va., Dr. Sheldon B. Peizer, told the conference that discipline usually produces a better product in corrections work than affection.

"Affection without discipline produces a successful product only so long as conditions remain optimal; the likelihood is that there will always be large areas of maladjustment even under the best circumstances," Peizer said.

The Department of Defense has a policy of "corrective rather than punitive" discipline in its corrections system, according to Col. Vern L. Johnson, chief of the Corrections Division, Office of Provost Marshal General, Washington.

"Briefly, this program calls for the professional screening and evaluation of all personnel commited to a confinement facility for any reason; provision for counseling, problem solving, training, and useful work, with maximum emphasis on early identification of those with potential for further military service; and a clemency program designed to return the individual to duty as soon as he is ready."

Another speaker, Dr. W.A. Goldberg, social services director for the Georgia Training School for Boys, Milledgeville, suggested medals or some other form of recognition for personnel in institutions.

Brigadier W. Edward Mason of Atlanta, correctional services and missing persons secretary for the Southern Territory of the Salvation Army, said material assistance was given to 1430 families of offenders in the South last year. In 1962, he said 1182 persons were paroled to the Salvation Army in the Southern Territory.

Social Fraternities Beware

The traditional way of fraternity life at American colleges now faces extinction, a national magazine declared this week.

According to an article appearing in the current issue of "Look Magazine," fraternities, for the first time, must prove they belong on the campus--or get off.

The article, "College Fraternities: The Perils of Big Brotherhood," notes that "a revolution is under way in U.S. education, and for the first time in this century, fraternity men are being swept along with all the other students."

Focal point of the "Look" article is a picture report on the life of a Phi Gamma Delta pledge at the University of Illinois, where "he must view nearly every move he makes--from taking a test to getting a date--in light of what it does 'for the house,' a term so familiar at Illinois that it is abbreviated to 'FTH.'"

In an accompanying text report, "Will Fraternities Survive?", "Look" senior editor John Poppy cites fraternity trouble spots on various campuses, presents the views of disgruntled fraternity men and predicts that fraternities--minus the rituals--may eventaully become "a chain of boardinghouses."

The article also includes an interview with businessman Joel W. Reynolds of the National Interfraternity Conference, who insists that fraternities are "in our heyday" and perform a constructive role in college life.

Colvard Absent

85 Attend Drills

By JOHNNY DAVIS
Flambeau Sports Writer

The FSU coaching staff got a first look at its prospective 1963 football team Saturday afternoon, as a brisk two-hour workout officially opened spring drills for the Seminole gridders.

About 85 candidates were on hand to greet Coach Bill Peterson, and included in the group of hopefuls were many proven performers, several red-shirts, and holdovers from last year's entire freshman unit. In addition, there were about a dozen non-scholarship candidates trying out.

Although nearly everyone appeared healthy, there were some noticeable gaps in a couple of important slots, caused by various types of illnesses or injuries.

Senior guard Jerry Bruner, a two-year letterman, missed the initial drill due to a virus infection that had him confined to the university infirmary. Another absentee was former University of West Virginia standout, Fred Colvard.

Peterson said Colvard had an "unexcused absence," and non one knew of his whereabouts. At West Virginia, Colvard won national recognition for his quarterbacking feats, but he was being primed primarily as a running halfback here at Florida State.

Junior halfback Fred Biletnikoff was dressed is sweat clothes, but will be kept out of heavy work for sometime because of a stomach disorder.

The Seminoles will drill four times weekly, and te annual Garnet and Gold clash on March 30 will culminate the Spring practice.

* * * * *

He was the big one over there with his uncut blond hair flopping in the breeze; 6-5 junior quarterback Steve Tensi, he of the rifle arm.

Reams of copy are due to flow regarding Tensi, a former Ohio All-Stater who turned down approximately 70 college scholarship offers in favor of Florida State and is being hailed as "about the best quarterback prospect in the country" by Head Coach Bill Peterson. He came from Elder High in Cincinnati.

Following a bright freshman year, Tensi quarterbacked FSU's offensive unit in the 1962 season. He averaged only 15 minutes per game, but managed to out-pass Senior Eddie Feely.

Frosh Cagers Bop Gulf Coast To End Season

FSU's freshman basketball team ended its season Friday night by swamping the Gulf Coast junior College quintet, 85-63, as all five starting Seminoles broke double figures.

The freshmen of Coach Joe Williams ended with an 11-7 season.

Led by Bill Peacock and Ken Leakey, who each dropped in 19 markers, the Seminoles ran up a 14-point margin at the half, when they were ahead, 41-27.

Jim Wallace backeted 14 points for the Tribesmen, while Gary Schull and Bill Phillips scored 13 and 10 markers respectively.

The Panama City cagers were paced by Herschel Crutchfield and Walter Heisser, who tallied 19 and 17 points respectively. Allen Jones also made the double figures with 15 points.

Tribe Gymnasts Fall To Gators

Coach Joe Gusic and Florida State's Gymnastic Club lost its first dual meet since FSU dropped the sport in 1960 to the University of Florida, 75-53, Saturday in Gainesville.

"I saw the handwriting on he wall three years ago," Gusic said, "it would only be a matter of ime before the University of Florida took advantage of this dropping of gymnastics at FSU to undertake a program of their own and prime for the day when they could beat Florida State in another sport."

The high-point man for the meet was Mitch Weinstock of FSU with a total of 27-1/2 points. He won the floor exercise and came in second in the rope climb, side horse, still rings, and parallel bars; third on the high bar, and fourth on the long horse.

FSU's John Kimbrough, with 12-1/2 markers, won the high bar [illegible] third on the long [illegible] still rings, and fifth on the horse, while teammate [illegible] ling, performing fine [illegible] first meet, had six points [illegible] on rope climb, fifths on floor exercise. long horse and [illegible]

Racquettes Are Tied By Boone Ladies Club

The Racquettes, looking forward to matches with Daytona Beach and Rollins College, tied with the Boone Ladies netters.

Carol Castell and Karen Oldenburg defeated Georgia Johnston and Harriet Lyons, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5, while Carole Hale and Kit Logan defeated Norma Stowe and Joan Pendall, 6-2, 3-6, 9-7. Barbara Close and Susan Linden won, 6-1, 6-3, over Wilma Smith and Henrietta Bowen, and then Judi Dunn and Chris Padgett fell to Catherine Skinner and Amy Johnson, 9-7, 8-6.

Gail Greene and Norma Moore were defeated in FSU's second loss in 6-2 and 6-3 sets with Faith Parker and Jean Hooper.

Maxine Moody and Priscilla McKnight lost to Jackie Brown and Pat Bickerstaff, 6-0, 6-0.

The match with Daytona Beach's Seabreeze High School will be held Friday afternoon, while the Rollins contest is slated for Saturday.

Three coeds have been tapped as members of Racquettes. They are sophomore Betty Allen, a physical education major from Atlanta; freshman Mary Helen Johnson, an engineering science major from Ft. Pierce; and freshman Barbara Steel of Maitland.

Foul Balls Retain Lead By Two Games

The Foul Balls lost all four games this past week in the Florida Stte Bowling League, but continued to hold down the first place position by two games.

Tied for second place are the Spastics and the Beer Kings. In third place are the Bad Newers, sponsored by Presto Car Wash. Members of this team are Sheri Ann Sellers, Charlie Royce, Maries Janes, and Rick Andahl.

This week Mr. Connie Zois racked up a three-game series of 590, with game of 183, 214, and 193. Chip Magee of the Tempo had a 204, while Jim McEachern had a 227. Andahl recorded a 202.

Miss Tally Ho Of 1963

Miss Mary Ellen Yaggy is the 1963 Miss Tally Ho. Mary Ellen, an Alpha Gam, was sponsored by Theta Chi. She is from Sarasota and is a psychology major.

The Tally Ho Court members are Fran All, Denise Edwards, Connie Gowan, Dottie Kohlman, and Lynn Stanleigh.

The Miss Tally Ho Court was chosen in the fall during a beauty contest in Opperman Music Hall. A panel of five judges, Eleanor Hart, Glamour Clinic Editor, Miami Herald; Jack Cummins, a sports caster for Miami TV station WLWB; Judge Lawrence D. Childs, St. Petersburg; Hugh F. McKean, president of Rollins College; and Mayor Hayden Burns, Jacksonville, chose the winner. The judges chose her because she represented the most typical All-American college girl.

Women's Senate Lifts Day Trip Restriction

Women's Senate voted unanimously yesterday to lift the restrictions on the number of day trips Freshmen women may take during their first trimester.

The bill, introduced by Senator Carole Renfroe, was the result of a recommendation from the committee appointed by Dean Warren to discuss the application of the rules in Knowledge for College to the women on campus.

Women's Senate Bill 12 dealing with the section "Room Time Limit" in the Knowledge for College was referred to the Organizations Committee for further study. The bill is also one of the recommendations from Dean Warren's Committee.

Senator Nancy Dale introduced Bill 10 which deletes the "Lights Out" section in the Knowledge for College. The bill was passed with one dissenting vote.

Senators Joyce Killian and Texas Wiltshire were voted by acclamation to serve as Women's Senate's delegates to the Inter-collegiate Association of Women's Students National Convention to be held in Oklahoma. The two girls will represent Florida State at the IAWS convention along with two other women students who will be selected from the women's court system and dorm officers.

Two Students "Doing Fine" After Mishap

Two FSU students, Joe Dizillo and Jack Malone, were "doing fine" according to Dr. C.R. Gentry, head of the University Hospital, after an automobile accident late Sunday afternoon. Gentry stated that Malone had a fractured jaw and Dizillo suffered lacerations and bruises in an accident taking place in Blountstown

A 1957 convertible in which they were riding stuck a culvert on State Road 20 two miles west of Blountstown and overturned. Trooper J.T. Burdeshaw, who investigated the accident, stated that the driver of the vehicle apparently fell asleep.

San Francisco Ballet

Tonight's Audience Sees "Original Sin"

Can American ideas of dance be shaped into a totally American form of ballet?

The San Fransico Ballet seeks one answer to this question in its production of "Original Sin." This new ballet will highlight tonight's program at 8:30 in Westcott Auditorium.

When Lew Christensen, the San Francisco Ballet's director, decided to tackle the problem of creating an American ballet, he turned to the one style of music unmistakably American: jazz. He called on the musical director of the Modern Jazz Quartet to furnish an original score. John Lewis compiled with music in six parts which he termed "inflected jazz."

The choreography follows the intense patterns of the music with touches of humor emerging unrestrained. The libretto, written by Kenneth Rexroth, tells of the creation of Adam and Eve and their eventual banishment from the Garden of Eden. The highly imaginative sets and costumes are by John Furness, noted TV designer.

"Divertissement d'Auber," which will also be performed, is being presented here prior to its premiere in San Francisco. Music is by Francoise Espirit with scenery and costumes by Tony Duquette.

The number was originally choreographed by Christensen as a "Pas de Trois" for a tour of the company in the Near East. Its purpose was to clearly show the virtuosity of the American dancer. It takes three dancers and puts them through every step in a dancer's "vocabulary."

Christensen, after the success of the piece, has enlarged the original work into a full-scale ballet using the entire company. While still retaining the exciting leaps and mid-air turns of the first routine.

the exciting leaps and mid-air turns of the first routine.

A third number for tonight's performance will be another highly successful ballet, "Fantasma."

Under the sponsorship of the State Department, the troupe has traveled to areas where an American dancing company had never been before.

Tickets for this Artist Series production of the San Francisco Ballet will be sold at the door if any tickets are left. They are $3.50 for the general public and students must present ID cards.

Jazz Groups Play Tonight

Jazz groups from Florida State University and Florida A&M University will be featured on WFSU-TV's "Montage" at 8:00 p.m. tonight.

The Rick Martorano Quartet of FSU and the Collegians Quintet of Florida A&M will demonstrate different jazz styles including the "Bosa Nova" of Brazil. The jazz will be conventional and not "way out."

The Florida State Group features Rick Martorano on piano. Martorano is a senior music student and has done extensive work in both classical and jazz fields. FAMU's Quintet features Jothan Collins on trumpet.

Among the works played will be "New Delhi," "High Time," written by trumpeter Collins, and a Bosa Nova number called "Bags Groove."

Dr. Keith Carlson, WFSU-TV's director of the show, has placed emphasis on enthusiasm and genuine talent of the two groups participating in the feature. "Montage," with host Tom Wheaton, is a regular production of Channel 11.

Correction

A story in yesterday's Flambeau was incorrectly headlined. The headline said "Alpha Gams, Phi Delta Win Soapbox Derby." As was explained in the lead paragraph, the soap box derby was sponsored jointly by the Alpha Gams and Phi Delts. The derby was won by Delta Tau Delta-Kappa Kappa Gamma entry.

FSU Audience Hears Fulton Lewis Tonight

Fulton Lewis III, former research director for the House Committee on Un-American Activities and nationally known lecturer and author on conservative philosophy, will speak on "The Failures of Liberalism" tonight at 8 in Opperman Music Hall. His appearance is sponsored by the FSU chapter of Young Americans For Freedom.

Lewis, a national field director of YAF, was technical director and narrator for the controversial fim, "Operation Abolition."

Having recently completed his duties with HUAC, Lewis has embarked on a speaking tour primarily of college campuses. He has been heard by a quarter of a million students on more than 500 campuses.

Many of Lewis' campus appearances have taken the form of debates. He has debated Socialist leaders Norman Thomas and Michael Harrington and Joseph Rauh, former head of Americans for democratic Action. In addition to his speaking engagements, Lewis often substitutes for his father Fulton Lewis, Jr. on the latter's radio news commentary program.

Admission to Lewis' talk is free.

Surveys Of Class Projects

The Kramer Report

A Survey of Freshman Class Projects

1. Christmas Party for President Blackwell. Purpose: to add to the holiday enjoyment of President and Mrs. Blackwell, administrative officials, student government leaders and class officers. Cost: $11.00 People required: Officers of all four classes. People Benefiting 80-100 (all those who attend.)

2. President's Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony. Purpose: To add to the holiday enjoyment of President and Mrs. Blackwell. Cost: none. People Required: Officers of all four classes plus carolers. People benefiting: It is hard to say.

3. Class Dances...Fall and Spring. Purposes: To provide campus-wide entertainment for all FSU students. Cost: from $225 and up to $275. Profit: varies from $0 to $300. People required: Freshman class officers. People Benefiting: all those who attend.

A Survey of Sophomore Class Projects

1. Christmas Party for President Blackwell. Purpose: To add to the holiday enjoyment of President and Mrs. Blackwell, administrative officials, student government leaders and class officers. Cost: $12,66 (to the sophomore class.) People Required: Officers of all four classes. People Benefiting: 80-100.

2. President's Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony. Purpose: to add to the holiday enjoyment of President and Mrs. Blackwell. Cost: none. People required: Officers of all four classes plus upwards to 200 carolers. People Benefiting: It is hard to say.

3. Rat Cap sales...Spring semester. Purpose: To promote school spirit. Highlight Freshman orientation. Cost: $1000. Profit $530. People Required: Sophomore Class officers plus about 30 Sludges. People Benefiting: Entire Freshman class and the sophomore class treasury.

4. Class Dances...Fall and Spring. Purpose: To provide campus-wide entertainment for all FSU students. Cost: $225 to $275. Profit: $50 to $200 (possibility of a loss). People required: Sophomore class officers, several APO people. People Benefiting: All who attend, usually 125 to 500.

5. Sophomore-Senior Inivestiture. Purpose: Dinner to honor the graduating seniors, usually an outstanding faculty speaker, followed by the investiture ceremony. Cost: usually over $500. People required: Sophomore and Senior class officers. The number varied from 12 to 25. People Benefiting: from 200 to 350, including faculty; of these 15 to 40 were males.

A Survey of Junior Class Projects

1. Christmas Party for President Blackwell. Purpose: To add to the holiday enjoyment of President and Mrs. Blackwell, administrative officials, student government leaders and class senators. Cost: $20. People Required: Officers of all four classes. People Benefitting: 80-100.

President's Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony. Purpose to add to the holiday enjoyment of President and Mrs. Blackwell. Cost: none. People Required: Officers of all four class plus many carolers. People Benefiting: It is hard to say.

3. Faculty-Student Christmas Party. Purpose: To improve relations between faculty and students. Cost: $30. People Required: Junior Class Officers. People Benefiting: student body and faculty.

4. Class Dance...Fall. Purpose: To provide campus-wide entertainment for all FSU students. Cost: $275. Profit: $100-200. People Required: Junior class officers plus several APO people: approximately 30 man hours. People Benefiting: 400-500 students.

5. Class Dance...Spring trimester. Purpose: To provide campus-wide entertainment for all FSU students. Cost: $275. Profit: $25. People Required: Junior Class officers. People Benefiting: approximately 300 students.

6. Who's Who Selection. Purpose: To honor outstanding senior students at FSU. Cost: none (probably a few dollars for paper.) People reuired: Junior Class Vice President plus 7 students and 3 faculty members, and Junior Class secretary. People Benefiting: Senior students honored.

7. Hall of Fame selection. Purpose: To honor outstanding senior students (10). Cost: none (probably a few dollars for paper). People Required: Junior Class president plus several faculty members and several students representing areas of student activity. People Benefiting: Senior students honored.

A Survey of Senior Class Projects

1. Christmas Party for President Blackwell. Purpose: To add to the holiday enjoyment of President and Mrs. Blackwell, administrative officials, student government leaders and senators. Cost: $36. People Required: Officers of all four classes. People Benefiting: 80-100.

2. President's Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony. Purpose: To add to the holiday enjoyment of President and Mrs. Blackwell. Cost: none. People Required: Officers of all four classes. People Benefiting: It is hard to say.

3. Sophomore-Senior Investiture. Purpose: Traditional dinner to honor graduating seniors. Cost: over $500. People Required: Sophomore and Senior class officers. The number varied from 12 to 25. People Benefiting: 200-350 of these 15 to 40 were male.

4. Class Day...Spring trimester. Purpose: To honor graduating seniors. Permanent class officers announced, and speeches made. Cost: none. People Required: Senior class officers plus 7 to 25 extra people. People Benefiting: approximately 300.

5. Class Rings. Purpose: To order class rings, sign a three year contract and modify the ring if desired. Cost: none. People Required: 4 class presidents. People Benefiting: Receipients of the ring.

6. Graduating Invitations. Purpose: Represents a courtesy to some, informative as to time, place, speaker and other pertinent information concerning graduation. People Required: 2 or 3 class officers. People Benefiting: the printer and all those who receive an invitation.

Weakness Breeds Liberal Position

There is nothing like a little airing of dirty linen to evoke liberal lamentations directed at people who dare to cirticize policies such as aiding and abetting Communists through court action, lowering taxes and raising expenditures, attempting to hoodwink the public by denying thay there is anything significant going on in Cuber, playing Uncle Sap to that expensive farce known as the United Nations, ad infinitum.

Not only is liberalism a complete ideological and intellectualy shambles, but the people who support it have marked inability to defend the catechism as evidenced by a re[cent] flurry of pathetic attempts to re[fute] certain opinions expressed in [col]umns and letters to the Flambeau.

For instance when Frank Coney set forth an essentially correct [exam]tion of the Warren Court's indiscr[imi]dispensation of aid and [com]communists, some apparent liberal accused him of "garbling" with[out] citing wherein he garbled. Frank cited specific cases whereas his [critic] er only managed to say that he garbled because he garbled because he garbled.

Someone else thought that a recent column displaying the U.N.'s dirty socks "reeked with generalization and over-concluded statements." The fact of the matter is that the article merely juxtaposed fact with fancy. That critic's message seems to read it ain't so because it ain't because it ain't so.

Probably this kind of argument is enough to satisfy the soul of the opponent, but it provides very poor provender for serious debate.

If the strength of the liberal position is contained in this system of circular reasoning and begging the question then the reason why Fulbright Lewis is facing an empty ar[ena] FSU is not difficult to understand.

Probably many who are infatuated with "liberalism" [can] on grounds of imcompetent leadership. After all, if the very top echelons of the present liberal administration happen to be weak-kneed politicians who won't acknowledge failure, then what can be expected of their adherants. The only liberal message seems to be that everyone smokes Viceroys.

Liszt Makes Concert Sink

Gilbert has written somewhere about having a "little list." Friday night we went him one better and had too much Liszt. The interlogic of a two hour program devoted to the works of two composers of the same period escapes me. Perhaps the University Symphony really likes Liszt or considers him a safe bet, it being almost impossible to play this sort of music badly. Either way, it would be nice to occasionally hear something from the century we live in. As long as you have a captive audience it should be an obligation to do more than "tickle ears." If people don't hear obscure classics or music of their own time, how can they learn to understand it. One of Webern's short pieces to open with ONE of the Liszt and a Prokofieff or perhaps an American like Cowell or Schumann would provide better entertainment. In spite of this the evening was a pleasant surprise.

The choice of Die Meistersinger was an unfortunate opening for this music always seems beyond a group of this type. The Herrenvolk sounded more like toy soldiers and the pace varied from too slow to Toscanini fast. The drummer was afraid to make the proper noise and the brasses lacked the Sibelius like Nordic cutting edge but the apprentice theme led to a climax that was well done.

The Concerto No. One was like an old friend, too familiar to be exciting but enjoyable as a memory of a past thing. In the early 50's we wore out many recordings of the triangle concerto. With the first binaural (forerunner of stereo) set in Florida we could achieve exceptional definition, and in retrospect it seems we had greater clarity and separation than possible in a live performance, reminds of the friend who walked out in the middle of a superb Stokowski concert muttering to himself "too much treble."

Fortunately Miss Rich did not fulfill her opening impression of having steel fingers and an iron heart. The crashing noise and wrong notes Liszt seems to require gave way to better effect with Miss Rich showing a raindrop touch that was quite beautiful. The percussionist's conviction grew and the last minutes were as good as any.

The second concerto has always sounded like a missing link to m[od]ern music. Its style is hardly [ro]ical romantic and for that rea[son] it is worth hearing. It starts w[ith] numerous pointless runs for pi[ano] sounding more like a worn out st[ud]ter than good music; fun, but [not] to take seriously. At times the orchestra is strangely moving, not[e] like Harris. The multitude of r[uns] are well controlled, there is m[uch] piano sound here. The keys are [hit] almost to perfection

Theater Doors Stand Open

To the Editor:

I beg a few inches of print to correct what appears to be a wide-spread student opinion of Florida State University's Theatre: that its activities are limited to a special group. Au contraire, every facet of the work of University Theatre is open to all FSU students. Of course there are elements of theatre arts which require intensive training and much experience, but the lack of these should not deter a student from making a start. Anyone with enthusiasm is encouraged to begin the fascinating process of gaining such experience in the University Theatre's program. A bit of skill at carpentry, painting, sewing, etc. makes you more valuable to us, but our main purpose is to provide for all interested students the opportunity to engage in the fabulous arts of the theatre.

Tryouts--open to all--for the forthcoming production of Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker" are this Tuesday and Wednesday evening in Augusta Conradi Theatre at 7 p.m. Those who are attracted to offstage arts are urged to contact the Theatre office (115 History, extension 200).

If theatre is your choice, be assured our doors are open to you.

Letters Policy

Letters to the editor and student comment are welcomed by the "Flambeau." We firmly believe that students should have an open through which their opinions and views can be aired.

We will attempt to print all letters received that meet standards of taste, conciseness of thought and quality of presentation. In addition letters must be held to a maximum of 250 words.

Senate Group Favors Bill 28

Student Senate's Elections and Appointments Committee voted unanimously yesterday to keep Senate Bill 28, requiring that parties submit itemized expense statements, for another two weeks.

The move, initiated by Senator Tom Sisco at the request of Senator George Miller, was made to consider the bill more thoroughly and to await the possible submission of a party expense bill by the two party chairmen.

Secretary of Elections, Ron Jones, who spoke for the bill before the committee, commented after the meeting on the committee's action. Jones said, "This move was a deliberate attempt to assure that there would be no regulations to govern party expenses this year, another example of Senate committee stalling."

Opera Guild Gives Two Short Ones

Two short operas in one evening will be presented this spring by FSU's Opera Guild, which on March 22 and 23 will perform Puccini's "The Cloak" and "Gianni Schicchi."

The one-act operas will be performed in Westcott Auditorium. The stage setting for the latter work will be a 13th century palace in Florence with elaborate costuming.

In contrast "The Cloak" has an early 20th century setting among the poverty stricken bargemen of the Seine just outside Paris.

Richard Collins, director of the Opera Guild and of the productions, has sung numerous leading opera roles with the National Grass Roots Opera, Punch Opera (New York) and Birmingham Civic Opera. One of his roles has been the lead in "Gianni Schicchi."

Robert Sedore will conduct the Opera Chamber Orchestra for the two performances, which will be about one hour long each.

"Gianni Schicchi" is about a rogue who shows up to impersonate a deceased rich man, Buoso Donati, who has left his property to a monastery instead of the outraged members of his family. Schicchi shows himself a rogue in fact by leaving most of the property to himself in the rewritten will, thus earning a place in Dante's "Inferno."

"The Cloak," or "Il Tabarro" is adapted from a French play written in 1910 -- a sordid story about the poverty stricken bargemen and about two murders.

"Il Schicchi" was written by Puccini in April, 1918, and "The Cloak" in 1916. Both were fist performed on Dec. 14, 1918, at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

Smaller Sports Being Slighted

By HOWARD DENSON
Sports Editorial

The battle between the large and small sports has angered many FSU sports fans for years--sometimes with justification, sometimes without.

For instance, the gist of the anti-football arguments runs something like this:

"Football has dominiated the scene long enough. People are tired of seeing one sport get all the money. We ought to divide it more fairly among smaller sports and to de-emphasize football."

The pro-football arguments would sound something like this:

"Football and basketball are the money sports. You can talk all you want about supporting the smaller sports, but the tale is told by the number of spectators and students that attend the various activities. The value of a sport would probably break down in this order: football, basketball, swimming, baseball, and so forth."

Granted there are elements of truth in both sides.

The university does get its biggest support from the "money" sports, and the smaller sports can hardly hope to rival the popularity of a home football game.

But there is still another side.

Continual and sustained ignorance of the smaller sports will cause nothing but a decline, and finally, death of the respective sports.

As examples, the gymnastic and volleyball teams were once nationally known, but their funds were aken away and now the sports have declined. The gymnastic club recently suffered its first dual defeat, while the volleyballers don't even exist as a club.

In the South, wrestling is a big sport is such schools as the perennial Southeastern Conference champion, Auburn University, but wrestling is not even recognized here at Florida State.

Soccer is a sport recognized and respected at each of the proverbial corners of the earth, but not here at Florida State.

The list continues.

In each area, there are men, coaches and players, striving to continue their sports, trying to sharpen their skills, and trying to prove they merit recognition, but thus far their efforts have been for naught.

A person swatting a tennis ball around for a full year can get a varsity letter, valued at some few cents; but a wrestler or soccer player, putting in the same amount of effort, can't even receive this small, nearly worthless, piece of cloth.

Apparently, the reason for the administration's refusal to even give a letter is that it would afford varsity recognition... and therefore would obligate excessive spending in "worthless" areas.

However, these sports have shown a determination to survive without lucre from student activity funds. They would not need to be handed thousands upon thousands of dollars for scholarships and such. Mere payments for travelling expenses, uniforms, and equipment would suffice.

Certainly, no one expects these small sports to dwarf football or to replace basketball, but neither should he expect the university to with-hold the pieces of silver and cloth indefinitely.

Seminole Close Year By Walloping Spartans

Four basketball players were suspended for violating the curfew rule and then Coach Bud Kennedy's remaining six cagers turned out the lights on the Tampa University Spartans Monday night in an 80-58 game.

It was the season finale for both crews. FSU closed with a 15-10 record, while the Spartans finished with a losing 10-14 tally.

Leading the Seminole attack were sophomore Jerry Shirley of Mobile, Ala., with 22 points, and junior Pete Rogers with 20 markers. Shirley reached his mark by bucketing nine field goals and 4-of-4 free throws, while Rogers hit on eight from the floor and 4-of-5 from the line.

Two other Tribesmen tallied in double figures. Bob Ek sank six field goals and 2-of-5 free throws for a 14 total, while Cal Huge scored on four field goals and 2-of-3 charity tosses for 10 points.

FSU's top season scorer, Charlie Long, who has been hitting at over a 20-point clip in recent games, was among those suspended. Others blackballed were tall-man Dale Reeves, Wally Dale and Bill Griswold.

Florida State was trailing, 33-30, at the half, but then the Seminoles got hot and eventually racked up a 59 percent average from the floor, as compared to the Spartans' sparse 29 percent. The Seminoles outgunned the Tampans, 50-25, in the second session.

The South Floridians, however, also had their double figure scorers. Chuck Andrews shot six from the floor and line for 18 points, while George Shary sank seven from the floor fro 14 points. Don Boyt sank four field goals and 3-of-3 charity tosses for 11 markers.

Packers' Starr Set To Coach Gridders

Boasting "one of the best young quarterbacks in the country" in Junior Steve Tensi, Florida State Football Coach Bill Peterson is making sure nothing slows his fair-haired boy's progress.

Due to arrive on the FSU campus Thursday to help out in Spring training for a week is faded Bart Starr, quarterback for the World Champion Green Bay Packers.

Starr will work with all eight of the quarterbacks listed on FSU's Spring roster, explained Peterson. But plenty of time will be concentrated on Tensi, the lanky (6-5, 200) junior from Cincinnati who sparkled as a sophomore last Fall.

"We expect Bart to be a big help to our young quarterbacks," said Peterson. "I don't have to say anything about him--his records speak for themselves."

Feely May Get Grid Role, Says Marshall

(Editor's Note: the following tidbit about an FSU student appeared in a column by Benny Marshall, Birmingham News sports editor.)

One of the more interesting people the past week brought by. . .(was) Eddie Feely, the little man who played quarterback for Florida State.

Feely was a marcher in the brisker-than-usual traffic about Howard College (of Birmingham) one afternoon.

He didn't got out there to play some more quarterback, and he wasn't interested in the head-coaching job Bobby Bowden had just left behind when he moved to FSU as a Bill Peterson assistant.

Eddie had come to see about the four-year scholarship which is his to Howard's Cumberland Law School, and, as far as the football people in the house are concerned, he must be the most illustrious undergraduate turned up around Dr. Leslie Wright's place lately.

He'll be a Howard student in September.

The last view several thousand unhappy Alabamians had of Feely, 5-8 and 155 pounds, was the little man squirming out of the reach of a rushing group of big men, pitching the touchdown which gave Florida State a 14-14 tie with Auburn.

Georgia Tech, Miami, Kentucky, Georgia--to mention a few--had experienced similar difficulties with this small bundle of determination earlier in the football season of 1962.

Feely of FSU was one of the premier quarterbacks down South last Autumn, as all students of last Autumn down South will recall.

And there's a question the small ones must grit their teeth over, so often do they see it coming. Feely was asked, "How do you do it, being so small and all?"

Little guys all over might heed the answer.

"My size was a tremendous asset to me," Eddie Feely said.

"It's a much bigger accomplishment for a smaller boy like me to be able to play with the bigger boys.

"Everybody in this world must have something someone would call a handicap. It's up to them to turn those handicaps into opportunity."

He said many more things, this serious faced, level-eyed youngster who went among the large ones and stood 10 feet tall and now will lear the law.

Nor surprisingly, he liked Florida State and Tallahassee and the people in it. Also he liked going to Auburn. "Some places aren't so nice like Florida or Auburn. They're entirely different. . ."After getting his law degree, it's probably he'll still try his hand at coaching first (and an alumnus knows that Athletic Director Jim Sharman knows this sharp one is going to be around Howard for four years).

USES OF SATELLITES DISCUSSED

...at the Workshop on the Uses of Satellite Data in Tropical Meteorology (left to right) Professor Noel LaSeur of FSU; Sigmund Fritz, chief scientist for the National Weather Satellite Center of the U.S. Weather Bureau and Robert Rados, opening speaker, TIROS project manager for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The conference will end Friday.

Satellite Workshop Held Here

TIROS To Watch Hurricanes

...ics of the northern hemi... area breeding ground of hurri... will be kept under constant ...illance of TIROS cameras dur... the coming hurricane season, ...ording to Robert Rados, project ...er for National Aeronautics ... Space Administration's TIROS ...ject.

...dos was the opening speaker ...esday at a four-day workshop on ...e uses of satellite data in tropical ...eorology being held at FSU under ...spices of the Meteorology Dept. ... the U.S. Weather Bureau's Na... ...ve Weather Satellite Center, ...ver, D...

TIROS V, sent alost fast June 19 to take cloud pictures 400 miles above the earth, still is functioning and one of its two cameras still is operational, Rados told the group. So is TIROS VI, launched on Sept. 18, and one of its two cameras also is still good.

Both of these satellites may still be functioning during the hurricane season next summer and it is expected that TIROS VII will have joined them. TIROS VII is shortly to be launched, said Rados, and he amplified this later by saying it will go up during the second quarter of this year.

Both this and TIROS VIII will have a picture report of the hurricane-spawning area as an objective and TIROS VIII will be launched, it is expected, during the third or fourth quarter of the year so that it will provide data during part of the hurricane season.

Unlike previous satellites of the TIROS family, whose pictures could be received only at the readout stations at Wallops Island, Va., and at Point Mugu, Calif., TIROS VIII, it is hoped, will have automatic picture transmission, meaning that any station on the ground with the comparatively simple equipment needed will be able to receive its pictures of the earth's cloud patterns--the patterns which are clues to weather.

Both TIROS VII and VIII will have two wide-angle lens cameras apiece, he said. Recent satellites have had one wide-angle lens camera and one with a smaller view area. Those of wide angle can cover an area 750 miles across, looking stright down at 400 miles above the earth.

In response to a question by Gordon Dunn, forecaster in charge of the Weather Bureau's hurricane warning service at Miami, Rados said TIROS VII will be in apposition to the two existing TIROS satellites, meaning that it will cover the northern hemisphere hurricane area while V and VI are covering the southern hemisphere and vice versa.

Dr. Werner A. Baum, dean of the faculties at FSU, said satellite data is particularly important in tropical meteorology since so little data is available from other sources in this largely oceanic region.

Among other speakers were Dr. Seymour Hess, head of the Meteorology Dept.; Dr. Noel LaSeur, professor of meteorology, who presided at the sessions and Dr. Sigmund Fritz, chief scientist of the National Weather Satellite Center.

By Unanimous Action

Summer Council Law Powers Given

A bill vesting the legislative powers of the Student Government in "a committee which shall be composed of the President of the Student Body, the Student Body President's Cabinet, the Chief Justice of the Honor Court, and the Student Body Vice President," for the third trimester was passed unanimously in yesterday's Student Senate session.

The purpose of this committee will be to enact statutes which apply to the summer session only. These statutes will supplement, and not contradict, the Statutes enacted by the regular session of the Senate.

Senate also voted unanimously to pass Senate Bill 32, which confers the authority to review and govern the expenditures of all funds derived from the Student and University Activity Fees appropriated by the Senate, upon a Student Budget Commission. The Commission would work in agreement with the University Administration.

Secretary of Student Welfare Bill Sheppard appeared briefly before the members of Student Senate to request that they endorse a resolution pertaining to graduation exercises. The cabinet officers wished to present a joint statement to President Gordon Blackwell, urging that the University seek a way to have three graduations a year instead of the presently scheduled one a year. The Senate unanimously voted to endorse the resolution.

The women of Magnolia were the official guests of the Senate.

UP Opens Convention

The University Party met Tuesday night for the first run in a three-day convention.

Louis Barnett, Party chairman, presided over the meeting.

"University Party will not be a 'rubber stamp' organization to which prospective Student Government officers come and are stamped 'Approved, University Party.' The Party has worked and will work hard to select the best possible candidates. The party will support them year-round in its efforts toward Better government," said Barnett in his address to the convention.

Election of candidates for Judiciary opened the nominations. Pat Clark, Jennifer House, and Luke Brasfield are running for Sophomore Women's Judiciary. Bob Hayes, Ken Creely, and Boyd Coursey are the UP candidates for Sophomore Men's Judiciary.

Nominated for Junior Women's Judiciary were Becky Stevens, Irene Lopez, and Kathy Brown. Also on the same ticket, Jim Moore and Andy Oltyan were nominated for Junior Men's Judiciary. Kim Straton was the only nominee for Senior Women's Judiciary. Nominated for Senior Men's Judiciary were Ron Mason, John Harley, and Andy Haggerty.

Honor Court nominees are: Junior Women, Fran Ubele and Linda Savidge; Junior Men, Horace Smith; Senior Women, Carolyn Wronske and Janet Carlton; and Senior Men, Alan Roles.

Last night Class Officers were nominated and tonight the race will be for Sophomore, Junior and Senior Class Senators, and those offices which have not been filled previously.

CCUN Plans Mock Session

A model United Nations General Assembly will be held at Florida A & M University, March 22 and 23, it was announced today.

Students interested in serving as members of national delegations or helping in some other way may call John Haynes at 224-3040 today between 5 and 7 p.m.

Arrangements of FSU participation is under the direction of a committee from the FSU chapter of the College Council for the United Nations, now being formed.

HEALTH SITUATION

Dr. Gentry, Director of the University Hospital, said yesterday that the campus is feeling the effects of a "seasonal increase in upper respiratory illness."

This "doesn't at this time represent the more serious form of influenza. However, visiting hours have been cancelled due to the crowded conditions in the hospital and to restrict transmission of the mild disease which the patients have contracted."

OPEN RUSH

All girls interested in rush this trimester sign up in the Panhellenic Office, 203 Longmire, Monday through Thursday, March 4-7.

This is for the purpose of compiling a master list to give sororities more accurate knowledge of who is out for rush. Also, it will bring registration cards up to date.

Science Foundation Provides Funds

Summer Math Institute Slated

Florida State University announced it has been allocated National Science Foundation funds to hold a Summer Mathematics Institute for elementary school teachers, June 17 through August 10.

One of 33 being given throughout the country under auspices of NSF, the program at FSU is under the direction of Dr. Eugene D. Nichols, head of the Department of Mathematics Education.

Dr. Nichols said 30 elementary school teachers of grades one through six from over the United States will be selected to attend the institute. Applications already received include one from Alaska and one from Puerto Rico. Teachers may apply through March 15 and notifications of selection will be sent out April 15.

Improvement of mathematics teaching in elementary schools is the "primary purpose of the institute" according to Dr. Nichols. New ideas and techniques related to the teaching of mathematics will be presented and the teachers will study ways to stimulate interest in mathematics ranging from the six to eleven year age group.

The NSF grant of $39,700 provides for tuition free attendance, a weekly stipend of $75 per week for eight weeks (a total of $600 for the eight weeks) a dependency allowance of $15 per week for each dependent and a travel allowance of up to $80 for each participant.

During the institute, two guest lecturers will be invited to deliver talks related to the experimental work, currently in progress in the revision of the elementary school mathematics curriculum.

Participants are required to have a college degree and to have been teaching in grades 1-6 for two years. They may receive nine semester hours of graduate credit for the institute.

Dr. Nichols last year directed an in-service training program for elementary school teachers of mathematics and at the present time is conducting another under an N grant. The present one ends t trimester.

Evaluation Of Class Activities

The Kramer Report

Editor's Note: This is the third of a four part series of the Kramer Report on Class Officers. Luther Kramer, under secretary of internal affairs was appointed by Student Body President Ken van Assenderp to head a special executive committee to evaluate class officers in context of the intended change to the bureau system in the executive branch of student government.

Purpose of the study was to determine what steps, if any, need to be taken within the class officer system as a result of the institution of the Trimester program. It was the specific responsibility of Kramer's committee to present recommendations to the executive branch for possible legislation.

The following is an analysis of class officers' projects from a statistical report made by the various classes.

* * * * * *

Analysis of Class Activities

The first several pages are an analysis of the class projects per se. The last several pages are an analysis of the projects as suitable "class" projects.

1. Christmas Party, Caroling and Tree Lighting Ceremony.

These projects are for the holiday enjoyment of the class officers, the Blackwells and administrative personnel.

The real value and meaning of these parties is open to serious question.

a. They involve the officers of all four class at a time very close to final exams.

b. They cost between $70 and $80 total. In effect FSU students are paying for a private party for their student leaders and faculty leaders.

c. These people all have various other parties to attend during the Christmas season and so the need or value of these functions is difficult to see when balanced against the large expenditure of time and money.

d. Christmas caroling should be a spontaneous expression of the true Christmas spirit and not simply an organized, mass caroling session.

2. Sophomore-Senior Investiture.

This project is to honor the graduating seniors with a dinner and investiture ceremony.

This project, too, is open to question.

a. When FSU used to be a women's college this event was the big, big event.

b. Now attendance is estimated at a high of 350 and a low of 200 with only 15 to 35 of these being male.

c. This does not seem to be a very popular tradition, and it has been declining steadily since the days of FSCW.

3. Class Dances

These dances are to provide entertainment for all FSU students. They certainly value and benefit the student body.

a. The cost to each student is minimal $1.00 and the entertainment is good.

b. Although students might be better served if dances were free.

4. Rat Cap sales.

This project provides a bit of entertainment for upperclassmen and adds a bit of school spirit to the old school.

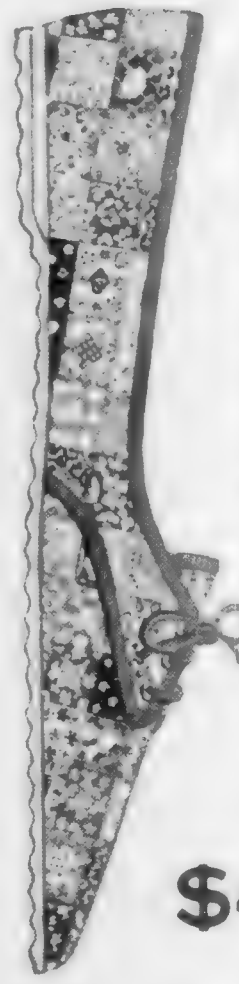
This is a meaningful and worthwhile traditional activity.

5. Who's Who and Hall of Fame selection.

These two projects are to honor the outstanding seniors at FSU.

This, too, is a beneficial project because the outstanding students, those who have contributed their time and effort to FSU student body, deserve to be recognized.

6. Class Night



The purpose here is to announce permanent class officers, give the class gift and provide a dinner for the graduating seniors.

This, too, is a good activity.

7. Class Rings and Graduation Invitations

Class rings certainly should be continued and so should invitations. These are services demanded by a great majority of the graduating seniors.

aried Youth Program Presented Congress

ident Kennedy has presented to ess this year the most varied comprehensive youth program in the history of the United States.

The President singled out the problems of young people for priority treatment in the White House legislative program this year. In his state of the Union address before the new Congress the President mentioned his youth program before all others, saying, "We need to strengthen our Nation by investing in our youth: The future of any country which is dependent on the will and wisdom of its citizens is damaged, and irreparably damaged, whenever any of its children is not education to the fullest extent of his capacity from grade school through graduate school."

Project number one, the Peace Corps, was begun in 1961, and has since grown from a few hundred volunteers to a force of more than 10,000 men and women. First looked upon with a great deal of skepticism by members of Congress, it is expected that this year's request for a Corps budget increase will be passed enthusiastically. Target budget for the next fiscal year: $100 million.

Another very significant youth bill that this year's Congress is expected to act on is the Youth Employment Act of 1963. This bill, proposed by Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.) is a two-point program to assist in the resolution of youth unemployment and to give young people an opportunity to contribute to the development of their community through useful programs of work and construction.

The spectacular success of the Peace Corps has inspired the administration to try essentially the same type of program in the needy areas of the nation. A number of student and educational groups have urged the creation of such a "domestic peace corps" for several years.

An administration team has done considerable research on the feasibility of such a program, concluding that it would be worthwhile. Reaction to the proposal in Congress has been "very favorable," an administration spokesman said last week. It is expected that many of the students' suggestions will be incorporated in the final proposal to Congress, which is expected this summer.

The most commonly suggested title for the domestic corps is the "National Service Corps"--but Congress could easily change that. Corpsmen will work in Indian reservations in the West, in depressed areas, in centers of juvenile delinquents, homes for the aged, and a wide variety of public service occupations. Applicants will have to be over 21 and possess some skill.

Youth Fitness

The recent national controversy over the physical conditions of America's youth grew out of an alarmingly high rate of rejections for the armed services for reasons of physical inadequacy. Combined with the Kennedy administration's fetish for the youthful look trim muscles and 50-mile hikes, this took form in the establishment of a Presidential Council on Youth Fitness, which began in 1962 by issuing its "Blue Books" entitled "Youth Fitness" and outlining various exercises and good health practices recommended for the healthy American youth.

Dual Faculty Recital Scheduled For Friday

Dr. William Cramer, trombonist, and Robert Glotzbach, pianist, will appear in a faculty recital at FSU this Friday.

Part of the faculty recital series sponsored by the FSU School of Music, the program will be at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall. The public is invited.

The program will include sonatas for trombone and piano by Klaus George Roy, Paul Hindemith and W.H. Rivard and a sonatina for trombone and piano by John Boda of the FSU music faculty.

A particularly strong challenge is presented to the composer in the combination of trombone and piano, according to Dr. Cramer. The sonatas by Roy and Rivard and the Sonatina by Boda were written for the performers.

The Rivard Sonata presents two different relationships between the instruments -- while the Boda Sonatina maintains a delicate balance of three individual lines (two in the piano) throughout much of the work. In the Roy sonata the trombone is placed in the midst of whole sound complex producing frequent close harmony with the piano. The Hindemith sonata, is considered a classic of trombone literature.

HAIL TO THE DEAN!

Let's examine that much maligned, widely misunderstood, overworked, wholly dedicated campus figure the dean.

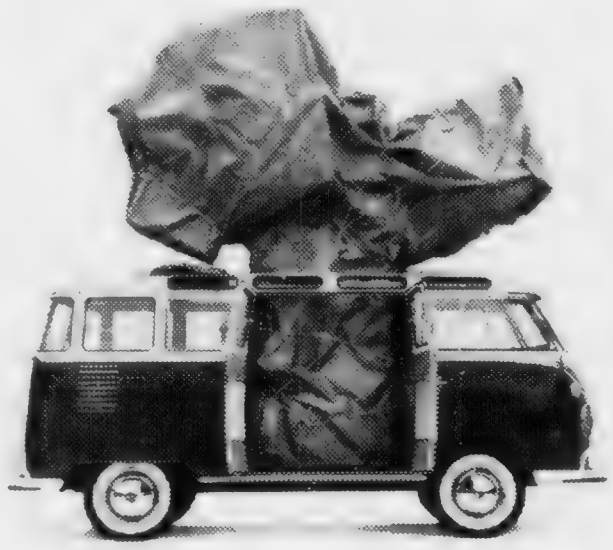
The word comes from the Latin Decanus to expel is not, as many students currently believe, a disciplinary officer. He is a counselor and guide and refuge for the troubled student. The dean from the Greek Deanos to skewer is characterized chiefly by quantity wisdom, patience, forbearance, and a fondness for group pastimes like community singing, karma spelldowns, and Marlboro cigarettes. The dean from the German Deangst to keep a party is fond of Marlboros for the same reason men of good will are fond of Marlboros because Marlboro is the finest cigarette. Those good Marlboro tobaccos are honestly good, honestly aged to the peak of perfection, honestly blended for the best of all possible flavors. Marlboro comes in two different containers a soft pack which honestly is soft and a Flip-Top box which honestly flips. You can't go wrong next you try an honest Marlboro, which, one hopes, will be soon.

It's not a dry eye in Yutah

But I digress. We were learning how a dean helps poor, troubled undergraduates. To illustrate, let us take a typical case history of Dean S of the University of Y Why must it be so mysterious? The dean's name is Sigafoos and the university is Yutah.

One sunny day Dean Sigafoos was visited by a freshman named Walter Agincourt who came to ask permission to marry Emma Blenheim, his dormitory laundress. To the dean the marriage seemed ill-advised, for Walter was only 18 and dear Emma was 91. Walter agreed with the dean, but declared he was obligated to go through with it because Emma had invested her savings in a transparent rainhood to protect her complexion at Niagara Falls, where they planned to spend their honeymoon. If Walter called off the wedding, what use could the poor woman possibly have for a rainhood in Yutah?

The wise, kindly dean pondered briefly and came up with a solution. He let Walter punch holes in the back of Emma's rainhood. With steam billowing back at the old lady, she found her rainhood very useful possibly even essential. Weeping with gratitude, Walter kissed the dean's Phi Beta Kappa key and hastened away to follow his advice and, I am pleased to report, were madly successful!



Emma Blenheim is a happy woman singing lustily, wearing her rainhood, eating soft-center chocolates, and ironing clothes for happy, to be candid, than if she had married Walter Agincourt. But what of Walter? He is happy too. Freed from his unfortunate union with Emma, he married a girl much nearer his own age Agnes Yucca, 72. Walter is now the proud father of what seems to be perfectly accurate of three fine, healthy sons from Agnes's first marriage -Everett, 38; Wilhelm, 43; and Irving, 55 and when Walter puts the boys on a lead and takes them for a stroll in the park on Sunday afternoon, you can be sure there is not a dry eye in Yutah.

And Dean Sigafoos? He too is happy happy to spend long, long hours in his little office, giving counsel without stint and without complaint, doing his bit to set the young, uncertain feet of future generations on the path to a brighter tomorrow.

What is it?

Glad you asked.

It's a Volkswagen Station Wagon.

Don't pity the poor thing; it can take it.

It can carry nearly a ton of anything you can afford to buy.

Or 8 people (plus luggage) if you want to get practical about it.

And there's more than one practical consideration.

It will take you about 24 miles on a gallon of regular gas.

It won't take any water or anti-freeze at all; the engine is air-cooled.

And even though it carries almost twice as much as regular wagons, it takes 4 feet less to park.

What's in the package?

8 pairs of skis, the complete works of Dickens, 98 lbs. of frozen spinach, a hutch used by Grover Cleveland, 80 Hollywood High gym sweaters, a suit of armor, and a full-sized reproduction of the Winged Victory of Samothrace.

Three-Platoons Slow Tribesmen

By HOWARD DENSON
Editorial

The moment that the NCAA announced its rule change this winter, cries arose that "Free substitution has returned!"

At the same time, many people were asking, "Will Coach Bill Peterson utilize the platoon system and drop the three-team system?"

In the confusion, Peterson's former boss at LSU, Paul Dietzel, now of Army, declared he had always favored a two-platoon under free substitution. It's a matter of getting the best man on the field at the right time, he said.

But as time went on and the rule interpretation was made clear, three things became evident (to quote Florida's Ray Graves):

--The rule was aimed at destroying the three-team system.

--The rule was a step away from the platoon system.

--The rule would speed up the game since there would now be no sign-ins.

The NCAA committee said, therefore, there shall be free substitution allowed by each team during all time-outs and on all plays in a series, except the fourth down and when the ball changes hands. On the fourth down and when the ball changes hands, each team can substitute two men on the present wild-card basis.

Coaches asked this question, "Who wants to substitute on the second and third downs?"

Reactions to the rule change were varied.

Coach Peterson wanted them to just leave the rules alone. Bobby Dodd of Georgia Tech said he still preferred free substitution with no strings attached. Georgia's Johnny Griffith said he thought the rule was about as close to free substitution as one could get, while Auburn's Ralph Jordan blasted the change as a great step backward.

So instead of having a choice between the three-team system and platooning, Peterson will be fighting [illegible] in an attempt to retain something of the Chiefs, Renegades and Warriors.

At this stage of Spring practice, coaches feel they may be able to achieve at least a two and one-half team system, with the use of several specialists. The wild-card rule allows that much of a substitution.

Nonetheless, it will be a struggle to find the double-duty men who can stick in there on both offense and defense.

Three-teaming is not a sacred and immortal trust for Florida State gridders, but the loss of this system would greatly affect the school's entire athletic slant.

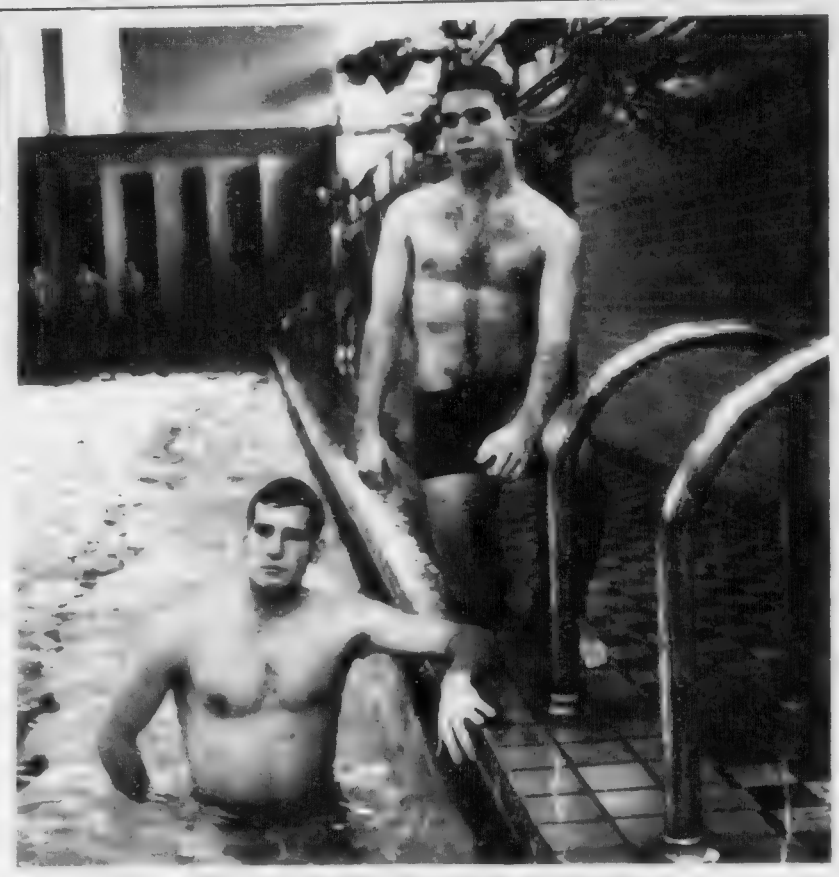
Peterson says, "For three years, we have geared everything --recruiting, player development, game plans--on the three-team system....

"Changing over to a two-team plan will be a great challenge for both the players and the coaching staff. And to succeed in 1963, we must make the change-over."

Losing the three-team system could take something else from the Seminoles--a certain element of its esprit de corps. This and the pride in a player's team, be it Warriors, Renegades, or Chiefs, were stressed more than any other thing this season on the Seminole practice field. "Have pride, have pride, have pride," the coaches continually chanted.

It had its effect. The team that was beaten, 21-7, by arch-rival Florida, showed it had enough pride to tie both Auburn and Georgia Tech, 14-14. It held nationally-ranked Miami to a 7-6 win and tied the University of Kentucky.

Naturally, pride and esprit de corps will remain even if the two-platoon system were installed, but the great advantage of three squads is that the pride is magnified and amplified.



Florida's Graves, who installed the three-team system last year, said UF will stick with it... so might FSU, but the subjunctive must be loudly sounded.

Campus Chest Surpasses Goal

By BEN SHARP
Flambeau Editor

Campus Chest skyrocketed past its goal of $1066, with contributions amounting to $1302.09.

This is the first year that the goal has been surpassed, stated Libby Gentile, Campus Chest committee chairman.

"This is only the second year that an all-out drive has been staged. Last year only $700 was raised," Miss Gentile stated.

She contributed the success of the drive to representatives of sororities and dorms and to her committee.

"Representatives from dorms, fraternities and sororites were essential in making this drive go over the goal," Miss Gentile added.

Campus Chest contributions benefit the World University Service, the Helen Keller Foundation for the Blind, and Teofile Abril, an adopted Colombian boy.

Sigma Kappa leads in individual contributions with $240, as a result of their Variety show.

Jennie Murphree with $84.12, Cawthon Hall with $68.56, Landis Hall with $53 and Gilchrist with $52.78 were runnerup contributors.

Other donations came from: Alpha Omicron Pi, $20; Delta Tau Delta, $20; Kappa Delta, $21.83; Delta Delta Delta, $20; Alpha Xi Delta $20: Magnolia Hall, $43.35; Alpha Delta Pi, $20; Pi Beta Phi, $20; Gamma Phi Beta, $21; Broward Hall, $34.56 and Chi Omega, $25.

Other contributions came from: Zeta Tau Alpha $20; Bryan Hall $30; Delta Zeta $20.40; Kappa Kappa Gamma $22.75; Phi Mu $20.77; Kappa Alpha Theta $26.19; Delta Gamma $25.51; Reynolds Hall $64.47; Alpha Phi $20.17; Alpha Tau Omega $20.60; Alpha Chi Omega $20, and Sigma Chi $20.

More donations Kellum Hall $37.11; Sigma Phi Epsilon $16; Sigma Sigma Sigma $16.75; Dorman Hall $26; Sigma Alpha Epsilon $6; Alpha Gamma Delta $15.50; Florida Hall $27.37.

BOP Passes Policy Addition

In a special session of the Board of Publications a policy statement was passed unanimously concerning the Flambeau Editor's position in the campus elections.

The policy statement reads as follows: "The Flambeau and its editor may continue to give news and editorial coverage to student political events and controversies. At no time, however, will the editor of any publication, acting in his official capacity, enter into student partisan politics and/or use the facilities, or the privileges of the office, for the promotion of a political party or candidate in preference to any other party or candidate."

This statement was put in the form of a motion by John Shaffner, chairman of the committee, and seconded by Ben Sharp. It was passed unanimously by the Board. Other members of the committee were Toni DiCarlo, chairman of the Board, Sally Street, and Sandy Bowes.

John Shaffner proposed the motion which reads as follows: Each policy statement shall carry at the end, the date of initial presentation to the board as well as the date of adoption. The general policy statement of BOP shall also carry at the bottom the following statement. "All new policy statements shall include date of presentation and date of adoption." This motion was seconded by Ben Sharp and passed unanimously by the Board.

The Failures Of Liberalism'

Fulton Lewis Speaks At FSU

By VICKI RODRIGUEZ
Flambeau Staff Writer

"At the tender age of 21, I was informed that Drew Pearson was my godfather. While this might displease some of us in the audience, I should please Dr. Piccard."

With this statement, Fulton Lewis began a discussion of "The Failures of Liberalism" at a lecture sponsored by the FSU chapter of Young Americans for Freedom at Dorman Music Hall.

Lewis analyzed liberal versus conservative philosophy and pointed out what he felt were eight major failures created by "the liberal administration of the past three decades."

According to Lewis, these are the failure of the liberals to bring prosperity, end unemployment, act as champions for democracy, be leaders in the right to dissent, uphold individual liberties, bring about unity, act as defenders of freedom and democracy throughout the world and draw up a constitution to replace what they feel is an outdated document.

In backing up his arguments, he cited the movement toward centralization of power, loss of economic prestige, greater press censorship and use of compulsory arbitration between labor and management.

After discussing liberal theory, Lewis examined the conservative viewpoint. He emphasized, "It is true that we don't trust our leaders. It is also true that we look back to the past and that we don't wish to co-exist peacefully with Communism. We feel we can learn from the experience of the past, and regarding Communism, co-existence means appeasement, and appeasement spells disaster."

The audience listened attentively and at one point broke into applause when Lewis mentioned he regarded the present Supreme Court as the worst in United States history, basing his dislike on its "political rather than judicial" decisions. Audience reaction was also favorable to his advocacy of withdrawing the United States from the UN and of recalling the Peace Corps.

He also advocated a staunch resistance to Communist aggression. Speaking of the chance of nuclear war, he summarized, "I feel the chances of nuclear war are at a minimum because each side is too well aware of the destruction that would result. There is no alternative but to fight for freedom and refuse to compromise with tyranny."

The last half of the two-hour discussion was devoted to answering questions from the audience. His appearance at FSU was part of a speaking tour of college campuses.

A former research director for the House Committee of Un-American Activities, Lewis has also appeared on the "Today" show and has debated Socialist leaders Norman Thomas, Michael Harrington and Joseph Raugh.

University Party Selects Class Senator Candidates

Candidates for Sophomore, Junior and Senior Class Senators were nominated Wednesday night in the second run of the three-day University Party Convention.

The convention was opened with an invocation given by Frank Ryll, newly-elected Men's Vice President. Louis Barnett, party chief, presided over the nominations on the UP ticket.

Nominees from the Senior Class are Tom Haney, president; Bob Stripling, vice president; Trish Bassett, secretary; Sarrah Lee Mackim, treasurer; and Ley Hulsey, social chairman.

Candidates for Junior Class officers are Hines Boyd, president; Bill Chamberlain, vice president; Jan Brantley, secretary; Marilyn Johnson, treasurer; and Dot Hay, social chairman.

Running on the UP ticket for Sophomore Class position are Chuck Beck, president; John Noppenberg, vice president; Sandy Clark, secretary; Jan Wackenhut, treasurer; and Chris McGlasson, social chairman.

The convention moved back on the agenda to entertain nominations for those offices which had not previously been filled. Linda Barnhill and Cathy Walten were nominated for Senior Women's Judiciary.

Two Groups Chance Fifty-Mile Weekends

A fifty-mile benefit hike from Perry to Tallahassee will be conducted by members of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity Friday and Saturday. "Fifty miles. . .For A Purpose" is under the sponsorship of ten local merchants and businessmen. Each has contributed $25 to be donated to the FSU Campus Chest upon completion of the journey.

Weekend walkers will be Walt Williams, John Sytsma, Sam McAlexander, Jim Hilburn, Bill Luten, John Dillon, Jim Blue, Roger Shortz, Evan Jennings, and Don Loucks.

Sponsors of the hike are Capital Office Equipment, The Corner, The Corral, Fred's Liquors, Garcia's, Gibb's French Shop, Nic's Toggery, Pike's Studio, Southernaire-Skyline Motels, Ted's, and Vardi's Imports.

The hike will begin at Perry late Friday night. The men will carry their fraternity colors and plan to arrive at Westcott gates early Saturday afternoon.

The hikers will present Dean of Men Donald Loucks with the check for campus chest at that time.

Dr. William Rogers and Dr. James Jones of the History Department are sponsoring a hike this weekend, also.

The pair are leading a group of their students on a trek to the Georgia line, beginning at 8 Saturday morning.

Trivia Breeds Apathy

Kenneth Keniston, a Rhodes Scholar and Harvard Junior Fellow, worte a thoughtful article in "American Scholar," magazine of Phi Beta Kappa, which analizes student political apathy on American College campuses. The article, which was digested by Time magazine recently, lays the blame for the "unconcerned" attitude of college students heavily on campus politics.

Time states: "To Keniston, who feels that "true politics" should indeed concern collegians, a key deterrent is campus politics. By dealing only with trivia, he says, student government subtly argues that only "Omnicompetent officials" have the wisdom to make real policy decisions. Even more subtle is an echo from the McCarthy era -- not fear of speaking out, but fear of being taken in. Given the abiding American fear of being a sucker, says Keniston, McCarthy allusions to "unwitting dupes" still make collegians wary of offbeat ideas."

Keniston contends that this is a result of the student being self-centered and having a "lack of deep commitment to adult values" including politics.

The article has food for thought -- which is particularly apropos during the current student government elections, as students knock heads for the privilege of being part of this organization.

On campus, the FSU student government generally does a good job of carrying out routine governmental functions of apportioning monies, regulating organizations, setting up meetings and going through the motions of handling their own affairs within the framework allowed by the administration. Student Government leaders comfort themselves by repeating the truism that FSU has one of the best Student Governments in the South.

But the fact that we handle trivia better than other colleges is no real comfort.

Student Government, except on rare occassion, has been so concerned with introverted affairs of running campus activities that they have failed to recognize their function as spokesmen for the Student Body. Issues of real significance have arisen which are not grasped or tackled. Serious questions are dismissed as being too touchy or tabled "for study" until they are dead.

Often student "leaders" are afraid to speak for their Student Body on serious issues for fear of offending someone in power. Opinions are muted for the "good" of the entire university.

Elected officials, and those seeking election, should consider the deeped meaning of leadership. They should realize that the boundaries of the campus are not the bounds of the world and that student opinions can be instrumental off campus as well as on.

Student Government wants for leadership with a deeper meaning. Only such leadership can bend the bonds of student apathy.

State Of Superfluous

Asian Flu Goes International

By SANDY TURNER
Flambeau Staff Writer

The Greecian state of Superfluous, which is presently suffering from an epidemic of the Asian flu, has just called its legislature into session to consider measures which would be effective in combating the dread disease.

Chairman Smilus Smythecles commented before calling the House to order that in "the neighboring state of Repulsiveness the flu is also prevalent, but it is much worse in Superfluous thus proving our superiority to that state."

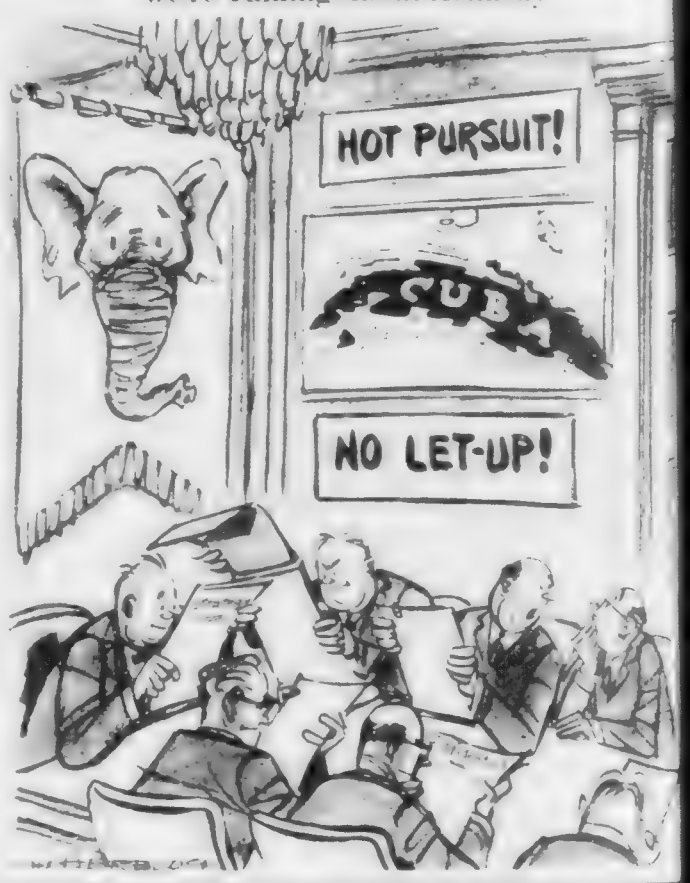
At this point Secretary of the House Maxine Malthus, who has just been defeated by Smythecles in a minor election, called Smilus a fink and lifted his toga to his ears and proceeded to practice tying a hangman's noose. Smilus counterattacked by biting Malthus and the discussion continued with great vigor until it was halted when Smilus cried foul and fell into the sewer.

Promptly at 4:15 the house was called to order, and the legislature proceeded to railroad through bills at a quick and efficient pace.

Senator Anus Gabberus dominated the proposals, the meeting, and the discussion as expected, but encountered serious opposition by Senator Mudcatus Grantus on House Bill 69 which proposed that all women of Superfluous be required to wear the hemline of their togas below the knee.

Senator Gabberus claimed that permitting togas to be worn above the knee would "bring the morals of the community down upon our heads." Grantus countered with "if that is all the community dumps on our heads, the house would indeed be fortunate." Senator Luscous Loonus stood on her bench and raised her toga somewhat above her knees in order that the other Senators might have more insight into the argument.

Amid the ensuing egression Senator Cicero suggested that the bill be voted down and that the neckline of the togas be lowered below the knee and the problem solved. Immediately the bill was passed and Senator Slipperus Barnetus was excused in order that he might water his fig trees.



President Agustus Asentwerpus made a short oration to the House in which he empathetically, irrevocably, and indoubtably stated that vocably, and indoubtably stated that he was "not in favor of Asian flu, it should not be put into the Constitution, and that it was an unmistakable indicator of the glorious future of the state of Superfluous."

The House then passed by a unanimous vote, a law which prevented the spread of Asian flu effective in the fall of "63" and the House adjourned.

The rest of the session will be used to clear the rostrum of such menial items as House Bill 960 which concerns the problems of starving beggars in the streets. It was tabled by the committee in order that it might be presented with the proposal that "white" be made the official color of Superfluous, action enabled the Senators a long weekend.

All legislation passed [illegible] year by the House is still being [illegible] eographed and oddly [illegible] bill that has been [illegible] through the Honor Court [illegible] which changed the state motto from "In Hoc Signo Vinces" to "Illi mates Non Carborundum," which a true sign of the glorious of the state of Superfluous.

Debate Order Of Challenge

Dear Mr. Gelders:

There was no "subterfuge" involved in my attempt to arrange a debate between Dr. Irish and Dr. Dobson. Dr. Irish wrote her reply to Mr. Coney in light of her nearly thirty years experience in teaching constitutional law. Therefore it was necessary for one who would challenge her ad hominem attack to obtain the opinion of one equally qualified in the field in question.

You say that I have not hesitated to air my views on the Supr Court "when no one could challe me. This is sheer nonsense. time you wrote your challenge not expressed my [illegible] Court, but had merely obtai statement of an expert in the of Constitutional law who di however, shall comment in columns in the FLAMBEA

On the contrary, Mr. [illegible] is the liberals who wish unchallenged. No prominen would accept the challe Lewis to debate. I realize y but you by your own admissi a "Burkean Conservative." bers of the Government Depart who have criticised student have refused to debate. Dr. refused to debate Lewis, and I not yet had a reply to the per letter I wrote Dr. Irish in re to a debate with Dr. Dobson.

I am led to the conclusion tha are not so much interested in a ing at the truth "through re discourse" but, rather, are inter ed in drawing attention from th that liberals to a man have re to accept challenges to debate can only conclude that they are ful of what these confr might reveal.

I shall be happy to debate you Gelders, but on one condition th easily met if you and others Government Department are interested in the relative meri the liberal and conservative ments. Let us hold the debate the order the challenges were first let Dr. Irish debate Dr. . . . .let two experts really ex all aspects of the problem. Whe has been done, you and I will it out.

Tragedy Of Saltbox Charge

While working at a certain well-known hamburger stand the other day, I made a traumatic discovery that pierced the very depths of my psyche with bolts of white-hot shock. It occurred right after I had filled a salt shaker. Placing the salt box back upon the shelf, my gaze fell upon the label. Suddenly I began to tremble all over and I stuffed my fingers into my mouth to stifle the scream that was rising in my throat. The room began to spin wildly and the last thing I remember, the hissing grease of the deep-fat fryer was rushing up to meet me.

When I awoke, I was toasty brown on both sides, salted, and lying in a white paper bag full of french fries. Some nasty little boy was just sinking his teeth into the fleshy part of my right arm. Freeing myself with a minimal loss of flesh, I dashed back into the stand and sought out that same salt box. I was right! It wasn't a dream. Hot tears rolled down my fresh-fried cheeks and the golden brown skin of my face crinkled crisply into a grimace of despair. Yes, it was true, THEY HAVE CHANGED THE LABEL!

Oh, the balmy summer afternoons I have spent sitting at the kitchen table eating lunch and staring idly at the salt box label, letting my little mind dwell idly on the picture of the girl in the yellow dress carrying an umbrella in one hand and a salt box in the other. On the label of the box she carried was a picture of herself carrying another salt box, with a picture of herself carrying another salt box, with. . .(This way to infinity).

And now the whole process is ruined--her arm now covers the label of the box she carries! It's like waking up one morning to find the sun rising from the north--as if someone walked off with Westcott fountain--as if JFK had suddenly misplaced the whitehouse.

Class Projects Evaluation

The Kramer Report

A close examination of the various projects of the calsses is important because it is essentially through these activities that the COP will either achieve or fail to achieve its stated purposes. These purposes as related to the projects are:

1. Aiding the administration in maintaining FSU's reputation as a "friendly and concerned" school where the student is regarded as an individual and not as a number.
This can be successfully done by providing the student with something substantial and meaningful to identify with, i.e., his class. Class activities can provide an avenue of participation and support.
2. Aiding the administration and alumni association in building a strong alumni program.
This can be done in certain situations by the class officers through activities that tend to build strong class ties and loyalties thereby promoting indirectly a pride and concern for the alma mater.
3. Enabling students to plan and carry out significant and meaningful projects for the benefit of their class or the student body as a whole.
Just how many of the present class projects are significant and meaningful in these respects? That is the question to which we will now attempt to find an answer.

We begin with 16 projects. Of these three are Christmas Parties. These parties are sponsored jointly by the class officers for the Blackwells, administration officials and class officers.
a. These cannot be considered a valid expenditure of either time or money for reasons given on the preceding pages.
b. It is highly doubtful whether these Parties contribute even minimally to class spirit and identification since they are more in the nature of a private party for calss officers and the Blackwells and administrative officials.
c. These parties are sponsored jointly and this means that no one class is distinguished from another in any fashion. Consequently, again, probably not promoting any class identification.
This leaves 13 projects. Of these 6 are dances for the benefit of the entire FSU student body.
a. These dances are not a distinctive class project per se for the benefit of a particular class.
b. No more Juniors come to a Junior class dance than at a Sophomore class dance and so on.
c. There is comparatively little class participation outside the class officers, according to reports turned in.
d. The class officers, in sponsoring these dances, are simply serving as an elected social committee for the student body. That is, four committees of five people each for 6 dances.
e. Therefore, it is very likely that these dances do little to promote strong identification with or pride in a particular class.
This leaves 7 projects. Of these 2 are the selection of outstanding seniors for the Hall of Fame and Who's Who.
a. These projects involve only the Junior Class Vice President, President and Secretary; the other members of the selections committees are Constitutionally appointed from the Junior class by the Student Body President.
b. The selection process is mechanical and done by an objective "rating" sheet. Consequently, little is involved that would stimulate class pride or identification except perhaps among the seniors, but then this would be the case regardless of who selected these Seniors to be so honored.
This leaves 5 projects. Of these 2 are arranged only one time every three years. That is the ordering of class rings and graduation invitations. Each year minor changes are sometimes made in the ring and names need to be changed in the invitations.
a. Here again we have a rather mechanical process of contract signing every three years by the four class presidents.
b. With this project too, it is difficult to see how class unity or pride is effected. Class rings and invitations will have the same meaning regardless of who signs the contracts or changes the names.
This leaves 3 projects of a definite "class" nature. The Sale of Rat Caps the Class Night; the Sophomore-Senior Investiture.
That is, these projects involve a comparatively large number of students from the classes. Let us look more closely at these.

Sophomore-Senior Investiture
a. Is it wise to invest large sums of student effort and moeny into a project that is slowly declining in popularity as time goes on?
b. How meaningful will this project become as the number of graduating students increases and if the trend is any indication, the number of students participating in this activity continues to decrease?
It is easy to see how this activity could be a very good one in a small school where most or all of the graduating seniors could and would attend the dinner and investiture ceremony. But how meaningful is it in a fast growing, metropolitan institution.

Rat Cap Sales
a. Several questions concerning this project in particular as a result of the trimester calendar.
b. Will the Caps be sold only once a year in the Fall? If so, then only about one third of the Freshman class will benefit from this tradition. Providing enrollment evens out over all three trimesters as it eventually will.

New Junior Counselors Are Selected

Junior Counselors for the fall and spring trimesters were chosen this week by two separate committees under the chairmanship of the Associate Dean of Women, Miss Elizabeth Lynn.

The first committee is composed of five senior women chosen by the Women's Senate. All five were JC's in their junior year and each of a different dorm.

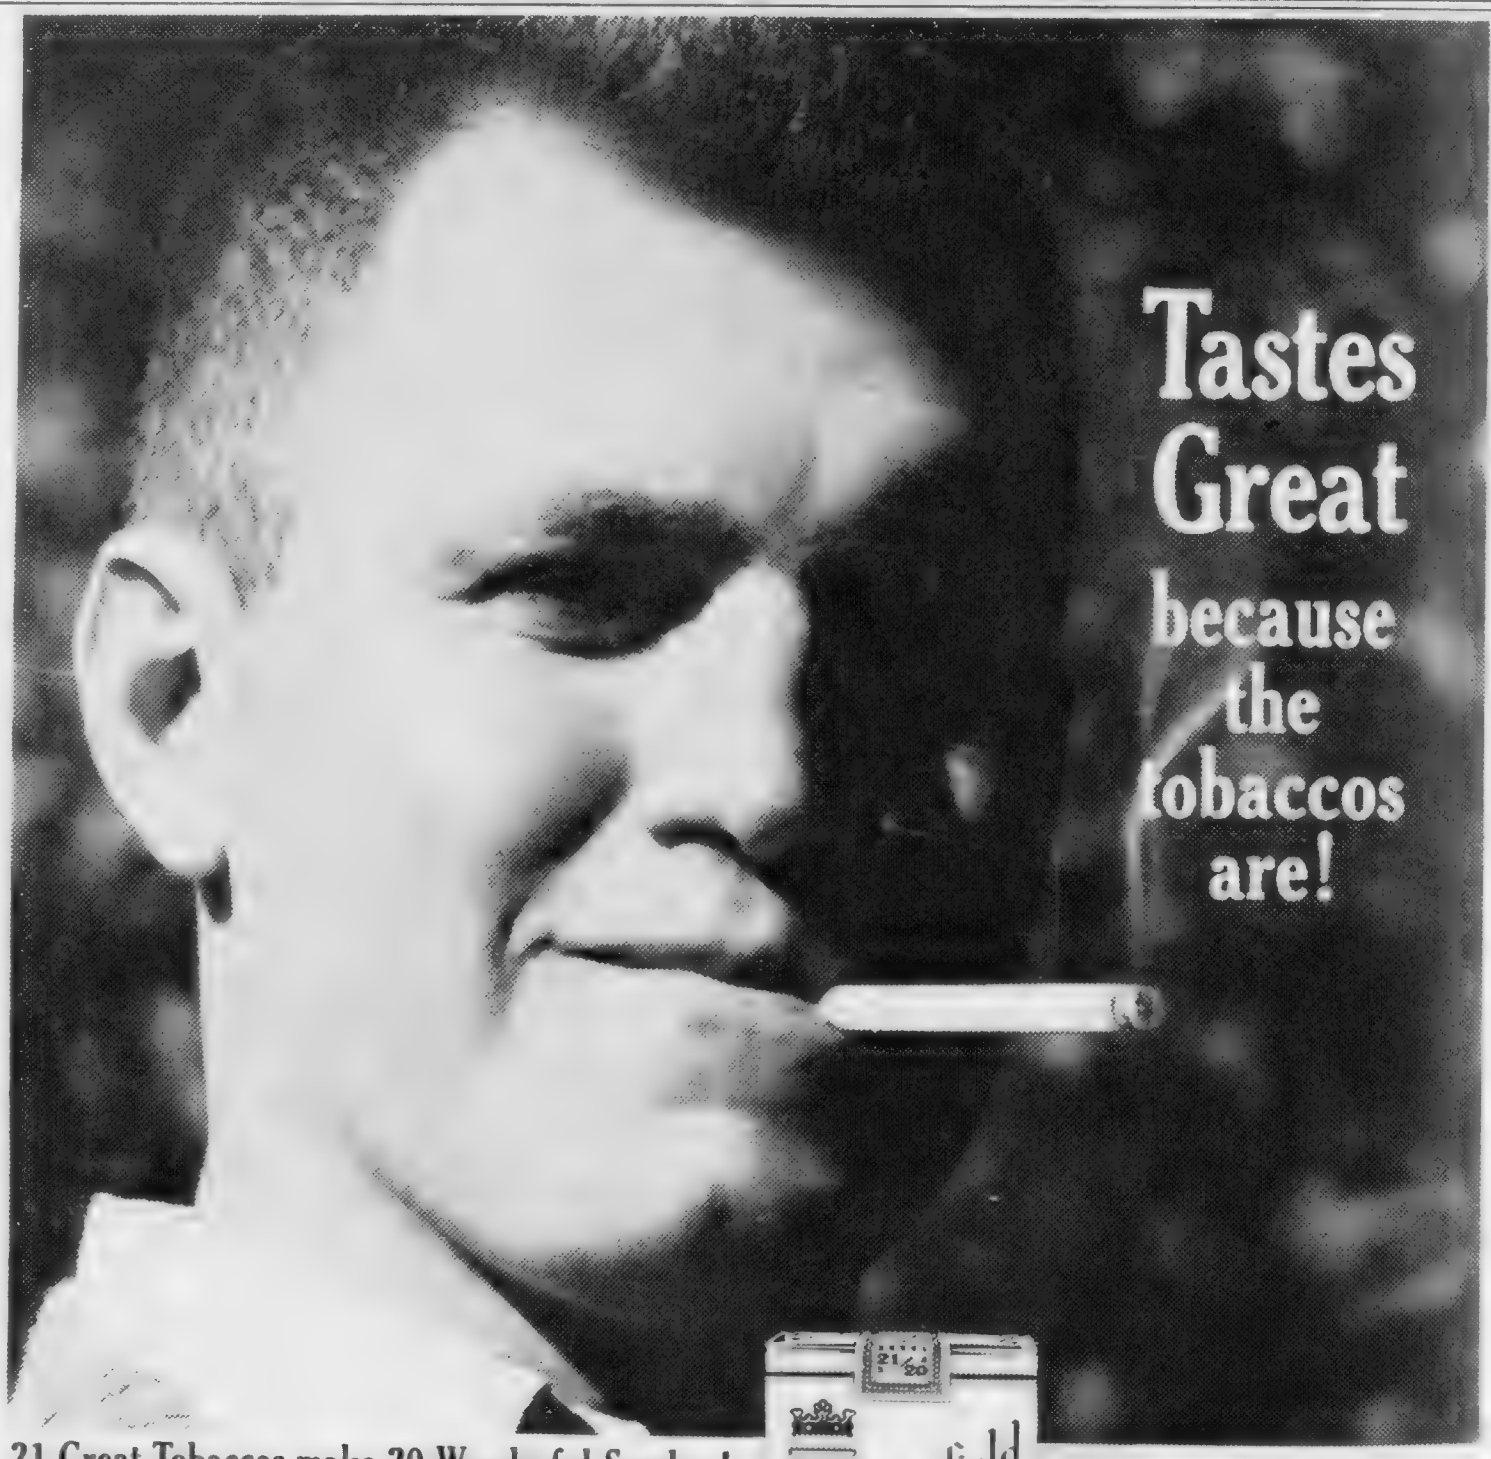
The second committee used for selection of the new junior counselors is composed of the remaining JC's.

Training courses for the newly-selected JC's will be held every Thursday evening in March. The first two will be in Reynolds Hall. The purpose of these meetings is to acquaint the girls with the personal agencies on campus and to elect officers for the freshman dorms of next year.

The junior counselors for 1963-1964 are as follows:

Day Student Counselors: Gwyndolyn Cawthon, Myra H. Hancock, Linda Jo Manni, Marilyn O. Mikles, Linda Ruth Phillips, Elizabeth Qualls, Kay Rankin, Barbara Renfrow, Edith Shaw, Vivian Woolwine.

Scholarship Houses Counselors: Juanita Adderhold, Doris McQuiddy, Wendy Murphy, Jennifer Newcomer.



Transfer Counselors: Teresa Andrews, Mary Jo Beck, Bonnie Block, Eleanor Bustelo, Janice Conner, Patricia Curry, V. Today's News Roundup

Flambeau News Services

NEW YORK -- The New York Post, one of nine dailies closed during the 83-day New York City newspaper strike, announced yesterday it will resume publication on Monday. The Post was not closed by the strike of printers against four New York papers, but shut down when all members of the New York Publisher's Association agreed to suspend publication.

The decision of the Post owner, Mrs. Dorothy Schiff, is the first break in the publishers' ranks. She resigned from the association, saying: "I think the strike had gone on long enough." Negotiations between printers and the other publishers are scheduled today.

NEW YORK -- The Coast Guard in New York reports a German freighter sinking in the stormy Atlantic with a crew of about 40 aboard. The ship, "Adele Ohlrogge," is reported being battered by 35 foot waves and 65 mile winds 1,500 miles east of New York. The Coast Guard has dispatched a plance from Newfoundland.

WASHINGTON -- Defense Secretary Robert Mcnamara revealed yesterday that US aircraft carriers in the North Atlantic and North Pacific have been flown over frequently by long-range Russian reconnaissance planes during the past five weeks. Mcnamara said there was nothing illegal about it, we too fly over Soviet vessels in international waters. The only thing significant, he indicated, was the long range of the Soviet aircraft.

In all cases, Mcnamara said, US interceptor planes plotted and followed the Russian planes, which he said showed no hostile intent and were obviously reconnaissance planes and not bombers. The range of some of the planes appeared to be at least 4,000 miles.

WASHINGTON -- Defense Secretary Mcnamara told a news conference yesterday in answer to a question, that the US would not stand by idle if Russian troops in Cuba were used to suppress a popular uprising against the Castro regime. Mcnamara put it this way: "We will not accept combat operations in this hemisphere by Soviet personnel."

NEW YORK -- Communist China fired another propaganda barrage at the Kremlin yesterday. It accuses Moscow of whipping other Communist nations into line with Soviet party policies. And it accuses anti-Chinese Communist countries of jamming Chinese broadcasts to prevent people from hearing Mao Tze-tung's side of the ideological argument.

"Midnight in New Orleans" will transform the recreation room of Landis Hall into a gay, French-American street Saturday night at the hall's annual dance.

Performing for the dance will be the Rick Powell band. Refreshments will be served a la New Orleans.

College Fiction Contests Entry Deadline Is Today

Today is the deadline for entries to "Mademoiselle's " 1962-63 Art Contest and College Fiction Contest.

The two annual competitions for women students offer cash prizes, publication and national recognition to the winners.

The two College Fiction Contest and Art Contest winners each and their work will be published in "Mademoiselle."

"Mademoiselle's" Art Contest, which is open to students between 18 and 26, discovers imaginative students of the fine arts. At least five samples of the artist's work must be submitted for the judging, and work in any medium will be accepted. Judges for the 1962-63 Art Contest are Emily Genauer, art editor and critic of the "New York Herald Tribune;" Hedda Sterne, painter; and Roger Schoening, art director of "Mademoiselle."

"Mademoiselle" College Fiction Contest is open to students enrolled in college or junior college. To enter the contest, students must submit one or more manuscripts of any length to "Mademoiselle." All stories must have fictitious characters and situations or they will be disqualified.

Address entries or queries to either Art Contest or College Fiction Contest, "Mademoiselle," 420 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, New York.

TV Airs FSU Speech Finals

SPEAKING OF SPEECH, a presentation of WFSU-TV, will feature the FSU Speech Department and other universities in the South with the finals in Impromptu Speaking in the Florida State Invitational Tournament, Monday, at 8:00 p.m.

This is the first time that the finals of such a tournament have ever been staged for television. As the speeches proceed the audience will have the chance to make their own decisions and to compare them with those of the judges.

This is the fourteenth annual tournament of this type. It was held in Feb. at FSU with thirty universities from throughout the South represented. Dr. Greg Pfieffer of FSU was the director of the tournament. The topics were drawn from the general field of education and the speakers were given five minutes with which to prepare five minute speeches.

Appearing on the program will be Dick Root of FSU; Mary John Smith of the University of Alabama; Ron Shelp of the University of Georgia; and Melba Middleton of Howard College.

The Impromptu Speaking Division was one of several dealing with speaking and debating in the tournament.

Host for the Channel 11 presentation will be Richard Hahn of the FSU Speech Department. "Speaking of Speech" is a regular feature of WFSU-TV and may be seen on the first Monday of each month.

The Biennial State Meet of Tri Delta Alumni and Collegiates will be held here this weekend. Tri Delts from Florida, Georgia, and Alabama will meet with Mrs. John A. Martin, National President. A reception honoring Mrs. Martin will be held Friday evening at the house.

DELTA TAU DELTAs are going to have a Slave Auction today from 4 to 6 p.m on Westcott steps. Brothers and pledges will perform entertaining skits for the public, and sororities and independent girls may purchase a Delt Slave. The Slave Auction is for the benefit of the Campus Chest.

KAPPA ALPHA's new initiates are Jack Cannon, Charles Dean, Steve Luther, W. D. Perry, Mike Pietro, Robin Roberts, Don Sluder, John Andrew Smith, and Sparky Sparkman. Friday afternoon the actives will be auctioned off to the highest bidding pledge. The brothers will work for the pledges from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday. Saturday night, the KA's will have a "Mardi Gras Party' in the Rebel Room.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA will host the District XI Convention. Representatives from chapters in Florida, Geogia, Alabama, N.C., and Louisiana will be here for the weekend. Lucy Bishop has been tapped for Little Sisters of the White Carnation. Nancy Lefebvre and Laura Jo Griffin have been invited into the Phi Chi Theta.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA pledges and the KA pledges will have a Big Combo Party tonight with the "Chaotics" playing. It will be held in the Suwannee Room from 8 o'clock to midnight. Tickets are 50¢ per person and can be bought after 1 p.m. today at the Student Center and at Bill's Book Store. Tickets will also be sold at the door. Casual dress.

KAPPA SIGMAs will journey to Live Oak this Saturday to perform their "Help Week" project by working at the Florida Sheriff's Boys Ranch. The Merrymen will play at the ranch Friday night. Kappa Sigma enjoyed a dessert with the KDs Thursday. At the Awards' Banquet Monday night many brothers were recognized for their achievements in the chapter. The Kappa Sigs defeated the KAs and the SAEs in volleyball.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA will have a "Roman Theme Party" Saturday night featuring Frank Boone and his band. The annual "Apple Polishing Party" will be held this Sunday. Ten of the brothers will begin a 50-mile hike from Perry to Tallahassee Friday to raise funds for Campus Chest.

PI KAPPA PHIs will attend the sixth District Conclave at the Univ. of Fla. this weekend. Representatives will be present from the six chapters in Florida and chapters of the outlying districts. Last Wed. there was an exchange dinner with the Kappa Kappa Gammas. Guests for this week were Andy Rogers and Bob Foss. The new pledge this week is Dave Whitaker.

PHI KAPPA PSI's new pledges are Scott Young and Ken Minihan. The traditional Phi Psi "Red Garter Party" will be held this weekend featuring music by the "Wanderers." The chapter received a grant of $100 for scholarships from the I.C. Beaver Foundation for the pledge with the highest average. Phi Psi's National Secretary will be visiting this weekend. Bob Schmidt and Tim Kerns completed a 50-mile hike in 13.5 hours last week.

PHI MU's guests for dinner Wed. evening were Dr. and Mrs. Blackwell. Phi Mu won the sorority basketball championship and the overall women's basketball championship. Theresia Helmlinger was chosen as a Sig Ep Calendar Girl.

PI BETA PHI's new pledge is Tina Fletcher. Mike Wenniger has been elected as the new Mr. Pi Phi.

PI KAPPA ALPHA's new officers are president, Ronnie Arthur; vice president, John Walsh; treasurer, J. L. Milton. A new "Pike" pledge is Arne Johansen. Last Thursday the "Pikes" were hosts to the Thetas for a dessert party. Friday night there will be a party at the house. On Sunday the annual pledge-active football game will be held. Next Wed. there will be a dessert party with the Alpha Chis.

Saturday night there will be a party featuring the "Chaotics."

SIGMA NU's new pledge is Bill Phillips. Jim Payne performed outstandingly at the Southern Collegiate Invitational Swimming Meet.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON's pledge class chose Dick Smith for Brother of the Week. Jeff Manson was chosen as Brother of the Month. Two pledges, Steve Robertson and Al Bischoff, were chosen as Pledges of the Week. Last Monday night the actives honored brothers Steve Shepherd, Eddie Reid, and Don Whiddon for their efforts on the Calendar Girl Contest. Yesterday an exchange dinner was held with the Chi O's. Tonight there will be a record party at the house. Saturday night a combo party with an "Underwater" theme will be held for members and their guests. Music will be by the "Sabers."

SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA's new pledges are Jody Wilkis, Joyce Burts, and Connie Fluke. New chairmen are: Joanne Carpenter, Social Chairman; Patsy Pearce, Rush Chairman; and Cindy Peters, Music Chairman. Tassie Crawford had been elected president of the pledge class.

THETA CHIs are holding their annual "Farmer's Party" Friday night at the house. Costumes and house decorations will depict "Old MacDonald at Home," and music will be furnished by the "Check-Mates."

...Kramer Report

c. If the Rat Caps are sold all three trimesters, this will mean that the Sophomore Class officers will need to remain all three trimesters. Is this a reasonable demand for the execution of one project?

d. How meaningful will ths project eventually become in the caps are sold each trimester or if they are sold only once or twice per year with one third to two thirds of the Freshmen being left out?

Class Night

a. There is only going to be one big graduation exercise per year, so only one Class Night will be necessary.

These last three projects are definitely going to be influenced by switching to the trimester calendar. It is very probable that the trimester is going to have a Detrimental Effect on certain class activities.

UF Slanders FSU

Since the staffs of FSU's "Flamboyant" and Florida's "Paddleputter" exchange journalistic efforts the respective staffs are kept up to date concerning the drivel being written about each other.

The UF sports editor has taken a seemingly normal event and twisted it so the FSU appears the villian. He said early last month:

> "When the UF swim team paddles to Tallahassee to go against Florida State.... they will be armed with a movie camera to record any hanky-panky that might happen during the grudge affair."

However, it turns out that Coach Bill Harlan actually said UF's educational television station was filming the event for the benefit of Gator fans in Gainesville.

The scribe continues, nonetheless:

> "But after what happened, or should we say appeared to happen at last year's meet, it might be good to have the thing on film. Florida had an All-American diver Steve McBride, and the top-rated sophomore diver in the nation last year, Lansing Price, but somehow or other Seminole divers finished first and second. Florida State went on to win the meet.
> "A week later at the Georgia AAU meet before impartial judges, McBride and Price took the two top spots easily. They won again when the two teams swam here in Florida Pool later in the season. Of course, no one, least of all us, would ever, ever, ever, EVER, accuse anyone of hanky-panky, least of all Tallahassee U. folks."

But, to quote a famous New Yorker, let's look at the record, which should decide impartially who is to be trusted.

The Gator divers won this year in Tallahassee before essentially the same judges. Last year, if UF had won the diving event, it would have been a futile drop in the bucket for the Gators were swamped 8-of-11 events, in Montgomery Pool.

FSU could have conducted itself as UF did against North Carolina. In an effort to cut down "drag" in the water, the Gators shaved all the hairs off their bodies that they could. In addition, they purposedly had two false starts in one event to pull the Tar-heels off the board on the third and final start. UF succeeded and North Carolina was disqualified when it hit the water before the gun.

What are some of the other full-flown Gator "crimes?"

Last year in football, Coach Ray Graves was reprimanded by the Southeastern Conference officials for using the so-called "sleeper" play against Tulane. The play involved a tackle pretending to leave the field and becoming an end -- to catch what SEC ruled to be an "illegal" or "unethical" pass.

Then against FSU, the Gator football team called its own signals to throw the Seminoles off cadence, causing FSU's ends to frequently jump offsides. Graves denied trying to purposely confuse the FSU linemen, but the rules state that no call shall be used that tends to confuse the team with the call.

Then there was the football game against Auburn when the Gator line kept making illegal movements until the referee told them to stop.

Another sport? Basketball Coach Norman Sloan wasnearly put on probation by the NCAA this year for trying to obtain a player enrolled in another school. He was "severly reprimanded," the press reported.

The fairness of Gator fans was evident at the FSU-UF basketball game in Gainesville this year, when the crowds stole the Seminole balls, disrupted the pre-game drills, and waved threw yellow wads of paper while Tribesmen took foul shots. This sportsmanship sparked at least one irate editorial for a state newspaper.

And speaking of judges, this is reported via a letter from a University of Florida student:

> "The judges were so unfair (at the FSU-UF gymnastic meet) in the judging that I heard even the Gator fans made comments about. To give you an illustration, there was the side-horse event when a UF gymnast fell to the ground and got up during the event.
> "After falling, the rules of the game state that a player may get up and begin again, but he must lose a whole point. Well one judge gave this gymnast an 8.0 on his event, which means that he would have earned a 9.0 before taking off a point. A 9.0 trick is unheard of in this kind of competition -- perfect is 10 and even in the Olympics they only get 9.0's -- and those are the best in the world. U of F students all about me were making remarks about the obvious cheating."

The record doesn't whisper who's the team to trust--it screams it.

Green Bay's Star Starr

Bart Starr, left, the star quarterback of the Green Bay Packers, and Head Coach Bill Peterson of FSU, right, prepare to discuss the football team's quarterbacking troubles. Starr and Peterson will iron out these problems during the Seminoles' spring drills, which are now underway. Starr follows quarterback Sonny Jurgenson as FSU's chief aerial consultant. Trimester System Gains Washington Notice

...gressional aides dealing with ...ational measures are currently ...ying the trimester system of ...lege attendance to see if federal ...ing could perhaps spur a greater ...eptance of the system.

...e trimester, as a solution to ... critical classroom shortage ...ght on by the recent student ...ulation boom, has been getting ...e and more attention in Washing... as a simpler means of meeting ... problem rather than spending ...ions for construction of new fa...ities. The trimester system ...s colleges and universities to ...e the most efficient use of their ...rawling physical plants -- and ...es it possible for the hurried ...dent to graduate in three years instead of the normal four.

Getting special study is an experiment at the University of Pittsburgh, where the system was pioneered. In 1959, university officials divided an 11 month academic year into 15 week periods. Students then had the choice of being graduated after eight consecutive trimesters with a trimester vacation each year, requiring the traditional four years.

It was also discovered that many of the faculty liked the new system. They could work 11 months of the year, save their money (which they get more of), and take their accumulated normal time off for one long, long vacation trip or research project. Or, they could teach only two trimesters a year if they so desired, thus keeping to a normal schedule for a university teacher.

The results of the Pittsburgh experiment and its pros and cons are being studied by Earl J. McGrath, former US Commissioner of Education. McGrath, now head of the Institute for Higher Education, and Thad Hungate, former business manager of Columbia Teacher's College, have researched the idea in their new book, "Proposal for a New Trimester -- Three Year Degree Program," soon to be published by Columbia.

The biggest "con" expressed toward the trimester system has come from educators who are already worried about the hectic, modern, "educational rat race," with the students tending to become a number in a gigantic educational machine. But many students, especially those from lower income families, welcome the possibility of getting through college as quickly and as cheaply as possible. Older persons wanting to obtain or finish a degree also think highly of the system.

McGrath related that some administrators fear the trimester will hurt faculty research and teaching quality, through overburdening. Other administrators, however, see the system as a mechanism to greatly improve the efficiency of their physical plant.

Officials concerned with federal aid to higher education think the trimester system enables the professor to divide his time more equally between teachings and research writing, thus helping to correct what they assert is an imbalance of research over lecturing, in many science departments.

They also point to the dollar and cent efficacy of making full use of an expensive educational plant. It is estimated that the trimester system will allow most colleges to cut the per capita cost of education by at least 16 per cent.

Hardest hit by the trimester system is the old "Rah-Rah" type of college life. Some backers say that the trimester actually increases student participation in extra-curricular activities, as there is no long summer vacation to destroy the consistency of programming in and among student organizations. Under the trimester system, vacation would normally come between the second and third trimester, and last about three weeks. Christmas break would be pared to one long weekend, instead of the week to ten days now enjoyed by most students.

... are scheduled night... through Saturday. Time is 8 p.m. ... shows except those on ..., which will be at 5:30 and 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $1.50 for the public and $.75 for students and children.

The cue sheet calls for 19 acts following the opening Grand Entrance and the 110 student performers will have several new acts, including stilt-walking, in this year's show, according to Circus Director Ad Gilbert.

Gilbert reported the best advance ticket sale the circus has had and said that most of the tickets for the 8:30 p.m. Saturday performance are now gone. Friday night tickets are moving fast. Family Weekend guests will see the show Saturday night.

There are still plenty of good seats available for the 5:30 p.m. Saturday show and for Wednesday and Thursday nights, he added.

The show has just given four performances at the Orlando Fair.

Acts are: Grand Entrance; Three lane and two lane breakaway; plate spinning and juggling; swinging ladders and balancing trapeze; hand balancing; cloud swings; bicycles and unicycles; stilt walking (clowns); triple trapeze and hanging perch pole; clown tick shot.

Swinging trapeze; shoot-through ladders; high diving; quartette adagio; Spanish webs and balancing perch pole; roller skating; high wire; double trapeze; statue painting (clowns); Flying Seminoles.

Student Class Officers

Election Filing Starts Tomorrow

Students who wish to run for office in the upcoming Student Class Elections must file a declaration of candidacy between 5 p.m. tomorrow and 5 p.m. March 12, Secretary of Elections Ron Jones announced today.

Class senators, class officers and members of the court systems will be picked in the class elections. Declaration of candidacy forms may be obtained and returned at the main desk of the Longmire Bldg. No declarations will be accepted after the March 12 deadline.

Candidates for class presidents are required to have achieved an overall scholastic average of 2.30 before the election. Candidates for all other offices must have a 2.0 overall scholastic average.

All candidates for office requiring certain class standing must have earned, before the time of the election, the following number of semester hours credit: Senior, 70 hours; junior, 40 hours; sophomore, 10 hours. Scholastic averages and hours credit will be checked with the Registrar's Office.

Total expenditures of candidates, including donations and discounts at full value, must not exceed maximum amounts set in the Student Body Statutes: Senators, members of courts, and class presidents, $30; minor offices, $20.

A compulsory meeting of all candidates who have filed a declaration of candidacy will be held March 13 at 7:30 p.m. in Longmire Auditorium. Campaigning procedures and special regulations of the Elections Bureau will be explained at that time, and a candidate's failure to attend could result in disqualification.

Active campaigning will begin March 19 at 5 p.m. No campaign material is to be distributed or displayed publicly before that time, nor should any solicitation of votes be done until active campaigning is underway.

Any violation of regulations of the Elections Bureau or Student Body Elections Conde (Chapter 700 in the Student Body Statutes) will result in a fine and/ or disciplinary action to the candidate involved. No winning candidate will be eligible for office unless these fines are paid by the date of installation. Fines to losing candidates not paid by the end of the trimester will be turned into the University Business Office.

Any candidate may withdraw his declaration of candidacy at any time before noon, March 21. A student may change the office for which he declared candidacy at any time before 5 p.m. March 12. No student may declare candidacy for more than one office at a time.

Any questions regarding elections may be directed to Ron Jones, Secretary of Elections, in 210 Longmire, extension 2975; or 224-3530.

University Party Selects Class Senator Candidates

Candidates for the Senatorial positions in the Sophomore, Junior and Senior Classes were nominated Thursday night as the University Party concluded its three-day convention.

Senior Class Senate nominees are Guy Hollingsworth and Mat Miller, Men's Senate; and Alice Marshall and Pam Doud, Women's Senate.

Candidates for Junior Class Senators are Dick Smith and Jeff Andrews, Men's Senate; and Judy O'Connell and Sheron Dunn, Women's Senate.

Running for Sophomore Class Senators are Lief Erickson and Darry Wood, Men's Senate; and Nancy Dale and Madra Nelson, Women's Senate.

At the conclusion of the nominations for Senate, the party reopened nominations for other available positions. John Welchell was nominated for vice president of the Junior Class after Bill Chamberlain was disqualified. Jim Newman is running for Junior Men's Honor Court and Charlie Calhoun is UP candidate for Senior Men's Honor Court.

Incentive System

MUCH INCENTIVE is provided young people to get them to college, but little is done once there to maintain a day to day, personally oriented incentive to do well while in school. High school students are told they are doomed to failure unles a college education is obtained. We face vaguely the prospect of employers looking at our school record when we graduate, but these goals are sometimes not sufficient to provide that day to day initiative necessary for many to do their best work.

A system of rewards for superior work and penalties for failing work would fit the bill in this area.

"Fine for Failure" would provide that any student failing would be charged $5 per trimester hour failed. The money would be put into a university scholarship fund.

AS INCENTIVE for those who excel in their studies, any student making a 4.0 trimester overall would be exempt from all fees at the university for the following trimester.

Should a student maintain a 4.0 for a full academic year...or three successive trimester attendance, the university would automatically offer a full scholarship for the remainder of the student's time at the university.

Admittedly this project bears close study and many details would have to be worked out. Some doubt may arise as to whether fines could be legally imposed on students for failure. However, should they be okayed collecting would not become a problem. The student would simply not be allowed to register until the fine has been taken care of.

SOME DOUBT MAY ARISE as to whether the university would be allowed by the Board of Control to waive fees of students. In some cases, if the incentive factor pays off, their would not be a sufficient amount in the failure fund to take care of the fees of the 4.0 students. In this case private sources could be sought for this purpose. Sororities, fraternities and serive organizations could find no better way to make an active and long-lasting contribution to the university than by contributing to such a scholarship fund.

Florida A&M has instituted a program similar in some respects to the one just outlined. Their system has met with great success and should serve as a weighty recommendation for careful scruting by the university administration of the possibilities of such a program.

NEW YORK -- Spain's Chief of State, Generalissimo Franco, says his powers are much less than those held by most presidential regimes. And he says Spain is moving toward democracy... in its own way. His remarks were made in an interview broadcast yesterday in the US. Franco says in all his decrees he needs the approval of a council of 18 ministers.

LIMA -- The military bosses ruling Peru have ousted their leader, General Ricardo Perez Godoy. His successor, General Nicolas Lindley Lopez, says Perez Godoy had to go because, in his words, "We did not overthrow the government last July to enthrone Perez Godoy as dictator." He says the crisis involved personalities within the military ruling group. Elections for a government to replace this group will be held as scheduled on June 9.

WASHINGTON -- The Justice Department reports out-of-court agreement on settling the fight over ownership of the General Aniline and Film Corporation. This firm was seized in World War II as German controlled. The agreement must be approved by stockholders of a Swiss holding company and by the US District Court. It would open the way for government sale of the big photographic, chemical andmjye-making company.

ROME -- Red China's Marxist thinkers have sharply attacked Palmiro Togilatti, chief of Italy's Communist Party. An article in a Chinese magazine accuses the Italian Red of such Communist crimes as revisionism and reformism -- as well as something like parliamentary idiocy.

HAVANA -- Cuba's government accuses US forces at the Guantanamo Naval Base in eastern Cuba of two shooting provocations last week along the 27-mile fence around the base. It says one soldier killed a cow, and it claims two groups of Yankee Marines fought a gun battle while drunk, endangering Cuban guards.

Julian Proctor: Vice -President

Flambeau Interviews Officers

By LYNN BISSLAND
Flambeau Staff Reporter

"Many students cast their interest and enthusiasm into the ballot box and leave it there as the work were finished," said Julian Proctor, vice president-elect of the student body.

"The student body is the most vital part of Student Government. Although a record election and voting percentage was cast this year, the votes do not even represent half the student body. I would like to see enthusiasm such as the freshmen employ, continue through the student's sophomore, junior and senior years at FSU," continued Proctor.

Proctor was born and reared in Tallahassee in a rather large family of six children. He has three brothers and two sisters.

Being in such close proximity with the State Capitol, Proctor first became interested in student politics in junior high school. He was vice president of the student body in high school, and he entered into campus politics his freshman year when he was elected to the office of Sophomore Class President. He has served on Student Government committees and on Dr. Blackwell's Student Advisory Board. His first big jump into Student Government is in his recent election to the office of Student Body Vice President.

Proctor takes to politics like a duck takes to water. His major is history and government and he anticipates law school following graduation.

When asked about his future plans as vice president of the student body, acting in the capacity of President of the Senate, he replied, "I have been impressed by the work of the Senate Student Relations committee and I hope this work can continue to help stimulate more student body interest and participation. I also hope that the Senate will have a continuing program of purposeful legislation which will be of benefit to the student body of Florida State University."

Junior Chamber Chapter Started

The Tallahassee Junior Chamber of Commerce has been given authority by the Florida Junior Chamber of Commerce to form a chapter at Florida State which is a community within itself.

Membership in this organization will be restricted to senior men and underclassmen who are twenty-one years of age or older.

"This is the first organization of this type to appear on any University campus. All indications are that this will be the trend of the organization in the future," said Bill Sheppard, member of the steering committee.

Basketball Boosters Form Club

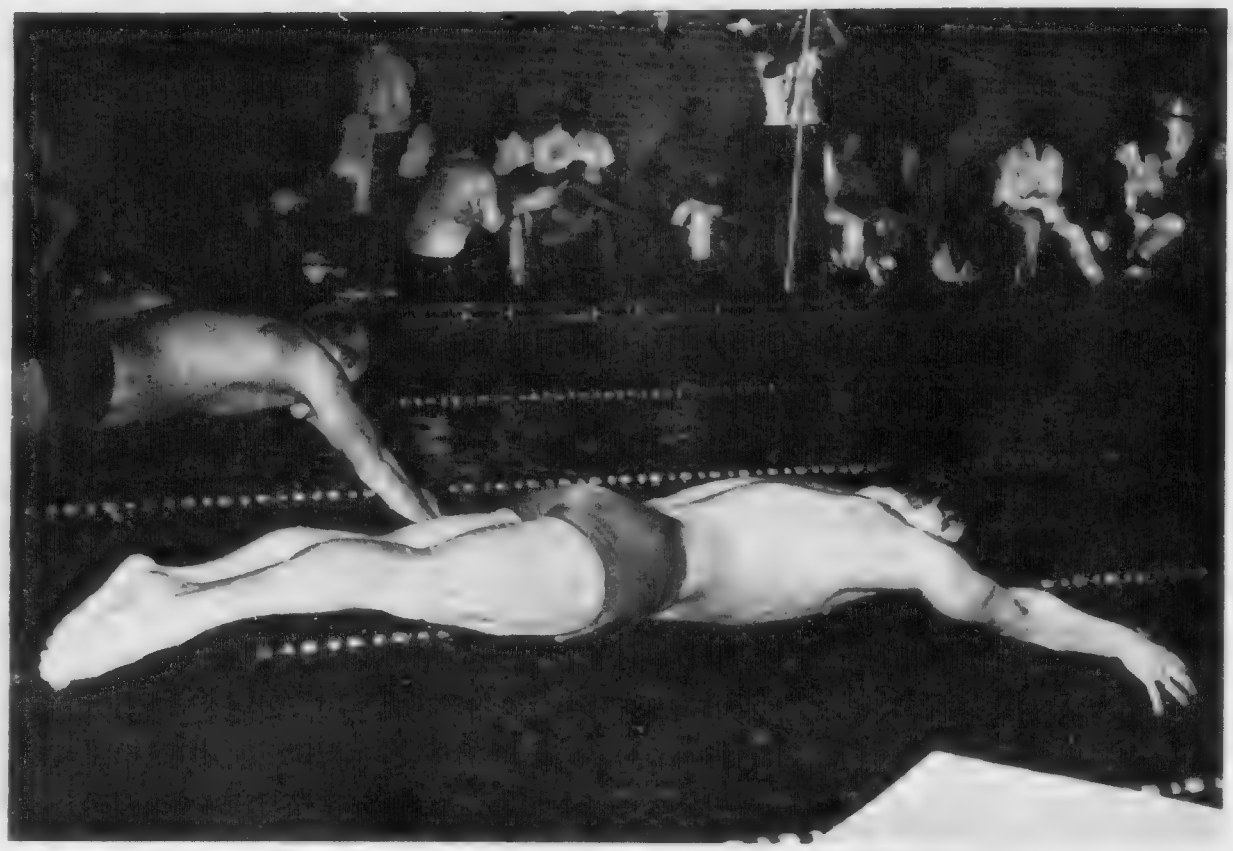
Basketball fans in the Tallahassee area, beginning to show more interest in that sport than ever before, have rallied 'round Florida State basketball and formed a first Seminole Tipoff Club.

The new organization, dedicated to "financial and spiritual support of FSU basketball teams," presently includes 32 charter members. The club has already begun holding regular year-round meetings in Tallahassee.

"In all the 15 years I've been at Florida State," said FSU Head Coach Bud Kennedy, "this is the finest thing that has happened to basketball. The future an organization of this type offers a sport is unlimited."

President of the club is Art Adams -- captain of FSU's 1948-49 team and currently personnel director for the state industrial commission. Secretary-Treasurer is Warren Wise, a Tallahassee realtor.

The Tipoff Club has been organized much like FSU's football minded Seminole Boosters clubs. Minimum membership fee is $10, and it is hoped that similar groups will be formed "all over this part of the South."



All funds will be monitored by the University, and are earmarked primarily for recruiting purposes.

Adams said Tipoff Club members will receive such considerations as parking privileges at FSU's Tully Gymnasium.

Florida State finished its 1962-63 season with a surprising 15-10 record, despite a roster which showed only one senior. The Seminoles will play another tough schedule next year, playing the usual 12 or 13 Southeastern Conference teams, plus Memphis State, Rice, Miami and Texas Christian. FSU will also be entered in the Gator Bowl tournament in Jacksonville.

SEMINOLE SHORTS

FSU Track Coach Mike Long, who's been around, scoffs at critics of the "new" fiberglass pole, used by FSU pole vaulters for several years now: "It's just like a guy who goes to the Indianapolis Speedway and says, 'Gee, no wonder they go so fast, look at the equipment they've got.' Indianapolis drivers know how to use the equipment available to them, and the same goes for these guys using the fiberglass pole. With the spring you get from one of 'em, pole vaulting is more an art than ever."

Colvard Still Gone

Seminoles Close First Week Of Spring Football Practice

The Florida State Seminoles closed their first week of practice Saturday afternoon with a two-hour drill, and Head Coach Bill Peterson said he was pleased with the Tribes' efforts.

Several things have become evident in the first week.

One of them was that highly-touted West Virginia transfer Fred Colvard will not be available for the Seminoles this spring nor next fall. Colvard, who was once chosen Back of the Week by the Associated Press for his quarterbacking feats at West Virginia, reportedly checked out of school.

When Peterson heard Colvard had turned in his scholarship-purchased uniform, he said as far as he was concerned Colvard was off the team. He gave no reason for the gridder's quitting.

Another thing that is evident is that Steve Tensi is being groomed to fill the shoes vacated by graduating senior Eddie Feely, who broke three individual school records last season.

Tensi, who is being coached personally by the Green Bay Packers Bart Starr, grabbed passing laurels in '62 despite the presence of the Little Fox. Tensi completed 60-of-121 passes for a 49.6 percentage and 796 yards -- plus five touchdowns.

That, plus Feely's output, placed FSU eighth in overall passing yardage. Peterson doesn't doubt Tensi can handle the job.

"I'd say it's up to Steve," he said, "he says he wants to play pro ball when finishes school and he has all the qualifications for that -- strong arm, good peripheral vision, fine reactions, and all the moves."

It has been said that Tensi's a fine quarterback except for his passing ability, but Peterson discounts these rumors. "Before we say he can't run, let's give him a chance. Not once last year did he roll out on what was designed as a running play. He will this year though, and I guaranteeyou he'll be a good one."

In addition to Tensi, there is the old standby junior Charlie Calhoun, who set an individual record last season for the most punts. Calhoun booted 113 times, breaking the old mark of 96 set by Tommy Brown.

But not only did Calhoun kick, he also quarterbacked the defensive Renegades last season. He perhaps approaches best the "two-way" image that Peterson is seeking, for during last year's spring practice, he was the first string offensive quarterback until the last week, when Feely regained the role.

Nonetheless, Peterson and the coaching staff assure spectators that Calhoun will be seeing much more offensive duty next fall.

Another fact in evidence is the ability of FSU's backs.

Saturday Dave Snyder and Phil Spooner impressed Peterson with their efforts. The 175-pound Snyder, for instance, was the brightest star in the backfield, as he scored a touchdown around right end on a 30-yard run...and then scored again from the 30. Snyder, besides driving through the middle a la Georgia Tech, also snatched several passes.

Spooner, a junior from Fort Myers, scored from three yards out.

Phi Mu's Cop Cage Laurels

The Phi Mu's defeated Gamma Phi Beta, 22-12, in the finals of the women's basketball tournament, and then knocked off East Landis, 27-14, to capture the campus trophy.

Phi Mu team-members were Sylvia Neese, Sue Doran, Lynda Baxter, Penny Hunter, Kay Clark, Chris McGlasson, Mary Alice Privett, Teresa Hemmlinger, and Diane Grissette.

Last year, the Phi Mu's also won the sorority championship.

For Five Night Run

FSU Circus Opens Under The Big Top

Although the shortage of classroom space is a problem at most universities across the nation, students at FSU have been a little suspicious of the huge bigtop up for the past few weeks.

But fears may be allayed by one statement: "The Circus Is Here Again!" FSU's Flying High Circus will begin with its opening Grand Entrance tonight at 8 p.m.

Performances will be held nightly at 8 p.m. through Saturday, except Saturday's shows, which will be at 5:30 and 8:30 p.m. Ticket prices are $1.50 for the public and $.75 for children.

There will be 19 acts following the Grand Entrance with several new acts, including one of stilt-walking, in this year's show put on by 110 student performers.

Coach Ad Gilbert, FSU's Circus Director, reported the best advance sales of tickets the circus has had, and added that students wishing tickets for Saturday's performances had better hurry and get them, as most of Saturday's tickets are gone. Friday night tickets were also moving fast, as Family Weekend will bring parents and friends on campus for the Friday night and Saturday performances.

The show has just given performances at the Orlando Fair with the student performers in the traveling troupe numbering about 50.

Acts for the show tonight will be as follows: Grand Entrance; three lane and two lane breakaway; plate spinning and juggling; swinging ladder and balancing trapeze; hand balancing; cloud swinging; bicylces and unicycles; stilt walking by the clowns; triple trapeze and hanging perch pole; clown tick shot.

Swinging trapeze; shoot-through ladders; high diving, quartette adagio; Spanish webs and balancing perch pole; roller skating; high wire; double trapeze; statue painting by the clowns; Flying Seminoles.

Trafic Study Hearing Set

FSU students will have an opportunity to voice their opinions concerning possible changes in traffic regulations for next year.

Student Body President Ken van Assenderp has appointed an ad hoc committee to review the campus traffic situation for a possible revision in the regulations for next year.

Members of the committee are Dennis Lanahan, chairman, who is also a student member of the University Traffic Committee; Arnie Gibbs and George Miller. Ex officio members are Secretary of Elections Ron Jones and Secretary of Finance Frank Milwee.

Van Assenderp stated that the student members of this committee are familiar with details of traffic problems on campus. He feels that traffic and traffic regulations at FSU are complicated and becoming more and more of a problem and that each student should capitalize on this opportunity to voice his opinion.

The hearing, which is open to all students, will be in the Education Lecture Hall on the second floor of the Education Bldg. at 3:30 p.m. March 12.

For further information, contact Lanahan at 224-8278 or van Assenderp at ext. 2975.

The posters were borrowed from the Tallahassee Junior Museum to be used as decorations, Cummer said, and must be returned.

Minneapolis Symphony Visits FSU Tomorrow

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, one of the oldest and most important musical organizations in America, will give two Artist Series concerts in Westcott Auditorium this week, on Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Tickets, priced at $3.50 for the public, are available at Westcott Ticket Office for both performances. They will be at 8:30 p.m. with Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting.

Founded in 1903, the orchestra has counted among its conductors Eugene Ormandy, Dimitri Mitropoulos and Antal Dorati, and since 1960, has had as conductor the 39-year-old former conductor of the National Philharmonic of Warsaw.

Skrowaczewski has conducted extensively over Europe, in South America, Mexico and Israel, in 1956 winning the first prize in the International Competition for Conductors in Rome. He also is recognized as an accomplished composer.

The Minneapolis Symphony has the reputation of played to the largest average concert audience in America. At Northrop Memorial Auditorium on the University of Minnesota campus the orchestra plays regularly to an audience of 4600 or more and frequently all 4822 seats are sold out and extra chairs are placed in the pit for the overflow.

Detroit News critic Josef Mossman recently wrote of the orchestra's performance there: "The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, revitalized and inspired under the leadership of its new conductor, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, won the hearty approval of an audience of 4,000."

The critic for the Chicago Sun Times, Robert C. Marsh, wrote: "It was clear from the way the orchestra responded that it is a well-disciplined group with a high level of technical skill. In its two years under Skrowaczewski, it has acquired a brilliant sound and an energy that reflects its intensity."

PARIS--A special military tribunal in Paris has convicted 14 persons of trying to assassinate President de Gaulle last August... and six of them were sentenced to death. Three of those sentenced to death were tried in absentia, the other three were in the prisoners' dock. Three other defendants were sentenced to life in prision, two in absentia.

NEW YORK--Former Premier Georges Bidault of France, a fugitive from his home country, predicts overthrow of President de Gaulle. His remarks were made in a TV interview recorded in Britain and broadcast last night by the British Broadcasting Corporation. It's said Bidault vanished after making the TV film recently in London. His British TV appearance appears certain to further worsen relations between France and Britain.

HARTFORD, CONN.--In U.S. District Court in Hartford, Conn., fines totaling $132,000 have been levied against eight big brass and copper companies. They were accused of price fixing. Five executives were fined separately. Their fines ranged from $3,500 to $7,500.

NEW YORK--In New York City, at least six persons and possibly seven persons lost their lives when a bus driver collapsed at the wheel, and the bus tumbled into the East River. There were four survivors. The driver of the Welfare Island Hospital bus apparently suffered a heart attack. He was among the dead. All those aboard the bus worked for the city's department of hospitals.

WASHINGTON--The U.S. Supreme Court has upheld the legal right of railroads to change work rules in order to wipe out jobs they consider not necessary. It's a big boost in the railroads' fight against what they call "featherbedding." If the raods eliminate the jobs, it could lead to a nationwide rail strike. But a spokesman for one of the five railroad unions, or brotherhoods, involved says management has agreed to resume talks on the matter in Chicago March 13th.

WASHINGTON--Another prominent Republican says he's not after the presidency in 1964. Governor George Romney of Michigan says he is not going to become a candidate for the presidential nomination... and it would be presumptuous for him to say if he'd accept a draft. His comment was made to newsmen in Washington.

English Coffee Hour

Holman Speaks On Writing

Autobiographers use three phases in writing--self definition, impressions of the words, and debt psychologists, Dr. Hugh Holman, dean of the Graduate School at the University of North Carolina said Friday at the English Coffee Hour.

Holman discussed "Autobiography in the 20th century Novel: Hemingway and Wolfe."

The speaker pointed out that P.G. Cummings, an autobiographer, felt that "through self discovery, he became his own writing."

T.J. Miller, he said, took the opposite view, and maintained that writing about life should be a work of art and not simply a collection of memories.

"Thomas Wolfe raised issues out of experiences of his life often. '... Homeward Angel' appears ... much based on his life. He ... his own experiences to make ... also use their lives well."

Wolfe's novels include a protagonist, and in all except "Look Homeward Angel," no chronological order is followed, Holman explained.

Wolfe's short novel, "Party at Jack's," is a social criticism, the speaker said. He noted that the author has a knack for bringing home to his reader exactly what life ... that his short stories usually ... more fragmented. "Wolfe uses the memory as a web of meaning for itself," Holman commented.

"Elements of authors," said Holman, "are lyrical, based on dramatization." Wolfe was unwilling to let his characters speak for themselves, but was fascinated with language.

Hemingway heightened sensory response defined in the rhetoric, described all emotions of his characters, yet "Old Man and the Sea" and "A Farewell to Arms," last for a long time.

Trimester Considerastions

The Kramer Report

Switching from the semester system to the trimester calendar will create certain problems that may prove difficult to solve. Following are some of the considerations.

1. Effect of Voting by Class Under the Trimester.

a. Students are classed as Freshman, Sophomore, etc., on the basis of the number of quality points and semster hours. This mode of classification will remain substantially unchanged.

b. Therefore students should be able to continue to vote by class.

c. The problem here comes in with the elected officials serving as an officer of one class and yet according to quality points is actually a member of another class. This has already happened this year due to going to school year round on the part of class officer involved.

d. The point is: How can we have a strong, effective class program when:

1. the class officers might not always be members of the class they supposedly "represent."

2. the members of a particular class experience a turnover of about one third each trimester, due to students going for all three or only one or two trimesters.

The situation we have developing is one where it is growing more difficult to identify at any time the members of a particular class.

The situation developing under the trimester claendar will make it very difficult, if not impossible, to have any sort of real, effective Class continuity.

Consequently there will be a great deal of difficulty, if it is possible at all, for the Class Officer Program to develop any meaningful sense of identification or pride in a particular class. Even if the activities were of such a nature as to promote this, which many of them are not.

2. How many Trimesters will the Class Officers Serve?

a. This question assumes that they should serve at all which, in the light of previous discussion, may prove to be a rather shaky assumption.

b. The Big Questions are:

1. How effective can the class officers be if they only serve two thirds of the year, particularly when Central Student Government has seen the necessity of going on year round operation?

How practical is it to require the 20 class officers to remain for the full three trimesters?

In response to Question #1:

If class officers only remain for two trimesters, then they will be abdicating their responsibility to one third of their constituency. If they are to responsibly carry out their obligations then they must remain all three trimesters, enabling all members of their respective classes to benefit from the various activities offered.

If class activities are as vital for class unity, identification and loyalty as many class officers maintain then it is very significant when nearly a third of the class will not be represented due to "part-time officers."

Class officers cannot effectively carry out their duties and obligations on a two thirds basis.

In response to Question #2:

Activities that would be carried out this third trimester are:

a. Three dances.

b. One Rat Cap sale... maybe.

A total of four (4) projects.

Can 20 class officers be required to remain the full three trimesters for only four projects. Particularly when the dances, at least, could be handled just as well by Social bureau set up in the Executive Branch of Central Student Government. Particularly since Central Student Government is going on year round operations? The answer, I think, is No.

EDITOR'S NOTE--Luther Kramer queried administrative authorities of several colleges and universities concerning class officers. The following are summaries of his correspondence with them.

CLEMSON COLLEGE

Clemson has an exceptionally strong Class Officer Program. This is definitely facilitated by the comparative small size of the school.

Following are the areas of participation of their Class officers:

1. Student Body President's Cabinet
   a. 4 student body officers
   b. 4 class presidents
2. Financial Review Board (a senate standing comm.)
   a. student body treasurer is chairman
   b. two students appointed by student body President
   c. 4 class treasurers
3. Student High Court (equivalent to FSU Honor Court)
   a. 8 members elected by student body
   b. Senior class Vice President is ex-officio, voting member.
4. Appeals Court (no FSU equivalent)
   a. 2 members elected by senate
   b. sophomore, junior and senior class secretaries
5. Freshman Court (similar to FSU sophomore Rat Court)
   a. 2 members appointed by sophomore president
   b. sophomore and junior vice presidents
   c. sophomore president

Each class also elects 9 senators. Fourteen senators are chosen from the Council of Club Presidents making a total of 50 senators comprising their student government.

They have no social chairman.

(Summaries will continue tomorrow)

Office Needs Constitutions

Several campus honoraries and organizations do not have sufficient number of copies on file in the office of the Attorney General, Lyman Fletcher announced today.

Fletcher said that according to statutes, all organizations must have three copies of their constitution on file with the Attorney General.

Those who do not meet this requirement are American Chemical Society, Beta Phi Mu, Campus Chest, Diving Services, Engineering Science Society, Future Teachers of America, Gavel Club, Phi Bet Kappa, Pi Delta Pi, and Gymnastica.

The president or faculty advisor of these clubs should contact the attorney general's office within 10 days to bring their files up to date.

Failure to meet these requirements, Fletcher added, will result in revocation of the organization's recognition by the University, and loss of their right to use University facilities.

While appearing in summer stock at Cape Cod Melody tent, Lies was selected to replace the lead in "Student Prince" when the other singer in the role lost his voice. As a result Lies was asked to take the part in Chicago.

After receiving the bachelor of music education degree in June 1960, Lies went to New York, where he was toured with the "Men of Song" commercial singing group. The young tenor has performed at Town Hall, Lincoln Center and Carnegie Hall in the past two years.

He recently received a full post-graduate scholarship for graduate study at the Manhattan School of Music under John Brownlee, Metropolitan baritone. Next month he is scheduled to appear as soloist with the New York Chor .l Society in Town

Miss Donaldson received the bachelor of music degree at FSU in June 1959. During the summer of 1959 and 1960 she was a member of the Degense Dept.'s college entertainment troupe, performing in Europe and the Caribbean.

This past summer she was the leading soprano at the Asolo Theater Festival at Sarasota. She presently is in rehearsal for March 22-23 performances of Puccini's one-act opera, "The Cloak," by the FSU Opera Guild.

Christian Science Speaker

Rieke Speaks On Prayer

"Prayer is really a spiritual letting process," Herbert E. Rieke told an audience Thursday night.

"God is willing, able and ready to express his perfection in us so that man in God's likeness might be evident; but we must be willing to let him," the speaker said.

"We need to let God express in us all His divine qualities to bring out the infinite beauty, harmony and capacity of man." As a man does this, the lecturer asserted, he will be successful in all aspects of life.

Rieke, a former Army Air Force Chaplain in World War II, is currently on a nationwide tour as a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship. His appearance here was sponsored by the Christian Science Organization.

"There's no way to find health, happiness and success in six easy lessons; it takes real spiritual courage," he said.

It means facing up to the "great problems in the world crying for solutions -- problems of individual character, and social, racial, educational, economic, religious, and political problems."

The answer to these problems cannot be found through materialistic means, the lecturer declared.

Emphasizing the concept of service, Rieke noted that "most of humanity's problems come from a belief in the lack of love."

History Conference Opens Here

Teaching history in college will be the subject of discussion Saturday, at a statewide conference of junior college and four-year institution teachers of history at FSU.

The meeting, sponsored by FSU's Department of History, will be the first annual conference of the sort, according to Dr. Maurice M. Vance of FSU, who is making arrangements. Dean J. Paul Reynolds of the College of Arts and Sciences will welcome the expected 75 teachers in Strozier Library Lecture Hall at 9 p.m. Saturday.

Representatives of 21 colleges and universities are expected for the meeting which will take up such questions as textbooks and paperbacks, appropriate audio-visual materials, how to attract superior students to the field and inter-institutional relations.

A reception for the incoming history teachers will be held Friday night from 8 to 11 in Longmire Club Room with the FSU chapter of Phi Alpha Theta as host.

Opening discussions will be led by Prof. Raymond Schultz of FSU and Prof. Rembert Patrick of University of Florida. Others on the program will include William Hair, William Rogers, George Lensen, William Quinly, Wallace Reichelt, Earl Beck, Paul Piccard, and Richard Bartlett, all of FSU, and Sam Moorer of Florida Institute for Continuing University Studies.

Institutions indicating representatives will be present are University of South Florida, University of Florida, University of Miami, Florida A. & M. University, Florida Presbyterian College, Barry College and the following junior colleges: Orlando, Gulf Coast, Brevard, Broward County, Lake City, Dade County, Washington, Chipola, Edison, North Florida, Suwannee River, Central Florida, St. Johns River, Collier-Blocker and Daytona Beach.

Concertina Needed For 'Matchmaker' ncertina, a small musical in- ent similar to the accordian, ed for FSU's next play, "The maker," which will be per- by the University Theatre s, April 3 through 7.

Arthur H. Dorlag, director of rnton Wilder play, said that rument, which ranges in val- $30 to $160, will be well for and returned promptly to ner after the production, for sting is now under way. y plays the concertina in a set in a New York restaurant 1850's, Dr. Dorlag said. The play is concerned with the amusing escapades of a merchant of Yonkers and the matchmaker, a role which was taken in the movie version by Shirley Booth.

The concertina was invented by Sir Charles Wheatstone in 1829. Sound of the portable musical instrument is produced by expansible bellows operating on free metallic reeds.

Wilder wrote the play first as "The Merchant of Yonkers" in 1938 and revised it as "The Matchmaker" in 1955. His other plays include "Our Town" and "The Skin of Our Teeth."

Starr Leaves Tribe After 3rd Florida State Grid Practice

By JOHNNY DAVIS
Flambeau Sports Writer

Bart Starr, the fabled field general of the world champion Green Bay Packers, concluded a three-day stint in the FSU football camp Saturday afternoon in an effort to aid the Seminoles' young and budding quarterback corps.

The visit was originally planned for eight days, but Starr, who is a firm believer in "helping his fellow man," was suddenly notified that he had been selected chairman of a Wisconsin Easter Seal campaign. He was forced to return to the dairy state in the middle of the Saturday scrimmage.

Starr, who collegiately played back at the University of Alabama where he earned All-American laurels, is rapidly becoming a legend in his own time on an almost legendary team. He has twice been named to the National Football League All-Pro squad, and he has guided the Packers to the world title the past two seasons.

Starr, who completed a "mere" 62.5 percent of his passes during the 1962 campaign, guided the Packers to a rather successful year, as tey racked up an almost unbelievable 14-1 mark, losing only to arch-rival Detroit on Thanksgiving Day.

He is thought of very highly by the nation's leading sports scribes. A recent editor of "Sports Illustrated," America's foremost sports digest, had nothing but praise for the touted performer. The magazine said "Starr is one of the more intelligent players in pro football today, and men such as him are definite assets to the game."

The veteran Starr worked with all the Tribe quarterbacks, but concentrated mainly on aiding FSU's junior passing whiz, Steve Tensi. It was rather evident that the 6-5 200-poind native Cincinattian made quite an impression on his famed tutor.

"Tensi has all the makings of a top flight pro quarterback," Starr said, "and all he really needs now is experience." He has everything going for him: height, an unusually strong passing arm, and the most important thing of all, accuracy.

Tensi in turn thought very highly of his special mentor. "He really showed me a lot," the rifle armed blond commented, "he seemed as though we was very sincere and actually enjoyed helping us.

"What impressed me most of all," Tensi added, "was that he (Starr) could get back in the pocket and ready to pass in just two seconds after taking the snap from center. I believe he helped me more on this aspect than anything else."

Starr also has praise for the Tribe's senior quarterback, Charlie Calhoun of Tallahassee. "Calhoun is blessed with extraordinarily quick reflexes and he is able to react rapidly in clutch situations," Starr said, "of course, he doesn't have the arm that Tensi has, but I believe he has a lot of potential, and quite a few people are going to hear from this boy next season."

The Seminoles' Head Coach Bill Peterson said, "We were very fortunate to have a man of this calibre to help us, and the help he gave us was invaluable. I only wish he could have stayed longer. He really assisted our coaching staff in a big way too. While he was here, you could count on finding anyone of the coaches with him any time of the day."

Out of curiosity, Starr was asked if he really used a hair tonic that he often advertises on television, "Why sure," Starr replied laughingly, "and Y.A. Tittle, the quarterback on the New York Giants, uses that greasy kid stuff." Incidentally, Tittle, who has vied against Starr in the past two championship games has a hair style that bears a close resemblance to the one worn by Nikita Khrushchev.

Sports Day Draws 150 Coed Athletes

One hundred and fifty coeds from Florida, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi were on the campus of Florida State this weekend, participating in the Sports Day which was sponsored by the Women's Recreation Association.

Sports Day began Friday night, as the teams registered in the afternoon, and then held a general assembly at 8. They were welcomed by Dean Oglesby and Dr. Kenneth Miller, Deans of the Education and Department of Physical Education and Recreation, respectively.

Miss Maxie Thorpe, president of the WRA, was the commentator for the evening. The group was ushered into the pool after the general assembly, to see excerpts from the 1963 Tarpon Show, "Tomorrow the Universe" and then an activity period, lasting one hour, was set up for the coeds who wished to practice for the Saturday morning competition.

There were seven colleges who entered the competition here, from all parts of the South. Coming farther than any other school was the University of Southern Mississippi, which was given a booby award for making the trip.

Other schools were Troy State College of Alabama, and the University of Southern Georgia, Abraham Baldwin (Ga.) College, and Valdosta State College. The Florida schools which made the trip were Stetson and Florida Southern College, joined by the coeds from Florida State University.

The activity schedule was set up on a rainy-day basis because of the Friday rainfall, but the events ran much the same as before. Tennis, table tennis, badminton, and bowling were the four individual sports in which the teams participated, while the teams sports were basketball and volleyball. The Tully and Montgomery gyms were used for the games, employing the basketball and volleyball courts.

Racquettes Win Over Daytona

Racquettes lowered the boom Friday in Daytona Beach, as they handed the Seabreeze High School women netters their first loss in three years.

Judi Dunn of FSU dropped the number one singles to nationally ranked Wendy Overton, 1-6, 1-6, while Kathy Spence of FSU defeated Sandra Bragg, 6-4, 6-3.

FSU's Gail Greene lost to Pam Harper, 7-5, 4-6, 2-6, and Norma Moore stopped Daytona's Dana Barres, 6-3, 6-4.

Irene Washington of FSU went down to Sharon Crowley, 5-7, 6-1, 8-6, and Carol Castelle of FSU took Renee Eisster, 6-0, 6-1. Carol Hale won over Daytona's Henen Murray, 6-3, 6-3, while Kit Logan of FSU defeated Carol Brill, 6-4, 6-4.

Then Karen Oldenburg of FSU defeated Linda Taylor, 6-1, 6-1.

Susan Linden of FSU stopped Sandy Collins, 6-1, 6-1, while Priscilla McKnight lost to Daytona's Penny Albee, 5-7, 2-6. Mary Helen Johnston of FSU defeated Tondra Manley, 6-1, 6-0.

The number one and two doubles matches had to be settled with pro sets and were called because of darkness with FSU's Dunn and Spence leading Overton and Harper, 4-3, and Greene and Moore leading Daytona's Bragg and Barres, 6-2.

Washington and Castelle of FSU defeated Crowley and Eissler, 6-0, 6-1, while Hale and Logan of FSU lost to Brill and Murray, 4-6, 6-0, 3-0. FSU Oldenburg and Linden stopped Taylor and and Force, 6-4, 6-1, and then McKnight and Johnston of FSU defeated Albee and Manley, 6-2, 6-3.

The match scheduled on Saturday with Rollins was cancelled because of rain. The Racquettes made a clean sweep of the matches played earlier this year. On Mar. 30, the FSU team travels to Gainesville to play the University of Florida.

THE MINNEAPOLIS SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
. . . under the baton of Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, stars tonight and Thursday in Westcott.

Visiting Symphony Gives Two Concerts

By CHRIS CLARKE
Flambeau Staff Writer

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of music director Stanilaw Skrowaczewski, will perform tonight and tomorrow night in Westcott Auditorium.

Tickets for both evenings concerts are available in Westcott Ticket Office. The program for the performance beginning at 8:30 p.m. tonight includes: "Symphony #2 in G major," "The Oxford Symphony," by Haydn; "Two Nocturnes for Orchestra," by Debussy; "Symphony #4 in D minor," by Schumann; and Lizst's tone poem "Les Preludes."

The Thursday evening music features; "Don Juan," the tone poem by Richard Strauss; Roy Harris' "Symphony #3," in one movement; and Schumann's "Symphony #1 in B flat major."

Skrowaczewski is the sixth music director of the Minneapolis following Antal Dorati who is now working in Europe. At 39, he is one of the youngest conductors of a major symphony orchestra in the world. His first work in America was done at the invitation of George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Symphony. He made his debut in America in 1958.

Among the orchestras he has conducted in this country are: the Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, New York Philharmonic, San Francisco and, of course, the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

Paul Mooney, Cleveland reviewer, had this to say of Skrowaczewski after a 1958 performance: "The conductor with the long name will be heard throughout the land before long."

Among his other musical interests, he is a composer whose work has attracted the attention of such people as "Saturday Review's" Irving Kolodin, who wrote of his "Symphony for Strings:" "His symphony shows a respect for the innovations of Bartok and Stravinski (texture of one, rhythms of the other), but also a sound knowledge of . . . earlier string writing. . . All indications suggest that in succession to Ormandy Mitropoulis, and Dorati. . . Minneapolis had come up with another 'live one'."

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra was incorporated in 1903, making it the eighth major symphony orchestra to be established in the United States. It began its recording work in 1924 and has continued actively in the recording field ever since. Perhaps the most famous of all versions of Tschaikovski's "Overture 1812" was the one made by the Minneapolis with Maestra Dorati a few years ago.

For Summer Festival

Asolo Theatre Director Chosen

The appointment of Robert Strane and Ed Thomas, both well known to audiences of the Asolo Theatre Comedy Festival at Sarasota, as associate directors of the 1963 Festival was announced by Richard Foster, director.

Foster, associate director of the University Theatre at FSU which jointly sponsors the Asolo Summer Festival with Ringling Museum, said the acting company after a month of training on campus during the early part of the summer will perform five plays in 57 presentations at Sarasota between July 12 and Aug. 24.

A graduate of FSU, Strane received his MA from Catholic University in Washington, D.C. and worked for his doctorate at Yale. Strane has an impressive background in classic theatre and has played leading roles in "The Taming of the Shrew," "Volpone," "Misanthrope," "Romeo and Juliet" and others.

In past summers in Sarasota with the Asolo Festival, he has played Lockit in "The Beggar's Opera," Young Marlowe in "She Stoops to Conquer," Jack Absolute in "The Rivals," Marabelle in "Way of the World," Don Basilio in "The Barber of Seville" and has also directed, "The Country Wife" and his own translation of "The Misanthrope." He is director of theatre at the University of Nevada in Reno. Currently he is directing "J.B." and has directed "Mistress of the Inn" which he will do again for the 1963 Festival along with "The Rivals."

Thomas, one of the associate directors, will direct Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew" and Moliere's "School for Wives" for the coming season in Sarasota.

Ten Best Dressed Sought By 'Glamour'

For the seventh year "Glamour" Magazine is looking for the "Ten Best Dressed College Girls in America" -- the 10 outstanding young women who will be featured in the August, 1963 issue of "Glamour."

A candidate for best dressed honors should have the following qualifications: 1. Good figure, beautiful posture. 2. Clean, shining, well-kept hair. 3. Good grooming -- not just neat, but impeccable. 4. A deft hand with make-up (enough to look pretty but not overdone.) 5. A clear understanding of her fashion type. 6. Imagination in managing a clothes budget. 7. A workable wardrobe plan. 8. A suitable campus look (she's in line with local customs). 9. Individuality in her use of colors, accessories. 10. Appropriate -- rot rah rah -- look for off campus occasions.

The young woman at FSU who best meets these qualifications will compete with best dressed winners from hundreds of colleges in the United States and Canada for a place in the "Top Ten" listing.

In a statement about the contest, Kathleen Aston Casey, editor-in-chief of "Glamour," said, "It is our hope to show that being well-dressed and well-groomed is one part of a young woman's education and one that she should learn early in life. These attributes are not a question of money or an extensive wardrobe but rather the development of good taste and an intelligent interest in one's appearance. Good looks, good grooming and a good mind are all goals for which any young woman can reach."

Photographs of the FSU winner in a campus outfit, a daytime off campus outfit and a party dress and the official entry form will be sent to "Glamour" by March 15, 1963, for the national judging. The magazine will select a group of semi-finalists and from these the "Top Ten" will be chosen. The rest of the semi-finalists will be named honorable mention winners.

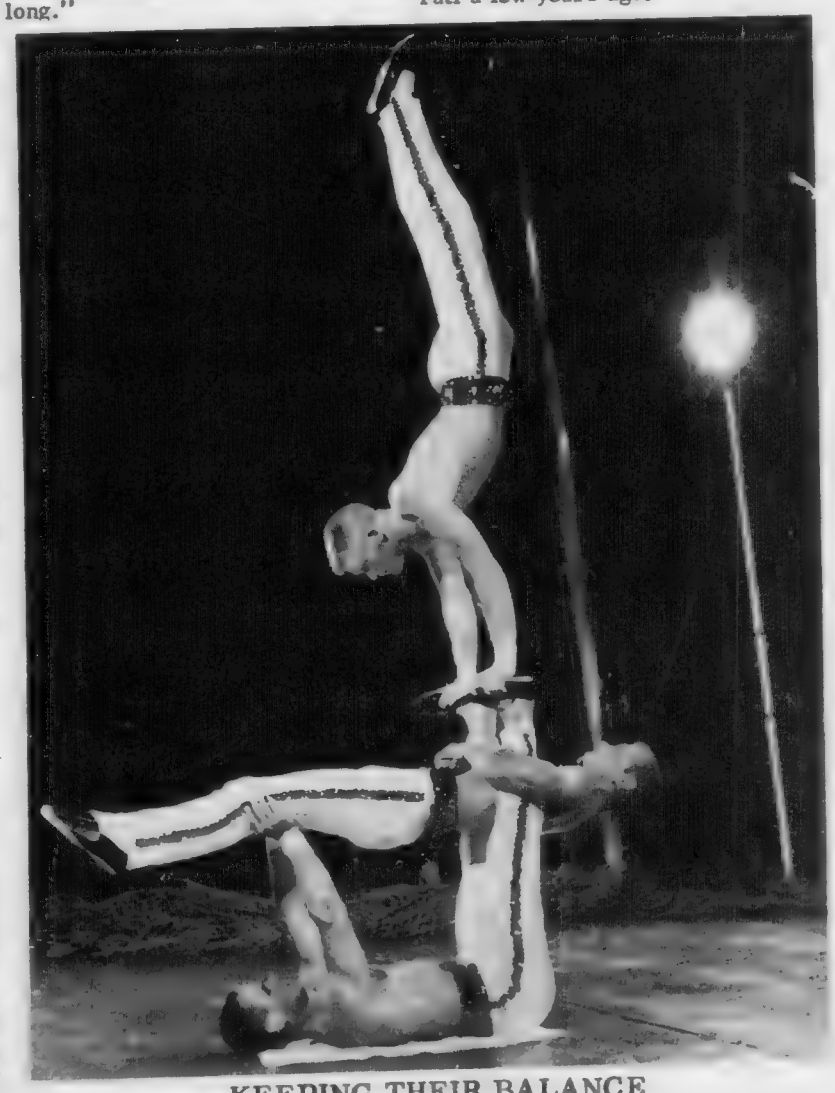
The young women who are named the 1963 "Ten Best Dressed College Girls in America" will be photographed in the spring for the annual August College Issue and will be flown to New York in June via American Airlines for a visit as the guests of the magazine. The honorable mention winners will be featured in a fall issue of "Glamour."

Each sorority and women's dorm may select one girl to represent it for the on-campus judging which will be at 4:30 p.m., Thursday, March 7, in the Home Economics Lounge. From these girls one will be selected to represent FSU at the national competition in New York City.

Singers Plan Concert

Selected portions of Bach's "Passion According to St. John" and selections of twentieth century French choral music will be on the program of The Choral Union and The University Singers to be presented Friday night.

The program will be at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall. It is free and open to the public. Herman Gunter Jr. will direct the Choral Union and Wiley L. Housewright will direct the Singers.



The first half of the program will be the Bach "Passion According to St. John" sung by the Choral Union, with Russel Wilson as organist and John Ivida harpsichordist.

The selections of French choral music will be sung by the University Singers as the second half of the program. Numbers include "Chant de Folie" by Ibert; "Noel des enfants qui n'ont pas de maisons" by Debussy; "Danse des Devadasis" will be Barbara Rogers.

Life Saving Course Set

The Department of Physical Education will offer a non-credit senior life saving course in Montgomery Gym room 304 beginning Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Those interested should come "ready to swim" said Miss Smith of the Phys. Ed. Department. The class meets Monday and Wednesday evenings and a few Tuesdays to meet the required Red Cross hours, 17.

Freedom In Planned Economy

One of the unfortunate beliefs of many Americans is that since capitalism, civil liberties, and political democracy were all produced at about the same time, as a resultant factor of the Enlightenment, they are inseparable. This concept is, of course, ridiculous.

Eastern Socialist theories have these values ingrained as deeply in their traditions as we do. The fact that some socialist opinions regarding the implementation of these values is misunderstood by many Americans is in no way a reflection upon socialist ideology. To the Eastern Socialist (in this article I have reference primarily to East Asian Socialist theory), who also misunderstands a great deal about American capitalism, fascism, naziism, and McCarthyism seem to be the results of so-called Western "civil rights" and "democracy."

True freedom can be assured only with centrally planned economies within social democratic states. Capitalism has produced colonial tyranny, military dictatorships, and in South Africa, apartheid. Social planning aims to end this sort of capitalist suppression of human rights. Social Democracies must also condemn the betrayal of socialist ideals by the Communist nations, and hope to elicit reformations within that block rather than attempt to destroy it.

The socialists would claim that they too are the products of the Elightenment, and that the capitalist system, with its perverse worship of the individual, is more a remnant of the Dark Ages of man's antiquity than the promise of a future tomorrow.

Freedoms, economic and social, must be protected, and they can best be protected by central planning. Conservatives in Asia and America may sincerely think that capitalism is better, and no doubt it has its place, but they must not fall into the error of absolute condemnation of other solutions to the complex issues of our times. Martin Bronfenbrenner (Ethics, vol. LXXI, April 1961, no. 3) feels that both views must do more than co-exist. Both worlds must help and support each other. We should all say, "Thus, but for the grace of God, think I. Had I lived in his country and he in mine, I would think as he does, and he as I do." Theoretical splits will never permit capitalism and socialism to reconcile themselves, but by co-existing and evolving, a desirable blend can, perhaps emerge.

After all what is the purpose we have of calling ourselves liberals and conservatives. If we are liberal we wish to treat each event as a unique instance in time and space. We wish to carry on the traditions of Jefferson et al. If we be conservatives we also wish to carry on the traditions of Jefferson et al. Which ever we are, we wish to carry on our traditions and to continue to exist. As sociology and other sciences press forward in the fields of human understanding we can but follow and hope to utilize the information provided for us. Which ever title we call ourselves we are basically the same -- human beings in a common condition trying to solve the problems of the present in order to make a better world tomorrow -- then of course there are the Birchites.

Symbol Of The Secret Society

Sam sat in the Soda Shop, sighing, as she picked up a copy of the Monday news. She read only the Monday news, second section, and planned her week on the basis of that--pausing occasionally to glance at the Thursday paper for reassurance. This particular Monday, she noticed happily that her new club had made front page (second section) reading.

Her club, the Society for Tallahassee to be Uniquely Preserved In the Dark Ages, had as its motto, "Sigh!" and as its symbol, the Circle Sigh, which looks something like a circle with a crow's foot inside.

For a long time, Sam had felt the need for such a group as STUPID, with the onset of moden conveniences as cars, parking lots, Direct Distance Dialing, and automatic library cards. In protest, she refused to buy a car, walked boldly through parking lots, asked for three billion, 55 million, 310 thousand, 371, when calling home, and, with the assistance of some friendly librarians, completely avoided getting a proper library card. (Sam, having been at FSU for 37 years, was eligible for a graduate student library card, but so far had succeeded in amassing fourteen undergraduate ones, each with her name spelled differently.)

But I digress.

Sam grinned, as she tought of the cleverness of her disciples, leaping tall Supreme Court buildings in a single bound, there to fasten a bed sheet bearing her secret circle sigh symbol sprayed (apparently) with a black substance.

With this same apparently black substance, they had painted their symbol on those edifices most likely to preserve the Old Way of Life--candles, horseandbuggies, torture chambers, closed minds. This black apparently substance sprayed in the form of the symbol was found by people not all aware of its meaning, though they were the sort Sam might consider tapping for her society. A good, solid tap on the head, she thought. And maybe a dunking in some good old apparently black substance.

Incentive Plan Attacked

To the Editor:

I would like to voice objection to the Flambeau's proposed incentive plan for encouraging better grades on the following grounds:

(1) The search for "crip" courses is bad enough already. Such a system would inevitably encourage students to seek assiduously the easier courses and the easier teachers. Few students, if any, are willing to take a harder teacher despite the fact that they are often assured of learning more if they are alsó assured of a lower grade. Comparative statistics in my department (Humanities) prove beyond reasonable doubt that the same student, doing the same quality work will receive different grades in different sections; I suspect that careful study in other departments would indicate the same.

(2) The proposed plan would discourage students who would like to major in the more difficult fields (physics, methematics, philosophy, languages, etc.) and encourage them to concentrate in fields where the grades come somewhat easier and where there is less competition.

(3) The plan would discourage students who might otherwise enter the Honors Program. While the grades run higher in Honors sections, the competition is also much stiffer. Many of those B's given out in Honors classes would have been easy A's in regular courses. The added advantages of Honors work are greatly diminished by the prospects of full scholarships for making straight A's in regular courses.

(4) The plan would encourage the parroting of the teacher's opinions on examination. A few students have the courage to disagree with a teacher when they realize that it will mean the difference between an A and a B, but there would be considerably fewer who would be willing to stand up for their beliefs if it meant the difference in being able to come back to school the next trimester--or even the difference in getting a full scholarship for the remainder of the student's time at the University.

The purpose of a university education is not the making of good grades but learning. Grades can be justified only as a means to this end. I charge that the present plan confuses the means with the end. The system provides incentive only toward the means and none toward the end. As a teacher I hold that the grade system is a necessary evil; and by this I mean that it is both necessary and an evil. I fear that the present suggestion reinforces the evil aspects of the system more than it abets the desirable ones.

Point Of Letter Completely Missed

To the Editor:

After reading Mr. Ken Nelson's letter in the February 19 issue of the Flambeau, I am quite certain that he has completely missed the point of one of my earlier letters headed "Scared of the UN." If he re-reads this letter and reads the letter to which it refers, he is likely to find that his opinion of the issue is somewhat similar to mine.

However, I should like to thank him for "maturing" me by rounding out my concept of the UN. Now I, like my more mature fellow-student, can say that I know more about this world organization. Let me quote: "Regarding the United Nations, it has both its good and its bad points." This is truly enlightening.

The world of Psychology has sustained a terrible loss if certain of us who write letters to editors are not majoring in that field. The ability to determine one's age, one's inability to see "both sides" of an issue, one's rationality, and one's political viewpoint from reading three column-inches of print in a newspaper must be a horribly frightening power to possess.

Ban Rat Caps

To the Editor:

Many students no doubt agree with Mr. Kramer (See The Florida Flambeau, 28 February 1963) that the sale of rat caps "is a meaningful and worthwhile traditional activity" which "provides a bit of entertainment for upperclassmen and adds a bit of school spirit to the old school." Please note that there are those of us who feel that this project is out of place on our campus and should be discontinued.

Honors Program Defended

By DR. PAUL J. PICCARD
Director of Honors Program

Sure, FSU has "crip" courses.

Sure, FSU over-emphasizes grades.

These two accusations contradict and in a sense compensate for each other.

Our Honors Program at FSU is a genuine effort to avoid both of these extremes and to stress excellence in scholarship. Many of the students and professors in the Program are doing fresh, original work. In seeking the fullest development of special academic talent the participants in the program represent the finest traditions of the University.

Even the Honors Program, however, is large and new; it leaves room for improvement. Constructive criticism by those who understand what was sought and what accomplished is very healthy.

But what about the letter from "George O'Toole"? On the basis of one honors class, for which he was admittedly unqualified, he has raised several points of interest--i.e., he has indeed, as he wrote, "brushed [on] sensitive nerves."

1. An honors class at FSU must be composed mainly of honors students although a limited number (up to 20%) may be admitted in individual cases for special reasons. An outstanding student in a field might take an honors section in that field although not eligible for the Honors Program generally. If a student got in because "the hour simply suited (his) schedule" we were conned!

2. The University-wide requirement for final examinations in all undergraduate courses has not been officially waived for any honors section. The Program, however, does encourage professors to break out of some of our normal ruts and if one of us decided that he could teach more and evalute the results better without the examination, I am sure that no complaints would be raised.

3. Honors instructors are certainly encouraged to be creative and original in the designation of texts, other reading and individual projects. While this approach might surprise any student, it would disappoint only those who are dependent upon spoon feeding.

4. In most classes, and certainly in most honors sections, taking confuses the purpose of higher education with the objectives of [illegible] laws. We do not think that honors instructors need a captive audience; we do not believe that honors students are dependent upon coercion in place of their own academic self-discipline.

5. Any professor who "only shot the breeze anyway" ought to be treated just like an instructor who only delivered canned lectures. Each individual faculty member must seek his own middle ground for stimulating and encouraging students and helping them to achieve their utmost potential.

6. Something has gone wrong, likewise, if students can pass off a weekend work as a term paper. The smaller size of the classes in the Honors Program certainly minimizes the opportunity for this symptom of mass education. Honors instructors have time to do a lot more reading of student papers than is the case in large lecture sections.

7. All honors students at FSU do not receive A's and B's exclusively. Some have been known to pull D's and even (horrors) F's. Most of them, however, have clearly demonstrated their ability to make top grades in a great variety of courses. With only two of three honors sections on the schedule at any one time they maintain very high academic averages. Last fall's incoming freshmen honors students, for example, carried generally heavy loads and 77 per cent of them averaged 3.0 or better. (One honors section, taught by Professor Trippit--a pseudonym--was so tough that the honors students had a saying: "Rip it with Trippit; try it later with Gaiter.")

8. "O'Toole" asked, "Need I cite any other examples?" All of the honors students know the answer: "Yes, you need to. You can't generalize from a sample of one."

9. While many "students will, by nature, seek the easiest route to studying" others certainly, by nature, will get "curiouser and curiouser and thirstier and thirstier" for knowledge in college. The Honors Program encourages the latter.

The History Department at FSU has supported the Honors Program generously and effectively. It has given us professors like last year's Coy E. Moore, Jr. Award winner. It has sacrificed its own "productivity" ratio by offering as many as five honors sections at a time with five different professors when any one of them alone could have handled twice the number of students in one lecture hall!

We do want to improve our Honors Program. If "O'Toole" will identify himself (for we find no student or alumnus with that name) he might even be of some help, but in the meantime we have to wonder what honors program, in what school, in what year he was talking about.

'Chamber of Horrors'

Hospital Improvements Needed

To the Editor:

As I sat in the Infirmary's waiting room this Monday morning, I read John McCotter's article, "You're Out Without A Cold." It appears that all students crowded into the room were definitely "In," as they all were suffering from colds, flu, pneumonia, and various other ailments. The girl sitting next to me had a temperature of over 102 degrees. In spite of this, the girl and others coughing and wheezing sat from 9:30 a.m. until 11:30 waiting to see a physician.

The personnel of our Student Hospital were all polite, courteous, and helpful. It is not my intention to criticize them, for I feel they are sincerely working to provide good medical care for the students. What bothers me is the difficulty the students have in receiving these services. As I heard a student say, "You have to be really sick to stand the waiting!" My own experience has been that of spending over ten hours on three visits to the Infirmary. These hours were not spent in taking tests, in being examined, or having X-rays made. These hours were spent in waiting to see the doctor!

Realizing that there are an unusual number of students sick at this time, I nevertheless believe that the procedures could be reorganized so that students could see the physician without so much delay. Another thing that should be corrected is the lack of adequate waiting room furniture. The benches outside the doctors' offices are uncomfortable and do not give good support to the student's back. Surely with the millions spent for new buildings the Board of Control could spare the necessary funds to buy cushions for the "Chamber of Horrors!"

If such improvements are not possible, then I join John McCotter in advocating Vapor-rub in the steam vents. At least there's no waiting.

Lewis State Bank Shows Zerbe's Work

Eight years ago, the Museum of Modern Art of New York City chose the six outstanding artist-teachers in America and circulated an exhibition of their work.

One of them was none other than Karl Zerbe, professor art at FSU, who continues to add to his fame in America and abroad.

Zerbe's recent paintings will be on display in The Little Gallery, located inside the Lewis State Bank, March 4 through April 5, Mondays through Fridays from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. A preview opening will be held Sunday, 4 to 6 p.m.

These latest paintings by Zerbe will include fleeting images of the TV screen, shocking in their revealing tensions, chance encounter from a visit to Miami, and the reflection of a national crisis; but primarily, each is a work of art.

Zerbe, skilled in painting and collage (pasted materials), manipulates the forms and patterns until there is an awareness that each figure is an integral part of its environment. In addition to the pattern, he always reflects the human condition. His commentaries are perceptive social documents. He is involved, but he does not wave a banner now blow a trumpet. His paintings are an introduction and then he leaves the public to get acquainted, depending on the onlooker's abilities and understanding.

In the great tradition of art, the penetrating image of the total impact comes first; then a leisurely perusal of each part of the painting is rewarding. Subtle changes in the texture and a meaningful choice of patterned surfaces heighten the response. The very young girl, so wistful in her wanting to "be," is surrounded by a fine net, symbolic of her vulnerability. The wide-eyed blonde of Miami flaunts an "aggressive" lace dress.

The interwoven acrobats, a lady in diaphanous lavender tights and her partner imprisoned in stripes, float in a turning pattern of movement unified by their green shadow. How different is the clown, Charley Rivel, who projects from his dynamic background by the sheer artistry of his characterization.

After the showing at the Little Gallery, the paintings will be dispersed to private collections and museums.

The Kramer Report

EDITOR'S NOTE--Luther Kramer queried administrative authorities of several colleges and universities concerning class officers. The following are summaries of his correspondence with them.

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA

No Sophomore, Junior, of Senior class officers. These were terminated 4 years ago. This was done on the basis that these classes had sufficient representation already in the Central Student Government.

There are Freshman Class Officers.

All campus-wide activities are handled by the Central Student Government.

UNIVERSITY OF MIAMI

No class officers at Miami.

Major campus-wide events are handled by the Central Student Government. There is a Pep Club responsible for Rat Cap sales and a Spring Carnival. Homecoming is handled by the local chapter of ODK.

Each undergraduate school elects a President, Vice President and Secretary-Treasurer. Their functions are minimal and relate only to school functions.

There is a central council consisting of representatives from each undergraduate body and the major organization governing bodies, i.e., Pan Hellenic, Religious Council, etc.

UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH

No class officers at Pittsburgh. They were abolished about four years ago because there was little of real importance for the classes to do. They had lost significance long before that according to the letter.

Campus-wide activities are handled by the Central Student Government.

Freshman beanies have not been used for many years.

GEORGIA TECHNOLOGICAL INSTITUTE

No Freshman, Sophomore, or Junior class officers as such. There is a Senior President, Vice President, and Secretary.

Each of the three lower classes elect 4, 6, and 8 senators respectively. The students receiving the highest number of votes in each class is designated Class Chairman.

The student senate is composed of the class senators plus senators from the different school departments.

The major, campus-wide events are carried out by the Central Student Government. Although the class senators carry out certain limited functions.

AUBURN UNIVERSITY

No Class officers at Auburn.

All campus-wide activities and events are handled by the Central Student Government. There are Cabinet positions to handle rat cap sales, class rings, etc.

Social activities are jointly handled by the local chapter of ODK and the Campus Social Life Committee, a Cabinet post.

Each of the 9 undergraduate schools elects a president and vice president mainly to handle a few school functions and the annual Auburn Fair.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA

UNC does have class officers.

Their function is primarily what they make it. Usually they have handled essay contest, concerts, and dances.

Central Student Government handles almost all other student functions including Homecoming. The administration handles Graduation.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY

Currently the Class Officer Program is being seriously questioned by the Student leaders at SIU with an eye to probable termination of the program.

For the past few years class activities have been very minimal. Receiving only about $100 per annum most of which is returned at the end of four years to purchase a gift for the school. Class officers handle no social functions.

In the past, class Presidents served in Student Senate, but no longer. Most activities are therefore handled by the Central Student Government. The "New-Student Week" committee handles Freshman beanie sales, etc.

SPORTS

SCALP EM—Howard Denson

Travel $ KO's Smaller Sports

There being two sides to every coin, the time has come to hear the other side of the large vs. small sports controversy. The argument has been presented that smaller sports are being slighted and aren't getting their share of the kitty.

And the athletic administration contends the small sports are getting as much as they can under FSU's athletic budget, and the administration has its reasons for withdrawing funds from certain sports in the past.

Those reasons are not without merit and deserve hearing.

The deaths of two varsity sports are particulary painful to many on campus, because Florida State once had the Number one Gymnastic team in the nation and the best volleyball team...but the gymnasts are shadows of their predecessors and the volleyball squad is six feet under.

Why did they die?

It costed money, lots of it to maintain the sports, which are not popular competitive sports. For instance, both teams used to have to travel across the nation to find suitable competition...there was no team in the South for them to battle, and, if the truth be known, few teams elsewhere.

Games played elsewhere and for a limited number of students aren't benefiting the student body as a whole, so heads had to roll -- the heads of volleyball and gymnastics.

This apparently is the reason that soccer is not being promoted as a varsity sport, except for Florida there are few teams around to play FSU. Travel expenses for a large-sized soccer team going to distant meets would run into a substantial figure.

The lack of regional competition furthermore is primarily the reason that Auburn University once again captured the Southeastern Conference wrestling championship.

Conceding that the administration has its valid points, the question arises, "Can anything be done to help the smaller sports?"

Perhaps, if something like travel expenses is too unreasonable, the athletic budget could stretch enough to deck the various small sports in honest-to-goodness uniforms instead of ragamuffin outfits. These uniforms aren't like travel expenses, something to be purchased new each year. They last from season to season.

In addition, wrestlers don't require a heck of a lot of clothing.

But there seems to be something else, minutely expensive, and that is the granting of letters in the sports -- something to recognize hard-working athletes. Surely this isn't too unreasonable a gift to former national champions.

Tennis Team To Ope
In Tally Against Eust

Florida State's tennis team opens the season here this afternoon against Ft. Eustic, Va., and the most interesting angle promises to be the debut of South African whom Coach Eddie Cubbon calls "just about the best college player in the country."

The young man in question is 25-year-old Lex Wood, a slight (5-10, 145) junior with a heavy British accent. Wood came to FSU from Dale Junior College in King William's, South Africa, where he once whipped Nicola Pietrangeli in straight sets.

"Lex is easily the best we'

Snyder Is Rated Grade 'A' By Peterson After Drills

Spring Football Notebook:

Most pleasing development after first week of Spring football drills must be the offensive work of halfback Dave Snyder of Jacksonville. The former Terry Parker High ace -- a defensive fullback most of his two varsity seasons at FSU -- has been given the assignment of coming through as Seminoles' bread and butter runner. So far he hasn't disappointed. He delivered a beautiful 30-yard TD sprint in Saturday's big scrimmage.

The switch moving guard Jerry Bruner to tackle and tackle Dale MacKenzie to center has looked good. But other centers -- Jack Edwards of Tampa, Bill Daly of Jacksonville, Steve Slay of Atlanta--have looked so good that MacKenzie may not be needed there.

Heart-warming has been deployment of senior guard Chuck Robinson, a starter for two years who dwelled in shadow of heralded (and graduated) Gene McDowell. Robinson is acting like another coach-on-the-field, having his best Spring ever.

And with Dick Hermann of Marianna still looking like a potentially better guard-linebacker than third-team All-American McDowell, guard should be one of FSU's strongest sports.

People's Choice among Tallahassee sideline observers must be little Charlie Calhoun, defensive specialist and punter-deluxe from Florida High who will have to back up celebrated Steve Tensi at offensive quarterback. Calhoun has plenty of finesse, despite seeing little action calling signals since coming to FSU.

New FSU Coach Bobby Bowden, hired from Birmingham's Howard College to replace Alabama-bound Ken Meyer, has been highly impressive to other FSU staffers. He brings plenty of football savvy and class. Same goes for Bill Proctor, elevated to full-time assistant coaches' slot after serving as graduate assistant.

Halfback Phil Spooner of Ft. Myers still looks like good breakaway threat -- perhaps FSU's best.

Anyone interested in working on the 1963-64 Pow Wow should contact editor Gayle Motes at once.

DANCE POSTERS

Eighteen travel posters which were taken from the Suwannee room Sunday Morning between 8:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. should be returned as soon as possible to Dr. John Cummer at the University Counseling Office or to Rocco Munoz at P.O. Box U-376 or 109 Magnolia Hall. The posters were borrowed.

NOTICE

Any student who fails to respond to an administrative notice will be subject to disciplinary action, Dr. John Carey, acting Associate Dean of Students, announced today.

Junior Chamber Charters Group On FSU Campus

The first Junior Chamber of Commerce to be chartered on a college or university level elected officers at FSU Tuesday night.

This is the first organization of its kind in the United States, and if all goes well with the FSU group, State President Ty Tarby has indicated he will push similar campus organizations in the future.

Newly elected officers for the FSU JC's are as follows: Henry Land, president; Ben Thornal, John Systsma, vice presidents; Bob Foss, secretary; Don Thigpen, treasurer.

A charter installation is planned for April 7, with the purpose of the campus JC's to be community service projects, somewhat similar to the city Junior Chamber of Commerce.

There are approximately 25 members in the FSU organization at present. All interested students are invited to attend the regular meetings held at 7 p.m. on Tuesday nights in the Longmire conference room.

Students who are now seniors or who will be seniors by next year and who are from 21 to 35 years of age are eligible for membership. Bill Mallory is acting as advisor to the campus JC's, who will hold charter 119 from the Florida Junior Chamber of Commerce organization after the April installation.

Coeds Enter Citrus Contest

Two FSU coeds are among 15 that have been selected as the official entries for the 1963 Florida Citrus Queen Pageant.

Patricia Rita Benner of Sigma Kappa and Fairfax Smathers of Kappa Delta will represent FSU in the pageant.

Officials of the Florida Citrus Exposition have stated that their quest is for a photogenic beauty with brains and personality plus. Each year the Florida Citrus Queen is called upon to make personal appearances at conventions, promotions and gatherings of all types.

In Student Senate

Bill Introduced To Save COP

In an obvious attempt to save the Class Officer Program at FSU, Men's Vice President Gene Brown yesterday introduced a bill into Student Senate which would give new responsibility to the class officers.

The bill specifically calls for establishment of a student-alumni affairs committee, composed of all class officers, which would work closely with the director of Alumni Affairs. The bill stipulates that the president of the Senior Class shall serve as chairman.

The four class vice presidents and the Senior Class president would constitute a steering committee to meet at the discretion of the Senior Class president. Purpose of the student-alumni committee "shall be to promote class unity, class spirit, and interest in alumni affairs."

Controversy over the status of class officers has been stirred lately by an intensive study compiled by Luther Kramer. Parts of Kramer's report have been printed in recent issues of "The Flambeau."

The bill introduced by Brown, which would involve amendment of the Student Body Statutes, was referred to the Labor, Student Services and Education committee for study.

In other Senate action, a bill to amend the Student Body Statutes concerning changes in the Judicial branch of Student Government brought about by the trimester system failed, and a new bill was introduced in its place. The newly-introduced bill concerns terms of office and order of sucession for members of the Honor Court, University Court and Traffic Court.

New stipulations introduced by this bill will include:

1. The chief justice of the Honor Court shall be of senior standing and shall have served over one full semester on the Honor Court, the University Court or Traffic Court on this campus.
2. Clerk of the Honor Court no longer will be required to have had experience on either the Honor Court or the University Court, but will not assume the duties of the Chief Justice in his absence.
3. The Honor Court shall select one of its members to assume the duties of the Chief Justice in his absence.
4. The chairmen of the University Court and the Traffic Court will be required to have had experience on "The judicial system of any college or university" rather than specifically in one of FSU's court systems.

Thirty-One File For Elections

After one full day of filing, 31 students have declared candidacy for the 53 positions available in the Class and Courts Elections of March 26.

The deadline for filing is Tuesday at 5 p.m.

Those who have filed are and their party affiliation are as follows: Alan Roles UP for senior men's Honor Court; Janet Carlton UP for Senior Women's Honor Court; Jim Newman UP and Horace Smith UP for Junior Men's Honor Court; Linda Savidge UP for Junior Women's Honor Court.

Ron Mason UP for Senior Men's Judiciary; Linda Barnhill UP and Cathy Waltman UP for Senior Women's Judiciary; Jim Moore UP and Andy Oltyan UP for Junior Men's Judiciary; Cathy Brown UP for Junior Women's Judiciary; Pat Clark UP and Jennifer Howse UP for Sophomore Women's Judiciary.

Guy Hollingsworth UP for Senior Men's Senator; Alice Marshall UP and Janet Schuff SP for Senior Women's Senate; Jeff Andrews UP and Dick Smith UP for Junior Men's Senate; Sharon Dunn UP for Junior Women's Senate; Nancy Dale UP and Marylou Morton (unaffiliated) for Sophomore Women's Senate.

Senior Class Officers: Tom Haney UP, president; Trish Bassett UP, secretary; Susan Cawthon SP, treasurer; Ley Hulsey UP, social chairman.

Junior Class Officers: Hines Boyd UP, president; Jan Brantley UP, secretary; Marilyn Johnson Up, treasurer.

Circus Picnic Planned

The annual FSU Picnic sponsored by the Student Government will be held Saturday from 11:30 until 1:30 at Gaines Woods.

Box lunches will sell for $1.25 and tickets may be purchased at Westcott, Tully Gym or at the picnic. There are a limited number of tickets on sell. Entertainment will be provided by Angel Flight; ROTC Drill Team; and winners of Campus Sing, Kellum and Smith Hall.

The box lunches include: 1/4 fried chicken; potato salad, olives, pickels, and roll. Ice tea or coffee will also be included.

The master of ceremonies will be Dean R.R. Oglesbee. Chairman Bobbi McCarty anticipates having the largest crowd this year.

In case of rain the picnic will be held in the Circus tent.

Today's News Roundup

FLAMBEAU NEWS SERVICES

WASHINGTON--The continuing presence of Russian troops and weapons in Cuba were prime topics in Washington yesterday--at President Kennedy's news conference and at a Senate hearing. Kennedy told his news conference he's not satisfied with the rate at which Soviet troops are leaving Cuba. At the Same time he said he has no accurate information on the real extent of the withdrawal. He said also there's no promise from Russia to permit verification.

Meanwhile, a top Army intelligence officer has told a Senate hearing that thousands of caves in Cuba probably hold stores of Soviet ammunition, supplies, vehicles and even airplanes.

But Major-General Alva Fitch says it's believed the Soviets have removed all strategic weapons systems from Cuba that were there when the U.S. put a quarantine on the island in October.

As for troops, Fitch said to date there are no indications that Soviet ground force units have left Cuba other than those that were associated with the intermediate and medium range missile systems. Concerning the caves, he said aerial photographs show extension of roads to known and suspected cave locations.

Also on the subject of Cuba, President Kennedy says four American fliers reported killed during the 1961 invasion were volunteers who, he said, were serving their country.

In other action, Kennedy rejected any blockade of Cuba to deny it oil, saying a blockade would be an act of war and that war in the Caribbean now would not be to the national advantage.

KANSAS CITY, MO.--Law officers used tear gass to quickly put down a riot among the prisoners at the Jackson County Jail in Kansas City. The disturbance was quelled about a half-hour after prisoners in a 13th floor cellblock rioted, ripping out plumbing, smashing windows and wrecking bedding and furniture.

CINCINNATI, OHIO--At least ten persons are dead in floods that hit wide areas of the eastern U.S. Trouble is easing in some sections. Most of the serious flooding so far has been in Ohio, West Virginia, Indiana and Pennsylvania--with high water also in sections of Maryland, North Carolina, Kentucky and Tennessee.

WASHINGTON--President Kennedy said the U.S. is not going to go into any nuclear test ban treaty with Russia without assurances we can detect what he specified as any series of secret tests by any other country--meaning, of course, Russia. He said on-site inspections are still required. In London, Britain's chief delegate to the recent test ban talks urged Russia to say just how she'd permit on-site inspections.

At Other Universities

The Kramer Report

EDITOR'S NOTE -- The following conclusions in Mr. Kramer's report are based on correspondence with administrative officials at the institutions mentioned.

Conclusions Based on Returned Letters

1. Large schools can and do operate with a very limited Class Officer Program:
   a. University of Florida -- Freshman officers
   b. Georgia Tech -- Senior officers and Chairmen
   c. Southern Illinois Univ. -- very limited functions and about to be terminated.
   d. Univ. of North Carolina -- very limited functions.
2. Large schools can and do operate without any Class Officer Program:
   a. University of Miami
   b. University of Pittsburgh
   c. Auburn University
3. Small schools can maintain a strong Class Officer Program even involving them to a great extent into the executive, judicial, and legislative branches of student government.
   a. Clemson College
4. In those schools with a very limited Class Officer Program or no program at all, the Central Student Government handles nearly all student activities.
5. We can say tentatively that the existence and strength of a Class Officer Program is more directly related to the size of the undergraduate body than any other factor. That is, we are more likely to find a strong Class Officer Program in a small school...under 5000 students.
6. The University of Florida indicated no difficulty with the Freshman class elections as a result of the trimester calendar. Presumably electing them in the Fall to serve two trimesters.

Arguments FOR Class Officer Program

1. Class Officers perform certain limited functions that someone has to do, so why not continue to let class officers do them.

The question here is how many of these functions actually fit into the class officer program legitimately? Then we must ask if these few projects really justify electing 20 class officers to perform them.

Why tie up capable people on projects that may not be very meaningful or valid insofar as they relate to the purposes and goals of the C.O.P.

2. Class Program provides leadership experience for a few people.

Running for class office does provide experience in meeting students, campaigning and organizing an "organization." In addition, class positions should provide leadership experience after the position is won. The question then is do class positions provide this experience?

3. Class elections spark interest in student government, particularly among Freshmen students.

A good point, a valid point, an important point.

4. Class Officers serve as a focal point for class identity particularly for Freshmen and Seniors.

Do students identify more with their Greek organization or religious organization or interest group more than with a class?

How meaningful and significant is identification with a class in a growing metropolitan university? Particularly when the focus of activity is not centered around classes but around other organizations and groups.

Classes don't meet together, in fact classes do very little together as a class per se.

5. Class Elections help to acquaint a lot of people by involving them in an election campaign thereby adding to "friendly" atmosphere at FSU.

A good point and a valid point.

6. Class Officers are important to promote a strong alumni program.

For many years FSU has had the poorest alumni record in the Southeast. That is, only about 5% of the graduating students ever return to the university money or time. Side by side with this condition we have a Class Officer Program.

The question then is: has the C.O.P. been important to FSU's alumni program?

7. Class Officer positions help to broaden student government.

Class positions do make available more positions for students to run for, but since they are not connected with student government at the present time they don't broaden student government very much.

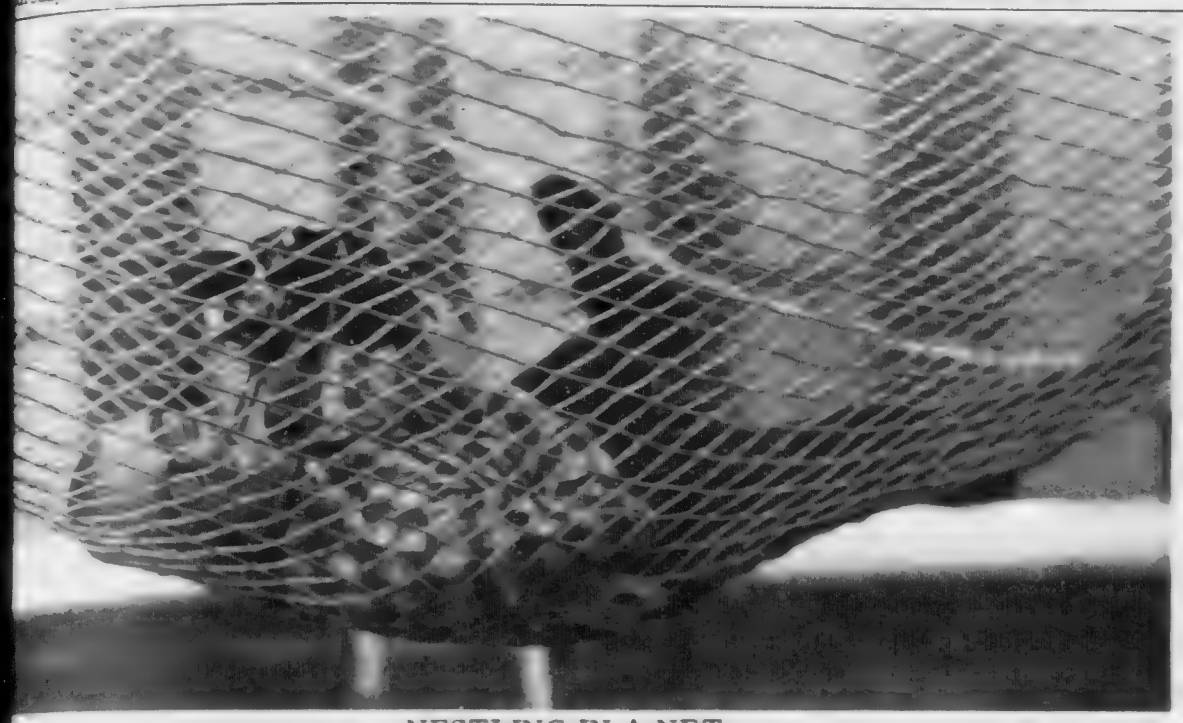
But, student government must be broadly based and open to all students who wish to participate in it, if it is to fulfill the goals of student political activity.

There is always the danger, I feel, that student government can become a small clique in a large school, so channels of participation must be kept open and broad.

8. Class Officer Positions enable students with not enough time to participate in student government to work at least a little bit for the school through the class officer program.

We must be a bit hardnosed here. This comment is good, provided the little bit that is carried on is consonant with the goals of the C.O.P. and that, is a big assumption which should be thought about.

9. We must maintain tradition since the trimester is causing many traditions to be left behind.



Even a tradition must serve a purpose. It must be meaningful and significant.

Frank Ryll

Flambeau Meets Men's VP

By LYNN BISSLAND
Flambeau Staff Reporter

"Men students need a minimum amount of supervision and the fewest number of rules," said Frank Ryll, newly-elected Men's Vice President.

"Rules should not be made for rules' sake, nor should restrictions be made for restrictions' sake. Men have always been given a maximum amount of freedom at FSU. This should continue under the new administration."

Ryll, a transfere student from St. Petersburg Junior College, took his first step into Student Government when he came to FSU and was elected a Junior Class Senator.

With a finance major and a minor in government Ryll plans to go into investment banking or law school.

Ryll enjoys outdoor sports of any type and was on the track team at St. Petersburg Junior College.

When asked about his plans for next year as men's vice president, Ryll replied, "There are other areas in which a men's vice president must exhibit leadership besides men's rules. There is a continued need for revision in the present student government programs. A men's vice president, in a position of both administration and legislation, must take an active part in these revisions. Outmoded practices must go," continued Ryll.

"Antiquated procedures must give way to a streamlined progressive organization. FSU's student government has become great because it has always been willing to make needed changes. Changes will be needed during the coming year and the Men's Vice President must take an active part in making these.

Proposed Air Officer Changes Would Affect FSU Program

Legislation to authorize major changes in the USAF Reserve Officers Training Corps program, expected to reach Congress soon, will call for a two-year on-campus program with a $220 scholarship and will be known as the Officer Education Program.

Florida State University is scheduled to be among the first universities in the United States to be given the opportunity to adopt the OEP. If Congress approves the program in time, it is hoped that it can be put into effect at FSU in the fall trimester of 1963.

The Air Force has been serving as executive agent for the Defense Dept. in the development of the legislative proposals which will affect its Reserve Officers Training Corps units at 187 colleges and universities in all by three of the fifty states. Air Force ROTC is still the largest single officer procurement program in operation in the Air Force at the present time.

Its purpose, set forth in the provisions of the National Defense Act of 1916, has been to select, educate and motivate large numbers of college trained officers for an inactive reserve force.

In recent years a gradual shifting from the initial requirement to produce officers for the inactive reserve has taken place. Today's requirement, and the requirement for the foreseeable future, it to produce regular or reserve officers for active duty assignments ranging from a minimum four-year tour to 20 or 30-year career status.

Reasons behind the Defense Dept.'s move to revamp the nationwide ROTC programs stem from the restrictive clauses of the 1916 Defense Act, which have been particularly difficult for the Air Force in the operation of its program. Chief among these restrictive clauses is the requirement for all cadets, except veterans, to complete four years of ROTC instruction. This is further complicated by the Defense Dept. decision that the Air Force will support all requirements for instructors and detachment staffs at those schools which make freshman and sophomore enrollment compulsory.

The Officer Education Program outlined in the proposed legislation has been designed to place all services in a better competitive position for qualified college graduates in the stiffening competitive atmosphere on today's college campuses.

Major features of the OEP call for orientation of the entire program to the production of professionally qualified regular and reserve officers for service careers; establishment of a two-year on-campus course of instruction given during the junior and senior years; three hours of classroom instruction per week for each semester of the two-year program; two summer training periods, one during the summer prior to entry into the program and one following graduation; a scholarship of approximately $2200 for each selected candidate for commission, to be paid directly to the cadet, and a requirement to serve at least four years of active duty.

All college (or ex-college) students who at the time of enrollment in the new program have two years of academic work remaining before the awarding of a baccalaureate or higher degree would be eligible to apply for the program.

Best Dressed Chosen Today

FSU's representative for Glamour Magazine's "Ten Best Dressed College Girls of America" contest will be chosen today at 4:30 in the Home Economics lounge.

All sororities and women's dorms are eligible to enter one contestant.

She will be judged in an off-campus daytime outfit and must also bring a photograph of herself and two sketches. The sketches must include a casual on-campus outfit that she has and an evening outfit of either a cocktail dress or full-length formal.

FASHIONABLE CHOICE . . .
Willowy silhouette, wonderful color and restrained detail make this dress important, and right for new-season cocktail parties and other dress-up occasions. Ribbed rayon and silk in dune beige, Ostia green, Riviera turquoise with matching lace trim on bodice. $15

State Can Help Smaller Sports

Objections have been raised concerning the statement in Wednesday's Flambeau that there aren't enough teams participating in some sports to keep them alive, and therefore the administration has found it necessary to cut back on the respective budgetary allotments.

Soccer was among those sports that were reported, perhaps incorrectly, that an administration said lacked participants in this region. In addition, gymnastics, volleyball and wrestling were among those sports that have few participants.

However, if seems that soccer is very well supported in the South, and especially in the State of Florida. Every team in the Florida Intercollegiate Conference, for instance, has a team in this sport. And this includes Rollins, Stetson, Tampa, Florida Southern, Miami and Jacksonville.

Two other universities in the state -- Florida State and the University of Florida -- have soccer teams, so the distance to transport athletes is negligible. And apparently there is no reason for non-support of this sport.

The aforementioned administration judged the gymnastic situation accurately, for in the past there has been a definite lack of participation. The withdrawal of financial support caused the former national champions, the Seminoles, to be defeated for the first time this year by any team. The unkindest cut was administered by the University of Florida...a double thrust.

Of course, it must be pointed out that gymnastics should not be written off the books from now on, for apparently there is a gymnastics-build up underway in the South at the present time. If so, funds should increase accordingly.

It was suggested that FSU's smaller sports include activities compatible with the geographic area. Shell boating has been tabbed as a logical sport for a Floridian team.

And, checking into it, it appears that most of the members of the Florida Intercollegiate Conference have shell crews. A couple of the members schools have defeated such Northern powers as Brown University and the University of Wisconsin when the Yanks toured Rebel-land for a bit of sunshine.

Florida State certainly has the facilities to participate in this sport...the reservation, for example, with its spacious lakes and moderately smooth waters (depending upon the wind velocity), is an ideal spot for training a boat crew.

Again, don't let this be interpreted as a move to turn Florida State into a school of athletics, taking from education to aid possible superfluous activities; but if the budget can bear it, small sports need help.

Waterfront Opens

The waterfront at the Reservation will be open for canoeing beginning Saturday. Lifeguards will be on duty from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays until April, when the swimming area will be opened.

Netters Down Fort Eustis In 5-1 Style

Without a single man returning from last year's team, the Florida State tennis squad met Fort Eustis of Virginia yesterday and triumphed, 5-1, in four singles and one doubles match.

The teams only played four-man matches, because the Virginians didn't bring a fifth netter along.

Lex Wood, a junior college transfer from South Africa, paced Florida State by dropping Fort Eustis' Norm Perry in the Number One singles match. Wood lost, 3-6, in the first set, but rebounded 6-1 and 6-2 in the deciding sets.

Don Caton, a transfer from Pensacola Junior College, easily defeated Fort Eustis' Pete Herb in the Number Two spot, winning 6-0 and 6-2.

FSU continued its winning skein in the Number Three singles when sophomore Paul Bennett of West Virginia, dropped Art Wilkes, 6-3, 6-3, while FSU's Don Monk won in th Number Four singles, defeating Arlen Diqitale, 6-1, 6-4.

In the doubles, Wood and Caton joined forces to down Perry and Herb in 6-2 and 6-3 matches.

The Virginians obtained their only victory in the Number Two doubles match when FSU's Ken Alcorn and Dick Fischer lost, 6-1, 6-3, to Wilkes and Diqitale.

The Seminoles' next opponent is the University of Florida, which will battle FSU at 1 p.m. Saturday in Tallahassee.

Tallahassee Orchid Society Holds Annual Show Saturday

The Tallahassee Orchid Society will hold its fourth annual Orchid Exhibit at Leon Federal Savings and Loan Association Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday, from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The theme this year will be "Orchinds to Music" and arrangements and exhibits will use the name of a song to carry out the theme. Corsages and arrangements will be judged by area flower show judges. Anyone wishing to enter plants, corsages or arrangements may contact Mrs. Margaret Cogswell, general show chairman, or Bob DeHaney, president of the orchid society, as several FSU faculty members have already done.

After struggling wih classes all day, most professors would be willing to try any hobby which promised a little relaxation, but the faculty members who have entered orchids for the exhibit will probably admit that growing orchids is a fascinating as well as an aesthetically rewarding pastime.

An orchind plant is not fragile, delicate or unuaually sensitive, but is instead very tough, thick-textured and strong. However, in spite of being tough, an orchid plant cannot be expected to flower unless it is well grown and in good health.

Orchids are different--not difficult! They are less demanding than many other plants because they have reserve supplies of food and moisture on which to draw if neglected and can take care of themselves for a long time than most other plants.

Generally speaking, most orchids get along well in temperatures comfortable for people. They do need sunshine, moisture, and air and do not prosper on a starvation diet any more than a person does. The light is used as energy to turn the moisture and food into plant growth and they are light-loving plants.

Anyone interested need not even own an orchid plnat in order to join the Tallahassee Orchid Society. Those who wish to learn more about orchids and their culture may contact the president of the society, Bob DeHaney, and they will receive an invitation to the monthly meetings, which are held at night, the third Thursday of each month, or they may attend the fourth annual exhibit which is free and open to the public.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: BILL McCOY

A man with a talent for big jobs, Bill McCoy (B.S., 1955) is responsible for the personnel who handle all business transactions with customers in the Greensboro, N. C., office of Southern Bell. In addition to the 15,000 customer contacts this requires each month, Bill supervises the collection of one million dollars a month from 75,000 customers.

Bill began his career with the company as office manager in Charlotte, North Carolina. There he was responsible for the daily cash receipts and supervised the [illegible] staff. In addition, he handled public relations activities. Bill met these challenges well and, as a result, earned his promotion in Greensboro.

Bill McCoy and other young men like him in Bell Telephone Companies throughout the country help bring the finest communications service in the world to the homes and businesses of a growing America.

World Famous Cellist

Pablo Casals Appears Here

Pablo Casals will conduct an orchestra and chorus in a performance in a performance of the famous cellist's oratoris "El Pesebre" in a concert at FSU April 1 opening a week-long Florida Festival of Arts.

The performance in FSU's Westcott Auditorium will be third performance of the oratorio in this country directed by Casals, who is considered the greatest master of the cello ever to perform and frequently is called the world's greatest living musician.

The first performance in this country, in San Francisco last April, opened a series of appearances by the self-exiled Spaniard in which he hopes to undertake a worldwide "personal crusade for international understanding and world peace."

"El Pesebre," or "The Manger," later was conducted by Casals in Puerto Rico, where the 86-year-old cellist now lives; in Assisi and Florence, Italy; in Toulouse, France; and in New York City. The New York performance in Carnegie Hall last June was the only other performance in the United States.

On the night of April 1, with many members of Florida's soon-to-be convened Legislature present, Casals will be presented conducting the 200-voice FSU Festival Chorus and 90-instrument FSU Symphony Orchestra. The gala evening opening of a week of activities in the arts is being presented by Gov. and Mrs. Farris Bryant and by FSU.

Five soloists, all selected by Casals himself, will appear with the chorus and orchestra in performing the oratorio. The oratorio is intended to be a "message of peace" built around the verses of the Catalan poet Joan Alavedra about the birth of Christ.

Casals was obtained as the principal figure in the Fine Arts Festival by Dean Karl Kuersteiner of the FSU School of Music after many weeks' efforts. As in other public appearances the Puerto Rican exile agreed to conduct but not to play his cello.

A world famous figure in music for more than half a century, Casals has steadfastly refused to appear as a performing artist in countries he thinks have denied the liberty and dignity he considers "a God-given heritage to mankind."

SP Convention

Greenwood Out; Attacks Cabinet

By LYNN BISSLAND
Flambeau Staff Reporter

Bill Greenwood declined the nomination for vice president of the Senior Class in a charge to the Student Party convention Wednesday night asserting that a member of the Cabinet had checked his files for political purposes to benefit the other party on this campus before he had filed for the candidacy.

Greenwood had only 68 hours of the 70 hours required for a Senior class standing when he was nominated for the position. He had made plans to obtain the required hours by taking an exemption exam when he heard that information had leaked out concerning his class standing. "...Honor Court action may be necessary," said Greenwood.

George Miller, party chief, presided over the nominations of candidates for the Junior Class positions in the second run of a three day convention.

Don Thigpen was nominated as a candidate for the office of Senior Class vice president following Greenwood's withdrawal from the candidacy.

Running for Junior Class Officers are: Mike Wigeluis, president; Mike DeVane, vice president; Vicki Newman, secretary; Linda Wilson, treasurer; and Carol Peters, social chairman.

Candidates for senatorial positions to the Junior Class are: John Mertting and Bill Ward, Men's Senate; Ruth Doyll and Carol Renfroe, Women's Senate. Nominees for Men's Judicary are John Sytsma and Ray Whitehead.

Last night the convention completed the nominations for Junior Women's Honor Court and Junior Men's and Junior Women's Judicary. The convention also nominated candidates for Sophomore Class officers.

Following these nominations the convention reopened nominations for other available positions.

Singing Groups Present Concert

This evening at 8:15 the University Singers and the Choral Union will present a joint concert as part of Parent's Weekend.

The program, which will be presented in Opperman Music Hall, will consist of selected portions of Bach's "Passion According to St. John" and selections of Twentieth Century French choral music. Herman Gunter Jr. will direct the Choral Union and Wiley L. Housewright will direct the Singers in a program which will be free and open to the public.

This is the first time both choral groups have worked together on this concert. Traditionally, the University Singers give a concert for Parent's Weekend, but this year the Singers asked Choral Union to join them.

President's Cabinet Hears Dr. Smith On Florida Culture

Dr. Robert Smith, originally from Scotland, who completed his doctoral dissertation on "Cultural Activities in Florida Cities," spoke to the President's cabinet Wednesday about the degree of cultural activities in the cities of Fort Lauderdale, Hialeah, Jacksonville, Miami, Miami Beach, Orlando, Pensacola, St. Petersburg, Tampa and West Palm Beach.

Smith, who received his doctoral degree in education, said there was no cultural center in Florida as such, but that there were area where there seems to be growing concern and cultural development. St. Petersburg and West Palm Beach were two cities cited as evidencing most development in the cultural field.

Smith added Florida has the greatest potential to become a cultural center of the Southeast as well as possibly becoming one of the leading centers for culture in the United States.

The present cultural facilities and the Florida climate combine to form an ideal atmosphere for cultural development, according to Smith, who has proposed to Governor Bryant and the Florida development commission that a cultural or arts commission be created to coordinate and oversee a statewide effort in the advancement of the arts.

President Ken van Assenderp led a discussion of the cabinet after Smith had presented the essence of his dissertation on how student government can aid Smith's project in Florida.

The office of the student body president is making a study of Dr. Smith's dissertation with an eye to recommending or endorsing the idea of a Florida Cultural Commission on the state level.

Van Assenderp revealed confidence in the FSU student body when he said, "Student government feels that there is great potential in the students themselves to help the state grow culturally through a familiarization of and action upon the existing problems."

Members of the President's committee to study Smith's proposal are: Jim Blue, secretary of state; Roger Sherman, assistant to the president; Ben Thornnal, aide to the president.

Southern Education

Southern education, which has run head-on with the Federal government so many times in the past, is apparently going to bang its head once more.

And this time, the schools of the South could be severely injured.

Three events point out the terrible quandary of the South.

First, in a typical Southern state, Alabama, the newly-elected governor discovered the old administration had left the state's financial condition in a terrible mess.

Secondly, the National Education Association has revealed the entire story of the plight of this typical Southern state, breaking down its poor rankings point-by-point.

Third, President Kennedy has once again proposed civil rights legislation that would withhold runds from schools that are segregated.

And this is where the clash starts. Gov. Wallace, if he carries out his word, would have to reject these funds to keep Alabama segregated. The situation could be duplicated in other Southern states.

Here's how that Southern state ranks in the nation. There are more children per teacher in Alabama than in any other state... the average of college graduates ... over 46.1 percent of Alabama men fail their Selective Service test. It goes on and on, but the basic idea in the report is this:

Alabama cannot afford a good educational program for its students since per capita personal income was only $1,492 in 1962, as compared to the national average of $2,263.

And states in this predicament are willing to spurn federal aid... thus adding an even greater load to its already overloaded state budget.

If it refused aid, this state would increase its own burden... and it already ranks fifth highest in the nation in monies for schools received from the state.

Likewise, it would raise the direct expenditures of state and local government for all levels of education from the present 5.5 percent level of its citizens' personal income.

No state can stand this burden.

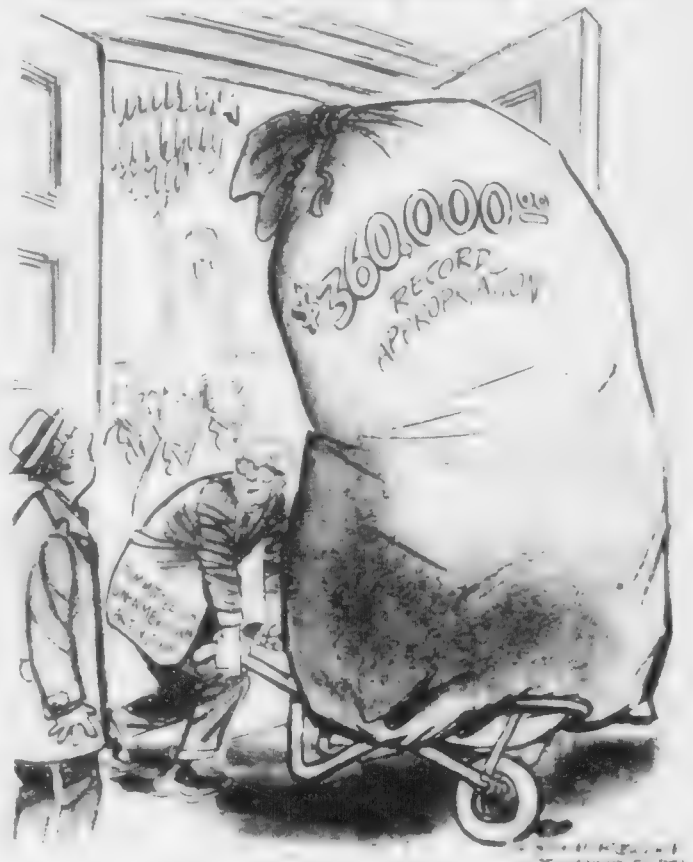
Planned Economy-Economic Blackmail

The oracle of the left, Thomas Riggins, tells us that it is "ridiculous" for one to think thwt capitalism, or as non-marxists would say, the market economy, is inseparable from political democracy and civil liberties. "Freedoms, economic and social, must be protected, and they can best be protected by central planning."

In answering Mr. Riggins' statements it will not be enough to convince thinking students he is wrong merely to use the old egghead dodge: 'Would you mind defining economic freedom for me?' One might instead start from the statements of FSU Vice President Champion that individual and individual freedom are inseparable (Last Lecture). Are they?

Let us first note that "life, liberty and property" are protected under our constitution... the last of the three is the point of the Socialist attack on our society as it is presently constituted.

Property is necessary to individual liberty. Not only is the right to own property (and the freedom to use that property) one of our basic individual rights--a right which is necessarily destroyed through what Mr. Riggins euphemistically calls "central planning," but other... all other rights of free men fail when economic freedom falls.



We can see the beginnings of the truth of this statement in our nation at the present time, as the power of the central government increases, and with it comes increased control over the people's money. We see much evidence that this economic control can be used as a means of perpetuating a particular political regime. We have, under "central planning," not only no guarantee that the central planners will [illegible] better decisions than individ[illegible] a free society, but we stan[illegible] chance of vastly compounding [illegible] take, if one is made. Riggins, Dobson Criticized

To The Editor:

When I arrived on this campus last Sept. my first impression of the socio-political columns of the Flambeau was that neither Mr. Riggins nor Mr. Dobson knew what they were writing about. Naively, I expected with time and maturity, that I would soon see the light and be able to appreciate their respective positions. I have now returned to my earlier viewpoint.

From the references and concepts which appear in Mr. Riggins' column I receive the idea that he makes it a policy not to read any book written since 1930 or there about. Apparently he thinks that ideas and concepts derived from the climate of opinion of a now long dead cultural period are adequate for contemporary mass society. Why are there no references to or even hints of any knowledge about the existence of such significant sources as J. Dewey, El Leder, D. Bell, M. Weber, H.J. Laski, K. Kautsky, F. Neumann, H. Marcuse, L. Hartz, S. Hook, I. Murdoch, I. Berlin, J.H. Keynes, E.H. Carr, and so many others?

This is not to say that one could expect Mr. Riggins to know everything about contemporary social thought, but he should at least know something of what is going on in this area and be able to refer to it intelligently.

As for the column of Mr. Dobson, I think it is rather safe to say (from tone and content) that Mr. Dobson is beyond criticism. Reasonable and rational arguement bounce off of him as bullets off of armour plate. If Mr. Riggins is living in the intellectual twilight of the 19th century, Mr. Dobson has not seen fit to leave the 18th, I will grant that his columns are of a higher level than say, Mr. Hastings, but not too much higher.

No one seems to be interested in treating a problem from a detached viewpoint. No one is willing to allow or present alternative explanations or interpretations. Both Mr. Riggins and Mr. Dobson (perhaps the latter more than the former) make a mockery of the rationale that in the free market place of ideas reasonable men have reasonable disagreements to which they apply reasonable argument in an attempt to find the elusive truth.

Ungraded Classes Excel

The Editor:
was with a mixture of humor, ement, and disagreement that I a letter to the Editor in the ch 4 issue of the FLAMBEAU ten by Mr. George O'Toole. should like to comment upon content of this letter; let's take nt by point:
Mr. O'Toole endeavors to make point (made much more effic- by the TIME article from he quotes) that "crip" cour- exist at this and other Univ- ties. With this I most assuredly e.
I am also willing to agree with O'Toole that "crip" courses in all schools and departments is or any other university. We now come to my basic dis- ement with the author of this r, for while he says that "crip" courses may exist in any department he singles out the Honors Program for special opprobrium. The Honors Program may or may not have "crip" courses (in fact, I have had some "crip" Honors courses myself), but it does not deserve to be singled out and ridiculed in the paper of this University for a trait that is common to the entire university.
(4) Incidently, I would like to ask Mr. O'Toole just what is wrong with a course in which there are no tests and in which one's grades are assurred. Would not such a situation stimulate a student with a true desire for learning, but also with a fear of that Almighty God--grades, to enter realms of difficult knowledge which he might not enter should he have to work for grades. In short many educators now advocate ungraded classes.

Letters to the editor and student comment are welcomed by the "Flambeau". We firmly believe that students should have an organ through which their opinions and views can be aired.

We will attempt to print all letters received that meet standards of good taste, conciseness of thought and quality of presentation. In addition, letters must be held to a maximum of 250 words. In rare instances, material exceeding that amount which is of exceptional quality will be run as a guest column. All letters must be signed by the author.

At no time will letters containing material which libelous or in bad taste be printed.

When a number of letters are received which express essentially the same thought the best one will be printed and others acknowledged. We reserve the right to edit material as long as the meaning and intent remain the same.

All mail should be addressed to "Florida Flambeau", Longmire Building, Room 211. Any material which the writer desires returned should be accompanied by a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Trimester Thwarts Greatness

To the Editor:
Much has been said, pro and con, about the trimester system. Certainly, school facilities may be used more efficiently and economically. F culty salaries are increased somewhat (in proportion to increased teaching hours and time taken from important research and study?). But what of the student, the seemingly insignificant cog in the huge machine?

Some students, whose main interest in college is job training rather than intellectual growth, are satisfied. They are still able to graduate with minimum required hours, minimum required quality points and diploma (although their social lives may have been cramped somewhat under the new system).

Completely left out, and frustrated, is the student who has both high academic goals and genuine intellectual curiousity. Studying five, six and even more hours per day, he never seems to finish daily assignments and "busy work." Term papers are deverishly dashed off, half-finished, within twenty-four hours of the deadline. Desiring time to read and study independently, to gain a deeper insight into his courses, he is instead overburdened with quantities of material which he is never able to absorb adequately.

Florida State is at last beginning to gain national recognition as an important and fast-growing institution of higher learning. But the caliber of a university is determined to a great extent by the caliber of its students. By overlooking the full meaning of education, are we undermining the potential greatness of our university?

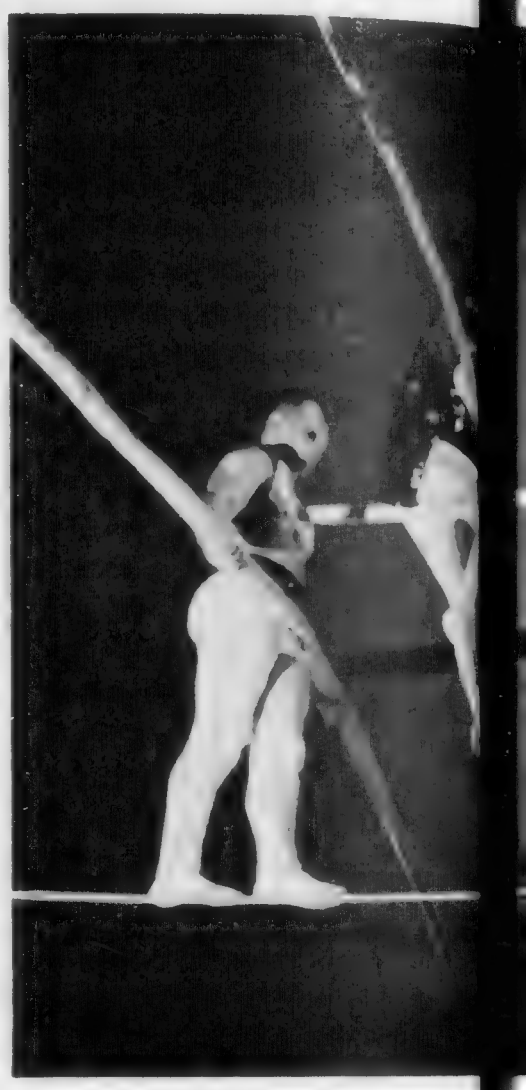
The 1963 "Flyi



In the Hut, the "backstage" portion of the Big Top, a boy practices his juggling act. Afew feet away, a group of girls dressed as ballerinas nervously discuss the possibility of their new opera hose catching oh the ropes. In a dressing room, two boys begin applying the makeup that will turn their faces into clown masks. All around them performers who have finished putting on their costumes and makeup mill around, some discussing the performance of the night before, most joking nervously as they await their cue.

An assortment of equipment and props fills the Hut: wheelbarrows filled with soap flakes, Kleenex, paint buckets, roller skates, ropes, laundry hampers with nets hanging over the sides, a tin of baby powder. There's an air of excitement and expectancy throughout the room.

Coach Gilbert, the circus director, strides into the Hut and silences the din by shouting "ten minutes till show time." Someone climbs on a chair and frantically pleads for help in finding two missing swinging ladders. There is a small commotion until one of the clowns triumphantly appears with the missing equipment. From the tent come the sounds of the band; the countdown is finished. The first performers run uner the flap of the Big Top and are greeted by audience applause. The show is underway.

That's the scene that will repeat itself tonight and tomorrow as the 109 members of the Flying High circus put on their show for family, friends and local small fry. Dressed in resplendent costumes of gold and silver, the aerial acrobats will whirl through the air under the dazzling glare of floodlights. Wearing outsized golf caps, baggy trousers, and Tootsie pops in their lapels, clowns will amble around the audience and make faces at ringling six-year-olds and sedate students. Acts will run the gamut from riding a unicycle to juggling bowling pins.

Despite diversity in acts, however, all performers will share one common element: a background of innumerable hours of practice. Since there is only a one-trimester course offered in Circus, students who want to continue training have to do so on their own time.

Practicing an average of three times a week, each performer generally puts in a minimum of six hous weekly. They learn basic techniques from Coach Gilbert; after that, it is up to them to perfect their acts and become "show-worthy".

Seasoned members of the circus lend their experience to the neophytes by helping them with their acts, often literally showing them the ropes of the trade.

When the show starts, many a person will gawk in amazement to see the skill displayed by the student performers. Children will point in wonder to china that don't fall off the poles they're spinning on, while mothers will hold their breath as their sonengages in an eloquent display of balance. And boys will happily discover that there are not only daring young men on the flying trapeze but daring young ladies as well.

An aerialist will possibly "miss" at one time, but he will tumble into the net gracefully and smilingly race up the ladder to try again. A few male performers will exhibit their skill in mincing around the rink on ten-foot stilts, looking as intent in getting the proper swagger as a girl trying out her first pair of high heels. A younger brother will yell "Hi Pam!" to his performing sister, and a proud father will bring out the flashbulbs.

All too soon, the last act will end. The band will break into heady circus music and the announcer will thank everyone for being such a fine audience. Boys will take down the tent and "The Greatest Collegiate Show On Earth" will be over. The performers will put away their glittery costumes and resume routine practices for the next year's performance. The show will go on.

Well Over 300 Debates Since September

22 Represent FSU In Intercollegiate Debat

FSU's debate team has had an outstanding program this year. Twenty-two students have represented FSU in intercollegiate competition in well over 300 debates since last September, including weekly practice debates and those debates presented before local audiences.

With the season not yet over, the seminole debaters have won six trophies, nine individual medals and 40 certificates of merit. This record would seem highly signifcant as debating is one of FSU's only fields of intercollegiate competition strictly on a mental level.

... is exactly what the debate team has successfully been trying to do all year. Above is an example. Shown with the certificates and trophies they won at the West Georgia Tournament are (front rwo, left to right) Marilyn Young, Joan Corey, and Nancy Dale; (second row) Tom Valerius, Gary Canner, Peyton Wynns, Richard Root, Susan Harrell, Barbara Jackson, and Mr. Hahn, debate coach.

One of the six trophies was won at the debate held at Mercer University in Macon, Ga., for first place affirmative. Sixteen members on the varsity and novice level represented FSU, with the novices finishing in second place for their division's competition. Individual awards were won by Charles DeFoor, Peyton Wynns, Polly Donnigan and Paul Brown as top debaters in the novice category. FSU's record for this match was 32 wins to 16 losses.

At the Birmingham Invitational, FSU was awarded first and second places in Oral Interpretarion by team members Joan Corey and Marilyn Young. This was the worst tournament showing of the year for FSU, with a record of 10 wins - 10 losses.

FSU ended up fourth out of 28 collegiate teams at Emory University in Atlanta, with Tom Wheaton winning honors by ranking second place out of the entire slate of debaters. FSU's record: 8 wins over 4 losses.

A novice tournament at the University of Georgia in Athens saw FSU making its last weak showing of the season when the FSU team broke even for the second time with a record of 6 wins and 6 losses.

It was at this point that the season really began to pay off. The team members, who spend from 10 to 12 hours a week on practice debating in an eight month season, now embarked on a series of tournaments in which they earned the smile of fortune (and hard work) to win victory after victory.

Eighteen teams entered the West Georgia College debate held in Carrollton, Georgia, but FSU won the over-all sweepstakes trophy along with several other first place awards. Teh over-all record for tournament was 20 wins to 9 l

FSU was host to a tournament which Alabama and FSU tied first place in debate in the va division from the 39 teams participating. FSU finished third in novice divisions. Record for tourney was 24 wins to 12 l

Best showing of the year th was at the Mobile Tournament, beat 21 other schools, winning sweepstakes. The debate record 16 wins to 8 losses.

Only two tournaments now re on the schedule for the FSU d ers. There will be a novice in Tampa next weekend, an final varsity tournament wil the University of Tennessee W 29 - 30.

Indian Dance Troupe

Bharatiya Kala Kendra To Perform Here

The Bharatiya Kala Kendra will be visiting the Florida State campus March 28 in Westcott Auditorium at 8:30 p.m.

This group of Kathak Dancers and Musicians of North India are presented by the Asia Society Performing Arts Program.

This is the first performance of the Bharatiya Kala Dendra in the United States. Only once before have the dancers of Kala Kendra left India, although they have performed in all major centers of their own subcontinent, where they are ranking favorites. On invitation from the Soviet Government, a group toured Moscow and a few other cities of the USSR in 1961 and were met with much acclaim.

After the performance at FSU, which will include Mughal Court Dance, Hindu Dance, drama and folk dance, the dancers will continue on a coast to coast tour of the United States.

The story of the art of Kathak dance and music, which is part of the Hindu religion and had its beginning in the centuries before the Christian era, reached a high development in the Medieval period and then went underground when the Mughal conquerors set up their empire in North India. The great masters preserved the tradition until this century when India gained its independence and a revival of the Indian arts began.

"Kathak" now means a style of dance and its music, but formerly it meant story tellers. The Kathaks were Rhapsodists, who recited the literary piece and, in ecstasy, danced. Consequently, the three elements -- the literary composition, celebrating the glories and the deeds of the Gods; its music and dance -- are inseperable in the classical forms of Kathak.

The Kathak music comes from the Hindustani music of Northern India. It shows dynamic changes because of its history. Though styles of singing and instrumental performance have their own standards and forms, in general, music and dance must be considered together in the Kathak tradition as in all Indian Classical traditions.

Clyda Stokes

Women's VP Is Interviewed

Clyda Stokes, newly-elected Women's Vice President, believes that some women's dorm rules need a change and should be brought up to date. "The administration is ready for changes and the students would like to see these changes," said Miss Stokes.

Miss Stokes expressed concern about FSU maintaining the respect that women student have held through the years. "Many hours were spent in making the rules and I believe that many hours should be spent in consideration before we change these rules," said Miss Stokes.

Miss Stokes first entered into Student Government at FSU with her election to the position of Sophomore Class Senator. Her interest in politics stems from her high school years when she attended such political conventions as Girls' State. "I am not a politician," she asserted. Her reasons for entering politics is "--to see necessary jobs completed and more interest aroused in student government activities."

Miss Stokes considers being tapped for Mortar Board, a national women's honorary based on high scholarship, leadership and high ideals as her greatest collegiate honor.

Aside from her active interest in politics, Miss Stokes is a licensed beautician.

Following graduation, Miss Stokes plans to be a field secretary for Delta Gamma Sorority for one year. As a career, she would like to go into administrative work.

Miss Stokes expresses the sincere desire that, "--Student Government work together to establish better communication between the branches of Student Government, the Student Government and the Student Body. This would create better working relationships and provide the student body with the opportunity to express themselves through their student government."

MARKING ON THE CURVE—AND WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT

[illegible] Crimscott was a professor. Choate Sigafoos was a sophomore. Twonkey Crimscott was keen, cold, brilliant. [illegible] was loose, vague, adenoidal. Twonkey Crimscott believed in diligence, discipline, and marking on the curve. Choate Sigafoos believed in elves, Julie London, and thirteen hours of sleep each night.

Yet there came a time when Twonkey Crimscott—mentor, sage, and savant—was thoroughly outthought, outfoxed, outmaneuvered, outployed, and out-witted by Choate Sigafoos, [illegible].

[illegible] Monday when Choate was at the library studying [illegible] Crimscott's course in sociology. Mr. Crimscott's [illegible] night, but instead [illegible] to cram for the [illegible] question covering [illegible] answers [illegible] Choate had to check the correct answer but the [illegible] is that the four choices were so subtly shaded, so [illegible] that students were closed by [illegible] Choate [illegible] and [illegible].

[illegible] on this day Choate sat in the library poring over his [illegible]gy text, his tiny brow furrowed with concentration, while [illegible]round him sat the other members of the sociology class, [illegible] like crazy, every one scored and party. [illegible]e looked sadly at their stricken faces. "What a waste!" [illegible]ught. "All this youth, this verve, this bounce, chained to [illegible] books in a musty library! We should be out singing and [illegible]g and cutting didoes on the greensward! Instead we [illegible]"

[illegible], an absolute gasser of an idea but Choate [illegible] to his classmates. "Tomorrow when we [illegible], let's all every one of us check Choice 'A' on [illegible] every one of them."

[illegible] his classmates.

"Oh, I know that Choice 'A' can't be the right answer to every question," said Choate. "But what's the difference? Mr. Crimscott marks on the curve. If we all check the same answer we all get the same score, and everybody in the class [illegible]."

[illegible] said his classmates.

"So why should we knock ourselves out studying?" said [illegible]. "Let's get out of here and have a ball!"

So they all ran out and lit Marlboro Cigarettes and had a ball, as indeed, you will too when you light a Marlboro, for if there ever was a cigarette to lift the spirit and gladden the heart, to dispel the shades of night, to knot up the ravelled sleeve of care, to put spring in your gait and roses in your cheeks, it is filtered Marlboros—firm and pure and fragrant and [illegible] with rich, natural, golden tobacco. And, what's more, this [illegible]arlin' smoke comes in soft packs that are actually soft and [illegible] boxes that actually flip.

Well sir, the next morning the whole class did what Choate said, and, sure enough, they all got 'C's, and they picked Choate up and carried him on their shoulders and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and plied him with sweetmeats and Marlboro [illegible] girls and put on buttons which said "I DOTE ON CHOATE."

But they were celebrating too soon. Because the next time shrewd old Mr. Crimscott gave them a test, he did not give them one hundred multiple choice questions. He only gave them one question—to wit: write a 30,000 word essay on "Crime Does Not Pay."

"You and your ideas," they said to Choate and tore off his [illegible] and broke his sword and drummed him out of the school. Today, a broken man, he earns a living as a camshaft [illegible] Toledo.

lation's News Organs Lack Necessary Rapid Improvement

e nation's news organs are not ving rapidly enough to meet challenges of atomic-age dem- cy, says Dean Edward W. Bar- of Columbia University's Grad- School of Journalism.

et's face it," Dean Barrett told student editors representing more than 100 college newspapers at the fifth annual International Affairs Conference for College Editors in New York, "our normal media of news communication, if we look at them nationwide, are not doing an outstanding job."

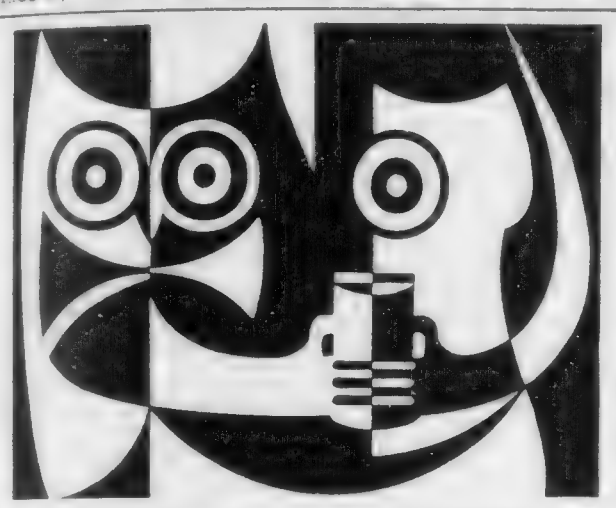
Press freedom has been a major issue on many campuses during the past year. Student editors have been particulary concerned since a number of publications which were attacked by college administrators and legislators, were suspended or closed and their editors punished or dismissed on campuses in New York, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Michigan, California and Florida.

Several student editors said that the campus newspaper is the "last citadel of free expression" in the publishing field.

The panel discussion centered on the role of the college newspaper and its relation to college administration.

One view taken by several of the four panel members and by some of the audience was that a college newspaper should be a "voice of gentle persuasion and responsibility."

An opposite view taken was the college papers should "agitate and raise hell."



Neal Johnston of the University of Chicago said students should accept as inevitable efforts by college administration to control campus papers. Johnston said:

"Most college editors wouldn't know what to do with complete freedom of the press if they had it. Further, if their papers are subsidized, they can't expect complete freedom. What college president is going to pay to hear views he doesn't want to hear?

Many students said they often had "connived" and had learned to get around potential censors.

"When the school wouldn't let us take a stand on a board of regent selection," said one student, "we got the canidates to say they didn't care if we commented. That put the school administration in a fix."

Other students said that too often college editors take up issues on which they are completely wrong or ignorant.

JACKSONVILLE --- Governor Farris Bryant has urged greater efforts by Florida business groups and individuals to expand the state's foreign trade. Speaking to the world trade conference in Jacksonville, the Governor urged groups to compile information on contacts and markets. He said each businessman traveling abroad can become an ambassador of trade if he is armed with background on how Florida firms can meet the needs of the people of foreign nations.

CAPE CANAVERAL -- The atomic submarine Thomas Jefferson successfully launched a Polaris missile after an earlier launching failed. The two A2 missiles were fired an hour apart while the Jefferson cruised beneath the surface of the Atlantic about 30 miles southeast of Cape Canaveral. The first landed in the water not far from the launching point but the second flew several hundred miles down range. There was no immediate report on what caused the first to fail.

VATICAN -- Pope John held an unusual audience at the Vatican today -- a private meeting with Soviet Premier Khrushchev's son-in-law and daughter. It was the first meeting of a Roman Catholic Pope and a key figure of the Communist Russia regime.

WASHINGTON -- The Defense Department announced the Army will arm its units in Europe with the faster-firing "Sergeant" missile-- the Sergeant replacing the older, slower Corporal missile. The more mobile 75-mile range Sergeant is to go to the units this month. It's solid fueled and can be fired in minuted compared with hours for preparing the liquid fueled Corporal.

WASHINGTON -- Texas Congressman George Mahon has lashed out in a House speech against what he says is too much talking in public about US intelligence procedures. He calls for action to halt what he describes as the rapid erosion of our national intelligence effort. Presumably, he refers in part to recent disclosures of our surveillance methods concerning Cuba.

WASHINGTON -- Secretary of State Rusk pictures Cuba as a land of mounting discontent with the Castro regime -- and he says several hundred thousand more Cubans are trying to flee the island. He insists that Cuba will one day be free.

FSU LOOKS FOR FIRST WIN OVER GATORS

Florida Netters Invade Campus

With one game under its belt, the Florida State tennis team will battle the University of Florida S turday in Tallahassee, as the Seminoles try for their first victory in any sport over the Gators.

Florida State won in a contest with Fort Eustis Wednesday.

The impetus of the FSU attack will ıy provided by the two junior college transfer students.

Junior Lex Wood, from Dale Junior Cleege in King William's, South Africa, is "the best we've ever had at FSU," says Coach Eddie Cubbon.

Wood, who even crossed racquets with many top Davis Cup tennis stars, defeated Nicola Pietrangeli in straight sets during a friendly match.

Backed up by another junior college grad, Wood will have the support of Don Caton of Pensacola Junior College. Caton and his brother Larry were perennial city tennis champs and they fought it out between themselves for high-honors in the Mobile (Ala.) Invitational Tennis Tournament a couple of seasons ago.

"Our first two are as strong or stronger than last year" says Cubbon, "and the other four give us much more depth. For instance, we didn't win a point at No. 5 or No. 6 last year, or in No. 3 doubles, and we're much stronger there this time."

No one is left from the 1962 team and apparently Cubbon has a right to complain about a "lack of depth."

The four other spots on the team will be filled by rookies up from the freshman team. They are 6-0 Kenny Alcorn, a soph from Winter Haven; 5-10 soph Paul Bennett of Charleston, W. Va.; soph Reggie Dickey of Miami; and soph Don Monk of Mansfield, Ohio.

The FSU tennis schedule:

Mar. 9--University of Florida at Tallahassee at 1 p.m.; 14-15--the University of Georgia at 2 p.m. at Tallahassee; 16--Mississippi State at Pensacola at 2 p.m.; 18--Georgia Tech at Tallahassee at 2 p.m.; 23--Northwestern at Tallahassee at 1 p.m.; 26--Florida at Gainesville at 2 p.m.; 28--Valdosta State at Tallahassee at 2 p.m.; 30--Valdosta State at Valdosta at 1 p.m.

April 1--Hope College in Tallahassee at 10 a.m. and Amherst at Tallahassee at 2 p.m.; 2--Hope College at Tallahassee at 2 p.m.; 3--Columbia University at 2 p.m. in Tallahassee; 4-5--Columbia University at 10 p.m., Furman at 2 p.m. at Tallahassee; 6--Columbia University at Tallahassee at 2 p.m.; 11--Presbyterian at Tallahassee 2 p.m.; 19-20--University of Cincinnati at Tallahassee at 1 p.m.; 22 Georgia Tech at Atlanta at 2 p.m. 23--University of Georgia at Athens, Ga., at 2 p.m.; 24--Mercer at Macon, Ga., at 2 p.m.; 26-27--Rollins at Winter Park at 2 p.m.; 30--Miami at Tallahassee at 2 p.m.

June 10-15--Eastern Intercollegiate at Hamilton, N.Y.

FSU Should Join Sunshine League

The Southeastern Conference squabble is over for this year, and, according to people in high athletic positions (who would rather no doubt that their names not be used) FSU will not have a prayer of getting into the SEC for four or five years.

The solidarity of the conference at the recent voting was evidence of that. Until then, therefore, Florida State will continue its boot-licking and boqing to the hats of the Gesslers of the SEC. The school will resume its role of "step-child" of the SEC (to quote a University of Kentucky release, which at least affords FSU legitimacy).

However, the question arises, "Why doesn't FSU make an effort to get into another conference, such as the Southern or Atlantic Coast conferences?"

And immediately, the logical answer is, "Because it would hurt our chances of getting into the SEC."

But then, numerous ramifications and complications stick their heads up to protest, for people have nasty habits of asking, "What chances?" They further imply the Seminoles should abandon attempts alltogether, rather tahn be a Tantalus, who is alwasy tempted by a near, but ever receding, conference bid.

"Be an independent... like we've always been," they say--ignoring the fact that FSU hasn't always been an independent, for the Seminoles once were members of the Florida Intercollegiate Conference. The school dropped out when it first tried for the forbidden fruit of the SEC.

Until Florida State does become an SEC member (which may be when Hell gets air conditioning, when Judgment Day arrives, or when Bobby Kennedy drains his pool), why not return to the conference of old?

What would be the arguments against such a move? Well, admittedly the conference is weak in one sport--football, for only two schools have football teams. However, one of them is the University of Miami, which allegedly defeated FSU time and again in the past.

However, in other sports, the conference is more respectable, In basketball, there are teams like Miami, Stetson, Rollins, and Tampa--all of whom played FSU this season. The FSU frosh played Jacksonville's fledglings twice, so Florida Southern is the only cage team that the Seminoles didn't compete against.

So, joining the FIC would not require any drastic schedule revision.

The attributes of the conference include FSU's being able to contend extremely well in basketball and receiving extra publicity in the Sunshine State because of conference competition.

In addition, the Seminoles would find the Florida conference tough in several areas--Florida Southern used to have no trouble with FSU's baseball team, while several of the schools recruit top-flight tennis and golf squads.

One of the arguments FSU gives for joining the SEC is that the Seminoles' small sports are strong... so are the Florida Intercollegiate's.

FSU SCRIMMAGE

Coach Bill Peterson will send the Florida State football team through it second Saturday scrimmage of the spring football practice tomorrow. Interested spectators are invited to attend.

EIGHT MASTER BARBERS

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

$89,000 Olympic Pool Increase Approved At St. Augustine Meeting

BOC Takes FSU Growth Action

An increase of $89,000 in the estimated cost of the planned Olympic swimming pool at FSU was approved Friday by the Board of Control.

Originally estimated at $216,000, the cost of the pool was re-evaluated after the drawing up of the plans and a new figure of $305,000 was set.

The original estimated cost of the pool was to be financed by the Governor's revenue certificates. The balance between this figure and the new estimate will be financed in two ways: fund of $52,000, set aside by Student Government to help pay for the pool, will be used, and the balance of $37,000 will be made up with profits from the University Book Store.

The Board also approved the projected plan of operation for the new University Golf Course, with a committee composed of students, faculty and staff personnel operating under a separate agency account.

The purchase of two new projectors costing more than $18,000 was okayed by the BOC.

The action to purchase the new equipment was initiated by Frank Milwee during his term of service as Secretary of Finance. This purchase was made possible by the money paid by the students at the campus movies.

"This new equipment will be used in conjunction with recently purchased Cinemascope equipment to provide a superior film program for the students," said Student Body President Ken van Assenderp.

"This is an example of excellent cooperation and action upon a student-initiated project by our administration."

Dean R. R. Oglesby and President Blackwell presented the request on behalf of the students to the Board.

A story concerning the naming of several FSU buildings, also approved in other Board action relating to FSU, may be found elsewhere on this page.

van Assenderp Fires Secretary Of Finance

By OTIS WRAGG
Associate Editor

Secretary of Finance Frank Milwee was dismissed from his position on the student body president's cabinet Thursday afternoon because of his lack of cooperation with his colleagues, President Ken van Assenderp announced in a statement releasedyesterday.

Named to succeed Milwee for the remainder of van Assenderp's administration were Johnny Jones and Gayles Motes. Miss Motes was undersecretary of finance under Milwee. Jones served as administrative assistant to van Assenderp.

Van Assenderp said Milwee was fired because of "... lack of cooperation... with his superior and with his subordinates in Student Government."

Among reasons for Milwee's dismissal was his deliberate withholding of information about the conduct of the Secretary of Finance's office from the student body president, van Assenderp explained. "This lack of communication created a void in my knowledge of the overall financial operations of student government, and thus hindered proper conduct of the president's office," he said.

Milwee, who has served in his cabinet post since van Assenderp's inauguration last spring, was unavailable for comment prior to press time yesterday.

Following Milwee's dismissal, van Assenderp was questioned as to the status of next year's budget, which is scheduled for presentation to Student Senate Wednesday. The president said dismissal of the cabinet officer at this late date will not in any way hinder proper and competent presentation of the budget.

"Having first given careful consideration to the presentation of the pending budget, with complete knowledge of all the circumstances and with complete confidence in the newly appointed officers, I am assured that the best interests of the University are being served," van Assenderp said.

Folk Singing Group Performs In Westcott

By ELLEN DEIGNAN
Flambeau Staff Writer

The "Limeliters," probably the most "uptown bunch of folk-singers making the round today," will appear at FSU on March 25.

They will be presented to the students by the Student Artist Series and Campus Chest and will appear at Westcott for two shows at 7 and 9 p.m.

The "Limeliters" appeared at FSU during the Homecoming of 1961, and made such a hit that they were asked to return.

In September, 1960, they played in San Francisco and Los Angeles with the Johnny Mathis Show. This performance was followed by a national tour with Mort Sahl, which was acutally the turning point of their career and established the "Limeliters" as the "most original vocal group in this country."

Since the Sahl tourn, they have played over 250 concerts on their own in every major city and on most of the major college campuses in the United States.

The "Limeliters" have recorded six albums and a number of single releases. Their albums have consistently been among the country's best sellers, averaging over 200,000 copies each.

Tickets for the show will go on sale in Westcott on March 18. Cost is $2 for FSU students, $3 for the public and $1 for high school students.

BOC Approves New Golf Links

Florida State University, looking ahead to a 1970 enrollment of 15,000 students and increasing recreational needs under year-round operatin, is developing a nine-hole golf course on surplus University Farm property.

Meeting in St. Augustine Friday, March 8, the Board of Control approved a plan of operation for the course, being developed on 113 acres surplus to the needs of the University Farm some two miles from the FSU campus.

Tees, greens and fairways for the nine-hole course have been layed out but have not been seeded. It is expected the course will be ready for play by late July.

The course will be used for physical education class instruction; for student, faculty and staff recreation; and as a "home" course for FSU's collegiate and intramural golf teams.

Proposed cost of development is $32,914, all money coming from auxiliary funds representing profits accumulated from student patronage.

When the course is completed, FSU will join some 150 other colleges and universities operating their own golf facilities. Among these are te University of Florida, Louisiana State University, University of Alabama, University of North Carolina, University of Mississippi and Mississippi State University.

Under the plan approved by the Board of Control, FSU will operate the course as a separate agency fund. Policies will be established

The Time Is Now For FSU Needs

Editorial

"The Time is Now" is a twenty page brochure digesting in layman's terms the needs of Florida State University. The Booklet, paid for by the FSU Alumni Association, will be sent to all legislators in an attempt to crystallize the multiple problems of higher education in Florida in the minds of those who can do something to improve it.

The information is not particularly startling. Most people associated with education and many citizens of the state are aware that great needs exist within the university system. But the booklet puts the problem in undeniable black and white.

FSU is requesting $35 million for operation and $29 million for building during the 1963-65 biennium. The time is now for these needs to be met.

"The Time is Now" quotes a leading economist as estimating that education pays a 12 percent dividend on funds invested. It pays dividends "in developing talent, discovering knowledge, and solving state problems," states the booklet.

To pay dividends, education must meet the needs of an expanding population. During the 1959-60 period, 37,296 students graduated from high school as the state moved into the ninth position in population in the country. In the years of 1964-65, 60,333 student are expected to complete secondary education, while 85,-468 students will leave high school in 1969-70 and a total of 150,618 students are expected in 1974-75. FSU must build for the future if it is to meet the expanding demands for a deluge of high school graduates seeking higher education.

To satisfy the requirements of academic excellence have a top flight faculty, a better library, a science center, a balanced growth in every academic area, more dormitories, and ad adequate staff. Additional operating funds and building monies are needed to fulfil these.

The library, in particular, is in a dire situation. FSU ranks sixteenth among 17 Southeastern university libraries in book stock and thirteenth in expenditures. The FSU library staff is adequte for 7,000 students--but FSU now has an enrollment of 10,391. Space standards recommend one chair in the library for every four students. FSU now has only one chair for every nine students.

"More and more students are expected but only a few more professors" the booklet loudly proclaims. Since 1957, student enrollment has increased 38 per cent (2,662 students) while the faculty has only been expended by 12 per cent (66 professors).

The total of $35,069,000 requested for operating expenses can be broken down into six areas: $23,992,000 to keep current programs at present levels; $1,907,-000 in additional costs of Trimester operations; $2,385,000 for normal growth and increasing enrollment; $4,392,000 for improvements to meet accepted standards; $1,520,000 for faculty salary increases; and $873,000 for other salary increases.

The building request is more complex. FSU is requesting:

Chemistry Research Unit	$2,750,000
Library Addition	$1,490,000
Social Science	$2,500,000
Air Conditioning	$2,000,000
*Women's Dormitory	$921,000
Land Acquisition	$550,000
Child Research Laboratory	$300,000
Oceanographic Institute	$200,000
Physics Instructional Unit	$2,500,000
Chemistry Instructional Unit	$2,500,000
Fine Arts	$2,450,000
Men's Dormitory	$467,000
Engineering Science	$1,300,000
Biological Sciences	$2,300,000
Accelerator Addition	$1,100,000
Home Management Houses	$225,000
Science Library	$1,375,000
Institute of Space Biosciences	$1,100,000
Maintenance Shops	$1,000,000
Campus Improvement and Renovation of Buildings	$1,832,000
TOTAL	$28,860,000

The population increase and the personal income in Florida indicates that the state can afford to spend money on ekucation. Since 1957, personal income has increased from 100 percent to almost 160 percent, almost twice as much as the growth of the United States in general.

As the booklet says: "Florida's economic gains are impressive. To maintain this growth Florida can afford to invest more funds in higher education. Because of her economic potential, because of the overwhelming number of young people, because of the direct relationship between investment in higher education and economic and cultural advance, Florida must increase her support of higher education."

The time is now for such an increase.

Asian Scholar Visits FSU

India Key To Democracy In Asia

By MYGNON CHAMPION

Although the outlook for the future of Democracy in South and Southeast Asia appears bleak, its prospects in Malaya, the Philippines, and to a lesser extent in India seem brighter.

This evaluation of the present situation in South and Southeast Asia was provided by Dr. Kenneth C. Tregonning, head of the Department of History at the University of Singapre, during his visit to the University last weekend.

Tregonning was the house guest of Dr. Robert C. Bone, assistant professor of Government. FSU was one of his stops on a three-month tour of the U.S. on a Carnegie grant to study American universities for the Center of Southeast Asian Studies which is being established at the University of Singapore.

The Australian-born Tregonning was optimistic about the survival of Democracy in Malaya because of its democratic heritage on the village level, the willingness to compromise in Malayan character, and because the present of two races there makes getting along together "a sheer necessity."

His optimism regarding Democracy in the Philippines is based upon its 50-year experience of American indoctrination, a common language and its ties with the West through Catholicism.

The outlook for India is one of "guarded optimism." Although it is regarded as the leader of Asian Democracies and is still "the torch for the rest of Southeast Asia," Tregonning fears "the forces of division may be stronger than those holding it together."

Tregonning said the caste system and the lack of a common language familiar to the masses are forces making unity and Democracy difficult for India. However, he noted, "Should Democracy fail in India, it shall fail in Asia."

In general, Tregonning said, those nations whose colonial experience was under British rule arrived at independence better prepared for Democracy than has been the case with former Dutch or French colonies.

Tregonning left Tallahassee Sunday afternoon to continue his tour of the U.S. He will visit Duke, Yale, Harvard, New York, Cornell, and Chicago universities

Debate Team Rebutts Steel

To the Editor:

I should like to comment upon the column by Mr. Paul Steele in the March 4 issue of the Flambeau.

My primary objection is to the first paragraph of Mr. Steel's article. As a member of this University's debate team, I feel constrained to challenge the author's belief that "a debate proves nothing and that FSU's debate team shows this."

I should like to point out to the author that a person who engages in a debate, if he has an open mind, which most education persons hopefully do have, will see not only the side that he is presenting but his opponent's side as well. Under normal conditions and in standard debates, both sides present large amounts of evidence and lucid statements of the opposing viewpoint.

What I have said applies, as I have said before, to those with an open mind; naturally, Fulton Lewis III does not fit into this category. In this instance, I agree with Mr. Steel; I simply desire to correct the erroneous belief which Mr. Steel seems to possess as to what a debate is.

The FSU debate team has won its last three tournaments and is, I believe, well qualified to show real debate. If Mr. Steel has a free Tuesday around 7:00, I cordially invite him to come to 206 in the History Building and see what a real debate is like. The FSU debate team and I will be most happy to meet with him and show him what I am talking about.

Circus Performance Praised

The only inside knowledge I have of life under a circus big-top is that if someone hollers "Hey Rube!" it means one of three things: a) There's a fight somewhere, b) a lion is loose, or c) Porifero Rubirosa is in the audience. Therefore I am no more qualified to write a full fledged critique on the FSU Circus than Sonny Liston is to review the Minneapolis Symphony. I would, however, like to mention a few people who impressed me as deserving a little praise when I saw the show for the second time Wednesday night.

First and foremost would be the undauntable Adrian Catarzi. Although he appears in various capacities throughout the evening, it's at the very last during the terrific aerial routines that he shines -- or should I say explodes. He is flashy, talented, and he knows it. Whereas this could be a pretty sickening combination in some performers, Catarzi has enough showmanship, glamour and honest pride to not only win the audience, but to hold it in his hand. When he successfully completes a stunt and flicks his hand as if to say "how about that?" the honest excitement in his face is enough to jerk a cheer out of anyone.

Next comes Catarzi's partner in practically every crime, Iran Williams. Whether he is sailing through the air in green and orange striped underwear, spinning a red jump rope, or using his bull-like strength to catch an orbiting Catarzi, one gets the impression that A... is a foundation stone for the ent... production.

Another pricele... is blonde barbar... iates patience ... does, whether it be picking ... feather with her teeth while ... ancing on a trapeze, or doing s... intricate trick on the u... couldn't help noticing her ... she balanced -- ... little ballet of their own.

And last but not least comes D... Brown. David is part of a two-... act that circles the three ring st... and the night I w... having a bad time of it. After thr... or four close calls, where he sa... himself from falling with the assi... tance of handy guy lines and t... poles, he went crashing from ... 20 foot perch into a row of met... chairs. Struggling ... erect position, he doggedly went ... to complete his journey, winning ... tremendous ovation from ... audience. It may see... to find virtue in mishap, but w... Brown lacked in ... stilts, he made up for in outra... guts, and it is to the audience's ... credit that they did not let this ... unrewarded.

Thank God for the circus. Than... God for anything that contribute... to that special tang of ambition t... sets this school apart. There on... was a time when we would ha... thanked God for Gymnastics.

Dr. Chalmers Studies Trimester System

By LINDA SAVIDGE
Flambeau Staff Writer

. E. Lawrence Chalmers, asso- e dean of faculties, is "pleased the adaptation students have wn" to the trimester system. a recent study he conducted, in h he compared this fall trimes- with the previous fall semester, eral points became evident.

e out of every eight student took ewer three-hour course under rimester system. However, the reasing laod may or may not be rt of a continued decrease which een apparent for several years. -out rates are up by 50 stu- , but a majority of these could ly be accounted for by other rs such as marriage, health suspension, none of which are tly tied to the trimester sys-

In the area of health, a predicted cyclical epidemic hit the campus under the trimester which was not matched the previous year, causing many people to fall behind and drop out. In the area of suspensions, an increasingly efficient law-enforcement agency on campus has prosecuted a number of petty crimes which would previously gone unsolved.

There was a significant improvement in grades which also attributed to chance. The three groups responsible for this increase were the freshman women, the sophomore and the junior men, all of whom showed a higher grade average than their forerunners.

Increased selectivity in choosing students is a factor here, too. Ten years ago, the Admissions Office was dealing with the top three-fourths of the high school class; they are now demanding the top fourth.

The turmoil over the changes coming from both the students and the faculty. Students are complaining about the reduction in leisure time. Dr. Chalmers answers that "in many outstanding academic institutions, the leisure time is probably no greater and perhaps less than at FSU, even under the trimester system."

He grants, however, that graduate students have a valid concern in their decreased time to conduct research and extensive reading.

The faculty also has a valid concern at this time. An inadequte salary adjustment was made with the trimester system. Also, contractual arrangements give them an enforced unemployment of two months.

Finally, part of a trend begun in 1968 has given the faculty members more students and heavier loads. These are not a function of the trimester per se, in that they are remediable within the system. Continued studies and efforts are being made to remedy these situations.

Dr. Chalmers, a Princeton graduate, believes that the trimester system will contribute to make FSU an "outstanding academic institution."

Students' realistic acceptance of the system under which they are now working and their voluntary adjustments of student activities will make the future of the university and that of the students much brighter.

This article is the first in a series which will encompass campus opinion with as broad a scope as is possible on the trimester system.

Shaara Gives English Talk

By ELLEN DEIGNAN
Flambeau Staff Writer

Man does not learn to write critically from reading famous critical works, Michael Shaara said at the English Coffee Hour Friday.

Shaara critized many critical writing courses which use abstract analysis rather than practicing creativity.

Shaara also stressed that "a bare minimum of words should be used," and that no "titles or text should be forced upon the beginning writer." "A particular technique," Shaara said, "isn't important." A writer must "mainly express himself completely to communicate."

In practicing his work, a young novelist must have an audience to comment on his work and to give their opinions, Shaara declared. "It is very difficult to judge the value of writing because it is so unlike the sciences."

"How can one judge," Shaara asked "how the world would be today if 'War and Peace' had not been written?"

"A storyteller must contain in himself every type of individual that we see and associate with throughout our lives." This will attract the attention of all the readers. For children there must be excitement, for th optomist a happy ending, for the pessimist a downfall, and so forth for the practial, the literate, and the intellectual.

Shaara maintained that many schools of thought believe that if the writer pleases the intellectual, he pleases all. Shaara asserted tat this is "absurd," and every piece of literature should be written for the general population rather than limited to a certain group.

A writer includes many phases of specialisation, unlike the usual person. If there is a crime or accident included in the story, the author must study the traits of policemen and physicians in all phases while would need exactness in his work. The same is true of a priest, philosopher, psychologist, psychiatrist, or any other type of person depicted in the writer's work.

Shaara said his philosophy of creative writing is "to promote the feeling of humanity."

TV Carries Venus-Fly-By

People in the Tallahassee area will have an opportunity at 10 p.m. today to view an hour-long press conference concerning the scientific results of the recent Venus fly-by.

The program will be broadcast by WFSU-TV (channel 11).

Duane A. Franceschi, program director of FSU's educational television station said the program Monday night was videotaped by National Educational Television at headquarters of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The Mariner II spacecraft flew on Dec. 17 by Venus at a distance of approximately 21,000 miles and its instruments recorded information which a team of scientists now has analyzed.

WASHINGTON--Republican Senator Everett Dirksen says he shares President Kennedy's belief that a full blockade of Cuba would be considered an act of war. But in a radio-tv interview (on ABC-issues and answers), he declared there could be a selective blockade to halt Soviet oil shipments to Fidel Castro's regime. Such a blockade, he said, would be the end of Castro, and he'e in favor if it could be done without causing a war. Former Vice President Nixon recently had advocated a selective blackade to deny oil to Cuba.

DAMASCUS, SYRIA--Demonstrators surged through the streets of Damascus todya shouting for reunion of Syria and Egypt. Pro-Nasser military men engineered both last Friday's Syrian coup and last month's Iraqi revolution. But the new regime in neither country is believed in favor of the kind of tight union Egypt and Syria had before an anti-Nasser uprising broke the link in 1961.

WASHINGTON--Senator Allen Ellender has acknowledged that Negroes are denied voting rights in some parts of Louisiana and Mississippi. But the Louisiana Democrat said this is because whites, as he put it, "are just scared to death" of political domination by Negroes. He made the comment during an appearance on a taped television interview (CBS-Washington Report) in Washington when he was asked if he knows of any Americans who are denied the right to vote because of race, creed or color.

Ellender answered: "I don't. I don't know of any--except in some areas of Mississippi and a few areas in Louisiana where the Negroes outnumber the whites by about two to one." He added--"The white people are just scared to death by all the negroes in those areas where the Negroes are in the majority. If they get the vote, why they'll have all the offices, they'll hold all the offices in those counties, of course."

WEST GERMANY--Authorities in West Germany have discovered the Bavarian hideout of Georges Bidault, political leader of the French Secret Army Underground. President de Gaulle's arch-foe promptly asked for political asylum. He also asked for--and was granted--police protected. It is expected, however, that Bidault will be deported--probably to Switzerland or Austria.

WASHINGTON--The Defense Department says it will not reverse its award of the controversial T-F-X airplane contract despite criticism from some members of a Congressional Committee. Deputy Secretary of Defense says in Washington the judgment of the Department in awarding the design contract to General Dynamics will be borne out when all the facts are known.

"Red Star Over Cuba"

Weyl Lectures Young Republican

By HOWARD DENSON.

The fall of Cuba into Communist hands was the result of three episodes by the United States, said Nathaniel Weyl, author of "Red Star Over Cuba," Wednesday night before the Young Republicans.

Besides lacking courage, proper analysis, and perseverance in its decisions, the United States made its first mistake when it chose to recognize Fidel Castro at all, Weyl asserted.

This was done when the country imposed an arms embargo, which gave moral equality to both the Rebels and Batista. This act sent many officers and men of the regular Cuban army into the camp of Castro.

Without the United States' recognition, the Rebels probably wouldn't have been able to last, Weyl said; for at the time of the embargo, Castro said he had a total effective force of only 300 men.

Furthermore, he said it was illogical for the United States to play up the Rebels, because Cuba was ranking high in national wealth at that time. "During the last year of Batista's regime, the national economy advanced eight percent," he emphasized.

The US made another mistake when it chose to support Castro, because it was a known fact that Castro was not a believer in democracy, a liberal, or a man of progress, he said. Nonetheless, the Cuban was represented as a man of progress turned to communism because the US had given him a cold shoulder.

Weyl disputed this image by pointing out that as a teenager Castro's idol was Adolf Hitler.

The United States committed its second major mistake when the Bay of Pigs invasion failed.

In 1952, President Eisenhower had approved a move to invade Guatamala with "rebel" forces, but asked, "Are you sure this will succeed... it must succeed; it will be the people of Guatamala succeeding, but if it fails, it will drag the flag of the United States in the mud."

President Kennedy lacked this awareness, Weyl said, and the President allowed a plan to be constructed so tightly that a single mistake would scuttle the invasion.

Furthermore, at the last moment, the promised aid cover was withdrawn. The counter-revolutionary troops, which were outnumbered 50 to one, could not hope to survive without aire cover -- especially since they had to dig-in in swamps.

He discounted reports that the Cuban people were not willing to help the invaders, since several counter-revolutionaries had told him that the peasants' aid had to be refused since they had no ammunition.

Pointing out the determination of the small band, he quoted Castro, "If I had troops like you, I could take South America."

The United States' third major mistake was the missile crisis in October, he said. It indicated two things: Khruschev had a low opinion of American morale and if he took such enormous risks to put medium range missiles into Cuba, he had few long range missiles.

Weyl said the Cuban underground reports there are still missiles in underground caves.

Cuba is a threat to all Latin America, he continued, and exposes communism to the rest of the continent through the Cuban International Brigade, which teaches the subversive tactics of revolutionaries.

Two other danger spots in Latin America are Columbia and Haiti. Columbia Weyl declared is a depressed area with many bandits who are being trained in Communist doctrine and tactics, while Haiti's corrupt ruler recently installed two Communists into his cabinet.

"There will appear to be a [illegible] of the Haitian people," Weyl [illegible].

Weyl suggested the United [illegible] do two things: Impose an economic embargo to be turned into [illegible] until Soviet troops and weapons withdrawn from Cuba under [illegible] States inspection, and help the countries in Latin America that are interested in seeking order and going down the US's path.

Dr. K. Tregonning Criticizes US's Southeast Asia Policy

By MYGNON CHAMPION

US foreign policy in Southeast Asia received sharp criticism from Kenneth C. Tregonning, guest lecturer for the Government and History Depts., in the Library Lecture Hall Friday afternoon.

The Australian-born Tregonning is head of the History Dept. at the University of Singapore.

Although he saw favorable changes by the Kennedy administration, Tregonning condemned the past US policy of providing "none or little aid for neutral nations in Southeast Asia.

In following a policy of non-alignment, he said, these nations were being true to themselves and to their won ideals. The US, in criticizing the neutrality, was forgetting its own history.

Tregonning said that the US, because of its own colonial experience and its historical policy of isolationism, should be "uniquely capable of understanding" the position of non-alignment.

He described the Southeast Asian Treaty Organization (SEATO) as a failure because it has received little indigenous support, [illegible] effect, and has accomplished nothing which couldn't have been done other methods such as bilateral treaties.

He said that another reason for SEATO's failure was the lack of fear of overt military aggression from Red China by the [illegible] leaders. Although he said these leaders feared Communist subversion, they do not fear invasion even today following events along the Sino-Indian border.

In spite of the fact that the real danger lies with infiltration, he added, military aid has been of little use in deterring Communist agents and ideas.

Southeast Asian neutralism grows in large part out of the link between anti-colonialism and Asian nationalism, he said, and "Nationalism is the strongest barrier to Communism in Southeast Asia."

FSU Hosts Area Biologists

High school biology teachers in the North Florida area will meet at FSU today for a discussion of the new Biological Sciences Curriculum Study course in biology.

Florida is well ahead of other states in teaching the course, according to Dr. Ernest Burkman, assistant professor science education at FSU, who is in charge of the meeting. About 135 Florida teachers teach the course to 10,000 students. National about 1000 teachers teach the BSCS course.

North Florida teachers who are teaching the BSCS course, along with other biology teachers, school principals and superintendents and university faculty members, about 100 in all, are expected for the meeting in the School of Education Lecture Hall.

. . .Golf Course

by a faculty-staff-student committee.

FSU officials said all direct operating costs except course maintenance and a director's salary will come from green fees and course memberships. University employees will maintain the grounds -- the policy with other athletic and recreational facilities of the University.

A member of the faculty will be named to serve as course director in addition to his teaching and coaching responsibilities.

FSU's Department of Physical Education this trimester is teaching eight classes in golf. In the first trimester, there were 10 golf classes involving instruction for some 250 students. With adequate facilities, FSU expects many more students to take golf instruction.

As FSU's enrollment rises, the course is expected to become an even more important recreational resource. Many students have been traveling to nearby Florida and Georgia cities to play golf because they cannot afford green fees at Tallahassee's private Capital City Country Club. Travel to these courses will become more difficult under the University's long range plan for increasing restriction on student ownership of automobiles.

Peterson Praises Scrimmage

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Sport Editor

Halfbacks Fred Biletnikoff and Dave Snyder scored two touchdowns apiece Saturday afternoon in Doak S. Campbell Stadium as the offensive White team of the Florida State Seminoles tallied four TDs in a game-like scrimmage.

The defensive Garnet squad rounded out the afternoon with two touch downs -- one by fullback John Roberts and the other by halfback Phil Spooner.

Biletnikoff was involved in a 50-yard pass play with quarterback Steve Tensi to score his first touch down, while he snagged a 35-yard aerial from Tensi to score the second TD. Lefthalf Snyder took a handoff from Tensi and cut across to right tackle to score the first time, and charged up the middle for the second.

Snyder's second effort was set up by a 35-yard pass to junior Winfred Bailey.

The defensive Garnet crew was contained by the offensive team until Roberts intercepted a pass and ran 50 yards for paydirt midway in the practice, while halfback Phil Spooner capped a series of short runs by scoring from the three.

Outstanding defensive plays were put in by sophomore Frank Pennie, a redshirt last year, and guard Dick Hermann of Marianna. Pennie, a 6-4, 229-pounder, played during most of the practice on both offense and defense, taking the place of the injured Jerry Bruner.

Head Coach Bill Peterson said, "The boys showed a lot of determination and effort. Although they were a bit slow getting started, I thought they looked good toward the end. And considering this is only the eighth day of spring practice, I'd say they were progressing the way we wanted them to."

He singled out center Bill Daly, Snyder, Tensi, and end Red Dawson as some of the outstanding players of the afternoon, saying the game films no doubt would reveal others.

He said the defensive team was handling itself well, except that it was not yet sharp enough on pass defense.

Three gridders sustained knee injuries during the scrimmage. They were sophomore Dick Hesselbart, a tackle from Genoa, Ohio; quarterback Ed Pritchett, a sophomore from Decatur, Ga.; and sophomore end Terry Garvin, a former Pensacola High star.

"We can't tell the extent of Hesselbart's and Garvin's injuries at this time," Peterson said, "they're still being inspected, but Pritchett, who hurt and old injury, is slated to have an operation as soon as spring practice is over with."

Long, Rogers Named To All-State Squad

Charlie Long, FSU's hot-shooting graduating senior, was named to the Florida Times Union's All-State college basketball team this weekend.

Other first-team members selected are Rick Barry of Miami, Roger Strickland of Jacksonville, Tom Baxley of Florida, and George Shary of Tampa.

Junior Pete Rogers of Florida State was among those named to the second team along with Mike McCord of Miami, Brooks Henderson of Florida, Ralph Tiner of Jacksonville and Lamar Deaver of Stetson.

Sophomore Jerry Shirley of FSU was among others polling votes.

* * * * *

Three regulars on Florida State's surprising 1962-63 basketball team --only one of them a graduating senior -finished the campaign hitting better than 50 per cent of their field goal attempts, final FSU statistics show.

Even with that, however, the Seminoles were a bit off last year's accuracy pace, when they led the nation with a 51.2 percentage. This year FSU as a team connected on 46.7 per cent from outside--still above par.

The three hitting better than half their shots were senior forward Charlie Long of Louisville, Ky. (51.1), soph center Jerry Shirley of Mobile, Ala. (50.2) and junior center-forward Dale Reeves of Louisville (53.8).

Leading scorer for the Seminoles, who finished with a 15-10 record, was Long--only senior on the team. Long started slowly, but averaged better than 20 points per game over the last 12 games for a final 16.5 scoring average.

Others in double figures were Shirley (11.2) and junior guard Pete Rogers of Daytona Beach (10.8).

Top rebounder was Shirley with a 7.9 average. Behind him were soph forward Cal Huge of Madison, Wis. (5.1) and Long (5.1).

An interesting team statistic showed FSU with a large margin over its opponents in field goals made (707 to 599), but the Seminoles only scored 64 more points than its 25 foes. This, of course, was due to a poor FSU performance at the free throw line.

FSU hit a weak 63.8 of its free throws while opponents were doing 71.7. FSU was out-scored at the charity line, 482 to 330.

The Seminoles had a surprising season when one considers it was supposed to be a rebuilding year. They finished 5-5 against Southeastern Conference teams.

Hurricanes Upend Tribe Tracksters In Scoring Mess

Playing its first dual meet of the year, the Florida State track team fell in a confusing and close battle with the University of Miami tracksters Saturday in Miami, as a scoring error revealed UM had won 70 1/2-69.

A previous tally of the score cards reported FSU winning by a 70 1/2-68 score, but Miami Coach Bob Downes sighted an error while transcribing the results. Florida State had been credited with three points in the board jump -- three points that should have gone to the Hurricanes.

FSU athletes whom Downes contacted said they were satisfied with the three-points going to UM.

Three Tribesmen won two events apiece. They were Al Williams, who captured the shot put and discus laurels; Al Cato, who won the 100 and 220 yard dashes; and Bill Giswold, who copped the high jump and hop-step-and-jump titles.

Williams set a school record in the shot put while competing in the Jaycee Indoor Carnival last week, while Giswold, performed for the first time as a trackster at FSU. A graduating senior, he played on the basketball team.

BOC Should Approv Invitation Of A & M

Two state newspapers have been crying aloud c cerning the state track situation. It seems that tw the state track powers, Florida State and the Univer of Florida, fight it out every year, but a third power perhaps stronger than the first two put together never gets a chance to test its strength.

This, of course, refers to nobody inviting Flor A & M and its host of track stars to a state invitati meet... despite the presence of nationally-known re smasher Robert Hayes.

Last year, the Florida Flambeau advocated invi A & M to FSU's own Florida Invitational track m and this paper would do so this year -- except the tr schedule reveals that no such tournament is sched this trimester.

Last year, and probably soon this year, UF's stu paper advocated the same thing. This year, the Tam Tribune and the Jacksonville Journal have hopped the bandwagon.

The G-ville-favored Journal's advocated inviting A to Gainesville's Florida Relays, while the Tribe partial to a third course. The Tampa paper willing to underwrite , for $10,000, a tournam featuring the Seminoles, the Gators, and the Rattl

Needless to say, A & M needs to compete against other two schools -- whether at FSU, UF or Tam And these schools need A & M's competition to li up what could become a record-breaking affair.

Last year, several arguments against the invitat were used. They went something like: "FSU and UF segregated... we've got to keep it that way... it'll st race riots with the rednecks from downtown and campus."

These arguments, to quote Henry Ford, are "bunk

Furthermore, when the Flambeau circulated petiti last year, it was signed by rednecks, radicals, reactionaries... all those who want to see sports co petition of a high calibre.

...ued study will be conducted objectively ...nter-university level, because "any ...re in higher education as radical as ... several serious concern."

Statistics compiled by Murray Kenna, registrar, are an important part of analyses being conducted on the trimester system.

Comparing the first trimester with the first semester of the 1961-1962 school year the Registrar's Office reports that there was a slight drop in the number of successfully completed hours under the trimester system, 13.78 as compared with 14.03 the previous year.

During the first trimester, students dropped 1,724 more hours than did their forerunners during the fall semester.

Yet second trimester students took on approximately the same course loads which they had carried during the first trimester.

The Lower Division of the undergraduate school actually increased slightly, from 14.61 to 14.64 hours. The Upper Division, composed of students who had been more accustomed to the semester system, dropped their course loads very lightly, going from 14.89 to 14.49.

Graduate students with extensive outside reading dropped from 9.37 to 9.07 hours, still not a great decrease.

The excessive course dropping during the trimester is evidence of the difficulty with which many students made the transition, as is the slight decrease in the number of successfully completed hours.

Statistics do not, however, fully support student accusations that the trimester demands they radically decrease the number of courses which they undertake.

The problem which the students are experiencing in adjusting their time and the problem of the faculty's attempts to cover the material thoroughly in spite of the reduction in time are very real problems brought on by the change, Dr. Lewis, dean of the Graduate school, declared.

However, the human resistance to change makes the transition more difficult than the actuality, according to Dr. Lewis.

Dr. Lewis has said, nevertheless, that he has felt a need to allow more Incompletes in the new trimester than under the old system. Perhaps feelings such as his account for the drop in Unsatisfactories from 3975 in the fall semester to 3874 in the first fall trimester.

FSU Termed 'Key Center' In Teaching And Research

"I feel that FSU is one of the key centers in the essential whole higher education system and is more extensively and effectively involved in graduate teaching and research."

So said Dr. Ralph W. McDonald, director of the Space Age study, in an interview yesterday before state officials and educators, emphasizing the role which he feels FSU can and should play in future scientific research.

McDonald pointed out that FSU has made more progress recently in research than the typical university in this country, and that several FSU faculty members are presently engaged in important research.

"Research of great significance can be carried forward in Florida," McDonald said. "With its opportunity, Florida needs to go out and work very assiduously in finding engineers who can help build rapidly this system of higher education, particularly in research and graduate study."

McDonald pointed out that the University of Florida also had an effective science study center, but only in limited areas. Because of FSU's strong foundation science, as shown in mathematics and in biological sciences, plus progress in nuclear

For Foreign Students

International Program Set

A full program of events have been planned for the latter part of this week in celebration of International Week, it was announced today by Sharon Worsham.

Miss Worsham was spokesman for a Senate committee, whose other original members are Arnie Gibbs, Bill Branch and Krishna Menon.

Purpose of International Week is to create international understanding, to set forth an appreciation of the world's cultures, and to strengthen personal relationships of individuals and groups.

Thursday, International students will be guests for dinner at the scholarship houses, sororites and fraternities on campus. At 7:30 p.m. in the Florida High Auditorium, American students and International students attending FSU will present an International Talent Show, with entertainment native to their various cultures being presented. The show will be free and open to the public.

An International Fair to be held Saturday from 2 to 5 p.m. in the circus tent will highlight the week's events. At the fair, each country will have a booth on display. International students in colorful native dress will man the booths, which will feature posters, jewelry, eating war, and other cultural and artistic materials that the students have brought from their native countries, or have borrowed from the Tallahassee Junior Museum. Refreshments of the countries will be served.

Also beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday, the FSU International students soccer team will clash with the soccer team of the University of Florida International students, at Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

"China Night" will be held in Longmire Lounge at 7:30 p.m. Saturday. Sponsored by the Chinese Student Club, the program will include door prizes, exhibitions of Chinese articles, photographs taken in Chinese costumes, exhibition of chopsticks techniques, an art course in paper-folding, abacus contests and films of China.

Concert Slated By Collegians

The Collegians, men's glee club directed by Dr. Ramon E. Meyer, will present a program tonight at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

The program will open with a series of sacred numbers and include an original composition for male voices by Richard Powell, arranger for the collegians.

Rose Wildes will be the soloist for the feature number, "Rhapsody for Contralto" solo and men's chorus by Johann Brahms. Along with other numbers she will sing an aria from the opera "Sampson and Delilah" by Saint-Saens and two German lieder by Shubert. Miss Wildes is a sophomore student of voice studying with Miss Betty Jane Grimm, faculty member of the FSU School of Music.

After a brief intermission the group will sing "Vocalise," composition by Powell, under the direction of the composer. Accompanist will be Harold Gray, a freshman student from the studio of Edward Kilenyi.

The program is free and open to the public.

FILING DEADLINE

Deadline for filing is at 5 p.m. today for Class and Court elections. No declarations of candidacy will be accepted after that time.

CORRECTION

Tickets to the Limeliters show for high school students will be $2 instead of $1 as reported in yesterday's paper.

Extra Flambeaus

Extra copies of last Friday's special circus issue of the Flambeau may be obtained in the Student Activities room.

LEGEND

The Legend will be distributed behind Westcott and in front of the Student Center Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Minneapolis Symphony Review

Concerts Lack Polish, Youth Blamed

By Chris Clark
Flambeau Staff Writer

Skrowaczewski, anyone can say that.

Actually it is pronounced approximately Skrov a chev ski, with the accent of the next to the last syllable. This "conductor with the long name" led the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra through two concerts last week in Westcott Auditorium.

Attendance could have been better. This could have been because the circus was also playing on those two nights. Certainly the audiences that filled three-quarters of the auditorium were treated to fine, but not outstanding performances.

The conductor is a young man of 39 who first came to this country at the invitation of Cleveland's George Szell in 1958. As might be guessed from the program, Schumann is one of his favorites; he led the Fourth Symphony of that composer on the first night and the First Symphony the next evening. Along with Mozart's "Prague" Symphony No. 38 and Stravinski's "Petrouchka" ballet music, these were the main works of the concerts.

Also on the program for the first night was Webern's "Variations for Orchestra." This fairly contemporary piece (Webern died in 1945) is not often performed and with good reason. It is dissonant and noisy. The main idea seems to be a game where the conductor stabs his baton at a player who then gives his death groan with his instrument.

However, we find complete forgiveness for the sin of Webern in the "Schumann Symphony No. 4." The work itself was well balanced and the orchestra gave it a beautiful treatment. In this work, as well as with the Mozart piece of the same evening, Skrowaczewski's work with the string section, which had been neglected under previous conductor Dorati, is evident. A tone that is clear and rich and responds fully to the leader's wishes is achieved.

Unfortunately this does not also hold true for all sections of the orchestra. Maestro Skrowaczewski's brass could stand a little polish. They seemed a bit lost in relation to the rest of the group. In conversations with this writer, the conductor blamed this lack on the fact that the cyclorama and overhead curtains of the auditorium absorbed "at least a third" of the sound. If this is true, it should be looked into.

The least well-read work of the two nights was the brief "Air on the G String" by Bach, given as an encore the first evening. The conductor played as if he had forgotten the work was composed in 1723 and placed it a century later. It would have been better listed in the program as "Variations on a Theme by Bach" by Skrowaczewski.

The treatment of the "Schumann Symphony No. 1" Thursday night showed the same mature judgement and control given the "Symphony No. 4." While this work is a little more subtly and delicately wrought than the Fourth, it is nonetheless worthy of being given much more often than it is.

The main work of the second evening, ballet music from Stravinski's "Petrouchka," showed the greatest originality on the part of the conductor while staying within the bounds of what he feel's are the composer's wishes. One of the most delightfully written of all Stravinski, it was perhaps the more difficult to perform of all the longer works given. But, then again, it was proportionately rewarding. Solos by the violinist, first flutist, and first trumpet, were all well done and received deserved applause.

Thirty-nine is pretty young as conductors go. Whatever else one may think of Skrowaczewski, and there are varied opinions, he has some fine musical ideas and bears watching. We should like to know how he will sound at 50. It will be a pleasure to watch and see.

Socialist State - Agent Of People

According to Jan Drewnowski, (Journal of Political Economy, vol. LXIX, Aug. 1961, No. 4,) any national economy has two sets of effective preference functions -- i.e. two sets of norms by which decisions will be made. One set is that of the individual preference functions, and the other that of the State preference functions. Individual preference functions are expressed by the actions of the population in the Market, while those of the state are manifested by economic planning.

Those two functions are in existence in both capitalist and socialist economies. The older forms of capitalism once operated under the notions that the entire national economy should be determined exclusively by individual preferences -- those of the State being held at a minimum. The contemporary capitalist state, however, has a much larger role in the economy as far as planning goes, than has previously been true.

The capitalist state now attempts to influence the economy in behalf of the population, which lives remote from the actual planning of the few controling capitalists, by such devices as the Sherman Act, or actions like President Kennedy's refusal to allow the steel industry to raise its prices, etc. This is a case of the State preference functions assuming priority over those of some individuals-- the difference between contemporary capitalism and socialism in this respect is one of degree.

In both systems the people attempt to enforce their will by political actions that will determine the preference functions of the State. A true democracy would be one in which the State's preferences were equal to those of he people. It is a simple fact that the recognition of the existence of dual preference systems is the basic proposition of a socialist state, and consequently socialism, by explicitly acknowledging this dual responsibility, is the vehicle for the expression of democracy.

Socialism attempts to plan an economy in accordance with human needs and desires. Existing socialist economies are far from perfect, but they offer more potential for true democratic control of the state economic and political functions than do existing capitalist regimes. Economists are attempting to show that both capitalism and socialism are special cases of one general economic law, or theory -- one which bases itself upon the state preference function. Should this be done, then perhaps, capitalism would be at last revealed as an archaic economic anomaly surviving out of the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries, but out of place in contemporary times.

But whether this is theoretically valid or not is not the main issue. The issue involves the entire capitalist concept of what the "State" consists of. Historically the "state" in capitalist nations has been the agent of the people, and it uses its vast powers not for the benefit of a ruling minority, but for the social and economic betterment of all the peoples comprising the population. Perhaps these generalizations are a bit too all encompassing, but nevertheless, they are useful in indicating the broad general tendencies of the socialist movement.

Paradox Of Conservatism

By RICHARD PASTO

Self-appointed conservatives continue to expound, with usually questionable background information, on the relative merits of their political philosophy versus all other philosophies, where in order to make the controversy black and white for the conservatives they have labeled all other viewpoints "liberalism." It can be seen that they way conservatives define their cause, it will naturally seem logical to THEM. They do not consider political movements, ideas, etc. on any sound basis as to whether they may or may not be meritorious, but rather grossly criticize them if the criticism seems to suit the viewpoints of conservatism.

The result is, among other things, loopholes in the conservatives' arguments and lack of constructive criticism. For example, if the United States has had inept leadership for so many years against the rise of communism, how do the conservatives explain programs such as the Marshall Plan, Peace Corps, NATO, and the Alliance for Progress (which has to be given time to prove itself)? If these were not created primarily to meet the challenge of communism and to help other nations, what has been the reason for their existence?

The current President may not be perhaps one of the most adept leaders our country has produced, but how can an argument that he and his "liberal" policy "have failed" to have any meaning? Failed in not doing what? What have the Cuban quarantine, the continued presence of our troops in Berlin, and our nuclear deterrent meant for these conservatives? I don't think these are mere children's actions just to be sporty. Let two points remain clear: the President (and his staff) have access to far more information than most of us do, so I don't believe he bases his decisions on nationalistic tendencies as much as common sense. The problems faced are quite overwhelming for one man to handle, and he certainly knows more about how to handle these problems than we do. What is often referred to as "failure" is actually the result of circumstances. For example, Cuba. People holler. "Our leaders have failed to prevent the rise of communism in Cuba." But I also heard many conservatives as well as others praise Castro when he was fighting in the hills.

The conservatives want to protect the Constitution, but when decisions and interpretations may not seem to be in their favor they holler that the Constiutional principles are being broken. This is paradoxical. The Constiution was not written to please them.

Kennedy has asked for a better plan to handle communism under conditions as they really exist, and not how we would like or want them to exist. Usually people beat the drum, but will not offer constructive suggestions. Criticism is a lot easier.

Letters Attack People, Not View

Several years ago Norman Cousins called for a national "Think It Through Week." Such a week is long overdue. Time was when an opinion could be expressed or a view stated without the danger of irrational personal attack. Letters to the Editor no longer disagree with the view, they disagree with the person. If readers dislike your tastes they assume because you have an opinion different from theirs, you are prejudiced, ignorant and stupid.

Last week I said that the folly of inferring right from a Lewis-Liberal debate was demonstrated by the College Debate efforts. Mr. Hahn of the Speech Department called me into his office to judge for himself my ignorance of debate. This whole discussion was predicated on his attempt not to understand my simple point but my folly in presuming to speak of his "Sacred Cow." My membership in a national honorary speech fraternity and experience with debating teams on three different college campuses, should equip me to criticize debating. Quite aside from anti-debate arguments (which I feel could be well argued) my point was quite simple and since Mr. Hahn has refused "to lower" himself by writing to the Flambeau, I will restate my position.

A little careful reading helps for when it is said the actions of college debators proved the folly of inferring morality in a debate, all that is meant is that in debating when sides and positions are changed (will advictory is determined by technique, little is necessarily decided about the issues.

In many ways the story of the Thunderbird is one of the most unusual in the automobile business. The whole idea of the car was born at one of the great European automobile shows. The then president of our company pointed to some of the small, lush sports cars that are always a center of attention at such shows and asked his companion, "Why can't we build something like these?"

The companion, who later became a vice president of the company, said, "It just so happens I have one on the boards. I'll show it to you when we get back to Detroit." Then as fast as he could discreetly get to a transatlantic telephone he called his assistant and told him, "Remember that car we've been talking about? Finish those sketches on it."

The Thunderbird became one of the few cars ever built that was produced essentially as the original sketches presented it. Most cars undergo countless changes in the design period. But there was a natural clarity and cleanness to the Thunderbird design that immediately captured all of us at Ford.

It was probably this clean, sharp look that won so many friends so fast when the car went into production. That first Thunderbird had its drawbacks. For example, it was too soft-sprung for true sports-car handling. But, the truth is, it was not designed in the European tradition of the fast performance car. Some people called it a sports car but we never did. We called it a "personal" car; a small, fairly luxurious car that was fun to look at and fun to drive. It had its own integrity: it was one alone.

We built the Thunderbird as a bellwether car for Ford. It was our intention to test new ideas before we put them into our Fords, Fairlanes and Falcons. The new Ford ride and Swing-Away steering wheel appeared first on the Thunderbird, for instance. However, we never foresaw the extraordinary influence Thunderbird would have on the whole automobile business here and abroad. Almost everybody offers the Thunderbird bucket seats these days. And the Thunderbird look is the most decisive styling of the '60s.

The Thunderbird is a classic, made so by a peculiar blend of magic ingredients of which we would love to know the secret. We're building cars right now we hope will become classics, but the truth is, we don't make classics, we make cars. People make the car a classic. And that's the story of the Thunderbird.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

Lambda Chi's Win Award

Lambda Chi Alpha won first place in the Interfraternity Council's scholarship awards, for the IFC scholarship year, which runs from January to January, fraternity counselor Hal Smith announced today.

Sigma Phi Epsilon was awarded second place and Sigma Chi, third place. Other IFC scholarship awards went to Sigma Alpha Epsilon, winner of the Counselor's award for the fraternity showing the most improvement over the previous semester. The Ray Baker trophy for the best pledge class average was retained by Lambda Chi Alpha.

The top five fraternities in scholarship fo the fall trimester are: Lambda Chi Alpha, 2.503; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 2.354; Pi Kappa Alpha, 2.306, Kappa Sigma, 2.298, Phi Kappa Psi, 2.290. The All-Fraternity Men's Average is 2.249.

Today's News Roundup

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON--Assistant Secretary of Defense Arthur Sylvester has apologized to a Senate subcommittee in a letter. Sylvester had questioned whether the subcommittee could return a fair finding in its investigation of a T-F-X plane contract award.

Sylvester says his comments to newsmen had bben interpreted to mean the Defense Department does not believe the committee is conducting a fair hearing. He says he knows the committee has a tradition of fairness ... and he expects this to continue in the current hearing.

The T-F-X development contract went to the General Dynamics Corporation and Grumman Aircraft, which won out over the Boeing Company.

WASHINGTON--Defense Secretary McNamara says there may be several hundred missiles in Cuba caves... but he's sure they are all relatively small and of a defensive nature. His comment was made in testimony just released by the House Armed Services Committee. McNamara blasted critics who, as he put it, "Damn the intelligence community... without knowing more about it."

WASHINGTON--Republican Senator John Williams of Delaware has told the Senate that Attorney General Robert Kennedy used the Coast Guard as a "nurse maid" when he went yachting last October. The Justice Department reply is that the Senator gave a distorted version and that the Attorney General's only request of the Coast Guard was that it be able to locate him in case of a government emergency.

WASHINGTON--Secretary of State Rusk says he does not expect any nuclear test ban agreement with Russia in the near future. He told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee there is no indication of serious progress in the current negotiations at Geneva. Rusk defended U.S. concessions made to induce the Russians to agree on a treaty. And he says the Geneva talks are made more difficult by public criticism in the U.S. of the U.S. proposals.

FSU Gymnasts Taken By Dade

The Dade Junior College gymnastic team handed the Seminoles their second defeat of the season, 81 1/2-63 1/2.

FSU Coach Joe Gusic said, "The Dade team is made up of boys coached by the best in the South and early products of Florida State gymnastic teams. Don Holder, Pat Sigmarelli, Chuck Cline, Dick Gutting are now coaching the Dade team. These men and others have developed the finest and fastest growing high school gymnastic programs in the South. We had to be defeated because we have nothing to offer, unlike Michigan, Michigan State, Southern Illinois, Penn State just to mention a few."

Leading the way for FSU is Rick Miller with 30 points, placing first in floor exercise, still rings, parallel bars, tumbling, second on high bar, fourth on side horse. Mitch Weinstock 16 points second on rope climb, third in side horse, parallel bars, long horse, fourth on trampoline. Joe Greene 8 1/2 points with first on trampoline, second in tumbling. OCS Team Visits FSU

The Officer Programs Team from the US Navy Recruiting Station, Jacksonville, will make a scheduled visit to FSU today through Friday.

The team will be on campus at the Student Center Trophy Room from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

Lt. Joan Haas, USN, Wave Officer Recruiter, will be available daily in Longmire to speak to women students about programs in the Wave Officer Corps, US Navy.

Interviews and applications are encouraged from senior men and women to attend the US Navy Officer Candidate School, Newport, Rhode Island. The Officer Candidate School is a 16 week course leading to a commission as ensign, USNR. Male applicants who successfully complete this course are assigned to duties as line or supply officers in the fleet and shore establishment of the Navy from 3 years. Women applicants who complete Navy OCS are assigned to administrative duties as line, supply, or medical service corps officers within the United States for 2 years and are then eligible for foreign shore duty in the area of their choice if they so desire.

Eligibility requirements for US Navy OCS are: 1. Citizen of the US; 2. Possess a bacculaurate degree or within 30 hours of graduation and expect to graduate within 9 months; 3. Pass a standard qualifying exam (mental); 4. Pass a Navy Officer physical exam; 5. Be of good moral character and able to provide references to the fact.

eans Feel Trimester Judgement Is Premature

By LINDA SAVIDGE

ss Elizabeth Lynn, assistant dean of women, Dr. Donald ks, dean of men, and Dr. Brewer, assistant dean of , are of the opinion that it is much too early to pass judgment upon the trimester system.

uman inertia" makes change difficult, said Miss Lynn, this change is a major one.

ss Lynn has observed that a number of student who e placed on academic probation quit school rather than to improve their standing. The pressure of "keeping was so great that they could not "catch up."

great number of students miss having the weekend to t caught up," saying that the weekends are filled by of a routine nature.

, for those who made it successfully through the first rester, the December examination period cleared the ary air of exam tensions which are usually so prevalunder the semester system.

s Lynn said she feels a number of occurrences which fered with the immediate efficiency of this first trimester will not necessarily be repreated under the trimester system, and these must be separated from the em itself.

Numerous time-consuming organizational meetings at all levels of administrative and student life were held to effect the transition from the semester to the trimester.

Secondly, the coincidental change in the sorority rush system for the spring session of school thrust a new burden upon sorority members, one for which they were largely unprepared.

Finally, illness which was unusual in its force struck the campus.

Coincidences such as these prove that an entire college generation must pass through FSU before the trimester can truly be evaluated. The ever-increasing selectivity of the students, plus the advantage of the new college student who has never become accustomed to a college semester system, definitely have a bearing on the success of the system.

Miss Lynn feels that coincidental occurrences must not be confused with the trimester system. In this sentiment, both the Dean of Men and the Assistant Dean hearily concur.

Reports on disciplinary actions do show an increase this trimester, but these men stress that no one can be sure that the trimester system has anything to do with the number of disciplinary cases or with the number of drop-outs.

The single Molotov Cocktail incident, for example, involved more suspensions than any other single occurrence at FSU in recent years, yet the figures will show an increase in suspensions. The figures also will reflect the disciplinary actiontaken against a preponderance of minor offendors, which an increasingly efficient campus police force prosecuted.

Yet, can these conincidences be considered the result of the trimester system?

Most of the complaints which reach the Dean of Men's Office regarding students' lack of time are "invalid."

Given 168 hours per week, the students' usage of the time spent outside of class depends solely upon their "self-discipline" and "choice" of activities.

Students who discussed their stdying schedules in detail with Dr. Brewer were often "astonished" at the time which they wasted during a 40-hour work week.

"A sense of urgency" regarding academics has been noticed by Dean Loucks. He is pleased with the resulting voluntary abolition of the "mid-week" party. Dr. Brewer believes that the lack of Homecoming decorations at the sorority and fraternity houses may have impressed upon returning alumni the emphasis which the school is playing upon academics.

The offices of both the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women are working hard to overcome the problems involved in the change to the trimester.

Since the list of dormitory assignments does not come out until after this trimester Miss Lynn's responsibility for dorm officer selection is complicated.

Dean Loucks wonders who his office will stand up under the constant 11-month pressure of student problems. Thus, adjustments are being made at all levels.

St. Petersburg Boy's Choir Performs At FSU Thursday

Music lovers in the Tallahassee area should plan to attend the concert to be presented by the St. Petersburg Boys' Choir this Thursday.

First appearance of the 50 voice choral group will be at Opperman Hall at 3 p.m., with a concert following at 8 p.m. Thursday night in the First Presbyterian Church.

Organized in 1960 as a result of an idea conceived by Donald R. Mathis, the voices of the choir have been selected after more than 4,500 auditions were held in the public schools of the St. Pete area.

Thirty-five elementary schools and eight junior high schools are represented in the Boychoir School, which accepts boys from the fourth grade, or nine years of age, and keeps them until they reach the age at which their voices change, usually around the ninth grade.

The school is sponsored by the Music Dept. of the Pinellas County School System, but derives no support in the way of direct financial aid from the school system itself.

The school is divided into three choirs with Mathis directing Choir I, the 50 voice group which will appear here Thursday. The other two choirs are for the purposes of training the boys.

The Tallahassee Junior Chorus, under the parent chairmanship of Mrs. Percy Folsom and the First Presbyterian Youth Choirs under the leadership of Mrs. Barbara Connally Rogers will serve as overnight hosts to the boys.

The program to be presented by the group will feature a wide range of selections designed to best exhibit the talented youngsters.

Registration

Students who are in good standing with the University and do not plan to attend the summer trimester do not need to reapply to the University to be admitted in the Fall, Dr. Murray Kenna, registrar, announced today.

Kenna added that all students will be sent registration materials for the summer and that these materials may be ignored if the student is not planning on attending. During the summer all students will be sent registration materials for the fall trimester.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the student body as a whole or the administration of the Florida State University. Editorials represent the opinions of the editorial staff of the Flambeau with the initials of the writer following the editorial. Columns and letters to the Editor reflect only the opinion of the writer.

Classes Meaningless

Class officers and senators, presently manuevering for votes, can easily recognize the invalidity of class representation. It's hard enough to find members of a particular class to get them to vote, much less represent the class electorate after the election.

Class is the weakest tie on campus. Except in freshman women's dorms, which are segregated by class, gathering a group of members of any particular class is virtually impossible. To get to a member of a particular class, a candidate must scour every dorm looking for members of his class and attempt to pull class members out of each fraternity and sorority house.

The technique of rustling out class members for the election is needed at the polls. But once the posters have come down and offices won, an elected official loses all touch with his constituents.

This betrays the purpose of representative government: to represent the interests of the official's constituents.

The campus is so large and so diverse that class distinction has become meaningless. A student is more closely associated with his living area, dorm, fraternity sorority house, than he is with his class. Members of a fraternal organization are more concerned with the interests of his group than with the interests of the class.

This is not a phenomena which has been produced overnight. It is a situation which has been increasing so markedly that it is now easily recognized. Students can not be expected to be concerned with the interests of those they don't know and are not associated with. Instead, they represent the interests of their immediate group.

Students have been deceived long enough if they are under the false impression that class senators and officers are actually representing the interests of the class. Classes are meaningless, except in purely academic consideration, and is their representation.

Conservatives Are Constructive

Mr. Richard Pasto does a very neat hatchet job on conservatism in a recent column, pointing out what he considers paradoxes of this philosophy. Labels Will Fit The Ideology

Tom Brooks was right when he pointed out the haziness and confusion of political labels. However when differing concepts vie for public credence labels, unfortunately, will be inevitable by-products of this contention.

Mr. Brooks is entirely right in suggesting that all people are not liberal or conservative from A to Z, but occupy different positions in the political spectrum on various issues.

Mr. Brooks does forget though that I did not coin either the term "liberal" or "conservative." Like Topsy, they just grew, and appropriate or not they are here to stay.

My use of the word "liberal" doesn't spring from my own peculiar notion of what constitutes liberalism, but derives from a title that some people apply to themselves.

I think it can be generally agreed that most "liberals" espouse extensive welfare programs, planned deficits, varying degrees of government centralization, more reliance on federal money to fill needs once met on state and local levels, and general acceptance of Keynesian economics.

The conservative group can in general be described as being concerned with balanced budgets, paring down of welfare programs, encouragement of more local governmental responsibility, less reliance on Washington, and deep concern for the responsibility of the individual for providing for his own needs wherever possible.

The Socialist position holds that human needs are best administered to by central authority vested with the responsibility for administration and distribution of the nation's resources and production. When the profit motive is thus eliminated genuine concern with societal and individual needs take over. These are only a few general political and ideological patterns and lo and behold they do have names under which the respective groups proudly proclaim themselves.

As for the frequent criticism that columns and letters are emotionally oriented rather than intellectually grounded it might be mentioned that it is rather difficult for anyone who has taken a concrete position on anything to write impassively, devoid of any prejudice--otherwise we would all be one happy family of readers, viewers, and writers with no issues present to become emotional about.

While on this subject I think it would be worth suggesting that if columnists and letter writers would spend less time vilifying individuals and more time discussing ideas, their materials would be considerably enriched.

Letter Of Apology

Open Letter To Minneapolis Symphony

Dear Symphony Members:

Just a note to tell you how much we at FSU enjoyed your concerts of last week. We here got a fine impression of you but I'm afraid the one you have of us by now is not so good: This letter is in the way of an apology that I feel is representative of most of us.

You have a certain violinist from Madras, India. A nice looking young man of twenty-seven with an MA degree. I live in what is called the International Student house here and am the only American in the place. One of my room mates is from the same town as your violinist, so the musician ate dinner with us Thursday night. The talk swung in the direction of criticism of the U.S. and your young musician staunchly defended the country in which he has been living for ten years and of which he is soon to become a citizen.

After dinner the two of us strolled over to Westcott so he could prepare for the evening's concert. I asked him what his opinion of Tallahassee was and he told me that save for one thing it was very good. He asked me if I remembered recommending that he get his haircut in his hotel barber shop when he had asked me that morning where the nearest one was. I said yes and he told me the following:

"Well, I went to the place and the barber turned around and asked me what I wanted. The question seemed odd but I went ahead and asked if I could get a haircut. He told me I'd have to ask the manager of the shop.

So I walked to the rear where he pointed. The manager looked up and said, 'What do you want, Boy?' I asked if I could get a haircut and he looked at me for a moment and said, 'Nope.' So, I left."

The young man asked me not to mention this to any of the musicians I knew because if they heard of it they would refuse to play the concert. I thought back to the discussion of America and how he had defended the country so strongly. We were walking past the History Building and I was glad he couldn't see my look of shame in the darkness.

We cannot hide the fact that there is intolerance here in the South. But we point with quiet pride to the fact that our school has never had any friction along racial lines. Your violinist is Caucasian but was refused. The bad thing is that this has happened to many Indian students on our campus. He has probably told this to you by now, so a hundred people have a bad idea of us. In addition the two hundred and fifty or so students and ... members from other countries ... of this and similar incidents. The thing is that almost all of them ... home with this as a bitter ... of the land of equality and ... cracy.

As I say, I feel this apology ... part is representative of all ... truth, of course, I cannot ... speak for the students and ... here, but it certainly goes for ... and I am pretty sure it does for ... too. Actually, the man who re... you was an idealist. He plac... ideal of personal prejudice ... money in his cash register.

U of F Superior To FSU?

The fact that spring is almost here and the saps are already on the rise in the central portion of the state, it seems in the best interest of Florida State University that its students reaffirm their true devotion and pay due homage to that "other university" that lies to the south of our fair campus.

Let it not be forgotten that it took many years of hard work for the crocodilians to establish their institution as the "Mecca" of learning in the south, if not the entire world; just think of all their nationally known alumni.

Today's News Roundup

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK -- Rain-swollen streams cascading out,of the mountains of the southeastern Kentucky mountains have left thousands homeless in a 20-county area. The Kentucky flood is described as one of the worst in the state's history. Floods also struck severely in neighboring areas of Tennessee, Virginia, and West Virginia. Six deaths are attributed to the floods. Six other persons are feared to have drowned, including a Tennessee family of five. Lieutenant Governor Wilson Wyatt asked President Kennedy to declare 20 Kentucky counties a disaster area. Property damage runs into untold millions.

The floods came in the wake of tornadoes that left a trail of death and destruction in parts of Mississippi, Alabama and Tennessee. Five tornado fatalities have been counted.

WASHINGTON-- Secretary of State Dean Rusk says the continued presence of Soviet forces in Cuba open possibilities that a highly dangerous situation could still arise. Rusk also said that if the Soviets should try to send back into Cuba the offensive weapons they removed last fall, this would produce a crisis which would make last October's tiny by comparison. Rusk gave his views to a Washington audience.

WASHINGTON -- The United States and Britain have become the first of the world's big powers to recognize Syria's new revolutionary regime. The US State Department and the British Foreign Office acted after the new Damascus government promised to honor Syria's international obligations and abide by the principles of the United Nations Charter.

WASHINGTON -- Vice President Lyndon Johnson criticizes partisan attacks that he says are aimed at frustrating President Kennedy and destroying public confidence in the President. In a speech prepared for a Washington dinner of the National Advertising Council Johnson deplored what he termed irresponsible partisanship on the subject of Cuba. He does not name the attackers. But it appears obvious his reference is to the drumfire Republicans have aimed at Kennedy's Cuban policies.

...Conservatives

But now the American left tells us that is is "un-Democratic" to so much as criticize the Court.

Mr. Pasto mentions that conservatives provides no constructive criticism. Hogwash! Had he been in the audience to hear Buddy Lewis, he would have heard the conservative suggestion concerning the Peace Corps. Since Communism obtains its recruits primarily from the intellectual comminity, he suggested that the Peace Corps would have greater success if it were allowed to preach the cause of freedom and "democracy." (No, the Peace Corps is not permitted to even discuss ideologies.) Conservatives have pointed out the ironic situation which prevails in our ideological struggle with Communism. We are fighting this menace through primarily materialistic means, e.g., "foreign aid," while Communism, a materialistic philosophy, is appealing to the intellect.

This is one suggestion advanced by the black-hearted conservatives, Mr. Pasto... to have a Freedom Corps spreading the praises of individual liberty as well as doing good works, rather than a Peace Corps filling the belly but not the mind. I am sure that you, as an open-minded person will give this idea thoughtful consideration.

Tackle Won't Be Sore Spot Next Fall -- Bill Peterson

Sumner Sparkles In Spring Drills

With spring football going into its third week, Coach Bill Peterson has dismissed one sore problem from his mind.

Namely, the 1963 Seminoles aren't going to be hurt at tackle like they once figured.

"Actually," said Peterson, "we just might have the best-looking bunch of tackles we've ever had."

This is news when one considers that FSU lost three of its top six tackles via graduation--including starters Jim Sims of LaGrange, Ga., and Tom Slicker of Massilon, O.

After a week's work, FSU's tackles lined up with junior Avery Sumner and senior Jerry Bruner on the first unit, backed by ex-redshirts Frank Pennie and Bob Mangan, junior Tom West and Soph Dave Braggins.

Sumner, a starter with the defensive unit last Fall, is the man FSU believes is its best candidate of all-anythings honors. He has the finest physical qualifications on the squad (6-2, 212, great speed and reactions) and was second in individual tackles behind All-America Guard Gene McDowell.

Pennie (6-4, 229) and Mangan (6-1, 246) were held out last Fall, but dealt the regulars fits in practice. West was moved from end in a pinch last year and came through admirably as an offensive starter. Braggins

...strong lineman

(6-2, 215) showed promise with the '62 frosh. Bruner has done well after being moved from guard.

Actually, the entire FSU line picture was looking much brighter than anticipated this week. Junior Dale MacKenzie was moved from tackle to center, leaving himself and three other lettermen at that once-weak position.

At guard, senior Chuck Robinson has looked like he means to take up the slack left by McDowell's graduation.

Booters Schedule Practice Today

By WALTER S. BURGMANN

Practicing at 4:10 p.m. today, the FSU Soccer team will make final preparations for its upcoming game with the Fort Stewart Army Base of Savannah, Ga.

The game, the second of the season for the FSU club, is scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday on the football practice field next to the varsity baseball diamond. The public is invited.

After a shaky loss to University of Florida, the soccer team has finally reached a degree of maturity, both in playing ability and scheduled events. The team, led by co-captains Doug Padget, Dean Sellers and Suwat Pannon, has been bolstered by the appearance of several new players.

Any student, regardless of experience or University standing, who is interested in playing soccer, is invited to join the squad at practice today at 4:10 p.m., and Saturday's at 2 p.m.

A slate of five games has been scheduled for the remainder of the trimester. With the exception of the St. Pete Soccer Club, all of the opponents are in a position like FSU's: newly organized and striving for administrative recognition.

Three of the games are at home and two are away. The highlight of the season will feature a game under the-lights on Florida High Field at 7:45 p.m. with Andrew College on April 2. The other home games will be played on the football practice field next to the baseball diamond.

The remaining schedule for the season:

March 16--Ft. Stewart Army Base, 10 a.m., home; March 18--Auburn University, 4 p.m., home; March 24--St. Pete Soccer Club, 2:30 p.m., away; April 2--Andrew College, 7:45 p.m., home; April 5--Andrew College, 7:45 p.m., away.

Seminole Swimmers Repeat Loss To UF

Florida State met its second swimming defeat at the hands of the University of Florida Saturday afternoon, in Gainesville as the Gators won, 58-37, in a dual meet that closed the season for both schools.

Bill Harlan, who finished his first year as the UF head coach, saw the Gators get their first undefeated season in 22 years, while the defeat left FSU's Bim Stults with a 6-3 record.

Florida State, which lost a previous dual meet to the Gators, won two of the 11 events, as Neal Allen finished first in one-meter diving with a 250.20 score and as Gene Dayton captured first in the 500 freestyle.

A varsity record was set in the 200 freestyle when Florida's co-captain, Terry Green, swam the distance in 1:51.7, bettering the previous record of 1:52.7, which was established in the Georgia Invitational tourney.

Also, Jerry Livington rewrote the meet, pool, and varsity records in the 200 butterfly with a 2:01.5 timing.

In the preliminary match, the Baby Seminoles fell for the first time to the Baby Gators in a 53-42 bout. The frosh had won earlier this year in friendly waters.

Manatee Slams Freshmen Nine

Facing the runnersup of the 1962 Junior College World Series, the Florida State freshman baseball team fell, 16-1, to Manatee JuCo in its curtain-raiser.

The junior college nine slapped 12 hits in the contest and limited the Baby Tribesmen to four. In addition, the Seminoles helped the juco team along by committing eight errors and walking nine men.

The game, which lasted three hours and 10 minutes, saw its biggest inning in the seventh frame, when Manatee garnered six hits and three walks to score nine runs. The game was called in the bottom of the ninth because of darkness.

The winners finished second in last year's juco world series, making their third stright appearance there.

Both teams' coaches are former Florida State athletes. Ernie Lankford is the Baby Tribe mentor, while Boby Wynn, also a former frosh coach, headed the junior college crew.

Results of the FSU-Florida matches in Gainesville were not available at presstime.

The frosh schedule:

March 23--Chipola Junior College at Marianna; March 27-28--Florida frosh at Tallahassee; March 30--Manatee Junior College at Bradenton.

April 1-2--Dade County Junior College at Miami; April 6--Raiford Prison at Raiford; April 10--Chipola Junior College at Tallahassee.

Seminole Shorts

Florida State athletes are filling coaching positions over the state, giving many mentor the problem of playing against a Seminole alumnus.

For instance, the gymnastic coach at the University of Florida is a former Seminole just as FSU's gymnastic coach is.

Not Against Abolishment

Class Officers Bill Nullified By Senate

CAM KILGROE
Flambeau Staff Writer

Yesterday's Senate meeting passed an amendment to the Bill for the Abolishment of Class Officers which would strike the enacting clause, thereby virtually destroying the complete bill.

Senator Killian, who recommended the amendment, said that the action of the committee to recommend unfavorably the bill, did not indicate that they were against the abolishment of the class officer system, but rather that they were unsatisfied with the bill in its present form.

Senator Gibbs presented a bill concerning the Student Alumni Affairs Committee and added an amendment concerning the number and positions of the members on the committee. As passed, the committee will include 18 members. It will consist of the president and vice president of all four classes, the secretary of the senior class, the presidents of the IFC and Panhellenic, Chairman of the Gold Key Speakers' Bureau, one member appointed by the president of the student body, one senator appointed by the president of the senate and all the permanent class officers.

Gene Brown, Men's Vice President, author of this bill said, "The purpose is to get students to identify with their class while at FSU so as to identify with it through the Alumni Association after they leave."

The 1963-64 budget was presented by newly appointed co-Secretary of Finance John Jones. The tentative amount allocated to the Student Activities Budget is $114,414.00. The University Activities Budget has been allocated $334,712. This will be voted upon at next week's meeting.

Included in the reports of committees was Senator Gibbs' report on the International Week, which starts today. He emphasized the banquet to be held Friday night, and urged all students to attend.

The appointment of Ted DeLaVergne, Sam Ashdown, Joel DeVolentine and Steve Robertson to the Elections Bureau was approved by the Senate.

Women Send 4 Delegates

The appointment of Clyda Stokes and Carolyn Wronske as delegates to the Intercollegiate Association of Women Senators convention to be held in Oklahoma later this month was announced at Tuesday's Women's Senate meeting by Women's Vice President Jeanne Ferlita.

Senators Joyce Killian and Texas Wiltshire were chosen by acclamation two weeks ago to be delegates. Senator Wiltshire will be FSU's candidate for national vice president of the association, and Senator Killian will serve as chairman of the nominations committee in Oklahoma.

The four delegates will leave campus by car March 23 and will return March 31.

Patsy Brill, Bobsie Carlton, Bunny Worsham, Betty Drummond and Pat Melton were appointed to serve on the Junior Counselor Selections committee.

A billto delete the rule calling for a lifeguard to be in attendance at all swimming and boating parties was passed unanimously.

Women's Senate Bill 12 dealing with the "Room Time Limit" section in the Knowledge for College was passed by a large majority.

...tudent Services Affected By Trimester

...INDA SAVIDGE

... Russell Gentry, director of ...niversity Hospital, has noted ... been a "significant ... in Health Service use this ... that we do not feel that ... from the pressures ... with the trimester."

...increase in usage of the Health ...ice can be better explained on ... of a larger student body, ...currence of several mild epi... and an increase in the num... physicians available for con...ion."

...ber of factors enter into this ...ussion. Improved acceptance of Health Serive on the part of the ...ents is an important factor, Gen...ad.

...ndly, there were two mild ...emics, one in September and October of virile brochitis and one in December of virile gastro-intestinal upset.

Also, the middle of January was marked by a seasonal and expected increase in upper respiratory illness. Actually, the college community seemed to have been hit less than was the general Tallahassee area, he noted.

Finally, there are more students on campus.

"Campus factors are important in determining how much disability will result from a given illness," Gentry added.

The circumstances under which the students work affect thier capacities to cope with the assignments given to them. The living conditions and the food must be "topnotch," he said.

Perhaps most important of all is the morale of the student body. A discouraged student whose team has lost consistently and who is working under difficult conditions will be much more hampered by a simple cold than will a successful student with relatively few academic worries.

For example, those students who participated in circus managed to utilize all their resources to fulfill their obligations to academics as well as to the circus; their morale aided them.

The trimester has hurt the poorer student more than those who are successful. The frustration level and tolerance level are most apt to show the effects of the stress. There have been no unusual cases of breakdown, no unusual upsets which are attributable in any way to the trimester system, Gentry declared.

The Library is another campus serive which has been utilized considerably more under this year's trimester system and increased enrollment.

Library circulation this September doubled over the previous September and remained consistently 4,000 to 5,000 books higher than the previous year, througout the first trimester, except for the exam month of December.

Panic at the realization of the decreased time could have been the cause for the great increase, however, since figures for the month of January show only a 1,000 book increase. But February figures climbed to 4,000 books over the previous February, replacing the January relaxation.

Monthly circulation averages for the two periods of time differ by about 3,100. The average monthly circulation last year was 15,700, whereas the monthly circulation under the new system averaged around 18,800.

Library officials substantiate this statistical evidence with the observation that there are many more students studying during the weekends than ever before. There are times when there is hardly a vacant seat.

This increase in library usage is affected not only by the increasing stress of the academic upon the student, but also by the difficulty experienced by those who attempt to study in the dormitories and by the increased college enrollment.

WASHINGTON--President Kennedy has asked the Southern Pacific Railroad and the Railway Clerks Union to let a three-man panel arbitrate issues in their dispute. He asks the union to refrain from calling a strike. The railroad, which operates in seven Western states, has been negotiating with the union over plans to cut manpower.

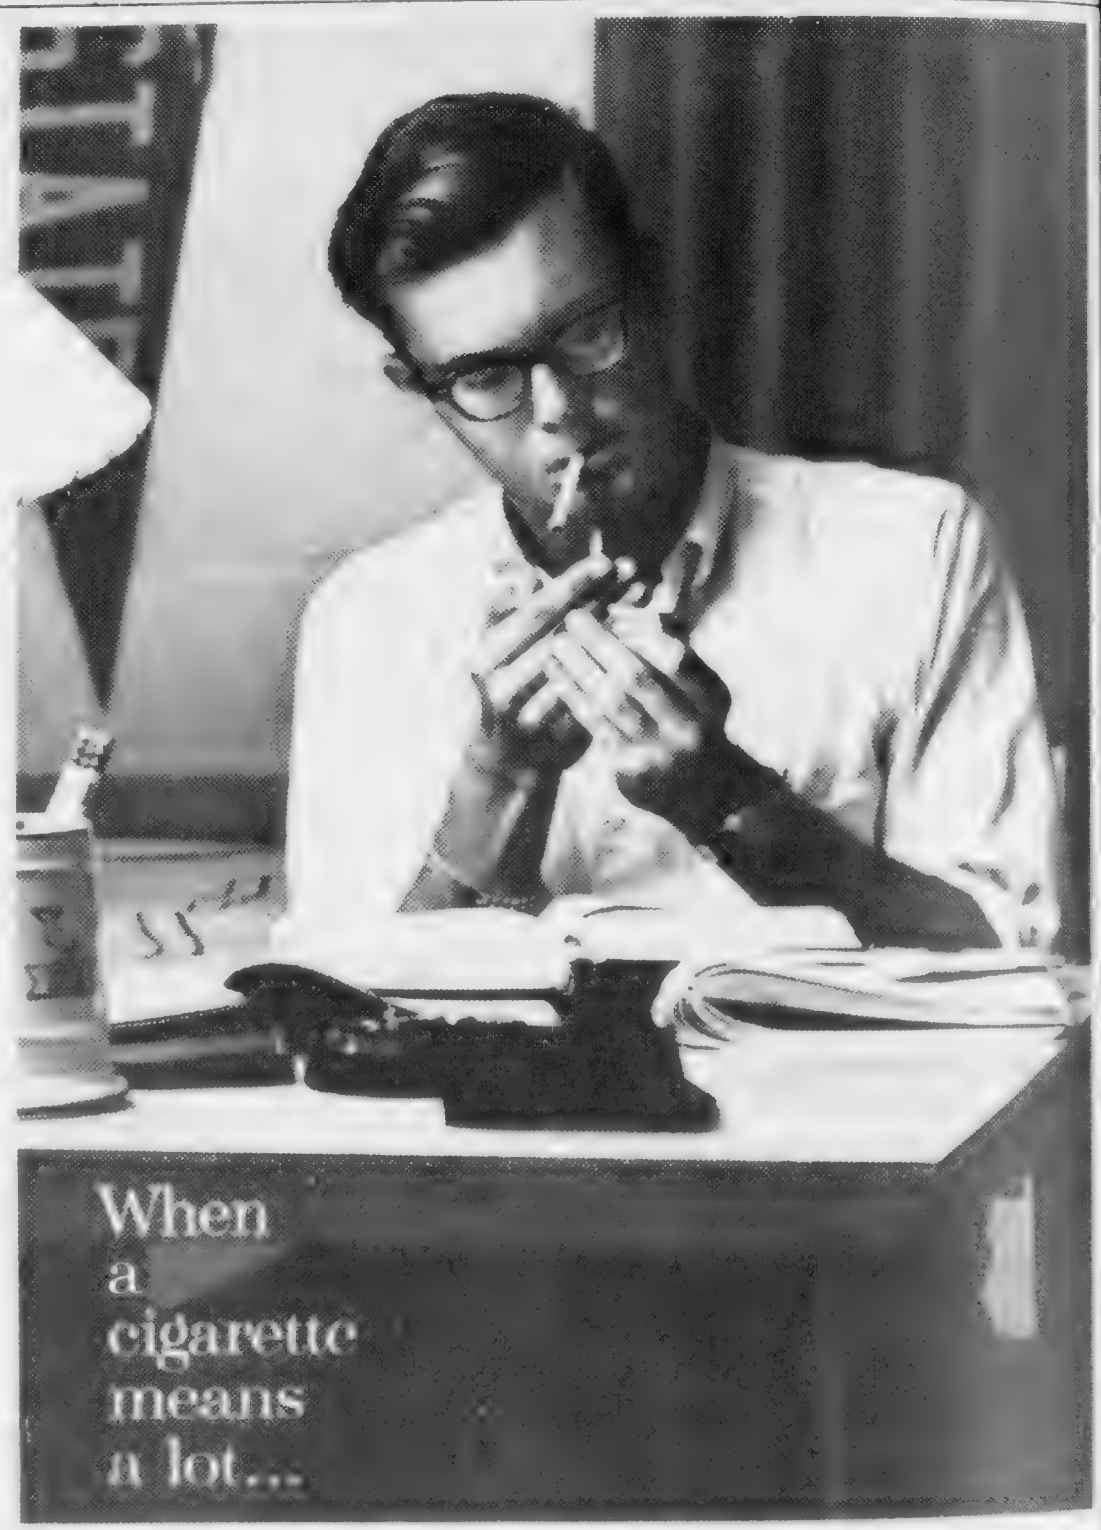
"Morphine Addiction in the Lives of Coleridge and DeQuincy" will be the subject of this week's English Coffee Hour talk.

Dr. Thomas H. Maren, a student of literature and head of the Pharmacology and Therapeutics Dept. in the College of Medicine at the U of F, will be the speaker. The talk, at 4 p.m. Friday in Westminster House, is open to the public.



An acquaintance, Dr. George Yost Jr. of FSU's English Dept. said Dr. Maren is a medical doctor but that he had started out toward a graduate degree in English before World War II.

He received his A.B. degree in literature from Princeton and also did graduate work there. After World War II he changed to medicine, getting his M.D. degree from John Hopkins University in 1951. He has taught pharmacology and experimental therapeutics at John Hopkins.

Harry Golden To Speak Here

...y Golden, writer, editor, and ...sher, will speak on the FSU ... campus on March 27 at 8:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium as part of the University Lecture Series.

Mr. Golden has written such best selling books as "Only in America" and "I or 2¢ Plain." Both were non-fiction books and successively #1 on the best seller list.

In the summer of 1960, Mr. Golden's third book, "Enjoy! Enjoy!" was published and followed his first two books to the best seller list.

The Carolina Israelite, as he is called, resides in Charlotte, North Carolina where he publishes a 16 page compilation of his reflections on "anything under the sun" from time to time.

Golden was born in New York where his father was a reporter on "The Jewish Daily Forward." Golden, in his youth, was an avid reader and enthusiast in the Henry George movement for agrarian reform. He later attended the City College of New York.

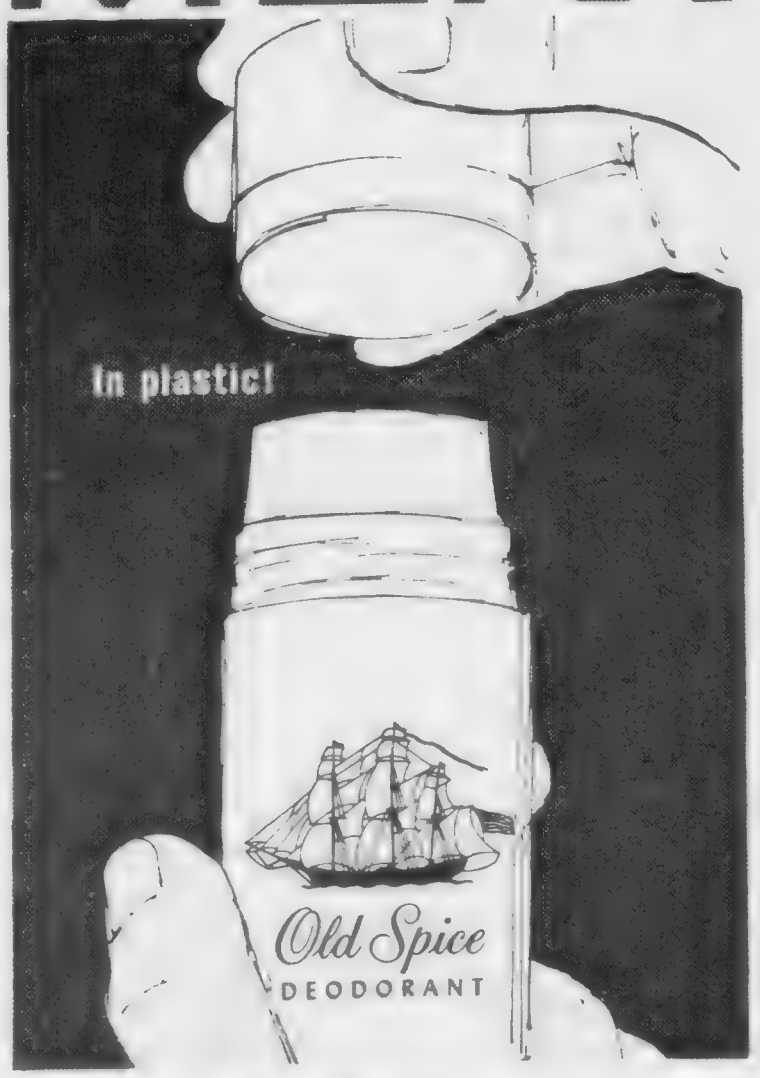
Kasha To Talk At Last Lecture

Mortar Board's final lecture of its Last Lecture Series will be given by Dr. Michael Kasha next Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.



Each year Mortar Board presents four faculty members in the Last Lecture Series. The lecturers express the thoughts they would leave with the students if they were to be the last lectures that they were ever able to deliver in their respective fields.

Kasha is a professor of chemistry and is presently serving as director of the Institute of Molecular Biophysics. He received the honor of being chosen FSU's Distinguished Professor of the Year in 1962. He received his Ph.D. from the University of California and has been a visiting professor of chemistry at Harvard University, a Reilly lecturer at the University of Notre Dame and a Lind lecturer at the Oak Ridge National Laboratories.

Author of more than fifty scientific publications in the field of molecular electronic studies, Kasha is widely known for his research work. He is also on the Editorial Board of several international scientific journals. He has been awarded honorary membership in Gold Key.

Other lecturers this year have been Michael Shaara, instructor of English; Dr. Paul J. Piccard, associate professor of government; and Dr. John E. Champion, vice president of FSU.

Convocation Set Tonight

Tonight at 7 o'clock in Westcott Auditorium there will be a Sophomore Council Convocation for freshman women.

The purpose of the convocation is to explain the duties of Sophomore Council and the methods by which its members are chosen. Any freshman girl with a 2.0 average or better is eligible for membership in Sophomore Council. Girls are chosen on the basis of outstanding service and spirit which they have displayed throughout the year by participating in class and dorm activities.

Sophomore Council is itself a service organization working in connection with the University and is directly responsible to the Student Government. Its members, easily recognized by their white skirts and blue blouses, play an important part during orientation week. They serve as a welcome committee at all women residence halls and help move freshmen into their dorms.

Their duties do not end here, however, for throughout the year they are busy assisting at university functions and helping with the voting procedures at election time.

All freshman women are urged to attend the convocation which should be both informative and interesting.

McCain Talks For Library

Dr. William D. McCain, an archivist and brigadier general, who since 1955 has been president of the University of Southern Mississippi at Hattiesburg, will be the speaker at an annual meeting of the "Friends of the Florida State University Library" Friday at 8 p.m. in Strozier Library Lecture Hall.

"The College President and Manuscript Collecting" will be the title of the lecture by the university president, who is a former historian at Morristown National Historical Park in New Jersey, former assistant archivist of the National Archives. The talk is open to the public.

Mrs. Frank D. Moor, president of the Friends of the FSU library, said an election of officers will be held at the meeting and a social hour will follow.

A native Mississippian, Dr. McCain was born at Bellefontaine in 1907. A product of Mississippi's public schools, he graduated from Sunflower Agricultural High School, Delta State College, and the University of Mississippi. In 1935 he received his Ph. D. in history from Duke University.

Seminole Nine Opens Saturday

Boasting one of its best teams ever, Florida State opens the 1963 baseball season here Saturday by hosting old bugaboo Auburn at 1:30 p.m.

"This team could be just about the best I've had," says FSU Coach Danny Litwhiler, and that means something. Since Litwhiler stepped down from 12 years in the major leagues, FSU teams have established a 263-68 record and gone to six NCAA district playoffs and two College World Series over the eight-year period.

Last year, the Seminoles were eliminated in the semifinals of the College World Series at Omaha, Neb. Their final overall record was 23-14.

Against Auburn -- which whomped FSU four straight times last season -- Litwhiler will start a lineup including two potential All-Americans, three other returning regulars, two up-coming frosh and a pair of hot-shot transfers.

The two teams will also play on Monday, starting at 3:30 p.m. Auburn will probably have seven returnees in its lineup. The Tigers finished with a 15-7 overall mark last year, 11-5 in the Southeastern Conference's Eastern Division.

FSU's starting lineup: Gary Nichols (Williamsville, N.Y.), first base; Jim Reed (Sarasota), second base; Gerry Chmielewski (West Allis, Wis.), third base; Woody Woodward (Coral Gables), short stop; Billy Williamson (Palm Harbor), left field; Mike Augustine (Philadelphia, Pa.), centerfield, and Clyde McBride (Pensacola), right field. Behind the plate will be Buddy Teagle (West Palm Beach), with Al Beccaccio (Newburgh, N.Y.) slated to pitch Saturday and Allen Thomas (Cairo, Ga.) Monday.

Woodward and Teagle are the potential All-Americans. Teagle hit .325 last year as a junior, was first team All-America catcher and graces the cover of this year's NCAA Collegiate Baseball Guide. Woodward hit .365 in 1963 and set a school record for assists. Litwhiler thinks he's "the best college shortstop in the nation," and rates him further ahead at this stage (junior year) than former FSU shortstop Dick Howser, now with the Kansas City Athletics.

* * * * *

Litwhiler's opponent on the bench, Coach Paul Nix, has already decided upon the starting Tigers. They are:

Vic Svetlik of Birmingham at catcher, Larry Dempsey of Birmingham at first base, Jim Martin of Birmingham at second base, Wayne Fowler of Talladega at third base, and Otis Bibb of Birmingham at shortstop.

The starting pitcher role is undecided, but will go either junior George Nichols of Birmingham or sophomore lefty Jimmy Crysel of Montgomery. For relief, Nix can give the nod to senior Joe Overton, who has been suffering from a sore arm.

In the outfield, Auburn will depend on Richard Seaman of Dothan at right field and Jim Backus of Birmingham in center field, while either Dink Haire of Albany, Ga., or Tandy Geralds of Birmingham will start in left field. The sophomore Haire will start if FSU opens the right-handed pitcher, while the junior Geralds will start if the Seminoles use a south paw.

Essentially, the Tigers' infield is the same which finished the 1962 season with a 15-7 overall mark. Nix' team finished second in the eastern division of the Southeastern Conference with an 11-5 record.

However, the outfield only has one returning letterman in Haire.

BUDDY TEAGLE
...starting catcher

FSU regulars returning from '62 are Williamson (.364, eight homers), Augustine (.263) and Beccaccio (regular second baseman in '62). Up from the frosh are Nichols (.492) and McBride (.310). Transfers are Reed (junior college All-America at Manatee Junior College) and Chmielewski (Marquette University).

Overall, Litwhiler says FSU is better than ever in the infield, stronger in the outfield and behind the plate. "Pitching is always a question mark," he says, but there's a good nucleus with Beccaccio, Thomas, footballer Jim Loftin and Tom Davis -- provided the latter can recover from arm trouble.

ON CAMPUS THIS WEEK

Four Sports Events Slated

The Spring sports tempo begins picking up this week at Florida State, although the real crush comes next week.

Beginning Thursday, FSU teams in three sports will be involved in five events -- four of them on campus.

Coach Eddie Cubbon's tennis team -- winner of its first two matches, both against Ft. Eustis, Va.-- will be the busiest. The FSU netters play host to Georgia Thursday and Friday at 2 p.m., then travel to Pensacola on Saturday to meet Mississippi State at 1 p.m. CST.

FSU's baseball team will open its 1963 season Saturday at 1:30 by hosting Auburn. Coach Danny Litwhiler's Seminoles -- eliminated in the semifinals of last year's College World Series and expecting to be as strong again this year-- will be after revenge against Auburn. The Tigers whipped FSU four times in four tries last Spring, a first for any team since Litwhiler arrived eight years ago.

Coach Mike Long's track team opens its home season Saturday by hosting Furman of the Southern Conference. Some field events will begin at 1:30 on the FSU track. So far, FSU has finished well in three indoor meets, but lost a controversial meet Saturday at Miami -- the exact score of which is still being batted about.

Next week will be the busy one at FSU. A total of 12 events are on slate for the four Spring sports, seven of them at FSU.

This week's Spring sports slate at FSU:

THURSDAY -- Tennis, [illegible] here, 2 p.m.

FRIDAY -- Tennis, Georgia, 2 p.m.

SATURDAY -- Baseball, Auburn here, 1:30; Track, Furman here, 1:30; Tennis, Mississippi State, Pensacola, 1 p.m. (CST).

Seminole Shorts

The Florida State Seminole football team will wind up its fourth week of spring grid practice Saturday with a game-like scrimmage. The Seminoles, who drilled on Monday and Tuesday under the eyes of guest Charley McClendon of LSU, will also practice this afternoon at 4 on the FSU practice field.

How far does a nickel go in a VW Truck?

Two miles.

Which is pretty far, when you consider that this includes the cost of gas and oil and tire wear and maintenance.

When you take into account that conventional trucks run the same two miles for about [illegible] get some idea of how much you'll save with the VW Truck.

How does the Volkswagen do it?

First of all, it doesn't have a lot of excess weight to push around. It doesn't sport fenders, or a heavy drive shaft, or a radiator, or even a front hood. (The engine's in back. And air-cooled.)

Then, there's the gas. Almost all VW owners get 24 m.p.g. Many even hit 30.

Oil? 5 pints (not quarts) fill it. And you'll rarely need any between changes.

You can expect about 35,000 miles from a set of tires.

VW Truck owners tell us maintenance runs them roughly half as much as their former trucks did.

When you add it all up, you might very well find you're stashing away 350 bucks every 10,000 miles. That's a lot of nickels.

International Dinner Slated For Tonight

A highlight of the International Week festivities already underway will be the International Students Banquet, tonight at 7 o'clock in the Faculty Club.

A project promoted by Student Government to encourage more interaction between International students on campus and American students, International week officially began last night, with International students being guests of sorority and fraternity houses for dinner. An International Talent Show was held later, with acts depicting customs in the different countries represented.

A big part of the activities will be the International Fair, Saturday from 2 to 5 p.m. in the circus tent. Booths will display items from the various cultures, either belonging to the students or borrowed from the Tallahassee Junior Museum. International students will wear native dress and will serve refreshments from their countries.

Sharon Worsham, Arnie Gibbs, Bill Branch and Krishna Menon compose the Senate committee in charge of promoting International activities. Purposes of the week being held include: fostering greater international understanding, promoting cultural appreciation, and strengthening of personal relationships.

Miss Worsham said, "We hope that FSU's students will show a great interest in these activities, and will attend many of the functions that have been planned."

Another event of the week will be a soccer game, Saturday at 2 p.m., between the International Students soccer team of FSU and the University of Florida's International student soccer team. This game will be played in Doak S. Campbell stadium.

Rounding out the weekend events will be "China Night," Saturday at 7:30 p.m. President Gordon W. Blackwell, some faculty members, members of the International Club, representatives of student organizations and townspeople have been invited.

The students are getting together from among their own belongings and from what they can borrow from others a collection of Chinese clothes, objects of art and household objects.

Every guest will have an opportunity to have his picture made in a Chinese costume and to compete in a contest of transferring marbles from one bowl to another with chopsticks. There also will be an art course in paper-folding and an abacus contest.

Roger Cheng, a graduate student in space biosciences who is president of the club, will present Dr. Blackwell a several-volume set of reference books from Nationalist China for the use of the FSU Library.

Senate Revises House Councils

By LYNN BISSLAND
Flambeau Staff Reporter

Women's Senate yesterday passed unanimously a bill revising House Council and Off Campus Council.

The Senators met in special session to consider the bill introduced by Joyce Killian, Sandra Brooks, and Alice Marshall.
